Finally, what makes the United States just about the best country on earth is the Bill of Rights, which allows Americans the freedom to pretty much say and do whatever we want, whenever we want and for whatever reasons we choose (within certain parameters). Those rights, however, are almost always in jeopardy and their pristine preservation requires vigilant legislative struggle against those who would mangle or even chip away at them from angles both covert and overt. The beauty of true democracy is that ideally we all participate in creating and transforming our society. The hardest part of creating and maintaining a true democracy is compensating for its porous and thus highly vulnerable and corruptible nature. A political system anywhere on earth can easily be characterized as "democratic" without being the least bit democratic in any meaningful sense. In some ways the concept of democracy Americans idolize and praise does not exist even in our United States. For corporatist governmental evil and corruption both in domestic politics and our foreign policy is more than ever before entrenched and self–serving. It is also resistant to serving the public interest or being by, for and of the people.

Thus, when Madelaine Albright, Bill Cohen or Jesse Helms speaks of bringing American–style democracy and human rights to other countries in which the U.S. government through supporting a fascist dictator and army enslaves the people and perpetuates human rights abuses against them, the American public should strongly question just what the United States is exporting to those countries. It can't be real democracy or human rights, because combined with the fact that the U.S. government has just the opposite record in those countries, real democracy and human rights don't exist in the United States, and you can't export what you don't have. I hope those students who favor flag–placement will take the time to understand what the American flag quite reasonably symbolizes for many people around the world, and also within the United States.

Anna Shepp–Cardoze is a UMass graduate student.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Ms. Clinton goes to Amherst

The time has come. This spring, one of the White House women will be graduating from high school.

Chelsea Clinton, 17, will be graduating at the top of her class from Sidwell Friends School in Washington, a co-ed day school with a $13,000 tuition.

She has applied to many prestigious schools such as Yale (where both of her parents received law degrees and met in 1973), Wellesley, Stanford, Princeton and Harvard, where she was accepted in the early acceptance program. According to a local DJ, she has recently narrowed her decision down to either Brown University in Providence, R.I., or Amherst College. That is despite her parents wishes for her to stay in Washington or at least closer to home.

Sam Johnson

According to Newsweek, her father has "his heart set on" Chelsea attending Georgetown, his alma mater, which is only three miles from the White House. Whatever her choice, it seems that she will most likely attend college in the fall in New England.

Can you imagine Chelsea Clinton moving to the Pioneer Valley? The President of the United States' only daughter attending school in Amherst. Would there be Secret Service everywhere, disguised as typical college students (whatever that means) on duty on every street corner in town 24 hours a day?

Imagine how daily life in the area would change if Chelsea were to live here.

For example, what if UMass students decided next winter to bombard Amherst College with snowballs again during the first snowfall of the season? It probably wouldn't be a good idea.

Would we see her at the Amherst Commons in the spring for Extravaganja? Will street–walkers see the President, First Lady and Chelsea having lunch downtown at Judie's through the glass window–wall?

I wonder if she will have a roommate or request a single room. Can you imagine being Chelsea Clinton's roommate? Sunday night, "X–Files," the phone rings. Chelsea's out. "Um, no Mr. President, she's studying at the library. Can I take a message?"

This is the American people. Bill Clinton is the President of the United States, but to Chelsea, he's dad. One day, at Sidwell, in order to get permission to take an aspirin, Chelsea told the school nurse, "Call my dad. My mom's out of town today."

The President now has to add "spend time with Chelsea looking at colleges" to his list of priorities, which he should have plenty of time to work on after his recent knee injury. In his State of the Union address, which Chelsea attended, Mr. Clinton made education his first priority for his second term. His plans to make a college education possible for all Americans should be taken seriously, because he too is involved in the preparation of sending his daughter to a college that he believes is most beneficial for her. In this case, the Clintons are in the same boat as many families in America.

Many students complained in the Collegian that not enough attention was paid to the protest at Goodell by the national media. I have a feeling that if Chelsea Clinton were in town there would be mega–media coverage.

The last time Amherst made national headlines was last year when the Minutemen were in the Final Four. It was great. I had relatives in Arizona telling me they had money on UMass.

In the '60s, Amherst was twice given front–page coverage by the New York Times. First in 1966, when Amherst College students wore white arm bands to their graduation ceremony in protest of the Vietnam War, and again when Amherst College students sent a letter to President Nixon urging him to make a change in his national priorities and the war.

Now, if students at Amherst College had serious problems about the President's priorities, they wouldn't have to send him a letter, they could simply knock on Ms. Clinton's door, make a couple of suggestions and ask her to relay them to him.

Not that she would, because according to White House spokesman, Mike McCurry, "She is not particularly interested in politics." This is ironic for obvious reasons and because political science is the second most popular major at Amherst College, according to the Princeton Review's 310 Best Colleges, 1997 Edition. Political activism is also listed first in the Princeton Review's "What's Hot" on campus category for Amherst.

Chelsea's favorite subjects are history, math and science. Her father claims she would like to study medicine. That's pretty interesting. Her mother was a lawyer, her father is the President of the United States, and now she would like to be a doctor. What a family.

There are plenty of opportunities around here, especially with the Five College Consortium. Amherst College has 1,600 students and an excellent reputation.

I just hope that I remember to hold the door open for her if I bump into her at Antonio's on a Saturday night.

Sam Johnson is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Concerns about graduate budget

To the Editor:

I am writing to direct the attention of all students on this campus, especially grad students, to the activities of the Graduate Student Senate. The Senate will be approving some kind of budget in the next few weeks, and based on the resistance a small but vocal group of Senators has expressed toward a majority vote for a budget proposal by March 25th, the process of passing a budget will not be easy.

There is over $230,000 of graduate student taxes at stake in this vote, and I for one am concerned that the money may not be allocated with the best interests of all grad students in mind. That is why I invite all of you to attend the next Senate meeting on April 29th to voice your opinions on the budget and investigate the proposed options before then.

The Senate directly provides salaries for six graduate TAs, five of whom earn more than $10,000 a year (in the proposed budget). Do you have any issues with a substantial portion of your tax dollars going to support these six TAs, only four of whom you have a voice in hiring?

The Senate spends 45 percent of its budget on government operations and thus barely half of your tax dollars on grad student programs. Is that okay with you?

The Senate spends over $13,000 a year on that virtually non–existent and otherwise warped "graduate student newspaper" called The Voice. Is it worth that much to you?

The Senate pays its four officers a combined total of over $40,000 a year for the leadership, knowledge, and dedication that they have in their jobs. You pay those salaries. You elect those positions. You have a role in those jobs being done well.

And thus you should come to the next two meetings of the Graduate Student Senate, on April 29th and May 13th, and make your voice heard.

Timothy Shary
Amherst

Nurses' Honor Society should use student input

To the Editor:

I would like to bring attention to an injustice that has occurred in the RN–to–BS program. We are a large group of adult learners who are registered nurses who have returned to school to earn our baccalaureate degree in nursing.

Based on factors unknown to the RN–to–BS student body, individuals were invited to join Sigma Theta Tau, the nurses' honor society. We are a group often unheard of on campus as we meet once a week at various sites both on and off campus. Many of us have had little faculty contact as we were subjected to the woes of "picture–tel", a long–distance learning tool that leaves much to be desired.

As part of our curriculum we were required to follow an expert nurse at their facility for one working shift. I was fortunate enough to observe a member of my class who has had over 18 years of experience, primarily in the emergency room. This nurse is the personification of the caring, holistic, skilled professional that all student nurses aspire to. She has been a strong leader in her academic life and her career. While attending the school she has maintained her role as wife and mother of four children.

This nurse was not invited to join Sigma Theta Tau. It is my contention that there be a student component to the selection process. As a large and diverse group, it is obvious that some of our members have been overlooked. When a nurse of this caliber is overlooked, then a serious flaw is evident. Because of our large numbers and limited access to faculty, I suggest reform in the selection process for Sigma Theta Tau — reform that would enable fellow students to actively elect classmates based on academic and professional leadership qualities.

Holly Garvey
Indian Orchard

Meat is murder

To the Editor:

University of Massachusetts students are responsible for the slaughter of bison in Montana and wild horses throughout the West. Would ranchers, saying "we have to," be behind the killing of animals competing with cattle for forage if eating students everywhere, saying "we have to," stopped eating beef?

Hamburger–eating students, wiping blood from their chins, might think about ebola virus, vanishing species, rancher– abused public lands, mangled animals (including family pets) removed from rancher traps, and processed animals fed to cattle and slowly incubating mad cow disease.

James Griffin
Fallon, N.Y.

Do not go to the head of the class

With increasing numbers of average citizens becoming concerned about the decline of society — and the seeming unwillingness or inability of government to respond heartily — there is still a general confusion about what to do.

Thus, although some will view it as the spring version of Seasonal Affective Disorder, I was heartened to read that 100 students at venerable and lived (read: elitist) Mount Holyoke College occupied an admissions office on April 17 to protest college plans to reduce the number of poor applicants who will be allowed in the school next fall. Though ensconced in one of the remaining bastions committed to academic excellence and upper crust manners for women, it seems this band of occupiers was not blind to one of this country's best kept secrets — the issue of class.

R. Jay Allain

As one of the student leaders, Amanda Sapir, put it: "It's time for Mount Holyoke students to say to higher education, 'We will not continue to blaze an elitist trail for you.'"

For its part, the college drew upon its penchant for public relations and noted that economics compel it to make "tough decisions," like examining an applicant's financial need — what is termed "need–sensitive admissions" — before deciding whether to admit her. Until now the college has used a "need–blind" policy which simply admits or rejects an applicant on the basis of academic and/or extracurricular achievement.

The dean of faculty, Peter Berek, illustrated the sort of unconscious elitism such institutions are saturated with when he observed that less than 10 percent of students would be impacted. The subtle message here is, Look, these students are on the financial bottom of all potential enrollees. If we continue to let them in, we'll have to change they way we do business here. Do you want to enrage the faculty by suggesting they teach 20 hours a week? And besides, what sort of message would we be sending stuffy alumnae when they find out we're admitting the dregs — intelligent but poor women?

This whole brouhaha suggests the insidious effects of the "ism" in contemporary America and how most members of the dominant (read: white and upwardly mobile or wannabe) society understand them. In this view, classism, namely judging another by what socioeconomic rung s/he inhabits — like racism or sexism — is seen as a personal flaw. The typical individual believes (even if it's a half–truth), I do not judge on the basis of someone's class or race or gender. The person forgets that entire institutions do; and that if you're rich or white or male you are afforded certain privileges automatically — like having access to good healthcare and being given the benefit of the doubt from cops, teachers and judges. Despite claptrap about "the great strides" oppressed people have made, the gains have hardly been widespread, and a radically polarized economy has forged an even wider gulf between "the haves" and "the have nots."

Yet somehow into this swamp of denial, myth and division, 100 young women idealists at Mount Holyoke College strode. They demanded their poorer sisters have access and also a full complement of chaplains and meeting spaces.

College president Joanne V. Creighton gave them her answer: suspension. What Creighton said was, in effect, If you don't accept injustice we will throw you out. Then where are you gonna go — a community college? A restaurant?

Quiet as it's kept, this takeover showed how a lot of change begins — not with lawyers and legislators — but with the rugged flames of conscience and the willingness to stand up to injustice wherever it leads.

R. Jay Allain is a UMass alumnus who currently resides in West Yarmouth.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Monday, April 28, 1997

Penn State battles complacency

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — In the havoc of the 1960s — and even in the quieter times of the '70s and '80s — Penn State's Black Caucus was right there, staging sit-ins, making demands.

The '90s have been a different story.

At the group's March meeting, only one of 350 members showed up. And two weeks later, when a deadline passed without a single candidate for president, the leadership laid down an ultimatum: If no one stepped forward to lead Black Caucus, it would be dissolved.

"We made the stakes high," president Nikitra Bailey said. "It's the only way to get people to listen."

Apathy has set in at black umbrella organizations that had been known for their militancy — not only at Penn State, but at campuses across the country.

"A lot of students now believe that the whole struggle is over, the notion that we shall overcome. They believe they have arrived," said Walter Kimbrough, director of student activities and leadership at Old Dominion.

"Black students are getting involved in mainstream culture, and they don't see the need for these groups," he said.

The Black Caucus and other groups like it grew out of a need for representation in the late 1960s and early 1970s. With the success of the civil rights movement came an influx of black students to predominately white institutions.

"It was relatively easy to form the group," said Larry Young, the director of the Robeson Cultural Center at Penn State and a longtime adviser to the caucus. "There was a tangible need. Students could look around and see the problems that they faced collectively and that was stimulus."

"Students demanded classes on black culture and history, taught by black professors, with students on black scholarships attending. In reply, universities created African studies programs and built cultural centers for black students," said Deborah Atwater, the head of the department of African and African American studies at Penn State.

Through the '70s and '80s, the number of black students on American campuses increased and so did their power. Slowly they began to make their mark in mainstream student government associations. At the same time, the number of specialized black organizations grew, reaching 30 today at Penn State for 2,700 black undergraduates.

"They may be a victim of their own success," said James Stewart, vice provost for educational equity at Penn State. "When you do a good job and are able to make improvements, some people may think you don't have to work to keep those gains in place. They become complacent. There's no perceived crisis, no burning issue."

At the University of Iowa, the Black Student Union is now one of the smallest of 21 black organizations on campus. Phillip Jones, the dean of students, said the group has had mixed success adapting to changing times.

"They have found it difficult to be a catalyst force," he said.

The situation is no better at the University of Wisconsin, where Arshella Burns, treasurer of the Black Student Union, worries that apathy may kill her organization, too.

"People just don't feel there's a need for unity anymore," said Burns, a junior from Cleveland. "It's like they wonder what we're doing. It makes us feel that we are failing at what we are doing."

Today's black student, some say, is more interested in getting an education and getting out in four years than in pressing for change.

"They don't see lynching in the trees anymore," said Johnne Collins, a Penn State junior and a member of the Black Caucus. "It takes something drastic to get people together."

Not all educators agree that the Black Caucus is a victim solely of changing times. Atwater, of the black studies department, argued that participation levels ebb and flow in all student groups. And, she said, apathy among young adults across the country is at an all-time high.

Stewart, Penn State's vice provost, suggests that future success could depend on joining with other minority groups to push for new rights.

Today's Black Caucus leaders clearly see the difficult road ahead. Despite falling short of their ultimatum — two candidates running for each position — the elections will be held.

"For me, Black Caucus is a passion... it's my future," said Bailey, the outgoing president who wants to be a civil rights lawyer after graduation. "We can't understand why our students feel comfortable. We can't afford to be comfortable. We may have won some battles, but the struggle continues."

A little something for the soul

By Millicent Jackson
Collegian Correspondent

J. California Cooper
Some Love, Some Pain, Some Time
"Femme Fatale"
Doubleday Books

Employing her characteristic themes of romance, heartbreak, struggle and faith, Some Love, Some Pain, Some Time is J. California Cooper at her very best. In this heartwarming collection of stories we meet Darlin, a femme fatale who uses her wiles to try to find a husband; MLee, whose life seems to be coming to an end at the age of 40 until she decides to set out and see if she can make a new life for herself; Kissy and Buddy, each of whom is trying and failing to find someone to fit them until they finally meet each other; and Aberdeen, whose daughter, Uniqua, shows her how to educate herself and move up in the world.

"Femme Fatale" is the endearing tale of Darlin, a self proclaimed femme fatale (aka diva) who adheres strictly to the motto that if you want to find some happiness, you have to go out and work hard to find it. Having lived under her grandmother's strict hand for most of her life, it is not until the sudden passing of her grandmother that Darlin travels out of the confines of her small town to take on the glamour and glitz of the big city and on the quest to find a husband.

Upon her arrival in the city Darlin finds herself meeting various men. First there is Roland, a postal clerk. Roland is a little on the thin side, stands back on his legs, is neat, clean and quiet, but not the type of man Darlin feels will satisfy a femme fatale of her nature. Then there's Hudson. Hudson is all muscle, a physical education teacher. He has moist, shiny, healthy skin and smiles a lot. He always has different women running in and out of his place, too many for a femme fatale like Darlin. Last, but not least, is Roland. Roland is slim and pale, he isn't ugly, but a far cry from Hudson in Darlin's eyes. Most of all, he's quite smitten with Darlin, who could care less.

It's not until one day after Darlin is just sick and tired of going from one man to another that she decides to take a chance on Roland. Things between Darlin and Roland start out slowly but surely with an uncomfortable dinner, but before Darlin can turn around, she is being indulged in sensual full body massages, bouquets of flowers, long, deep, engaging conversations and passionate lovemaking. It doesn't take long before Darlin finds what a femme fatale such as herself really needs to keep herself going.

"Femme Fatale" is a feel good love story that clearly shows that the package one comes in is not nearly as important as what's on the inside. These characters Cooper has created offer inspiration, laughter, instruction and pure enjoyment. They are plain–spoken and direct: simple people for whom life, despite its struggles, is always worth the journey. Whether it be through her stories or legendary readings, Cooper's words have an uncanny ability to reach out to readers like an old dear friend.

When asked why she compiled such a book with this title, Cooper said, "It is rather obvious why I chose this title. Love and pain is what life is most of the time. When I think of the great lovers in history there is always some pain involved. Love is beautiful and feels good. I think what some people do with it who do not know what they are doing is what makes it painful sometimes."

While Cooper's fame and following have grown with each publication, Cooper's ability to speak remains undiminished. In a steadily changing world where good old–fashioned tales of love conquers all are rapidly diminishing, this book is not only a must read, but a welcomed refreshment to the soul.

A trip into the Woods

Tiger Woods won the biggest golf tournament in the PGA. He won it by the biggest margin ever. He also has the biggest endorsement contract in golfing history.

For those who have been living in a cave for the past year or so, Tiger Woods is black.

"Black!" you say. A black man won a golf tournament!? Impossible. Golf has been one of the most exclusively white sports for decades. The few blacks fortunate enough to enter any type of golfing tournament have gone virtually unnoticed and unrecognized by their fellow golfers, as well as black people in general.

Gregory Casimir

This is what makes Woods' win so significant for us as a people. He didn't win in a typically black dominated sport like basketball or football. He won in a game that takes less physical stamina than required by high impact. Instead, he won by sheer technique and by acquiring complete knowledge on the nuances of the game.

The interesting thing about Woods' victory was the fact that many black people were actually aware that Woods was competing. Not only that, people were watching him and cheering him on — and the NBA playoff race was going on, too!

Blacks for too long have been relegated to those sports that whites have felt were acceptable to them because of the old school racist belief that "blacks have better physical ability and natural talent." Whites have allowed us to think that track runners, basketball players and football players only need to be in shape and they can play the game. They don't give these athletes any type of credit for being intelligent people.

Whenever Jordan does something spectacular, how often do you say to yourself, or even hear other people say, "My God, he's gifted!", or "He's talented." Don't you think that it's possible that in addition to all of his gifts, Jordan may be a pretty ingenious player as well. The world's greatest basketball player needs a lot more than just talent to do the things he's accomplished. Think of all the plays you have to memorize in football. That's why I shy away from all Tecmo video football games — I can never make sense of any of the playbooks, much less execute them the way they're supposed to be done.

Whites on the other hand have dominated those sports that required more intelligence like ice hockey (because blacks can't skate), tennis and golf. But slowly that trend is being broken. With Woods' comet-ride to the top of the golf world, blacks are starting to realize there are a lot more athletic frontiers to conquer. The resources for sports like tennis and ice hockey aren't readily available to blacks in poorer neighborhoods. But the inspiration people like Tiger Woods create will motivate blacks who want to engage in these "intelligent sports" to go outside their bad neighborhoods, and find the resources elsewhere — like schools.

Although it will be a while for another Tiger Woods to come up in the ranks of the PGA, the fact that he opened the doors for black people to follow after him is promising. We waited 50 years ago for Jackie Robinson to open the doors of baseball, and look what happened.

Tiger Woods isn't just a magnificent golf player; he's a paragon of the versatility that black people are capable of when they allow themselves to put their own parameters on the direction of their abilities.

Gregory Casimir is a Collegian columnist.

One time for the mind: about the erotic

Aliana E. Todman

"When I speak of the erotic, then I speak of it as an assertion of the life–force of women, of that creative energy empowered, the knowledge and use of which we are now reclaiming in our language, our history, our dancing, our loving, our work, our lives."

— Audre Lorde
Use of the Erotic: The Erotic as Power

The first Women of Color Institute was presented through The Women of Color Program at the Everywoman's Center, and the Zeta Phi Beta sorority. The workshops and phenomenal entertainment, which included presentations by UMass students, faculty and staff, developed unprecedented connections between students, faculty and staff of color.

Creating a communal environment during the entirety of the Institute, women began to share common experiences and analytically talked about ways in which to overcome some situations or to enhance them, depending on the issue they were discussing.

Women of Color, including students, faculty and staff, were interdependently relying on each other for support. Women acknowledging each other and parenting in gaining support together helped the women of color to enforce their efforts and find the "erotic" within each of themselves.

Realizing that in all aspects of our lives women of color need nourishment and a sense of guidance, the Institute did not lack in any of these areas, providing workshops in career development, financial aid, academic advising and personal motivation.

As women in academia, one of the issues that we deal with as black women is where we intend to go with our education as undergrads. One of the most commonly asked questions is, "Will I get a job in the field I'm interested in?"

Our careers, and whether or not we will be successful, despite the fact that black women are the lowest paid, but most hired gender within the black race, are issues that many deal with on a consistent basis.

The Institute, being aware of such inquisitory issues that black women face, held a workshop directed by Ruth Carey. This workshop focused on resume building and words of wisdom for women of color receiving successful internships.

Another workshop that had a great impact on many of the women was the workshop presented by Dr. Deidre Royster. In describing her experiences about the process of communication, with the women of color providing helpful words of wisdom, or students using dance, poetry or song is exactly the type of "erotic" characteristic that Audre Lorde said will awaken by acknowledging these "Oral Traditions" as part of our learning experience.

"The sharing of joy, whether emotional... or intellectual forms a bridge between the sharers which can be the basis for understanding much of what is not shared," Lorde said.

Oftentimes, as women of different shades and cultures, we tend to forget the root of our similarity as women is the simple fact that we have different melanin in our skin that society chooses to distinguish and separate us by.

With this understanding it is to our benefit to realize all of the different nationalities, and cultures that we hold as significant parts of our lives that are complimentary to each other.

With vibrant, pink, and intricate flowers, complimenting their hand-made ankle length dresses, the Korean Dance Group performed the Korean fan dance "Bu–Chae–Chum."

My eyes opened wide as I realized the women who performed the traditional Korean Fan Dance used this form of expression to show the pain and hardship that their people in Korea went through historically. The fact that the civil war divided Korea into two parts provided yet another form of oppression for these women's homeland.

"People did come out... different women... Koreans, Mediterraneans... women of color who don't usually come out," one woman commented.

To realize that the words "women of color" are not marginalized by one set of people opened the eyes of many.

Another woman presented a poem which described the intra–group oppression with which she had to deal coming from a middle class Puerto Rican family and migrating to the United States.

Other performances consisted of the acting out of "The Hair Piece," folk music and spoken word poetry.

At the end of this conference I sensed the deep conviction of the women in the room, who were excited for participating in the conference. For no one at this conference was at the receiving end only, but both the presenters and the audience were pivotal for the experience that the women who were present went through.

Dr. Jennifer Ire closed the conference with a talk on spirituality.

The room became silent as she sprinkled "sweet water" on the floor to allow all of the female ancestors of our family roots into the room.

"How many people do you know who came into this world without the help of a women?" Ire asked.

Everyone replied in unison, "No one."

Placing our hands on our wombs, the women in the room looked around at each other in silence.

With the sense of a presence being felt in the room, we repeated Ire's words that carried her through all of her hardship. With dignity and pride we affirmed this statement three times: "I am the dignity of spirit in human form!"

The fact that we as women are silenced by things at times that appear to us as only natural, it's time that we allow ourselves to feel emotion, assert ourselves, and to not respect the fear as women that we are often told to respect.

To recognize that as women of color we are not marginalized by only the struggles of being African American, but by those who are Haitian, Trinidadian, African, Korean, Mediterranean, etc.

"Recognizing the power of the erotic within our lives can give us energy to pursue genuine change within our world," Lorde said.

Allana E. Todman is a Collegian Columnist.

Black Affairs is Dead . . .

without dedicated writers to keep it alive.

The Black Affairs Page is looking for . . . creative, thought provoking writers to represent on the page.

If you've been meaning to get involved, this is your time.

All members of the ALANA community with an interest are urged to contact Humphrey brown III at 546–0977 or come down to the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

This is your voice. Take control.

Along the color line: a look at the black male vote

Dr. Manning Marable

In the aftermath of the 1995 "Million Man March," many African-Americans felt a renewed commitment to become active in civic and political affairs. There is striking evidence from last November's presidential election that this new attitude has directly contributed to much higher voting rates.

In November, 1996, the number of black men who voted was about 4.8 million. This was a 1.7 million increase over the number who had voted in 1992, an increase of 55 percent in four years.

This massive increase of black male voting power was even more remarkable when considered against the voting patterns of everyone else. In 1996, less than one-half of all registered Americans actually voted, the lowest percentage of the electorate since 1924.

The percentage of both African-American women and white males who went to the polls respectively declined by 8 percent. For white women, the drop in voter participation was 14 percent from 1992 figures, or about seven million fewer voters.

President Clinton won 84 percent of the African-American vote, a substantial part of his margin of victory over Republican challenger Robert Dole. Even more influential was the impact of the black male vote in key congressional races.

In New Jersey, for example, Democrat Robert Torricelli was locked in a bitter contest with Republican Dick Zimmer for a U.S. Senate seat. In the election, Zimmer won 54 percent of New Jersey's white voters. But Torricelli won 85 percent of the African-American vote, and won the election by an overall margin of 53 percent to 47 percent. Observers noted with amazement that New Jersey's black turnout of registered voters had almost doubled compared to 1993 election figures. Most of this growth in the black electorate came from black men.

The greatest factor undermining the full power of the black male vote is the criminal justice system. According to a study released by the Sentencing Project, a non–profit organization, of a total voting age population of 10.4 million African-American men in this country, nearly 1.5 million have had the right to vote taken away from them due to a felony conviction.

In short, about 14 percent of all black men are unable to vote, either because they are in prison or because they have been convicted of a felony. According to the study, felons are barred from voting while in prison in 46 states.

Thirty-one states also disenfranchise convicted felons while they are on parole or probation. And there are 13 states, mostly in the South and the West, that permanently prohibit former felons from voting.

African-Americans currently comprise 51 percent of the 1.1 million Americans incarcerated in Federal and state prisons. About one-third of all young black males in their twenties are, at any given time, either in prison or jail, on probation, parole or awaiting trial.

The criminal justice system is the chief means of warehousing unemployed, undereducated and poor black men. Denied economic opportunity, African-American men are disproportionately locked up by a penal system which is designed to ensure that their full voting power is reduced and for many completely eliminated.

As David Bositis, a researcher at the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, explained to the New York Times, "You have a prison system where black men are back in servitude, along with an economy where blacks are in the low paying jobs."

So, to many black Americans, "The system is basically rigged to diminish their political power and recreate the plantation system with prisons."

Civil rights organizations like the NAACP need to consider initiating campaigns to change election laws, permitting people who have served time in prison for felonies to be restored their full voting rights.

To be denied the right to vote is to become a non–citizen in one's native land. And for African–American men who will still enjoy the freedom to vote, we must continue to do so in ever-increasing numbers. Voting by itself won't solve all our problems, but it is an indispensable tool in the struggle for black freedom.

Dr. Manning Marable is a professor of history and the director of the Institute for Research in African-American Studies, Columbia University, New York City. "Along the Color Line" appears in over 300 publications throughout the U.S. and internationally.

Arts & Living

Monday, April 28, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

COURTESY JOHN LEEK

Big Bang Baby — Stone Temple Pilots made quite a big bang at the Mullins Center Saturday night, but elder statesmen Cheap Trick stole the show.

STP, Cheap Trick both shine

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

CHEAP TRICK / STONE TEMPLE PILOTS
Mullins Center
April 26, 1997

It might be a wise idea to have a professional check out the Mullins Center for structural damage. Saturday night's line-up of Cheap Trick and Stone Temple Pilots shook the building to its foundation; the volume of the music coupled with a rabid, foot-stamping audience caused the venue to literally shake. However, there was much more to the show than noise.

The pairing of these two bands is entirely logical considering Cheap Trick is the godfather of the melodic hard-rock genre. Both bands rely on a guitar-heavy blend of traditional rock riffing, plenty of snarl, and conagiously catchy hooks and choruses. Although Cheap Trick and STP may follow these same basic tenets, the end results

Turn to STONE TEMPLE PILOTS, page 7

Bob Mould in Noho tonight

By Martin J. Keane
Collegian Correspondent

It is a rarity these days when an artist can attain such a high level of popularity — based solely on artistic and musical merit — and be such an enduring mystery to his fans at the same time.

Never one to run with the pack, Bob Mould has always opted to let his songs be his mouthpiece in his seemingly never ending quest to exorcise his personal demons. Mould's songwriting catalogue, which spans some 16 years, clearly ranks him as one of the most important artists of the last two decades. Tonight at the Iron Horse in Northampton, Mould will deliver an acoustic set culled from this diverse body of songs which promises to be both entertaining as well as challenging.

Beginning as a founding member of Minneapolis' defining postpunk outfit Husker Du, Mould established himself as a master of linking the noise of hardcore and the tunefulness of pop in songs that achieved a deeper symbiosis. Over the course of eight albums, Husker Du evolved from a purist hardcore band to a group that reconciled their dissonance within the traditional verse-chorus-verse structure that bands like the Pixies and Nirvana would later borrow from. Albums such as New Day Rising and the unquestioned sonic masterpiece Zen Arcade (both on SST) stand as testament to Husker Du's indie legacy.

After breaking up Husker Du on the cusp of mainstream recognition, Mould began his career as a solo artist. From the first few bars on his solo debut, 1989's Workbook (Virgin), Mould made his intention to never repeat Husker Du clear. The result was quite a departure from the raging noise he created in his days with Husker Du; the songs on Workbook have an airy, open sound that prominently features Mould's post-Husker despair and fear in lyrics that are as self-confessional as they are amusing. Black Sheets of Rain (Virgin), released in 1990, is more in line with previous work and features some stellar writing, but ultimately struggles to maintain any conceptual focus.

After proving himself as a soloist, Mould decided to try and reinvent himself for the '90s and transpose his vision for the alternative age. Sugar was formed in 1992 and features songs penned by Mould, save for a few weak contributions from bassist David Barbe. Their debut LP, Copper Blue (Rykodisc), sounds like modern rock; the rhythms are more strictly controlled than Husker Du's ever were, as Mould strikes a more mature compromise between melody and noise. The result is a wholly fulfilling album of songs that rock loud and hard yet maintain their clarity and biting essence. Songs like the opening "The Act We Act" and the minor AOR hit "If I Can't Change Your Mind" continue Mould's tradition of having his life as an open book. The EP Beaster (Rykodisc) is more of the same, only with a more brooding and dark tone to the lyrics. 1994's File Under: Easy Listening (Rykodisc) expands the pop structure found on Copper Blue, yet fails to pack the same punch due to its joyful nature.

After gaining a good deal of mainstream success on the back of relent-

Turn to MOULD, page 7

COURTESY RYKODISC

"Get that camera out of my face or I'll smack ya!" — Punk legend Bob Mould performs an acoustic set at the Iron Horse in Northampton tonight.

Seven O's

...ar demand ....

THE NEW YORK CENTERFOLDS

WEDNESDAY 4/30 All male review starts at 8:30pm tickets $8 while they last men allowed in at 11:00pm
LADIES ONLY

DRINK SPECIALS
ABSOLUT MADRAS $2.00
BUD ICE BOTTLES $1.50

SEVEN O's
Rt. 116, Sunderland • 5 Miles North of UMass• 665-8788

LEARNING FOR THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE
• LEARNING FOR A LIFETIME •

UMASS SUMMER SESSION 1997

Now is the time to advance your career, explore other options, plan for a new future, get ahead in your studies, or enrich your life.
• Hundreds of Credit Courses
• Workshops for Personal and Professional Enrichment
• Part-time Specialized Degree Programs–Bachelor's and Master's
• Professional Development Courses for Teachers

Classes held days, evenings, and weekends
• Session I: June 3-July 11
• Session II: July 15-August 21
• Variable Sessions

Call 413-545-0107 for a free course catalog or e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Find it on our website: http://www.umass.edu/contined/

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION • UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

UMass Amherst
SOUTHWEST
April 28 - May 3, 1997
We'll Rock Your World WEEK

Monday, April 28
FRANK SANTOS
THE X-RATED HYPNOTIST

Tuesday, April 29
COMEDY STAR COMEDIANS

Wednesday, April 30
TASTE OF AMHERST (AFTERNOON)
BATTLE OF THE BANDS

Thursday, May 1
ULTIMATE PSYCHIC FAIR
(Southside Room) Tarot Card REadings, Numerology, Palm Reading

Friday, May 2
JOHN ADAMS BBQ
SOUL TV EXTRAVAGANZA

SATURDAY, MAY 3
MALCOLM X PICNIC

All events take place on the Horseshoe starting at 9:00 PM!!! (Unless otherwise noted)
Rain date Location: Southside Room
Special thanks to UHS and Planned Parenthood
For more info on scheduled events please call 545-0960.

■ Stone Temple Pilots

continued from page 6

Saturday night proved to be very different from each other.

Cheap Trick started the evening off with an hour-long set which, for whatever reason, went completely over the audience's collective head. With 13 songs covering two decades of recorded output, the band defied both middle age and audience indifference to put on one of the best shows in recent memory.

From the opening "I Want You To Want Me" through the apocalyptic finale of "Surrender," the Trick pulled out all the stops. The 1-2-3 punch of "I Want You...," "Come On, Come On," and "Hot Love" was absolutely devastating and set the tone for an uncompromising set of red-hot pop-rock nuggets. Three songs from their excellent self-titled new album (out tomorrow on Red Ant — get it) blended seamlessly with older material like "Clock Strikes Ten," the bombastic "Heaven Tonight," and a searing "Dream Police." Unfortunately, though, much of the audience arrived late and seemed more concerned with finding their friends from frat row than paying much attention to the music. Oh well — their loss.

This inattention wasn't lost on the band, though. Guitarist extraordinaire Rick Neilsen verbally berated the lethargic crowd and, in addition to constantly showering them with guitar picks, at one point tossed one of the half-dozen guitars he played that night into the first row.

When Neilsen managed to keep both hands on his instrument, though, he was fantastic. The most animated member of the band, his goofy stage antics provided the focal point of Cheap Trick's live show. With the rock-solid foundation of Bun E. Carlos' stomping drums (imagine a combination of Charlie Watts' swing and John Bonham's power — that's Carlos in a nutshell) and Tom Petersson's impossibly deep 12-string bass, Neilsen was able to stretch out and color the songs with blazing leads and trashy power chords.

Trick singer/rhythm guitarist Robin Zander was also in top form, the passage of time having done nothing to limit his impressive vocal range. Stellar backing vocals by Petersson and Neilsen fleshed out the overall sound, and in 55 short minutes, Cheap Trick proved why they should not be written off as relics of rock history.

The audience was clearly there for San Diego's Stone Temple Pilots, though. And the Pilots rose to the challenge with a solid, though flawed, set. Belatedly touring behind last year's Tiny Music... Song From The Vatican Gift Shop (Atlantic) album, STP's main activity for the last 12 months has been sweating out the fate and consequences of vocalist Scott Weiland's drug, police and rehab escapades.

However, Weiland has cleaned up his act and his renewed vitality was immediately evident. Strutting out on stage wearing a gangster-style suit, gripping a megaphone, and sporting a ridiculous blonde Afro wig, he proceeded to spend the next 115 minutes in an almost constant state of perpetual motion. In addition to some snappy dance routines (ranging from James Brown-like footwork to a bizarre, crab- like stomp), his impassioned vocal performance built and maintained the momentum for the Pilots' set.

With the exception of Weiland, though, the rest of the band were completely unremarkable in both appearance and performance. Bassist Robert DeLeo held the sound together with his uncluttered playing and strong backing vocals, but drummer Eric Kretz's lack of subtlety and Dean DeLeo's riffing-by-the-numbers quickly became samey and ultimately boring.

Although their set did have its share of problems, it also contained numerous highlights. The opening "Crackerman" was augmented by both a disco ball and Weiland's megaphone antics. "Tumble In The Rough" and "Vaseline" were other early-set bright spots. A mid-set Unplugged-style set consisted of a cover of Zeppelin's "Dancing Days," "Creep," "Pretty Penny," and a surprisingly pretty guitar interlude between the DeLeo brothers. The remainder of the set included most of their hits, including "Plush," "Big Empty," "Interstate Love Song," and the defiant "Trippin' On A Hole In A Paper Heart."

The two-song encore, though, almost redeemed STP's patchy performance. "Big Bang Baby," a Beatle-esque take on '70s glam rock, featured a propulsive beat which surpassed the excellent studio version and into total pop nirvana. A torrid "Sex Type Thing" followed, closing the set with a rush of adrenaline-fueled rhythmic muscle.

Although it's taken them almost five years, it seems that Stone Temple Pilots have finally shaken the tag of Pearl Jam imitators. Although their first two LPs, Core (1992) and Purple (1994), were mainly '90s hard rock with a grunge twist, Tiny Music displays a remarkable pop sensibility and a previously undetectable range of influences. Unfortunately, Weiland's heroin escapades overshadowed the band's musical evolution, but if he can stay clean and the band gets a chance to regain their stage legs and continue their new musical direction, Stone Temple Pilots have the potential to become one of the truly great bands of the decade.

■ Mould

continued from page 6

less touring, Sugar fizzled out after the release of the Besides (Rykodisc) compilation. However, Mould has carried on and last year's Bob Mould (Rykodisc) reaffirms his vitality and relevance. His brutally honest and often bitter lyrical style persists as Mould grapples with the demise of Sugar and contemplates his next move in songs such as "Egoveride."

In concert, Mould is a powerhouse who endlessly battles with his guitar and voice as if his life depends on it. Mould's music demands attention from his audience, which they provide with a reverence usually reserved for a deity. The music — of secondary importance to many artists — is left to manifest itself within the listener with a refreshing lack of unnecessary pretense. The unnerving power and urgency with which he delivers his songs sets him in a class above his peers as he redefines the term artistic integrity.

Bob Mould performs a solo acoustic set tonight at the Iron Horse in Northampton with special guest Richard Buckner. Showtime is 7 p.m. and tickets are $15.

Want to go to concerts for FREE? Write for ARTS & LIVING!

(It's super snazzy!)

■ baseball

continued from page 12

front of centerfielder Adam Kessner. Wolcott and Kudrikow scored, and UMass regained the lead for good.

The Minutemen turned a close game into a rout in the fifth, scoring four more runs.

Dagliere led off the inning with his second dinger of the day, lining one over the 330 ft. sign in right. Braunstein then hit his team-high 11th homer of the year.

When it was all said and done, UMass starter Bill Cooke had a five-run cushion to propel him to his fourth win of the year. Cooke went the distance, allowing only seven hits, three runs and three walks in addition to a season-high seven strikeouts.

Unfortunately, Clark's hitting streak ended at 12 straight at-bats, leaving him with a team-high .454 batting average. But guys like Correa picked up the slack for the Minutemen, pulling off a near-perfect day, going 6-for-8.

"We're a real tough team now. With this lineup, if someone's not hitting, someone else will pick him up," Correa said. "We're just taking each game one-by-one, and we're hoping it will carry us to the A-10s."

UMass coach Mike Stone was content with the effort, but felt there was plenty of room for improvement.

"We haven't played a perfect game yet, though we came close to it in the first game. We just need to work on a few things," Stone said. "All we want is to do something right over the course of a game that will give us a chance to win in the end."

Yesterday marked a similar performance from the Minutemen as Scott Barnsby, following up on his no-hitter against Northeastern last Tuesday, earned his second win in a row. URI took the game down to the last out, but UMass was able to hold on for a 15-12 victory. It was important to Barnsby to be able to step back on to the mound at Lorden Field and pitch a good game, considering his last two performances in Amherst were below average.

"I stayed ahead in the count today," Barnsby said. "I have a tendency to fall behind in the count."

He stayed ahead of the count in every inning apart from the sixth, which allowed the UMass lineup to give him the run support he needed.

Going into the eighth inning, the Minutemen had the game won, with a 14-4 lead over the Rams. Ryan Cameron was brought in to close out the game for Barnsby, but the Rams knocked him around for eight runs on seven hits in one and two thirds of an inning.

Barnsby was credited with the win and improved to 4-0. He went seven complete innings, giving up four runs on five hits, one walk and four strikeouts.

The game opened up as a pitching duel. Barnsby and URI's starter, Brian Keyes, combined for two scoreless innings. It wasn't until the third inning that UMass got on the board. Combined with five hits and one walk, the Minutemen posted three runs to take an early lead.

The fourth inning was another scoreless inning, but when UMass got up to bat in the fifth, it would start a spree which averaged three runs for the next four innings. Correa started it off right with a solo blast over the left-center fence. Four batters later, Brian Samela topped Correa's home-run with a two run blast of his own, bringing home Pete Gautreau.

In the sixth, both squads brought in four runs apiece. After 14 straight shutout innings, Barnsby finally gave up a run. At the end of the sixth it was 10-4, UMass.

That would be all that Barnsby would allow, though, as he shut the Rams down in the seventh. The bottom of the seventh was highlighted by Correa's first career grand slam and second homerun of the game. Correa went 3-for-4 on the day, 9-for-12 for the series, with eight RBIs and four runs scored.

UMass went on to win its sixteenth game in row, marking the longest current winning streak in the nation. The Minutemen go into action again on Wednesday when the Catamounts of Vermont visit Lorden Field. The game begins at 3 p.m.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Adam Correa went 9-for-13 and knocked out a grand slam over the weekend as the UMass baseball team swept Rhode Island.

Do we know how to spoil you?
Worker-owned CollectiveCopies
S. Pleasant, Amherst
(413) 256-6425

The Right Place to Be!
3 Barbers Everyday
Unisex Hair Styling
Amherst Barbers
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
(Next to Newbury Comics)
Jim, Terri, Gob
Guys & Gals Clipper Cuts
Layer Cuts Razor Cuts
Flat Tops Kids Cuts
Fades
$8 & up
Hours: Mon thru Fri, 8-5:15pm • Sat, 8-2:45pm

Summertime in PARIS from $199* one way
Non-Stop B747 service from Boston
Hotels from $38 per night based on double occupancy/flexible voucher program go as you please.
Phone cards-Youth Hostel ID Cards - Metro Passes -
Museum Passes - Rail Passes - All issued on the spot.
Car Rentals also available
Credit cards welcome no fee.
20% - 25% Discount to all students on scheduled carriers, with service to Spain, Italy, Germany & France.
Domestic travel also included.
AIR TRAVEL SPECIALISTS
Phone: Toll Free 888-837-6448
Fax: (310) 937-6587
Internet: http://www.francetravel.com

University Health Services
Summer
Health Coverage
1997 Basic Health Fee:
$208.00
1997 Student Family Plan:
$463.00
Coverage Period: June 1, 1997-August 31, 1997
(if enrolled by June 1)
(Only UMass students with Basic and SHBP are eligibile for the Student Family Plan)
Visit the Member Services Department located in the main lobby for enrollment
577-5490
Eligibility: Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke, Smith, and UMass Students

Give Us Some Face!

Between April 14-May 2, come to Hampden Lobby, Southwest and have your picture taken for the new UMass I.D. Card; Monday-Thursday, 3 p.m. to 8 p.m. and Friday 3-5 p.m.

When you do, you'll get a coupon worth 50¢ at Antonio's* plus a FREE small soda at Hampden Snack Bar!
*Hampden location only

The photo is FREE, takes about 2 minutes, and you'll AVOID SOME BIG LINES IN THE FALL.
The new card will be issued then, and it's going to make your life a lot easier! THE ALL-CAMPUS CARD can be used as your library card, Meal Plan ticket, residence hall key, and as a cash card for on-campus purchases.
I.D. Card photos are also taken in the I.D. Office, Franklin Dining Hall anytime during regular business hours.
Don't miss this photo opportunity!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Attention ALL COLLEGIAN Staff

Candidate's Night for all positions to be held

all encouraged to attend

Today 7:30 - 9 p.m.
Campus Center room 101

all encouraged to attend

followed by

ELECTIONS

(staff only)

TOMORROW

at the Collegian

Business

Office

from 8:30

to

4 p.m.

CLINTON WANTS YOUR LIFE.

HE WANTS TO OWN YOU.

As demonstrated by his April 27-29 "Service Summit" in Philadelphia — he wants you to accept the doctrine that living for yourself is evil while living in servitude to others is good. Clinton — and the other politicians and celebrities leading the summit — have asserted your "duty" to "serve" others. They want you to feel guilty for living — if you're not living for others.

These people are profoundly anti-American. It is a moral disgrace for them to hold their summit at Independence Hall — where this country was founded on the right of the individual to be left alone to pursue his own happiness. It is a moral disgrace for them to call self-sacrifice "the American Way." Your life belongs to you alone, not to King George III, not to the needy, not to Bill Clinton. This is the American way.

The duty and guilt they seek to invoke with their "volunteerism" campaign is bad enough. But even worse are their growing proposals to make service mandatory. Clinton has embraced Maryland's requirement that high school students must perform community service in order to graduate.

We believe that living a rational, productive life in the achievement of your values is a moral virtue. What we need is not "a new sense of duty," but a new understanding of the value of independence, which Ayn Rand so eloquently expressed in her novel The Fountainhead. Here are excerpts from the hero's climactic courtroom speech:

"Men have been taught that their first concern is to relieve the suffering of others. But suffering is a disease. Should one come upon it, one tries to give relief and assistance. To make that the highest test of virtue is to make suffering the most important part of life. Then man must wish to see others suffer — in order that he may be virtuous. Such is the nature of altruism."

"The man who attempts to live for others is a dependent. He is a parasite in motive and makes parasites of those he serves. The relationship produces nothing but mutual corruption. It is impossible in concept. The nearest approach to is in reality — the man who lives to serve others — is the slave. If physical slavery is repulsive, how much more repulsive is the concept of servility of the spirit? The conquered slave has a vestige of honor. He has the merit of having resisted and of considering his condition evil. But the man who enslaves himself voluntarily in the name of love is the basest of creatures. He degrades the dignity of man and he degrades the conception of love. But this is the essence of altruism."

"Men have been taught that the highest virtue is not to achieve, but to give. Yet one cannot give that which has not been created. Creation comes before distribution — or there will be nothing to distribute. The need of the creator comes before the need of any possible beneficiary. Yet we are taught to admire the second-hander who dispenses gifts he has not produced above the man who made the gifts possible. We praise an act of charity. We shrug at an act of achievement."

"The choice is not self-sacrifice or domination. The choice is independence or dependence."

"The egoist in the absolute sense is not the man who sacrifices others. He is the man who stands above the need of using others in any manner. He does not function through them. . . . He does not exist for any other man — and he asks no other man to exist for him. This is the only form of brotherhood and mutual respect possible between men."

"Independence is the only gauge of human virtue and value. What a man is and makes of himself; not what he has or hasn't done for others. There is no substitute for personal dignity. There is no standard of personal dignity except independence."

"Now observe the results of a society built on the principle of individualism. This, our country. The noblest country in the history of men. The country of greatest achievement, greatest prosperity, greatest freedom. This country was not based on selfless service, sacrifice, renunciation or any precept of altruism. It was based on a man's right to the pursuit of happiness. His own happiness. Not anyone else's. A private, personal, selfish motive. Look at the results. Look into your own conscience."

"I came here to say that I do not recognize anyone's right to one minute of my life. . . . No matter who makes the claim, how large their number or how great their need."

DON'T ALLOW this country's President and intellectuals to destroy it — and to turn you into a selfless servant. Don't accept the unearned guilt they want you to feel. Proclaim your moral right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Your happiness.

FIGHT THE SUMMIT.
Picket with us in Philadelphia. Sign the Petition against Servitude we are co-sponsoring with the Ayn Rand Institute at the Web site given below. The petition will be presented to Clinton on our holiday: July 4.

U-MASS OBJECTIVIST CLUB in conjunction with THE COALITION OF STUDENTS AGAINST SERVITUDE
founded by Objectivist clubs at campuses nationwide, including Harvard U, Columbia U, Northwestern U, U of Michigan, George Washington U, U of Pittsburgh, Penn State U
SIGN THE PETITION AGAINST SERVITUDE: http://www.aynrand.org/no_servitude

UM football team holds final scrimmage of spring

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts football team concluded its spring practice schedule with an intrasquad scrimmage Saturday at Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Junior tailback Matt Jordan rushed for 69 yards and one touchdown on seven carries in the game that annually closes out the spring drills. Senior wide receiver Darryl Thomas recorded three receptions for 73 yards and a TD, as the team went through 75 situation plays.

Jordan's score came on a 50-yard run, while Thomas connected on a 50-yard pass from sophomore quarterback Jeff Smith for his strike.

With his efforts in the spring practices, Smith has secured the starting QB spot for fall drills.

Sophomore fullback Jamie Holston rushed for 41 yards on four carries, while junior tailback Jim Pizano recorded a touchdown on a 20-yard scamper.

Defensively, Dan Healy, a sophomore linebacker, had six tackles, while junior defensive end Joe Abasciano had five tackles and a fumble recovery.

The Minutemen, who will be captained by defensive end Mike Dawson, linebacker Khari Samuel and offensive tackle Geoff Thomas, start the 1997 season with a home contest against Atlantic 10 foe Richmond on Aug. 30. The UMass slate also contains home dates against Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Delaware, Hofstra and Connecticut.

Coach Mike Hodges handed out the team awards at the annual banquet Friday night. Most Valuable Player honors went to Justin Riemer; Most Outstanding Offensive Player was given to Erik Henry; and Most Outstanding Defensive Player went to Kory Blackwell. Others receiving awards were: Most Outstanding Special Teams — Dan Healey; Vic Fushia Award for Most Improved Player — Ron Brockington; and the Coach's Award for contribution to UMass football family — Tony Gugliuzza.

■ men's lacrosse

continued from page 12

gish — 40 shots can hardly be called a lack of attack — and it tried to hit a variety of shots, but Gebhardt was there for nearly all of them.

"Twenty-three saves is a lot," Cannella said. "A lot of those were one-on-one or point blank. You've got to give him a lot of credit for coming in here and doing a nice job."

Gebhardt himself said he felt "great." Those thoughts were echoed by Syracuse defenseman Sam Vollen, who said he thought Gebhardt played well.

"He played great today," Vollen said. "We've faced some great attackmen all year, like today, and [Gebhardt] was great."

Syracuse tried to give Gebhardt a cushion by opening the scoring three minutes into the first quarter. Doug Jackson received a Ryan Powell pass on UMass goalie John Kasselakis' right side and fired a shot low to put SU up 1-0.

UMass answered just over a minute later, when Brendan Glass knifed through the Orange defensive corps and got the ball past Gebhardt.

Casey Powell then took command with a pair of goals to end the opening period. Casey Powell, a senior who was tabbed as the pre-season national player of the year, connected on a Jackson assist, then followed with an unassisted tally to put Syracuse up 3-1.

UMass' defense, lauded after the game by Jackson, became a brick wall to Syracuse in the second quarter. By controlling the ball for most of the period, the Minutemen effectively kept Cuse out of the cage.

Instead, UMass was able to notch a score. In the period's waning minute, Mike McKeefrey took the loose ball in front of the Orangeman cage and slipped it by Gebhardt for a 3-2 halftime score.

However, in the third period, a 3-1 goal advantage pulled Syracuse even further ahead. Another 3-1 quarter in the fourth did the Minutemen in.

"When you play a team like Syracuse, you have opportunities to score the one-on-ones and the good shots," Cannella said. "If you don't finish them it'll kill you."

Chris Grande was the offensive bright spot for UMass in the second half. A tally in the third period brought the Minutemen within two with 3:47 left in the period. His final goal came with four seconds left in the game, an extra-man opportunity off an assist from Glass.

Notes: Saturday was the final home game for nine UMass seniors: Casey Costello, Glass, Grande, Jim Kennedy, Greg Macdonald, Jay Robbins, Todd Sokolowski, Ken Sussi and Adam Waxer... SU coach Roy Simmons, Jr. on UMass fans throwing oranges on the field: "I'm just glad we're not represented by coconuts or watermelons. We toyed with the idea of throwing Minutemen, but they're heavy and they don't sail well."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Brendan Glass found the Orangeman net once during Saturday's 9-4 loss to Syracuse.

■ Syracuse

continued from page 12

to outscore its opponent, but only 1-0. The remaining three quarters all went Syracuse's way with 3-1 results.

"I think we saw everything we expected coming out," Kasselakis said. "From behind the back shots to long field passes to big checks from the defensemen. We were prepared for it, we just couldn't get it going."

The Minutemen were able to outshoot Syracuse 40-38, and UMass scrum specialist Jay Robbins won 12 of 16 face-offs, but it was numbers like the 44-20 Syracuse groundball monopoly and 23 saves from Orange goalie Jason Gebhardt that showed Syracuse's edge biggest asset: composure.

"When you play a team like Syracuse you have opportunities to score the one-on-ones and the good shots," coach Greg Cannella said. "If you don't finish them, it'll kill you.

"When you play defense like that you hope to score just one more goal than they do because you can't hold a team down like Syracuse. You've got to stay even with them."

Through one half of play it appeared the Minutemen would be able to keep it close, if not make a run for the win. Trailing just 3-2 at the intermission, UMass needed a big third period, a rare commodity for the maroon and white this season.

"A few times I was really upset offensively when we didn't take our time and be patient, a few times in the third quarter when we threw the ball away," Cannella said.

"We played great defense, but when we got the ball we were looking to create something right away. I was telling them to be patient, it will come, but unfortunately we didn't do it," Cannella said.

"UMass played great defense all day long," Syracuse attackman Doug Jackson (2 goals, 2 assists) said. "We're used to getting a lot more shots than that but they really tightened up.

"I thought they played outstanding. Maybe they didn't have the offensive output, but from the defensive point of view I think they played great."

■ women's lax

continued from page 12

occasion. This was the best game of the season by far."

Warrington was happy with the Senior Day victory.

"I think the seniors have been through a lot together," Warrington said. "A lot of ups and downs, and I'm glad today was one of the ups. It really helped us not to get really upset that this was our last home game, because the four of us knew that we would go out and do it today.

"And we did, and I'm so proud of all three of them, and I'll really miss playing with them. It won't be the same next year without them."

It was a day of career highs again for the Minutewomen, mirroring last Saturday's game against New Hampshire. Sophomore attacker Laura Koruiz scored six points in the game (3 goals, 3 assists), Walsh did the setup job with three assists (1Gg, 5a) and junior midfielder Jennifer Herker (4g, 5a) tied her career best of three goals.

After BC went up by a 3-1 margin, McClellan called a timeout at the 6:39 mark, and the team was able to get back on track. A beautiful run through the midfield by Warrington set up junior Jen Bowen's goal 1:30 later, and the Minutewomen began to charge. Herker helped to spark the run, scoring three of the next four goals, while assisting on Bowen's second of the contest.

The positive attitude for herself and the team was the key for the team to get back into the flow of scoring, with eight different scorers tallying on the day.

"Everyone came out with a positive attitude, and we definitely stepped everything up," Herker said. "The seniors stepped it up, not only for us, but for themselves. They were a spark for me, that's for sure. They all were."

Goals by Warrington and freshman defender Lynne Young put UMass up 8-6, but the key factor momentum-wise going into halftime came with a second left on the clock.

Bryan made a run up the right flank, and with seconds draining from the clock, cut to the middle of the field with her shot putting the Minutewomen up 9-6. Coupled with her gamewinner in last Wednesday's 10-8 win over Vermont, the defender has been figuratively on the attack.

"In the last couple of games, Erica has been doing an unbelievable job on scoring, and getting open," Warrington said. "I'm so proud of her right now, she's deserves all of the recognition."

Koruiz went on a roll of her own, assisting or scoring on all but one of the five unanswered goals to start the second half. BC goalie Megan McElvogue appeared to give up at the 32:24 mark of the game, with Bowen and Herker teaming up on a nice run upfield to set up Koruiz one-on- one with the befuddled keeper, putting UMass up 11-6.

After goals by Warrington and freshman midfielder Rebecca Minaker, a timeout by Eagle coach Mary Ann Foley after Koruiz' score to put UMass up 14-6 was a sign BC was completely giving up. However, the Eagles pulled together and made a comeback bid, but the margin was too much to overcome.

JOANNA KARLSAMEN / COLLEGIAN

The UMass women's lacrosse seniors: (from left to right) Erica Bryan, Kristen Hocker, Stephanie Walsh and Michele Warrington.

Auto Glass Center (Jeanine & Tommy)
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
OPEN 549-2880
one mile from UMass on the bus route

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
www.tristatene.com
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 19 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles left at Staples onto Rte 116N, first right to light, left to Center 141 S. take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs. It's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5ea; after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only.
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, MAY 4

NEED TO SELL A CAR?
Collegian Classifieds

The biggest threat to depression is your awareness of it.
UNTREATED DEPRESSION
http://www.save.org

BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR
American Heart Association.
Volunteer

Earth Systems
A new undergraduate Bachelor of Science degree program
Department of Geosciences • University of Massachusetts, Amherst
Global environmental changes require a comprehensive understanding of the earth's major systems, and of the important ways in which these systems are linked. The major systems are: geologic, oceanic, atmospheric, cryospheric (the snow and ice-covered world), and biospheric (including human) systems. To provide students with the necessary understanding of these inter-related systems, a new major in Earth Systems has been established in the Department of Geosciences.
The goal of earth system science is to obtain a scientific understanding of the entire earth system on a global scale. The new B.S. degree in Earth Systems will provide students with the necessary background to make informed judgements about contemporary environmental issues, based on an understanding of the complex factors involved. For those who propose to eventually pursue graduate education, it will provide a strong basis for further studies in a variety of fields.
For further information, contact the Department of Geosciences Room 233 Morrill Science Center or visit our Web Site at www.geo.umass.edu.

Puffton Village . . . Your First Choice
1, 2 and 3 bedroom apartments
Featuring
Newly renovated units that include:
New appliances New carpeting New kitchen cabinets & counter tops Central air conditioners
Rents starting at $615 per month
or
Traditional units that are:
Fully applianced Freshly painted Carpeted/Tiled Floors Central Air Conditioned
Rents starting at $545 per month
All rents include Heat, Hot Water & Cooking Gas and use of an olympic size pool, 5 tennis courts, basketball court, laundry rooms and on-site parking.
Now accepting rental applications for summer and fall. Call today 549-0145

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

The famous annual Amnesty International Jazz Concert Fundraiser 4/29, 7 pm., Campus Center Room 101 FREE Refreshments Tickets= $2.50/students, $4.00/public-faculty. 545-1825

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Concerned about Sex, STD's, Alcohol, Drugs, Eating Disorders, Stress, HIV/AIDS, or Smoking? Call Peer Health Connections at 577-5168 for answers to your questions. Completely Confidential.

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7-8 pm. in Campus Center Room 801. Free. Call 577-5181 for more info or just drop by.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3 bedroom Puffton Apt.- Available 8/1. Take over our recently renovated apt. Spacious, good location, next to bus route. Plenty of parking. Call Scott, Seth or Mark 549-2645.

Center of town 1,2,3 bedrooms. Gas, heat, hardwood floors. 253-7879

Take over lease or sublet 2 bedroom apt. $685 from June 1st. Bus route 330/380. Call 253-3264

2 bedroom Available 8/1. 1010 N Pleasant #3. 549-4142

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550 2 bedroom- $425 20 minutes from campus- no bus. Available for Sept. 665-2203

Large 2 bedroom apts- available for June or Sept. at Squire Village. 665-2203.

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apartment. Great location, A/C, heat included. Available 8/1/97. Call 549-7123.

Take over our lease Puffton. 2-3 people. Call 549-5879 Available 5/26.

AUTO FOR SALE

86 Ford Escort standard, $700 or Best Offer. Call Wendy 253-4729

87 Mazda RX7 5 speed, alarm, CD, new roof, new engine, 13K. Have all paperwork. $6500 or B/O. Call Erika 546-0545

Honda CRX 1986 Great gas mileage, 5 speed, sunroof. CD Player. $1500 or B/O Call Alycia 549-3866

For Sale 1979 VW Bus Runs good, $800 585-3074

91 Honda Civic 12 CD Changer. 4 speed, auto start. $4800 or B/O. 665-0162

90 Toyota Corolla DX loaded, STD, less than 6000 miles. Dark green. Must sell! Theresa 549-2895

1985 Mercury Capri black, 2 door, standard, sunroof, good condition, reliable

AUTO FOR SALE

$1000 or B/O. Must sell! Kara 549-6061

EMPLOYMENT

Looking for summer work? Spend your summer outdoors with other students painting houses. Student Painters is looking for people to fill both Prospect on Foreman and painters spots. No experience necessary. Call Keith 546-5199 for more info.

Extreme Sports Catalog looking for Sales Reps for the Cycling and Ski Industries. Call Mike (413)283-8227 for interviews starting the week of 5/5.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? $3000-$4000 for the summer. Work outside with other students in Andover area. Get a fun Leadership positions available 1-800-290-4848 ext. 226

Da Campus Interviews Friday 4/11 University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales Marketing and PR experience. Call 1-800-743-5556 ext. 122

Now Hiring/Summer. Part-time Talamaskers Amherst area. Flexible hours. Earn $8-$7/hour plus bonuses. No sales. Will train. Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777

We are looking for hard-working, top-quality, competent work study student for departmental business office next fall. Intelligent individual who can work independently. Good with numbers, computer skills, reliability a must. If you prove your worth we'll pay you well. Jennifer 545-3569 detailing experience

Summer Painters Work outside- $7-$10 an hour plus bonuses with your friends in Western Massachusetts. Call Pete at 1-800-829-4777

Cruise and Load Tour Employment Discover how to work in exotic locations and meet fun people, while earning up to $2000/month in these exciting industries. Cruise Information Services (206)971-3554 ext. CS0019

Aerobic Instructors: Evenings/Mornings available. Certified/Experienced. Must be able to work through summer. Call Jan at (413)572-0125.

COMPUTER JOBS! SUMMER, PT, FT Programming, PC Support, Hardware, Software. COBOL, 150, JCL, SQL, OICS, Visual Basic, Access, Win NT, Novell, LAN Admin, DOS, Windows. Springfield/Hartford. TSI Consulting. Phone: (413)567-0445, fax: (413)786-6313, tsiresume@map.com, WWW.www.tsiconsulting.com

EMPLOYMENT

Hadley Office now hiring for summer and immediate openings. Looking for 15 hard working, ambitious people to assist our outside sales force. No experience required. Will train

- On bus line
- Fun atmosphere
- Daily bonuses
- No selling involved
- Up to 40 hours
- Flexible schedule

Earn up to $7/$10 hr. For a confidential interview please call and ask for Mr. Baird or Mr. Boone between the hours of 10am -8pm at 584-0215

CAPE COD RESTAURANT Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train, housing available. Eastham and Orleans. (508)255-9394

Painters needed for summer Full or part-time in Chicopee-Springfield area $6-$10/hr + bonuses. Call Chen 546-2130

Child Care 19-20 hours per week. North Amherst area. 2 1/2 and 1 1/2 year olds. Car required. 548-9812 before 8pm

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mtns, Pennsylvania. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Counselors to teach tennis, scuba, water skiing, lakefront, motorcycles, gymnastics, arts and crafts, WSI, and more. Great salaries. 6/21/97-8/16/97. Call (800)832-0228 for an application

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT

Looking for extraverted people to help run our office. Must have good telephone and organizational skills. $7.25 per hour ($5)8653-0488 (Natick)

FUN! FRIENDLY! Coed Summer Camp seeks staff for male groups. Welcoming and supportive environment. Positions include: Leaders and General/ Bunk Counselors; as well as: Heads and Instructors for Swimming, Water-skiing, Hockey, Archery, Soccer, and Volleyball. A great summer job! Day-off accessibility to Boston, New York, Montreal. Call Today! Camp Schodack (800)851-1164, e-mail schodack@aol.com.

Now Hiring Painters for employment in The Southern Worcester County Area. Must have own transportation but no experience required. Call 546-4269

Vermont Advasters! Farm and Wilderness is now hiring summer staff! We need people who want to provide positive guidance and support to children coming of age in the 90's. Counselors, nurses, cooks, general staff. Organic farming, backpacking, rock climbing, watersport, carpentry, crafts. Challenging wilderness environment in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Contact Philip Tobin (802)422-3761 or fandw@sover.net (http://www.fandw.org)

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call. (413)827-7555

Bark Mulch
$21/yd delivered
2 yard minimum
Please call Leon 323-4447

65 gallon trash stand, accessories, $150 or B/O. 19" Color TV, $90. Akai Stereo with JVC Tape Deck, $50. Assorted furniture. kitchenware. Call Jim 253-6458

Single Futon for sale $40. Call Emily at 584-3986

Laptop Notebook 599, VGA Color Monitor $75, Hard Drive $10; Software $5, 386 Motherboard $25. Call Steve 366-3324 ext. 2

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 bedroom house- Northampton- near Look Park. Extra room, porch. For Sept. or maybe June. $925 plus utilities. Call 584-3428, afternoons. Dobinski Realtors.

4-5 bed houses for June. Northampton-Hadley. Call 584-3428. Dobski Realtors, afternoons

House For Rent $1700 per month. 4 bedrooms, one-half miles from Mullins Center. Gas, heat. Call 253-7879.

HOUSE FOR SALE

Contemporary- 4 bedroom, 3 bath 3050 sq. ft. to Wilbraham. $199,900 (413)596-8193

MUSICIANS

Modern Rock Guitarist Auditions being held for the "Dan DeRosa Band." Experienced only! Vocals preferred. Gigs average 4 to 6 times a month. Leave message at (413)589-1440

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, humid basement. Now showing for June and September. Lease $1300+. 253-7879

Capa Cod group & summer rentals Westerfront houses. Falmouth area (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

Dell 486SX 33 16 Megs, 15" monitor, 256b SVGA. Win 95, Word Perfect 6.0, Netscape, 14.4 modem, 4X CD. $575 B/O negotiable! Call 253-4644

Trek 820 w/Kryptonite Lock. Brand new. Only $250 or B/O. Call 548-9342

Weightbench & Weights Brand new

EMPLOYMENT

Only $250 or B/O. Call 548-8042

Word Processor with Monitor and Laser Printer functions include spreadsheets and more! $200 or B/O. Call 548-8042.

Trombone for sale Bach 42 Stradavarius. It is in great shape. Has a straight wrap and an F-trigger. Please call 587-0788 to look at instrument. Best offer gets the trombone

Bark Mulch
$21/yd delivered
2 yard minimum
Please call Leon 323-4447

65 gallon trash stand, accessories, $150 or B/O. 19" Color TV, $90. Akai Stereo with JVC Tape Deck, $50. Assorted furniture. kitchenware. Call Jim 253-6458

Single Futon for sale $40. Call Emily at 584-3986

Laptop Notebook 599, VGA Color Monitor $75, Hard Drive $10; Software $5, 386 Motherboard $25. Call Steve 366-3324 ext. 2

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 bedroom house- Northampton- near Look Park. Extra room, porch. For Sept. or maybe June. $925 plus utilities. Call 584-3428, afternoons. Dobinski Realtors.

4-5 bed houses for June. Northampton-Hadley. Call 584-3428. Dobski Realtors, afternoons

House For Rent $1700 per month. 4 bedrooms, one-half miles from Mullins Center. Gas, heat. Call 253-7879.

HOUSE FOR SALE

Contemporary- 4 bedroom, 3 bath 3050 sq. ft. to Wilbraham. $199,900 (413)596-8193

MUSICIANS

Modern Rock Guitarist Auditions being held for the "Dan DeRosa Band." Experienced only! Vocals preferred. Gigs average 4 to 6 times a month. Leave message at (413)589-1440

MISCELLANEOUS

WANTED CIGAR SMOKERS!! I am doing a project on the "New Cigar Smoker." Preferably female smokers but any recent smokers. Free cigars! Call Ed at 546-8881

Stop talking about Social Justice and start working for it. Organize low-income people to build power and have control over their communities. Call Lisa at Acorn 1-800-651-8448

Whitewater Rafting Student Discounts $65. May 3rd. 1-800-Unicorn

ROOM FOR RENT

Summer Sublet w/ Fall Option on Puffers

ROOM FOR RENT

Pond- 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+. Call 253-4954 for more info

Spacious room is house June 1/Fall Option. $320 per month. Karoline or Rachel 256-4119

Gigantic double room available to rent June 1 in 3 bedroom apt. Next to campus. Fully furnished! Robin 549-5184

1 large room in two bedroom apartment. Looking for two females. Available 6/1 + Fall and Spring Option. On bus route. Very spacious, great location. Call 549-3992

ROOMMATE WANTED

Wanted: 1 or 2 Females Non-smoking, to share a four bedroom apartment. No cats/dogs. Call 665-7712.

1 or 2 people to share large bedroom in a 6 bedroom house. Close to campus. Call 549-9237

Looking for one roommate this Summer 97. This large two bedroom apartment is in excellent condition. Please contact David or Collin at 256-1764

2 broadly girls graduating early, looking for 1 or 2 roommates to share Mill Valley lease from Sept.-Dec. Call Laura/Julie @ 253-8679.

SERVICES

Expert Piano Tuning Call Jaramiah Driscoll 583-3013 I save a message

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

1-4 rooms 1 mile to UMass. FP, porch, lots of appliances! On bus route. 6/1 with Fall Option. $295/month. 256-0672

Nice Amherst Condo Large balcony. One bedroom available (furnished), possibly 2. 1 1/2 bath, A/C, free cable/BBQ, dishwasher, garage, patio. Bus route. Grad students a plus. Call 253-4644

Close 2 bedroom in Brandywine. A/C, pool, 6/1 with Fall Option $775 NEG. On bus line, UMass, one mile. 549-0875

2 bedroom apt. Puffton Village Available 6/1 $575/mo. Call 549-1258

1 bedroom la 3 bedroom house in Belchertown. $707 plus electricity. Fall Option. Call 323-8740. Prefer older/grad student

2 bedroom- Puffton newly renovated, furnished. Next to bus stop. 549-4374

SUMMER SUBLET

2 bedroom in Brandywine Fully Furnished A/C, pool. Call 549-5452

Upscale, 2 bedroom townhouse on bus route. Full basement, each bedroom has shower and bath, patio, large kitchen, living and dining rooms, available after May 20th. 2-4 occupants. $1000 a month. Call 253-6458

Need 2 to share with1 in 2 bedroom apt. Bus stop @ and of drive or 10 min. walk to campus. Hdwd floors. B-ball hoop w/ 3 ft's. $298/month. Hot H20. Presidential. Mark 549-1086

2 bedrooms/Baalders 6/1-8/31 1 month free! Call 256-8513

Hoosomate Summer with Fall Option. Share 3 bedroom house with 2 immature grad students and one lazy dog. 2 miles from campus. 549-4492

Two room apartment in Downtown Amherst. Large living room, large bedroom. $520/month includes heat and hot water. Available 6/1-97. Call 256-0227

6/1 with Fall Option 2 bedroom Victorian House in Belchertown. On bus line. Peaceful location near Quabbin Reservoir. 323-7256

Need a place for the summer? 2 bedroom Apt at Colonial Village. Available June 1 (with a Fall Option) $515/month (2 or + people can share). Call Kelly or Cristina at 253-8831

For Rent 3 bedroom apartment- June-Aug. with Fall Option. $725. Call 253-7128

2 bedroom in Brandywine $650/month, Available 6/1 Call 549-0181

Summer Sublet with Fall Option 2 bedroom apt in a house available 6/1. 20 min. walk to campus. 5 min. to laundry, grocery, uptown. $1000/month. Heat and hot water included. Call 549-0841

Mill Valley- 2 bedroom, 2 bathroom, 2 air-conditioners. Fully Furnished! Call 253-6860

4 rooms in super huge house in Uptown Amherst. Cheap summer sublet with Fall Option. Females preferred. Call Erica or Ann at 253-1779 ASAP.

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths, first floor, backyard. June-August, Fall Option Call 253-8467

3 bedroom- Puffton Just removed! Furniture available. Starts 6/1. 549-4334.

2 bedroom apartment 6/1- 9/1 On bus line. $500/month including all utilities! Great deal! 548-0029

Sublet our awesome two huge bedroom apt. right near Puffers Pond on bus route. Call us 549-4089

Single and huge double room available in a 3 bedroom apt. Next to campus. Fully furnished. Call 549-5452

2 bedroom la Amherst House. Available 8/1- 8/31 $275 + utilities. Andrew 549-2896

2 bedroom- Baalders One month free. $695/month. Available 6/1. 256-4787.

2 bedrooms la a 4 bedroom apt. Huge. Lots of light. $332 each person per month. Southpoint Apts. 256-8966.

Sunny Spacious House Two bedrooms available. Great summer location with hiking and bike paths, deck and backyard. 5 miles from UMass. 256-8338.

2 bedroom apartment with Fall Option. 1 month free rent. Call 549-4089

2 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Great location near pool/courts. Heat/hot water included. $640/month. Available 8/1. 549-7782

3 bedroom Puffton Available 6/1. 549-5841

TO SUBLET

Going abroad next Fall Sublet my room for Spring '98. Great roomies, on bus line, close to campus and bars. Don't wait. Call 549-4588

2 bedroom in the Boulders. On bus line. Heat included. Room for 4 people. Option to renew lease. Call 256-5890.

Take over our lease 2 bedroom Mill Valley Apt. Available June 1st. Call 253-7157

TRAVEL

EUROPE $175.
Within USA $79 - $129
Cancun/Mexico $189 r/t
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!!!!!
http://www.airtech.com
AIRTECH 1-800-326-2009

Europa $169 O/W Mexico/Caribbean $189 R/T. ONE WORLD TRAVEL. It's your world, now you can afford to see it! (413)587-0001

WANTED

Looking for cheap Playstation and Games. Call 665-1278. Ask for Josh.

What's your talent? Entertainers wanted for K-do Kamival. Jugglers, artists, magic, etc. For more info call 545-5690

BUY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS! THEY WORK!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the full nine number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, APRIL 29

Lecture — The Mount Holyoke College Psychology and Education Department and the Women's Studies Program jointly present a talk by Abigail J. Stewart entitled, "Personality in Middle Age: Gender, History and Mid- Course Corrections," at 7 p.m. In Room 101, Dwight Hall, MHC. Free and open to the public.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30

Lecture — The Women in Sport Management present Anne Flannery, manager of women's athletics for Spaulding Sports, at 7 p.m. in the V.I.P. Room in the Mullins Center.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series features Lois Yachetta, Economist, Mass. Institute for Social and Economic Research, on "A Feminist Economics Approach to Discrimination," from 12-15-1:10 p.m. In the Campus Center, room 165-169. Free and open to the public.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Presentation — "Ellen's' UMass Coming Out Cafe," to celebrate "Ellen's" one-hour coming out episode, will be held at the Top of the Campus, 11th floor of the Campus Center. A big screen will transmit Ellen's big news. The event opens with a comedienne performance, Julie Waggoner at 8 p.m. and will continue through the Ellen Degeneres interview following the show. The event is free and wheelchair accessible. All are welcome. Contact the UMass Stonewall Center, at 545-4824 for more information.

THURSDAY, MAY 1

Forum — A Workplace Equality forum with keynote speaker Liz Winfield will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. The event will feature a panel of GLBT alumni speaking about their coming out experiences in the workplace and Liz Winfield will give an overview of current workplace equality issues. The event is free, refreshments will be served.

Meeting — An organizing meeting for students and youth interested in finding out about going to an historic international event, the 14th World Festival & Conference of Youth & Students held in Havana, Cuba July 27- Aug. 6, 1997 will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Hundreds of students from hundreds of countries will be gathering to discuss the many social issues and changes in the world today. Call Lia Wong, SGA president, for room number or see Student Center listing. An information table will be set- up today from 11:30 a.m.- 5 p.m.

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

VEGETABLE SONORA • SCAMPI • T-BONE STEAK • CHICKEN BBQ • PASTA ROJA
PORTEBELLO MUSHROOMS • CHICKEN QUESADILLA • MUSHROOM ONION CHEESEBURGER
BLACKENED CATFISH • SPANISH ORZO • STUFFED PORK CHOPS • NACHOS
BERKSHIRE BREWING COMPANY • MARGARITAS • BLACK FOREST CHEESECAKE
SCREAMING COWBOYS • AND MUCH MORE...

Member O.C.M.P.
"we accept all major credit cards"

HSCN — Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Vodka & Tonic

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 28, 1997

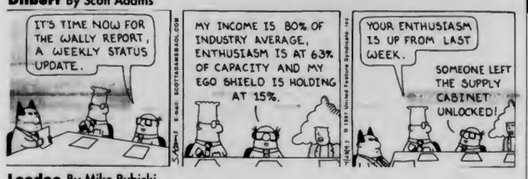
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Mysteries of Deep Space		American Experience		Teddy Kollek Story		Mysteries of Deep Space
WFSB	3	1 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Cosby		Murphy Brown	Cybill	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4 News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Cosby		Murphy Brown	Cybill	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	I Am Your Child (In Stereo)		Shining (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3 Pt.)				News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		7th Heaven (In Stereo)		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune Jeopardy		Foxworthy	Boston Com.	"From the Files of Unsolved Mysteries: The Sleepwalker Killing"		News		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks	Goode Beh.	News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Foxworthy	Boston Com.	"From the Files of Unsolved Mysteries: The Sleepwalker Killing"		News		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Monroe Place (In Stereo)		Married... With Children		Coach		Babylon 5
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune Jeopardy		Foxworthy	Boston Com.	"From the Files of Unsolved Mysteries: The Sleepwalker Killing"		News		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Mysteries of Deep Space		American Experience		Chicano! History		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	I Am Your Child (In Stereo)		Shining (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3 Pt.)				News	Nightline
WSBK	1	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks	Goode Beh.	News	Real TV	Mad Abo. You	M*A*S*H
WTBS	9	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Major League Baseball: Los Angeles Dodgers at Atlanta Braves. (Live)							★★ "Writer's Block" (1991) Morgan Fairchild,
A&E	21	Quincy "Dead Last"		Law & Order		Biography: Fidel Castro		Poirot "Weeps" Nest"		Miss Marple (Part 1 of 2)		Law & Order "Second Opinion"
CNN	20	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Nat.	Moneyline
COM	39	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	Comic Relief	★½ "Fair Instinct" (1993, Comedy) Armand Assante,				On Delivery	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	43	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "JJ #3" Sluka (R)		Wild Discovery "Gator"		Last Neanderthal?		Invisible Places "Underworld"		Wild Discovery "Gator" (R)
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Quarterfinal Game 6 — Teams to Be Announced.					Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Fight for Justice: The Nancy Conn Story" (1995) Marilu Henner,				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	33	Music Videos (In Stereo)		Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Indie Outing	Sports (R)	Music Videos (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Daria (R)	Singled Out	Lovaline
NICK	46	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	35	Odyssey	Sci-Fi Trader	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest DSV "The Stinger"		Forever Knight "Close Call"		Masters of Fantasy (In Stereo)		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	49	26 Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Extreme Machines (R)		Earth's Fury		Fire!		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	45	In the Heat of the Night		WCW Nitro (Live)		NBA Basketball Playoffs: Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					NBA Basketball Playoffs: Teams TBA
USA	47	Renegade "Dutch on the Run"		Highlander: The Series		World Wrestling Federation Monday Night Raw				La Femme Nikita "Treason"		Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	50	★★½ "Perfect Alibi" (1994, Suspense) Teri Garr. (In Stereo) 'NR'				"50 Years of Television: Academy's Golden Anniversary"				Tales-Crypt	Comedy Hour: Howie Mandel	★★★ "Twister"
MAX	51	(4:45) "Heat" ★★ "Bushwhacked" (1995) Daniel Stern. 'PG'				"Missing Pieces" (1992, Comedy) Eric Idle. 'PG'		★½ "Pinocchio's Revenge" (1996) Rosalind Allen.		★★★ "Kids" (1995) 'NR'
SHOW	53	★★★ "Indian Summer" (1993, Comedy-Drama) Alan Arkin. 'PG-13'				★★½ "Fargo" (1996) Frances McDormand. 'R'				★★★ "Flatliners" (1990, Suspense) Kiefer Sutherland. 'R'			"Fast Money"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabbie By Kevin Fagan



Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

University² By Frank Cho

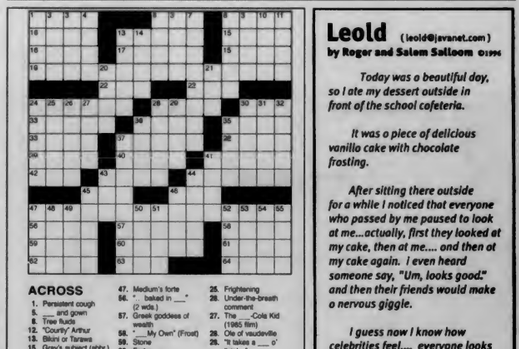
Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2620 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH: Mesquite chick, Italian snozzage grinder, Pizza!
DINNER: Chick fajita, Beef stroganoff, Tofu fajita, Chick hoagie/grinder roll

Worcester



LUNCH: Turkey burger, Beef stew/biscuit, Ziti, Szechuan Tofu
DINNER: Chick fajita, Cod, Tofu fajita, Stuffed shells

Hampshire

LUNCH: Ham on a roll, Chick cutlet, Italian snozzage grinder
DINNER: Chick fajita, Beef stroganoff

Berkshire

LUNCH: Pizza!, Turkey burger, Ziti, Mac, lentils & tomatoes
DINNER: Beef stroganoff, Chick fajita, Tofu fajita, Stuffed shells

ACROSS

1. Persistent cough
5. ___ and gown
8. Tree fluids
12. "Courtly" Arthur
13. Bikini or Tarawa
15. Grey's subject (abbr.)
16. Beatles song
17. Oil-bearing rock
18. ___ Bikini World (1965 film) (2 wds.)
19. Irreconcilable differences
22. Poetic time of day
23. Aznavr and Begley
24. Boston hill
26. Toledo's state
30. Pat's kin
33. Plant a new crop
34. Eminently
35. Canadian Indian
36. Author Knight
37. Black-eyed ___
38. Wrentin' look
39. Verdi's princess
40. Type of school, for short
41. Lie in the arms of Morpheus
42. Actress ___ Wallace Stone
43. Char
44. Cool one's sunglas

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, April 28, 1997

▼ SPORTS THIS WEEK

LACROSSE | LACROSSE | TRACK | BASEBALL | SOFTBALL

Henderson strikes out record 18 in softball sweep

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Fordham was overmatched by Danielle Henderson's pitches Saturday, as she struck out 18.

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

For once, it was finally warm. The Massachusetts softball home games are notorious for being held in cold and miserable weather. But when the Minutewomen took on the Rams of Fordham Saturday, the sky was all sun and puffy white clouds.

Massachusetts	7
Fordham	0

The weather wasn't the only thing that was warm though. Sophomore pitcher Danielle Henderson was just plain hot, as she set an amazing three new records and threw a near- perfect game. Henderson had 18 strikeouts to set records for strikeouts in a game, strikeouts in a seven-inning game, and consecutive strikeouts (12).

"She is just terrific," coach Elaine Sortino said. "We are very, very lucky to have her. She's quite a kid. I feel very fortunate to have brought her here and to have had her for two years, and to still have her for two more."

Henderson would have had a perfect game had it not been for a bloop single to center by Fordham's Tara Digilio. But that was all the Rams could produce as the Minutewomen won the first game of the doubleheader handily, 7-0. The Minutewomen opened up the scoring early, getting two runs in the first inning. Sophomore Mandy Galas and senior Sam Cardenas scored, both runs unearned.

UMass would score three more times in the bottom of the second, with a steal of home plate by junior Tracey Osier, and two more unearned runs, one from Galas and another from sophomore Becky George.

The third inning was an interesting one for senior Stephanie Mareina. Mareina had a crafty performance between second and third, as she sneakily got out of a pickle. But the oddest part of the inning came when Mareina hit a foul ball that went flying up to the lacrosse field, and knocked out one of the UMass women's lacrosse coaches.

The Minutewomen finished up the scoring in the fifth inning with two more runs. Freshman Nicole Faestler had an RBI to bring in Kelly Buckley, and sophomore Karen LaFrenier had another RBI to bring home Monica Hashiguchi.

UMass took Fordham in the second game, 3-0. Junior Liz Wagner took the mound for the Minutewomen, and had five strikeouts. Galas did all the scoring for UMass. She came in on a Mareina RBI in the first inning, then had an unearned run in the third, and another in the fifth inning.

Massachusetts	3
Fordham	0

Saturday was not just a special day for Henderson. It was also senior day at Totman Field. UMass' graduating players, Cardenas, Mareina and Chris Martens were honored with a small ceremony held before the second game.

Cardenas holds thirteen school records at UMass, that in itself a record. She shares the record for career games played (213) with Mareina, and could still add records for career hits and at bats before the season is over. Cardenas was the 1995 Atlantic 10 tournament MVP, where she hit an incredible .636.

Mareina is one of only three Minutewomen to make over 600 plate appearances, and one of only four to break the 40 career stolen base mark. Mareina had a streak of 28 consecutive stolen base attempts, which is eleventh best in NCAA history.

Throughout her career Chris Martens has been one of the top hitters for UMass. She is one of only three players to drive in over 100 runs in her career, and has a .345 batting average and nine homers. Martens has also excelled off the field, as she was named a 1995 Academic-All American.

But the UMass seniors are not thinking about the end of their careers. Instead, they are looking forward to next week's Atlantic 10 Tournament.

"We're looking towards the A-10s next week, which is a really important step if we want to have a post-season," Cardenas said. "It's hard knowing that these are your last games, but I can leave here knowing that I gave my all to the maroon and white."

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Kim Guttridge makes the throw to a waiting Mandy Galas in the second game of Saturday's doubleheader.

Minutemen fall as 'Cuse goalie saves the game

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

In the world of collegiate lacrosse, Syracuse still has Massachusetts' number.

The Orangemen, who hold a 18-4 all-time advantage over UMass and are winners of the last sixteen against the Minutemen, were too much for UMass to handle in Saturday's 10-4 win at Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Syracuse	9
Massachusetts	4

The win brings the No. 5 Orangemen to 9-2 on the year, while it drops the No. 9 Minutemen to 7-5 and turns next week's game at No. 11 Brown that much more important as far as the postseason is concerned.

"This game was big, the Brown game was huge also," UMass coach Greg Cannella said. "I think the Brown game, you win and you're in [the NCAA Tournament], so that makes it big, especially for the seniors."

UMass would not be in such a situation if not for the work of Orangeman goaltender Jason Gebhardt. The junior keeper was nearly impenetrable in net, as he made 23 saves.

What made his save total more impressive was the fact that he covered the entire goal-mouth with precision. The Minuteman offensive unit was not slug-

Turn to MEN'S LACROSSE, page 9

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

A UMass player rushes against Syracuse's defense in Saturday's contest, but the last line was too strong for the Minutemen.

Defense keys game as Gebhardt shines

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

The oft-lauded Minuteman defense held No. 5 Syracuse to a modest nine goals, but it was the contrastingly overlooked Orangemen defense which led the way to a 9-4 win at the hands of the No. 9 Massachusetts men's lacrosse team.

Saturday at Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium, the Minutemen (7-5) accomplished many of their pregame defensive objectives, save for the minute detail of allowing fewer goals than their offense produces.

"We kept them under 10 goals, that is the frustrating thing," UMass' junior goaltender John Kasselakis said. "Any time you hold Syracuse to under 10 it's almost a moral victory, but it's not if you don't have the intense match ups in the other end."

For just the second time this season, the Orangemen (9-2) were held scoreless for one quarter. That second period was the one frame that Massachusetts was able

Turn to SYRACUSE, page 9

Seniors spark teammates in women's lax win

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

It does not matter what sport it is — when Boston College comes to Amherst, something has to give. To go over the history of the two schools would be pointless, because the nature of a spirited rivalry can not be put into words.

Massachusetts	15
Boston College	12

Yet, it can be put into action, and on Saturday afternoon at Totman Field, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team (5- 6) did just that to the Eagles.

The Minutewomen were in a giving mood, with the four seniors for the Minutewomen — Erica Bryan, Kristen Hocker, Stephanie Walsh and Michele Warrington — being honored for their four-year commitment to the reinstated program. But the generosity did not apply to the Eagles (5- 10), as the Minutewomen came out with their best overall effort of the season in a 15-12 win.

UMass rebounded from an early deficit against BC to make a 12-2 run, giving&7 them enough of an edge for the right victory.

For the coach, Francesca McClellan, and one of her senior tri-captains, Warrington, it was a good day to celebrate Senior Day. The team has now reached its highest win total since reinstatement, is in the midst of a three-game winning streak, and with two games remaining in the season, can improve even further on those marks.

"What a dynamite game," McClellan said. "We should have every day be Senior Day. Everybody stepped up, and everyone had a blast and played with each other. It was a team event, and a team win.

"For the first time this year, everyone was on the same page. The seniors had their best game of the season, and they stepped up to the

Turn to WOMEN'S LAX, page 9

Correa, team go on tear, take 3straight from Rams

By Carey Peter Goodman and Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

It was like batting practice Saturday for the Massachusetts baseball team when the Rhode Island Rams stepped onto Earl E. Lorden field for a midday doubleheader.

Massachusetts	13
Rhode Island	2

For the day, the Rams shagged down 29 Minutemen hits, resulting in a 21-5 UMass scoring edge. The Rams did not help their case much either, committing eight blunders in the field leading to a 13-2 and 8-3 sweep at the hands of Mike Stone's squad.

UMass jumped on Rams starter Pat Freeman early in Game No. 1, plating two in the first frame.

After Brad Gorrie drew a leadoff walk and Adam Correa ripped a double down the left field line, Muchie Dagliere opened the scoring with a sacrifice fly to right. Doug Clark followed with a line drive single up the box into centerfield to score Correa.

But the Rams returned the favor pushing across two of their own runs in the third.

Rob Farrell poked a ball over Dagliere's head into right to start the rally. Following a single by Bill Bergan that sent Farrell to third, Rhode Island successfully executed the double steal to score its first run of the inning. A Brendan McKeever single plated Bergan for their second run.

Fortunately for UMass, Jason Bennett then closed the door on Rhode Island, allowing just five more hits, while going the distance for his seventh win in eight decisions. Bennett's final line read seven innings, eight hits, two runs, a walk, and two strikeouts.

The Minutemen left no doubt when blowing it open, scoring at least two runs in all but one of their six plate appearances.

This outburst was highlighted by two bombs. In the second, Gorrie showed his opposite field strength, sending a line drive over the 370 ft. sign in right-center field for his sixth long ball of the season.

Massachusetts	18
Rhode Island	3

Then in the fourth came the shot that they'll be talking about for years to come. Dagliere sent a Freeman offering towering over the right field fence before it rested atop the Mullins Center hockey rink. Dagliere's fourth homer of the season was estimated at an unbelievable 440 feet.

"I'm hoping that shot on the Mullins Center can help me get out of my slump," Dagliere said. "That's a dream hit for me, a once in a lifetime shot."

UMass struggled to follow up on this hitting clinic in Game No. 2, falling behind 3-1 heading into the fourth inning. Fearing a split to an overmatched team, the Minuteman bats awakened in grand fashion, pushing seven runs across the plate in the fourth and fifth innings.

Massachusetts	15
Rhode Island	12

With two outs and nobody on in the fourth, Aaron Braunstein walked and then advanced to second on a passed ball. Matt Wolcott sent him home with a single to left. After a Jason Kudrikow walk, a botched pick-off attempt by the Rams put two Minutemen in scoring position. Gorrie then came through for UMass. After falling behind in the count 0-2, Gorrie battled back, fouling off pitches, and then sending a rocket that fell in

Turn to BASEBALL, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 129 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Tuesday, April 29, 1997

Kiss Me Deadly

Kiss It Goodbye's powerful new album is a must-have for hardcore fans. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Men's track runs wild in Relays

Sophomore Tom Toye and the Massachusetts men's track and field team traveled to the Penn Relays. Get the scoop, (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Japan rewards Peru for dealing with crisis

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Japan gave Peru $11.5 million in aid yesterday as a goodwill gesture for ending the four-month hostage crisis at the Japanese ambassador's mansion.

The donation will go toward improving medical care for low-income families, upgrading equipment in Lima hospitals and repairing small hydroelectric plants in rural areas.

Acting Foreign Minister Jorge Gonzalez Izquierdo accepted the donation from Katsuyuki Tanaka, Japan's assistant foreign minister for Latin America and the Caribbean.

Peruvian commandos stormed the ambassador's residence a week ago, rescuing 71 of 72 hostages held captive by leftist rebels. One hostage, two soldiers and all 14 Tupac Amaru guerrillas died in the raid.

"After having overcome a well-known difficult situation ... today our countries reaffirm their will to continue cooperating," Gonzalez Izquierdo said.

Japanese Foreign Minister Yukihiko Ikeda, who came to Lima to congratulate and thank President Alberto Fujimori on the success of the rescue mission, said Japan will further increase its direct aid to Peru.

NATION

Russia, Iraq still refuse to ratify weapons pact

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The worldwide treaty banning chemical weapons will go into effect without ratification from Russia — which admits having them — and other key countries.

The pact bans the use, development, production or stockpiling of all chemical warfare agents and requires the destruction of existing stockpiles over the next decade.

The treaty was to go into effect at midnight yesterday.

The United States, which ratified the pact Thursday, and Russia are the only two countries that acknowledge they have chemical weapons.

Russia's parliament on Friday postponed adoption of the ban, saying the country could not currently afford to destroy its stockpiles — a task its says would cost $5 billion. Russia's lower house, the State Duma, promised to ratify it by fall, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

As of late yesterday, 87 countries had ratified the treaty. Cuba announced over the weekend it would do so.

Iraq and North Korea, which are suspected of stockpiling chemical weapons, also have not ratified the treaty.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thurs.
HIGH: 70 LOW: 40	HIGH: 70 LOW: 40	HIGH: 75 LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
Developing Nations..page 5
Sports .....page 12

Pike house vandalized; flyers, fire target frats

By Leigh Faulkner & Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, also know as Pike fraternity, was the target of vandalism early last Wednesday morning following a plastering of the campus with red flyers.

The flyers addressed the members of Pike, and concerned an alleged rape that took place at their fraternity house last March.

The flyers read, "Hey frat boy, we remember one year ago today, two of our sisters, raped in your house by your brothers. You will pay. It only takes one slice." The message was signed "Razor."

The front of the Pike fraternity building was spray painted in red and black Wednesday, and read, "F— You, Rapist."

Members of Pike reported both incidents to the Amherst Police Department.

Amherst Police Detective Jennifer Gundersen would not comment on the investigation but only confirmed the incident reports.

"There were flyers that they reported to us, and that [spray] painting had been done, similar to the flyers."

Following the report of the vandalism to the building, police covered the spray paint with a tarp.

"This is something we're not going to state what our speculations are. As for motives, I'm not willing to speak... we are investigating it," Gundersen said.

Pike president Mike Stuchins refused to comment on the incident.

In addition to the incident at Pike, Amherst police are also investigating a fire that was set early Friday morning at Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity. According to fraternity brother Max Peterson, the janitor of the Newman Center saw smoke coming from the house and called the Fire Department.

"We woke up at 5:30 a.m. and the front door was on fire. Someone poured gas all over the door and on the walkway," Peterson, secretary of the fraternity, said.

According to Gunderson, this incident is also under investigation.

UMass police investigate disturbances in Southwest

University of Massachusetts Police are investigating two separate incidences from Southwest Residential Area that occurred over the weekend.

At approximately 3 a.m. Sunday morning, police received several phone calls from Southwest residents reporting disturbances and a fight on Southwest Mall.

"Several people called in regards to a fight and also reported three rounds like gunshots," UMass Chief of Police John Luippold said.

According to Luippold, once police officers arrived on the scene the fight and disturbances had dispersed.

"One individual had been transported to CDH [Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton] from wounds sustained in a fight. There was nothing indicating the wounds were a result of gunshots," Luippold said.

Police are continuing their investigation and are following up with residents who reported the disturbance as well as others who were at the scene.

Police are asking anyone with information about incidents occurring in Southwest Mall Sunday morning to call 545-2123.

According to the UMass Police press release, public safety officials are also investigating a report received on April 24 from, "a 19-year-old student of an acquaintance sexual assault that occurred in a residence hall in Southwest."

Luippold refused to comment on any further details of the investigation.

— Leigh Faulkner

Rep. Burton says White House is stonewalling over documents

By James Rowley
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The chief House investigator of Democratic Party fund-raising accused White House officials yesterday of stonewalling by withholding documents about John Huang and other figures in the controversy.

The Clinton White House has indicated it will refuse outright to turn over an unspecified number of documents, said Rep. Dan Burton (R-Ind.), chairman of the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee.

"The president promised the Congress 'full cooperation,' and instead the committee is being stonewalled," Burton said in a statement issued by his panel.

White House officials said they had turned over every document sought by Burton in two subpoenas served last week. It has not "asserted privilege on any materials" demanded in those subpoenas, said Lanny J. Davis, a special White House counsel. The White House also has turned over some 9,000 pages from the offices of the president, the chief of staff and first lady. Davis said, and "a limited number of materials" are also available for review by Burton's staff.

"The statement issued by Chairman Burton today is flat wrong," Davis said.

But in a letter to White House Counsel Charles F.C. Ruff, Burton said "you make clear that the president intends to withhold documents from the committee by making privilege claims." "Your current position is contrary to the president's own stated commitments," Burton said.

Two committee aides, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the White House asserted privilege over some Huang documents during a meeting last week.

The Supreme Court has recognized the right of presidents to invoke executive privilege in refusing to turn over certain materials to Congress, generally relating to decision-making. The White House also has failed to produce material about others, notably Yah Lin "Charlie" Trie, the Riady family and former Justice Department official Webster Hubbell, Burton said. "In all, the president's lawyers have sent the committee four partial boxes of papers' that includes news clippings, letters from the House committee and "a menu from Charlie Trie's Little Rock restaurant," the committee statement said.

Huang, a former Commerce Department official and Democratic fund-raiser, and Hubbell, convicted of defrauding his former law firm, have told Burton's panel they intend to refuse to cooperate with his investigation.

Trie, a businessman and personal friend of Clinton, has left the country. James Riady, scion of the wealthy Indonesian family that once employed Huang, has said through his lawyer he does not intend to travel to this country in the near future.

The White House is pressing for a confidentiality agreement similar to one negotiated with the Senate panel.

"We believe that an orderly method for handling the disclosure of documents, one that is reflective of the principles accepted by the Senate oversight committee, remains a reasonable basis for us to reach an agreement with Rep. Burton," Davis said.

Burton's staff will be able to review certain documents at the White House mansion but not make copies until an agreement is reached for handling material turned over to the committee, said a White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Ruff also is seeking an agreement under which Burton's panel would provide 24-hour notice before it releases any documents turned over by the White House, Burton said.

Burton said this request was intended to allow the White House to pursue its "calculated strategy" of pre-empting investigators by putting out the material in advance of any release by Congress. "Your 'confidentiality proposal' for documents is essentially a proposal to annul the document protocol adopted by the vote of the committee on April 10," Burton wrote.

The panel voted to set up a five-member advisory group approve the public release of all documents.

Rain Man

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Jeremy Rice, a junior philosphy major, walks to catch a bus to Brandywine in yesterday's cold rain.

King speaks on justice at UMass

Political activist explains origins, goals of Rainbow Coalition

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Political activist Mel King asked students this past Saturday to join and support the Rainbow Coalition, an independent political party focused on achieving economic, racial and political justice.

King, a former state representative and 1983 Boston Mayoral candidate, spoke to a group of about 20 students, faculty, and community members in the Campus Center Saturday morning.

King was invited to UMass by a group of student leaders, including Andrew Susen, a senior anthropology major, and Dominic Turano, a junior economics major, who are interested in building support for the Rainbow Coalition at UMass and in the Five College Area.

Susen began the meeting by introducing King and explaining the students' reason for bringing him to campus.

"We see a need for the Rainbow Coalition," Susen began. "We want to establish an organization of students and non- students in the Five College Area that addresses the tenets of the Rainbow Coalition, but also addresses the specific need of this area."

King began by explaining the origin of the Rainbow Coalition and the significance of its name. King said that the name came from the biblical story of Noah and the ark.

"I first heard about it when this guy Noah was asked to take people to the high ground and the creator gave Noah this sign, an arc in the sky," King said. "That's where the name came from."

King said that the name of the Rainbow Coalition was also a good symbol for the many different groups brought together by the party.

"As a rainbow, we could stop the conflicts and the competition," King said. "The common issue that bound us together was the issue of oppression, whether it be economic, racial, gender, or sexual."

King then explained his cause for leaving the Democratic party when he was a state representative, saying that he became alienated from the party when the legislature failed to approve an interim budget that would have enabled state workers and welfare recipients to continue to receive checks until the budget crises could be resolved.

"I was astonished that the legislature would not vote that interim budget and therefore people went with out paychecks and assistance checks," King said. "I felt like I could not associate with a party that could do that. I could not be part of a party that is so callous and indifferent to human need."

King then said that the current welfare reforms are one of the reasons he wants to resurrect the Rainbow Coalition as a political party in Massachusetts.

"If one has a concern about human rights and dignity, one has to find a

Turn to KING, page 2

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Long stare

Justine Kubaska, a senior nutrition major, reads apartment sublets for the summer.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Mark McGrath
Copy Editor: Suzanne Barber
Photo Technician: Kenneth W.P. Scott
Production Supervisor: Matt McCarthy
Production Staff: Joylyn Lombard, Kelvin Torres

■ King

continued from page 1

form to push the goal of respect and equality for all people," King said. "We have two parties that accept poverty and on that basis I think we need a party that starts on the basis of human rights and dignity."

Turano then spoke about why he feels UMass students should support the Rainbow Coalition and introduced Professor William Strickland, of the African American Studies Department, who spoke further on the Rainbow Coalition and its platform.

"Over the last two semesters, I have been in class with Professor Strickland and I have taken a lot away," Turano said. "We need to analyze what we find wrong with society today and develop answers."

Strickland spoke about the class and economic system in America and the importance of youth in bringing about change.

"You are being exploited every day and you do not even realize it," Strickland said. "The necessity then becomes for young people, who right now are only being recruited by the right, to have a vision for today and tomorrow."

After Strickland finished speaking, he and King answered questions from the listeners and the students discussed organizational strategies for fostering support for the Rainbow Coalition at UMass.

In order to field candidates in the next election, the Rainbow Coalition needs 35,000 Massachusetts citizens to register with the Rainbow Coalition as their party designation by this fall.

For more information on the Rainbow Coalition, call Mel King at (617)253-3287 or write the Rainbow Coalition, PO Box 60010, Florence, MA 01060.

Troy Lecture Series hosts award–winning poet Rich

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

The annual Troy Lecture Series, sponsored by the English Department, will feature one of the nation's most distinguished poets, Adrienne Rich in a lecture entitled "Arts of the Possible" today at 4:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

"This year our Troy lectures have focused on public education in the widest sense, a theme Adrienne Rich will explore in the realms of both poetry and politics," Stephen Clingman, chair of the English Department said.

"In the fall, we were honored with the presence of Nobel Prize laureate Wole Soyinka, and the pairing with Rich this semester makes for a remarkable combination," said Clingman.

Rich's commitment to poetry has been continuous since the days when she graduated from Radcliffe College in 1951 and had her first book of poems appeared in the prestigious Yale Younger Poets series.

"Poetry can bring together those parts of us which exist in dread and those which have the surviving sense of a possible happiness, collectivity, community, a loss of isolation," Rich said.

Between the publication of that first book, and her most recently acclaimed collection, Dark Fields of the Republic: Poems 1991–1995, Rich has published more than 15 volumnes of poetry.

Rich's works include: Diving Into the Wreck: Poems 1971–72, a co-winner of the National Book Award for Poetry: Dream of a Common Language: Poems 1974–77, and Atlas of a Difficult World: Poems 1988–91, a finalist for both the National Book Award and the National Critics' Circle Award.

Joseph Parisi, from Poets in Person: A Listener's Guide, said of Rich's work, "For over 40 years, Rich's ongoing conversation has been as intellectually stimulating as it has been emotionally intense. In over a dozen books, she has been engaged in a vigorous dialogue, both with the world and within herself."

In addition to her acclaimed poetry Rich is also the author of a well–known collection of prose essays, On Lies, Secrets and Silences, and the autobiographical analysis of motherhood, Of Woman Born. She was also the winner of a MacArthur Fellowship (commonly known as a "genius grant") in 1994 and recently she received the 1996 Tanning Prize for Mastery in the Art of Poetry from the Academy of American Poets.

Rich is not only an acclaimed poet, but also feminist and political activist who uses her work as a means of resisting oppression.

"I intend to go on trying to be part of what I think of as an underground stream of voices resisting the voices that tell us we are nothing," Rich said.

Kennedy stands behind his family amid baby sitter affair allegations

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — U.S. Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II has broken his silence about revelations his brother had an affair with a teenage baby sitter, but he doesn't have much to say other than that he loves his family and considers the matter private.

Kennedy also said that despite the controversy and questions about his own decision to seek an annulment of his first marriage, he still plans to run for governor next year.

"There are little stops along the way and this one might not be such a little one for everybody, but you know, I'm proud of my family," Kennedy (D-Mass.) told reporters yesterday after an event at City Hall.

"There are problems and we struggle with them like a lot of families struggle with them and that's, it's just life sometimes is a bit of a struggle for everybody and our family's no different than any other. It just gets a little bit more attention, I guess."

Michael Kennedy, 39, of Cohasset, is under investigation for allegedly having an affair with his family's former baby sitter. The relationship with the 19-year-old woman reportedly began five years ago, when she was 14, raising statutory rape concerns. It also apparently played a role in his recent separation with his wife, Victoria Kennedy, the daughter of ABC sportscaster Frank Gifford. The couple has three children.

Michael Kennedy and his lawyer have refused to comment on the incidents, and Joseph Kennedy responded with some trepidation. The congressman took pains to say that he had learned of the investigation into his brother's alleged relationship only in the past few days through media reporting.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
April 26
A vehicle backed into another vehicle on Holdsworth Way.
A vehicle was tipped on its side in parking lot 22 on University Drive.

Alarm — Fire
April 26
A brush fire on Observatory Road was extinguished by the Amherst Fire Department.

Annoying Behavior
April 25
A threatening note was left on a vehicle on Presidents Drive regarding a parking dispute.

Assault & Battery
April 27
An individual reported an assault on Presidents Drive. The event is under investigation.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
April 25
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
A vending machine was broken into in McNamara Residence Hall.
A vending machine was broken into in Thatcher Residence Hall.
A vending machine was broken into in Crabtree Residence Hall.
April 26
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 33 on University Drive.
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
April 27
A room was broken into in Gorman Residence Hall. A laptop computer was stolen.

Disturbance
April 26
Nigel A. Smith, 20, of 52 Richmere Rd., Boston, and Kenson Jean–Baptiste, 18, of 113 Ashland St., Malden, were arrested for disorderly conduct at the Malcom X Center.
There was a report of individuals fighting on John Adams Road.
Intoxicated individuals were banging on doors at Emerson Residence Hall.
There was a report of a large fight in progress at Van Meter Residence Hall.
April 27
Police responded to a disturbance and a fight at the Southwest Mall. Officers in the area of Southwest heard three sounds consistent with gunshots. The event is under investigation.

Health/Safety Hazard
April 25
Environmental Health & Safety was notified of a bonfire near Dickinson Residence Hall.

Investigation
April 24
A report was received from a 19–year–old student of an acquaintance sexual assault that occurred in a residence hall in Southwest Residence Area. The case is under investigation.

Larceny
April 25
An individual reported money stolen from a wallet in Dickinson Residence Hall.
April 26
A gym bag was reported stolen from Boyden Gymnasium. Contents valued at $100.
April 27
An individual in Coolidge Residence Hall reported a previously stolen credit card being used to make illegal purchase.

Liquor Law Violations
April 25
Thomas F. Hickey, 18, of 168 Parkview Ave, Lowell was arrested for person under 21 possess/transport of liquor; Ryan P. Gilday, 19, of 55 Willard St., Lowell, was arrested for person under 21 possess/transport of liquor and alter/deface, false/misuse of a license; Mark E. Byrne Jr., 19, of 315 Wentworth Ave., Lowell, was arrested for person under 21 possess/transport of liquor and alter/deface, false/misuse of a license — all on University Drive.
Charles Elias Clark III, 20, of 10 Fox Hill Rd., Woodbridge, Conn., was arrested for person under 21 possess/transport of liquor.

Medical Emergency
April 27
Police responded to an investigation and disturbance at University Health Services which effected an arrest. Kurt A. Earle, 20, of 4156 Baychester Ave., Bronx, N.Y., was arrested for disorderly conduct.

Suspicious Vehicle
April 26
William F. Meehan, 24, of 20 Cranberry Lane, South Easton, was arrested for operating under the influence of liquor, speeding and reckless operation of a motor vehicle.

Vandalism
April 25
The parking gate at the Campus Center garage was broken.
April 26
There was an attempt to break into a vending machine in Thatcher Residence Hall.
An elevator was damaged in the Campus Center.
There was malicious damage to a card reader at Mackimmie Residence Hall. Estimated value $450.
April 27
An intoxicated individual kicked out a window in Field Residence Hall.

Attention Collegian staff!

Elections for editorial psoitions for next semester wil be held all day today. To take part in the democratic process, drop by the Collegian offices any time from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

LEARNING FOR THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE
• LEARNING FOR A LIFETIME •

UMASS SUMMER SESSION 1997

Now is the time to advance your career, explore other options, plan for a new future, get ahead in your studies, or enrich your life.
• Hundreds of Credit Courses
• Workshops for Personal and Professional Enrichment
• Part-time Specialized Degree Programs–Bachelor's and Master's
• Professional Development Courses for Teachers
Classes held days, evenings, and weekends
• Session I: June 3-July 11
• Session II: July 15-August 21
• Variable Sessions

Call 413-545-0107 for a free course catalog or e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Find it on our website: http://www.umass.edu/contined/

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION • UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

FREE UTILITIES
Water
Electricity
1,2 & 3 BEDROOM GARDEN STYLE UNITS
(ALSO TOWNHOUSE STYLE FOR 2 BEDROOM)
CONVENIENT TO AMHERST, UMASS & INTERSTATE 91
SCENIC HIKING TRAILS ON 28 WOODED ACRES
OLYMPIC SIZE POOL
TENNIS, VOLLEYBALL AND BASKETBALL
FREE PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION
24 HOUR MAINTENANCE
CLIFF SIDE APARTMENTS

Attention Graduate Students!

Graduate Student Senate Candidates Night

7:15 PM, Thursday, May 1
At Campus Center 174 - 76
Nominations Close 5 PM , April 29, 1997

Only graduate students who have paid the Graduate Student Senate Tax and with a valid, signed, and dated receipt (obtainable at the Bursar's Office) shall be permitted as candidates. Balloted candidates must submit such receipt before the Closing of Nominations. Write-in candidates must submit such receipt before the Close of Balloting.

All candidates and the Elections Committee are granted full access to information pertaining to the Graduate Student Senate elections that would/may normally be available to the Graduate Student Senate (incumbent) Executive Committee and the GSS Office Manager.

Come meet the candidates for 1997 - 98 GSS Officers
Candidates' statements, questions & answers

Balloting Begins Tuesday, May 6 at GSS General Meeting (Campus Center, 904-08, 7:15 PM) and Continues Wednesday, May 7 & Thursday, May8, 10 AM - 6PM at Campus Center Concourse, outside the Graduate Lounge

 For more information, contact the GSS at 919 Campus Center or Call 545-2896.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Speedy Delivery
The special transportation van from UMass transit speeds off to pick up a student.

Got a tip? Call the Collegian newsline at 545-1762 or stop by the Collegian newsroom and ask to speak with Laura Stock, news editor.

Arafat looks to U.S. for assistance in restarting Mideast peace process

By Said Ghazali
Associated Press

NABLUS, West Bank —Yasser Arafat's spokesman urged the United States yesterday to help restart the peace process and Palestinians vowed to avenge the death of a high school student killed by Israeli soldiers.

President Clinton "has promised Arafat to make an initiative and we are still waiting for it," spokesman Nabil Abourdeineh said.

Abourdeineh spoke in the autonomous West Bank town of Nablus, where Arafat's effort to present a united Palestinian front fizzled when the militant groups Hamas and Islamic Jihad boycotted a planned "reconciliation" meeting.

Arafat met privately with 30 Palestinian faction leaders inside the Nablus police headquarters.

Hamas attended the first such meeting two months ago. But Jamal Mamsour, a Hamas spokesman in Nablus, said the boycott was to protest Arafat's recent detention of dozens of group members. Addressing the Islamic groups, Abourdeineh said: "Boycotting this meeting will not serve our interests... Come and participate in the fight against the Judaization of Jerusalem."

Relations between Israel and the Palestinians deteriorated sharply after Israel broke ground March 18 for a 6,500-unit housing development for Jews in Jerusalem. The construction, on land captured by Israel in the 1967 war and claimed by the Palestinians as a future capital, led to weeks of daily rioting by Palestinians. Issam Aqabneh, 18, was the seventh Palestinian killed in the clashes. Three Palestinian suicide bombers also have died, as well as three Israeli women killed in a Hamas bombing in Tel Aviv. Aqabneh was shot Sunday night by Israeli troops who were passing through Kharasa, a village outside Hebron that is still under Israeli control. The troops opened fire on Palestinians throwing stones and firebombs.

Yesterday, hundreds of tearful, angry students marched from their schools to a mourning house set up by Aqabneh's family. "Your blood will not be spilled in vain. We swear we will revenge you," proclaimed black and red graffiti scrawled on walls in the village and signed by the militant Islamic group Hamas. "There will be no peace."

Aqabneh's family and classmates clung to each other, sobbing. Palestinian flags hung on the walls. Young men who knew Aqabneh crouched on the ground, their faces buried in their hands. "We are shocked and so sad that we lost Issam, but we are proud of him," classmate Mazen Khalaleh said, crying. "We hope that we will follow in his path, because instead of taking his degree in life, he took his degree in heaven."

"This is going to affect us," villager Daoud Saahrai said. "We're going to continue clashes now. This is the start and we're not going to stop it."

Pilot's remains discovered; questions still unanswered

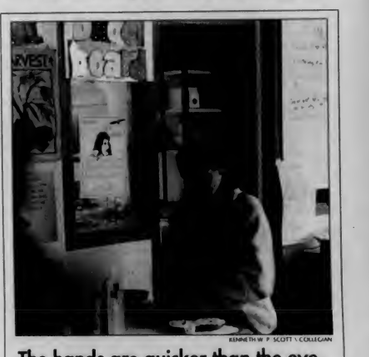
By Michelle Boorstein
Associated Press

PHOENIX — The Air Force has solved part of the mysterious disappearance of Capt. Craig Button, determining through a DNA match that he was in his A-10 Thunderbolt that crashed into a snowy Colorado mountainside.

But military officials said yesterday that the force with which Button's warplane crashed may have obliterated clues as to why the 32-year-old pilot veered off from a routine training mission in southwestern Arizona.

"There's a legitimate concern that we might never know what caused Capt. Button to fly north," said Capt. Leo Devine, a Pentagon spokesman.

Button broke off from the training mission on April 2. The Air Force tracked the $9 million plane's northeasterly path into Colorado, where it was found.



Button's parents learned Sunday that their son was killed. The military used DNA records and tissue specimens from the wreckage to positively identify the remains as Button's.

"We are pretty much up on it all. We don't want to say anything at this time. Please understand," Richard Button said yesterday in a phone interview from his home in Massapequa, N.Y.

"Craig was a wonderful young man. This is an inexplicable tragedy," said family friend John Conroy, who has been holding a daily vigil with his wife and Button's parents since the pilot disappeared.

Now that the military knows where the A-10 and its pilot ended up, officials say they aren't certain if they'll ever know why it was there. The main problem is evidence.

The Air Force retrieved two small pieces of the plane, including plastic-insulated tubing and wires and a section of metal, before officials postponed the salvage operation until the snow melts. The longer the search through the wreckage is delayed, the longer the remains will be subject to weather and wildlife, which may make it impossible to learn whether Button suffered from hypoxia, a condition that cuts oxygen, or another health problem. "The recovery operation is at a halt and that'll play a big role — when they go back," said Chris Kelly of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology in Washington. "That is, if there's anything there."

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

The hands are quicker than the eye.
Yana Boguslavsky, a sophomore International Buisness major has a late lunch at People's Market yesterday.

Ride The Wave of Knowledge

Summer School
Registration begins May 5th
• Over 100 Undergraduate and Graduate Courses
• General Education and Major Courses
• Low Cost
Day and evening classes available
Session I Evenings May 27 - July 3
Session II Days July 7 - August 1
Session II Evenings July 7 - August 14
~For a free catalog call 413-572-5224~
Westfield STATE COLLEGE
Division of Graduate and Continuing Education
Western Avenue • Westfield, Massachusetts

University Health Services
Summer
Health Coverage
1997 Basic Health Fee:
$208.00
1997 Student Family Plan:
$463.00
Coverage Period: June 1, 1997-August 31, 1997
(if enrolled by June 1)
(Only UMass students with Basic and SHBP are eligible for the Student Family Plan)
Visit the Member Services Department located in the main lobby for enrollment
577-5490
Eligibility: Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke, Smith, and UMass Students

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Simsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quint Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marry Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quint Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Renovating the skies

Something very disturbing happened a little while ago. Thirty–nine people in California were willing to sacrifice their lives for something they thought was true. On March 28, the members of the Heaven's Gate group committed suicide, believing they would be picked up by a UFO trailing the Hale–Bopp comet. What is particularly disturbing is what this may mean for UFO believers.

This incident shocked everyone, believers and non– believers alike. I am a strong supporter of UFO existence, though I would never bet my life on what I think may be true. The important thing that non–believers need to understand is that most UFO enthusiasts are not like that. It is important to stress this, as it is natural to assume otherwise. For example, when AIDS was discovered among the gay population, many people immediately assumed it was a "gay disease." A similar thing could happen to the UFO society if that misconception is not eliminated quickly.

Some people were even shocked that anyone could believe so seriously in UFOs. In fact, surveys were taken in many varied places in this country concerning belief in extraterrestrial existence, and when averaged, the results showed that 53 percent of the population believe in the existence of intelligent life elsewhere in the universe, 49 percent believe that this life is here in our skies as the classic UFOs and 48 percent believe that the government is covering up evidence.

In fact, NASA believes that we have a one in 100 chance of discovering definitive life elsewhere within our own solar system within a year, as a result of both the Mars meteorite and the organic molecules thought to have been found recently on the two largest of Jupiter's moons, Ganymede and Callisto. According to the survey, the person currently reading this column has a higher chance of believing in extraterrestrial life than otherwise.

> "Fifty–three percent of the population believes in the existence of life elsewhere in the universe, 49 percent believe that life is here in our skies as UFOs, and 48 percent believe that the government is covering up this evidence."
>
> Justin Smith

For many non–believers, the notion is so unfathomable that it must be wrong. The truth is that there is an overwhelming amount of information to support the existence of UFOs. Former astronauts Gordon Cooper and Edgar Mitchell were among the first of many astronauts to admit that UFOs are alien in origin and that the government is trying to keep them secret. Approximately one in 11 people (about 25,000,000 United States citizens) believe that they have had an "abduction" or similar experience and a far greater number believe they've seen UFOs in the sky. A sighting in Nevada on March 19th was reported by many people over a wide region of the state. Because of the consistency in size of craft, number of vehicles, color, sound, speed and flight pattern, it is considered one of the best cases in a long time. It remains true that the first official word on the Roswell incident was of an alien craft. The list of evidence goes on and on, and would require many pages to explore.

Perhaps the most important thing to today's UFO world is the increasing belief that the government will declassify UFO information this year, or perhaps next year. Again, there is a lot of evidence on this, and I will only point out the most interesting piece. This summer, a documentary– style book is due to be released, written by Colonel Philip J. Corso, who headed Eisenhower's National Security Council. He is unwilling to release the exact contents of the book, but admits that it confirms the Roswell conspiracy. Interestingly, there is also a report that it will deny the event.

An important thing to stress to everyone is to take caution with everything you hear. Don't automatically assume anything is true because it is in writing. Don't even take my word for it. Go out and find the truth yourself, and we'll see where the future takes us next.

Juston Smith is a UMass student.

Liberals fail to recognize Noriega's evils

Editor's note: On May 8, the Collegian will celebrate its 30th anniversary as a daily paper. To mark the occasion, the Collegian is reprinting editorials from the last 30 years. Today we feature an editorial that was originally published on February 1, 1990.

Upon arriving in Amherst New Year's Eve, I was briefed by a friend of the happenings during my week out of the area. I can honestly say I was not surprised to hear the following:

1967-1997
1990

"So, guess what they rallied about on the Student Union steps?"

"What?"

"Four people showed up to rally to have the United States put Noriega back in power."

"Figures."

Only in Amherst (and perhaps Northampton) could such liberal naivete actually exist. Only in Amherst could people actually have the nerve to propose we reinstall the "democratically–elected leader of a sovereign Central American nation."

The ralliers, no doubt, were taking time out from their flag burning ceremonies.

The liberals who support Noriega's return from the Evil empire known as the U.S. of A. should try to talk with Guillermo Ford— that is, if he is willing to show his face in public. Ford was the unfortunate vice presidential candidate in that sovereign nation who tried to dethrone the democratically–elected Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Ford was beaten, badly, in the streets of Panama City shortly after his ticket won... or should I say lost, and a ticket which many believed commanded nearly 70 percent of the votes cast suddenly lost by a few percentage points.

Oh well.

Noriega is a retired general. One can imagine his earning power. Yet he is reported to have a minimmum of $25 million stashed in Swiss accounts.

Let's see, how does one make that much money?

Folks, he didn't sell a book and he's not a ballplayer. You can draw your own conclusions. The liberals who rallied on the steps have made theirs.

It's pretty obvious, though, that the money came via drugs. Where there's drugs, there's blood and bullets, which brings us to the most atrocious irony of the liberal naivete.

I'm certainly not one to advocate deaths, and all Americans should mourn the loss of Panamanian lives, as well as the deaths of several American soldiers. Liberals jumped on this, saying that it was just another example of American brutality — of Americans going in where they aren't wanted, with no constitutional right — destroying the land, raping the women, pillaging the villages.

But seriously, how many people have died at the hands of Noriega or his underlings? The number, unquestionably, is more than the number who died last month as a result of the United States invasion. Even if it were not, it would only be a matter of time. Reports our of Panama prior to the invasion (from former Panamanian officials) suggest that Noriega was becoming more and more paranoid, taking on a slightly less powerful form of Joseph Stalin.

But the liberals came to the Student Union steps. Somebody has to do it. Thanks goodness nobody listened to their ignorance.

David R. Mark was a Collegian columnist.

Calling all writers!

The Collegian Ed/Op page will be holding a workshop for anyone interested in writing during Fall '97. Come down to the Collegian and speak with Mike Burke, Seema Gangatirkar or Dan Bodah to sign up — or call 545–1491.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Letters to the Editor

Title IX is flawed

To the Editor:

The University is considering developing a Division I football program. One of the obstacles is that Title IX, a Federal law which requires equal spending on men's and women's athletics, would require that the investment be matched by an equal investment in women's sports. As an alumnus, I am certainly ambivalent about the expenses of moving to Division I football. However, I think there needs to be some intellectual honesty about the "equality" imposed by Title IX.

The Supreme Court recently upheld a lower court's strict interpretation of Title IX in a case involving Brown University. Brown wanted funding to be proportional to the amount of interest in participation by men and women. The court ruled that the law required spending to be proportional to the total number of students of each gender. Regardless of whether this is a correct interpretation of the law, the law itself is flawed.

The principle of separate but equal when applied to universal athletic education (non–varsity school sports) is only fair and long overdue. However, Title IX when applied to varsity sports doesn't create equality. Rather, it takes a traditional set aside and turns it into an absolute quota.

Gender separation in varsity sports, where only a few participate and the abilities of the two genders are substantially unequal, by itself creates a special preference, a benefit, for women. Integration, not equality, would mean the virtual elimination of women from varsity–level sports. With funding and openings exactly proportionate to the whole of the preferred group and with selection standards completely internal, Title IX creates the most extreme form of affirmative action devisable.

The exclusion of women from men's sports and the popularity of women's sports obviously justifies their generous funding. They don't justify the fastidious pursuit of "parity."

Perhaps this issue should lead us to pay more attention to the athletic education of those who don't make the varsity.

Michael Hart
Amherst

Hemp and privatization link explored

To the Editor:

I would like to address an individual here on campus who feels the need to add their comments to the Cannabis Reform Coalition's bulletin board. First off, I would like to thank you for your input. Anti–reform "activists" are hard to come by these days and your words were at least eye– opening. Misinformation is often confused with knowledge and I was hoping to clear up a few things. The organization is very understaffed due to the illegality of cannabis and student apathy because of lack of the facts. Any and all negativity greatly slows its progress.

First off, you said hemp is for "lazy hippies." Granted, if you had said marijuana is for lazy hippies, I may have agreed with you and added the fact it is also for terminally ill cancer and AIDS patients who have lost their appetites because of chemotherapy or AIDS–wasting syndrome. But I am a bit confused with your choice of the word hemp instead of marijuana. Sure, I have seen a hippy or two wearing hemp as jewelry, but I didn't make the connection of that to laziness. If I wore gold jewelry, would that make me look motivated? Or if I pierced my eyelids, would I be considered a great thinker or inspired?

I see any use of industrial hemp, in a country where it is illegal to grow, as a political statement. In no way could hemp be called a trend. Techno might be, but hemp has been used in many different ways for thousands of years. How do you call that a trend? The only reason you haven't seen it is because drug–oppressors like Richard Nixon, Ronald Reagan (and wife) and George Bush saw America's youth experimenting with mind–enhancing intoxicants and then become free thinkers and rebel against the bureaucracy. They saw it as a sickness in society and instead of fixing it they put on a Band–Aid. They made drugs illegal. Drug prohibition stems from racism, the hunger for power and the fear of the unknown. The fact is the American bureaucracy still oppresses the knowledge and the ability to obtain knowledge concerning specific drugs.

Isn't this a free country? Don't we live in the land of the free and the home of the slave— oh, I mean, brave. Don't we have rights? Not if you have any pot in your pants.

For thousands of years, people ate hemp flour and oil as naturally as sugar and coffee. They used the fibers in the stalks to make paper and clothing. If someone wanted to smoke an entire roomful of industrial hemp, they wouldn't get high. Why then is hemp illegal? We live in a corporate society. Consequently, what is bad for corporations, is bad for us. That is why privatization looks so good, or so it seems. Privatization is a good idea to dispel any monopolies and get lower prices. Communism was another good idea. There is too much greed involved. We have to look behind the products we buy. Do the people selling want my money or do they actually care about me or anything positive. Together, you have capitalism at its finest, but one without the other and you have international corporations pillaging Third World nations to supply us with a pretty packaged product. There are no true monopolies on campus, except the education itself. But you can go to Greenfield or Holyoke for community college. If you want better prices on specific foods, go downtown. The bus is free. If the quality of food on campus is the only argument for bringing in privatization, I think everyone should go out and find some sterilized hemp seed flour and bake some bread in their dorm kitchens. Recipes are in the library. Eat as much as you want, you won't get high.

If the mystery person had signed a name instead of the suspicious "xxx," I could have addressed them personally. I wanted to ask, "Now that Republicans and Democrats have blended into a relatively common political ideal, where do you stand, Pro–Hemp or Pro–Privatization?" This is my perspective. Cannabis reform is for human and civil rights. About 60 percent of federal prison inmates in 1993 were drug offenders. Judges are investing in prison construction companies. Pharmaceutical companies don't want marijuana legalized. A medicine you can grow in your home would directly affects their profits. The difference between hemp and marijuana is like the difference between non–alcoholic beer and vodka.

Expect that marijuana won't kill half as many brain cells as alcohol and smoking hemp would probably give you a headache.

I had one more question for the author of the graffiti. Were you the kid who turned your parents in to the DARE officer back in elementary school?

Kiril Dubrovsky
Cannabis Reform Coalition

A Scot speaks out on the IRA

To the Editor:

There has been much debate recently both in the Collegian and around campus regarding various opinions on the tactics of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) in striving to achieve their goal of a united Ireland. A great deal of this debate has boiled down into a discussion/slanging match between two sides: in the green corner, we have the Irish–Americans and in the red, white and blue corner, we have the English. As a native of Scotland, I consider myself to be more able than most to give a neutral view of the antagonism between Irish–Americans and English. I would also like to provide an opinion of the IRA's actions as seen by a country not directly affected by the troubles but situated closer to the troubles than anyone else.

Since I arrived in Amherst for my exchange year, I have been constantly amazed at how friendly people are to me, simply because I am a Scot. However, I have been even more amazed at how much ill–feeling toward the English there appears to be.

I am constantly asked by people if I hate the English because I am a Scot. These people proceed to state "Well I hate the English because I am Irish." Incidentally, on further questioning, about eight out of 10 of these "Irish" people have never been to Ireland and cannot even tell me which area of Ireland they hail from. My country is still colonized by the English. I should have more right than any American to hate them. Fortunately, I am not this narrow–minded; I can see that the faults of the English government, both past and present, are not in any way related to ordinary English citizens. Even if people hate the English government for shocking treatment of the Irish people (which they are perfectly right to do), they are nothing more than foolish if they let this tarnish their view of everyday English citizens.

I can accept this staunch patriotism on the part of these Irish–Americans. For those directly related to Ireland it is something to be very proud of; Ireland is a lovely country. Nevertheless, I personally cannot condone the support for the actions of the IRA which is so evident in this part of the world. Last Sunday (April 20), the IRA planted several bombs around the City of London including Heathrow airport where my older sister works. The IRA have proven in the past that they are capable of murdering innocent citizens if they think it will help their cause. Had anything happened to my sister, a 21–year–old Scot with no connection to the Irish troubles, then my utter hatred for the IRA would have been compounded. The trouble here is that too many Americans try to romanticize the IRA's actions as those of courageous freedom fighters. It is fine to say this when you are lying safe in your bed on the other side of the world. If you have to grow up with the menace of random explosions then I bet your view would be radically altered.

In 1983, my father was on business in London and was in the vicinity when the Harrods bomb exploded, resulting in the deaths of six people. A few years later, the Belfast branch of my father's company was bombed one day before my father was due there on business. I still remember as a child sitting with my visibly upset mother, waiting for a telephone call from my father to tell us that he was fine.

Why is this the case? My family has nothing to do with the situation. I live in Scotland, a country which is supposedly on good terms with Ireland, so why should my family have to be affected by the IRA's actions? The answer is because the IRA is a contemptible group extremely callous, cowardly, ruthless, cold–blooded murderers. They do not care about anyone or anything that stands in the way of their cause. Yes, I am sympathetic with the people of Ireland who want a united nation. However, the means by which they are trying to achieve their goal is not just.

Last year, the "Friends of Sinn Fein," the IRA's Washington–based propaganda machine, raised nearly $1 million in donations. I wonder how much of this money was donated by people who will never be within thousands of miles of the conflict or by those with a realistic grip of the situation. The majority of people in Scotland are sympathetic to the Irish, but not towards to IRA. I just wish people over here could think the same way. If anything, place yourself in my shoes and give it some serious thought. Please.

C. Brian Majoribanks
majorib@student.umass.edu

Developing Nations

Tuesday, April 29, 1997

Kwame Ture speaks to students at UMass

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT/COLLEGIAN

Kwame Ture speaks to a packed audience in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Editor's note: the following is an excerpt of Kwame Ture's speech at the University of Massachusetts, due to length, the rest of the speech will be printed in the Collegian in the following weeks.

We thank you, we thank you, we thank you. We thank everyone for the tribute. We want to thank all of the contributing organizations among the students, the faculty and the staff. And certainly we want to thank the students for their militant composure in ensuring that the program does follow through. We thank you all. Of course, I thank all my comrades here, and especially Michael Thelwell, who I see in his old age, has still maintained some of the tactics and strategies of mobilizing the University. We want to thank you very much for this tribute.

I want to tell you that before I was ill, I have known that people who are poor will make any sacrifice for those who sacrifice for them. I have known that since I was a young man working for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. Sometimes staying in a shack that I was given to by the people there. At about two in the morning, they would knock on the door, say, "Come on, get up, they're coming to get you." They'll put me in a car, I don't know whose car it is, they'll drive me to another shack, put me there, and somebody else would take care of me until the morning. They've always sacrificed their lives for me, so I know that once you sacrifice for the people, the people will sacrifice for you.

Since I fell ill with cancer, and I'll tell you in passing, that you must pay great deal of attention to germ and chemical warfare. Because outright assassinations had diminishing returns, especially after the assassination of Martin Luther King by the FBI in this country. And they decided to go to germ warfare to get many people. So while I have cancer, let me tell you something, in the 1960s when we used to say the FBI is doing this, the FBI is doing that, people said, "they're just talking." Now today, they see it's true, and they see a lot more is true that we didn't say. So when I tell you this, it sounds crazy, but I promise you even before I die, depending on how long I live, it might come to light, but even after I'm dead. I'm sure it will come to light; the FBI gave me cancer.

And if you just study some germ and chemical warfare, and what this country's doing, you might be surprised what they're doing to you. I'm reminded of a man in the 1960s, who said, "Kwame Ture how'd you make it?"

I said, "What do you mean?"

"The FBI followed you for 24 hours a day, how'd you make it, I mean what'd you do?"

I looked at him for a long time, and finally I said, "What makes you think they're not following you for 24 hours a day?" So you must be careful what they are doing to you, you must learn about it.

Your topic from Stokely Carmichael to Kwame Ture, from Non–violence to Pan–Africanism, since we're quoting Shakespeare, from Stokely Carmicael to Kwame Ture. Shakespeare said, "A rose by any name, still smells the same." And Kwame Ture is just as revolutionary as Stokely Carmichael would be in 1997.

Now we want to trace some of the things from our advent in the struggle up until the present. And now I'm going to tell you some of the things that I've never told anybody publicly, because history you know is usually recorded by those who didn't participate. This is one error, and of course in America, they have such a bad proclivity for teaching people. I remember once when I was a young man on an airplane, I had a copy of Mein Kampf by Hitler. I was reading it, someone in the back wanted to see me, so I left the book, I went to discuss, when I came back the woman next to me said, "What are you reading?"

I said, "I'm reading Mein Kampf."

"By whom?"

I said, "By Adolph Hiter."

"Why you reading the book?"

I said, "Well he's a historical figure, he had an effect upon the world, I need to see what he did, how he did it, you know."

She said, "Well I don't read Hitler."

I said, "Why not?"

She said, "Because I'm Jewish."

I said, "Are you really?"

She said, "Yes."

I said, "Do you know what the first law of war is?"

She said, "No."

"The first law of war is to know your enemy, please take this copy, read it properly, read it thoroughly."

The woman still didn't understand precisely what I was saying. We still discussed. She said, "Well I don't understand why."

I said, "The problem with you, is that in America, you're not trained to go to primary sources, you let people think for you." The woman still didn't understand. I said, "Okay, you ask every person in America, who's graduated college if they know Adolph Hitler, every hand would go up. Ask, while their hands are up, if they have an opinion of Adolph Hitler, every hand would have an opinion of Adolph Hitler. Now ask them, 'How many of you have read one book by Adolph Hitler? Keep you're hands up.' Less than 5 percent."

You must go to primary sources if you want to understand things. Do not let anybody think for you. You're college students, you can read just like anybody else can read.

Kwame Ture

You read the primary sources. So you must go to primary sources.

Now, I want to tell you, we are very, very, happy with conditions in life. We are revolutionaries, and we are never pessimistic— never. Because we know the people, they are going to win no matter how long it takes. No matter how long it takes. The honorable Marcus Garvey was fond of saying, "Our cause is so just, if it takes until eternity, we shall win."

The second reason why we're never pessimistic is that we understand properly the axiom of Frederick Douglass: "Where there is no struggle, there is no progress."

Capitalism, a system which not only tries to exploit us, but to confuse our very thinking, would have us believe that the object of life is to work very hard for a short period of life, and then, after having attained a certain level, we just sit back, enjoy life by consuming and not producing. College students who are poisoned with this idea while at the university, read every book they can get their hands on. Once they get their degree, they never read another book in life.

So we tell you as revolutionaries, that we're strugglers, and we look for struggle. We do not try to avoid struggle. and not only do we look for struggle, we look for difficult struggle. We leave easy struggle for the chumps. We go for difficult struggle. And of course, we want to tell you that we have total faith in the mass of the people. And we're convinced of the correctness of our position since the early '60s, and conditions in America prove it today clearly. America is more ripe for revolution in 1997 than it was in 1967.

We are not going to waste time explaining all the facets, we'll just point out two points to you. Most important, the people in America are more conscious today, than ever before, if you would just look at their history since the '60s. Now of course Capitalism, its job is to lie, not some of the time, all of the time. When it tells the truth, it's the result of a double lie. It's a lie, it's a lie, it's a lie, it's a lie. So if you're not careful they'll confuse you, they'll make you think it's the people who are going backwards. The people are never going backwards, they are always going forwards. If you will look at the proliferation of struggle since the '60s in this country, you would see clearly what we're speaking about.

In the 1960s, there was no such thing as the environment movement. Today, we even have violent protest over the environment in this country. In the 1960s, the people did not involve themselves in political struggle, as a matter of fact, if you picketed in the 1960s, you were called a communist. In the 1990s policemen picket. You will look at the conscience of people in the 1960s, the women's movement was just budding, in 1997, it's there. And you must know the conscience of people and not get confused by it. I promise you, no woman in this audience will take what her sisters took at this University in the 1960s, even unconsciously. Even unconsciously.

When history is made, even though it's lied about, it makes its indelible mark upon the consciousness of the people, and no one can change that

Arts & Living

Tuesday, April 29, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Kiss It Goodbye's guide to living

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

KISS IT GOODBYE
She Loves Me, She Loves Me Not...
Revelation Records

Kiss It Goodbye's debut LP is easily one of the most brutal, heavy, intense, emotional, gut–wrenching, beautiful releases ever. This all–star band, featuring Tim Singer (formerly of No Escape) on vocals and Keith Huckins (formerly of Rorschach) on guitar, have released a masterpiece of an album. Although Singer and Huckins appeared to have reached an artistic peak with Deadguy, this album is evidence that they were just beginning to scratch the surface.

Kiss It Goodbye takes elements of hardcore, metal and noise and blend them into an amalgamation that boils over with rage and anger. The blending of metal and hardcore is nothing new to the scene. From the beginning, bands like the Bad Brains or the Cro–Mags threw in a little bit of metal to add intensity to their music. In the late–'80s, bands like Leeway incorporated enough metal into their sound so that it was labeled "cross–over" and spawned a legion of followers.

In the '90s, we now have bands like Bloodlet, Earth Crisis and Converge that play almost straight heavy metal under the banner of hardcore. While all those bands have been successful, it was always fairly easy to discern whether the band was borrowing from their metal or hardcore influences, with Bad Brains being the exception. Only a handful of bands have been able to really straddle the line without falling into either category, the best of which were probably Black Flag and Rorschach. Those two bands were successful because while they blended the two styles, it was never obvious from which genre they were borrowing their style.

Which brings us to Kiss It Goodbye. They are heavier and more intense than any hardcore band, faster and more intricate than most metal bands, and more channeled and focused then noise bands. As soon as "Helvetica" starts the disc, listeners enter a world that is so painful it hurts, it gives the feeling of being more alive then ever before.

Perhaps the biggest factor in Kiss It Goodbye's success is that they are so focused they never waste the listener's time. Every chord, time change, beat and vocal is carefully planned. The band's time is too important to waste with boring riffs or anything that has been done before. Kiss It Goodbye wants to hurt you and the only way for them to do that is for you to hear everything. You must be aware of every instrument and sound to fully experience Kiss It Goodbye. While that is the obvious goal of every band, Kiss It Goodbye does it in a way that is so concise, no band has ever come closer to perfection.

The music on this album does not allow the listener to get comfortable. As soon as the band has hit a groove or anything that even remotely resembles repetition, they change things up and slam you over the head. If it's quiet, you can normally expect a loud part coming up, but not with this band. Sure, they may break the silence with a barrage of noise, but it will never be the same twice and besides, they might not even do that. You never know what will come out of your speaker and therefore, must always be on guard.

Tim Singer's vocals and lyrics are a perfect match for the sonic assault provided by the instruments. Tim's is the voice of a desperate man — a man who is at the breaking point but refuses to give in and decides to fight back with everything he has. The disgust, frustration and rage drips off of every syllable he spews out and you have no choice but to absorb them. Furthermore, Tim's lyrics don't waste your time with mindless debates about straight–edge, veganism, selling out or being stabbed in the back. The lyrics deal with the real–life problems that one experiences from living and must confront everyday or get dragged under.

"Hartley" deals with the real–life pain and suffering of watching someone you care about waste away because of a drug addiction. "Manthing" confronts spousal abuse from the view of a person who has to see it close–up. Tim's words are the ones we feel but are too ashamed to talk about in public or even with the people closest to us.

It is nearly impossible to pinpoint which songs stand out, as this album works best when listened to on a whole. Like labelmates Iceburn, there is a flow on this album that forces the songs to accompany each other. However unlike Iceburn, Kiss It Goodbye manages to maintain their focus and intensity throughout. "Manthing" works so well because the song before it, "Ammunition," lulls the listener into a momentary state of relaxation and then "Manthing" hammers you with the force of a Mack truck.

She Loves Me, She Loves Me Not... is brilliant because it not a metaphor for life but an accurate representation of it. Life is about disappointment, failure and frustration. Although this album represents that it is not a depressing one, Kiss It Goodbye know that there is an elation felt when one is able to overcome all of the above. Life is about taking the worst, fighting back and eventually winning — it is that aspect that makes Kiss It Goodbye so beautiful. This album is not easy to listen to and it can be painful at times, but you will never feel more alive just from listening to an album. This band is something special and you should not miss them.

"Sometimes it hurts to be alive. Please don't recognize this fear. Swallow some bravery and go for it all," Kiss It Goodbye sings in "We'll Burn that Bridge When We Get To It." Thank you, Kiss It Goodbye, for bringing forth music that is life and forces the listener to feel. A "Start spreadin' the news..." — 23rd Century New York City is the setting for this summer's sci–fi spectacular The Fifth Element, starring Bruce Willis.

1997: Big box–office business as usual

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

Now that spring has finally arrived, the new wave of Hollywood films is arriving to your local multi–plexes. Here's a little preview of some of this season's big box office contenders.

THE FIFTH ELEMENT
Director Luc Besson (The Professional, La Femme Nikita) claims he originally thought of the idea for his latest film back when he was a sci–fi–obsessed teenager. The Fifth Element has been the big hush–hush project of the summer season with little of its plot and futuristic set designs released in previews. The film stars Bruce Willis and Gary Oldman in a classic tale of good vs. evil set in the 23rd century. Besson has never been one for complicated storylines, but his innovative ability for rich visuals will no doubt make The Fifth Element a pleasure to watch.

MY BEST FRIEND'S WEDDING
The story of two friends who made a vow that if they still haven't found love by the age of 28, then they'll tie the knot together. This predictable romantic comedy stars Julia Roberts and Dermot Mulroney. This film is certain to be another conventional date flick with little else to offer than maybe a nice warm feeling of nausea when leaving the theater.

MEN IN BLACK
Looks like another sci–fi spoof dark comedy in much the same tradition as Mars Attacks! Director Barry Sonnenfeld's first film since Get Shorty should be an eccentric but clever anti–paranoia story about deep undercover specialized government agents: the men in black. Tommy Lee Jones and Will Smith star as the two agents whose mission is to secure the earth from illegal aliens (I mean real outer space aliens, not border–crossers). Executive producer Steven Spielberg should make sure Men in Black doesn't get too over its head, yet Sonnenfeld should keep it all interesting.

THE LOST WORLD: JURASSIC PARK 2
Hopefully there will be a bit more substance here than in the original. Speilberg returns with his first directing stint since Schindler's List. Using Michael Crichton's novel as the basis, Jeff Goldblum returns as Malcolm (that "chaos theory" guy) as renegade dinosaurs strike back. This time, our prehistoric villains are not confined to an isolated island — they decide to wreak havoc Stateside. Besides, every summer season needs at least one big budget sequel.

DESPERATE MEASURES
After last year's disappointing Before and After, Barbet Schroeder, the acclaimed director of Barfly and Reversal of Fortune, is hoping to make a significant comeback. Desperate Measures is the story of a San Francisco police officer (Andy Garcia) whose son needs a bone marrow transplant. The problem is that the donor is a convicted multiple murderer (Michael Keaton) who uses this as the opportunity to get out of jail. This film appears strangely endearing, but dramas such as this can either be nomination material or sappy melodrama.

New Mexico fifth–graders get married, divorced on playground

By Sue Major Holmes
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — A playground "marriage" that led to a playground "divorce" has landed two fifth–graders in domestic violence court.

In an unusual use of New Mexico's Family Violence Protection Act — usually invoked in cases of domestic violence — the family of 11–year–old Katie Rose Sawyer of Farmington filed a complaint against Cody Finch, 10, and his two teen–age brothers.

The April 21 complaint alleges that Cody punched Katie Rose, that he made a threatening call to her and that her home was vandalized over the past two months.

Cody's attorney argued the case belonged in children's court, but a special commissioner called for under the Family Violence Protection Act ruled the youngsters had a "continuing personal relationship" as defined by the law.

A hearing is set for next Monday to determine whether domestic violence occurred and whether the court should issue a restraining order.

"I'm a little appalled by the idea of fifth–graders having a playground marriage and a playground divorce and ending up in domestic violence court," Cody's attorney, Raymond Archambeau, said yesterday. "What kind of world are we living in?"

He added: "Domestic violence court is for adults acting like children, not to make children act like adults."

Adults who violate a domestic violence restraining order can be jailed and lose their right to carry a gun, punishments that Archambeau said sum up why the case is in the wrong court.

The children got "married" on the school playground with a classmate acting as the minister, said Cody's mother, Jinx Finch.

Cody played at Katie Rose's house, and she made him hot dogs and Kool–Aid. He was very much in love, for a while anyway," Mrs. Finch said.

But later, "the little girl who performed the marriage decided she liked Cody and wrote up divorces — that's d-i-v-o-r-c-e-s - papers," she said. The papers say Cody and Katie Rose "are sick and tired" of each other and want a divorce, Mrs. Finch said.

The court complaint by the girl's parents, Marty and Melinda Moon, alleges Cody punched Katie Rose on Jan. 24.

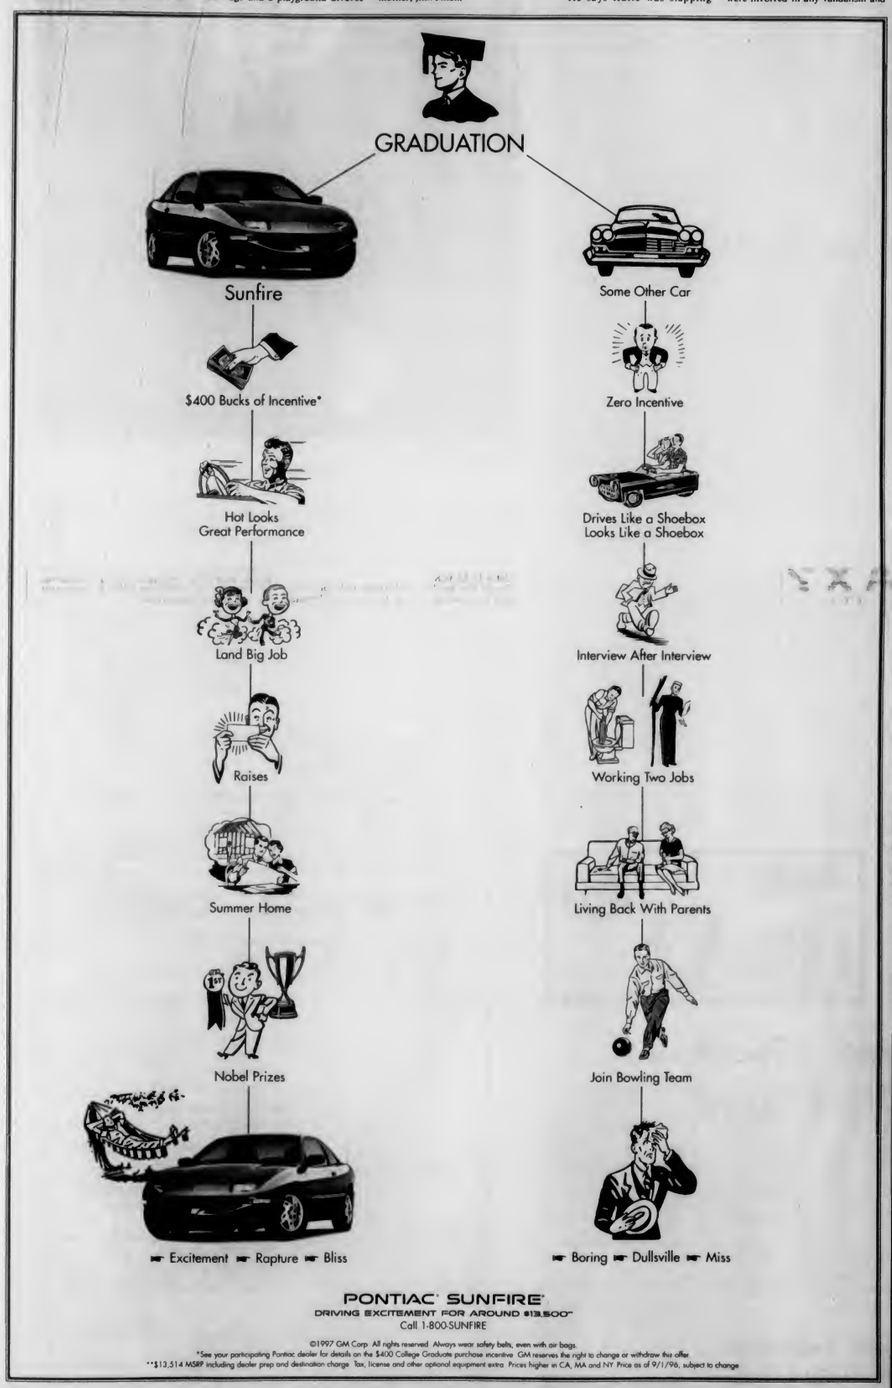
"He says Katie was slapping him," Archambeau said.

Mrs. Moon, a junior high English teacher, did not immediately return a call for comment.

However, she has told The Denver Post she went to court because she wanted her daughter protected after the boy made harassing phone calls.

She said that after the family installed a device to block calls, windows in their home were broken and hubcaps were stolen off the family car. She said she suspected the boy's 15– and 16–year–old brothers.

The boys' mother denied they were involved in any vandalism and said the case "would be hilarious if it weren't so expensive."



Archambeau said the most likely outcome is that the court will order the two to stop seeing each other. Cody's parents already have moved him to another school.

Q: "Are you a fruit?"

A: "Oh no, I'm all man! I even fought in WW2. Of course, I was wearing a woman's bra and underwear. I didn't care if I got killed, but I was scared to death that I'd be wounded and the medics would find out my secret"

Do you know where this tidbit is from?

If so, come down to the Collegian 113 Campus Center basement and talk to Adam Levine...

PONTIAC SUNFIRE
DRIVING EXCITEMENT FOR AROUND $13,500
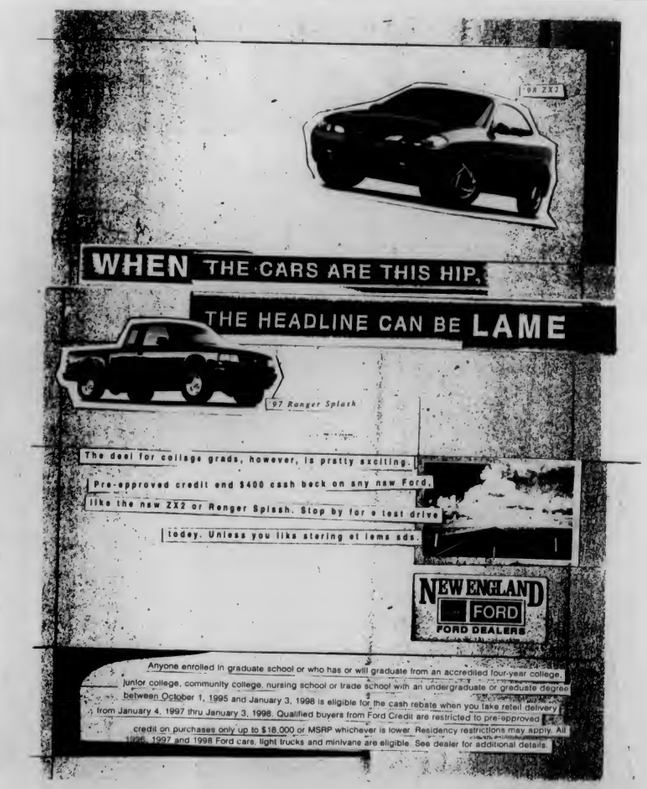
Call 1-800-SUNFIRE

©1997 GM Corp. All rights reserved. Always wear safety belts, even with air bags.
*See your participating Pontiac dealer for details on the $400 College Graduate purchase incentive. GM reserves the right to change or withdraw this offer.
$13,514 MSRP including dealer prep and destination charge. Tax, license and other optional equipment extra. Prices higher in CA, MA and NY. Price as of 9/1/96, subject to change.

AFRAID OF OVER-STUDYING?? TAKE A BREAK! WATCH HARD ROCK LIVE PRESENTED BY PONTIAC SUNFIRE SUNDAY 8 P.M. AND 1 A.M., MONDAY 8 P.M., SATURDAY 5 P.M. ALL TIMES EST/PST. ONLY ON VH1. www.hardrocklive.msn.com

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446



Gilreath Manor Condos
on Hobart Lane
Showings Start in April for June or September Occupancy!
• 3 Bedroom
• 1½ Baths
• Heated Basement
• Gas Heat & Hot water
• Hardwood Floors
• 1/2 mile to campus
• On Bus Route
LINCOLN REAL ESTATE · 25 N. PLEASANT ST. · 253-7879

Munchie Madness 3-6 PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Fried Cheese & Onion Rings 6.25 3.13
Shrimp Cocktail 5.75 2.88
Sweet Potato Fries 4.99 2.50
1/2 PRICE!

UMass Student Legal Services Office

FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

RESULTS resume
We know what employers want.
Resumes for the real world
▶ Written by a business executive
▶ Student rates, credit cards & checks
▶ Employer lists & cover letters, too
253-9055
In your back yard at 150 Fearing Street

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
www.tristatefair.com
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 19 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles exit at Staples onto Rte 116N. first right is light, exit to Center. I-91 S. take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to hi-tech CDs. It's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST
SUND, MAY 4

STUDENT TRAVEL

London	$396
Paris	554
Frankfurt	554
Rome	652
Madrid	566
Athens	720
Frague	690

All fares are round-trip from Boston. Tax not included. Some restrictions apply.
STA TRAVEL
We've been there.
Check out the latest fare & deals at www.sta-travel.com
(800) 777-0112

Joey Meyers canned by DePaul

By Mario Fox
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Joey Meyer resigned under fire yesterday as head basketball coach at DePaul, ending a 55-year family affair during which the Blue Demons have been coached by a Meyer.

Meyer, 48, spent 30 years at the school as a player, assistant coach and then head coach. He was a player and assistant under his father, Ray, who became the seventh DePaul coach in 1942. Joey Meyer replaced his father when Ray retired in 1984.

"Because of the Meyer tradition, this situation was not taken lightly," said Jim Doyle, vice president of student services at DePaul. "This was an institutional decision, rather than an athletic department decision."

Doyle said the school made the move hoping to improve the team's record, slumping attendance and competitiveness in Conference USA. Meyer said he didn't have any inkling about his fate until a yesterday morning meeting with university officials, including athletic director Bill Bradshaw, before announcing his departure. "After that meeting it became apparent that's what should be done," said Meyer, who says he'll seek another coaching job. "I'm not one who flies and dies."

Twenty-six students who played under the Meyers made it to the NBA, including George Mikan, Rod Strickland, Mark Aguirre, Terry Cummings, Dallas Comegys and Dave Corzine.

While Ray Meyer — a gruff but grandfatherly type — guided the Demons to a 724-354 record, including a Final Four appearance in 1979, his son's teams struggled in recent years. They lost their final 13 games last season to finish 3-23. That came on the heels of an 11-18 mark the previous season.

Still, Joey Meyer's record at DePaul was a respectable 231-158. "That's not my decision. Any athletic directors out there today?" he said.

The timing of the announcement is bad for both DePaul and Meyer as most college coaching jobs already have been filled.

Neither Meyer nor university officials would say why the decision was put off 1 1/2 months after the end of DePaul's season. Bradshaw said the university would launch an immediate search for a replacement. He said he would be searching for a candidate with experience as a coach and recruiter.

Joey Meyer was a popular, easy-going coach who rode an elevated train to work, prompting a promotion in 1991 that allowed people who spotted him on the train to get a discounted ticket to a game. Meyer's recent teams have been plagued by numerous injuries and academic problems. Ronnie Fields, one of the top high school prospects in the nation, failed last year to qualify academically for DePaul.

Last year, Fields broke his neck in a car accident.

The younger Meyer had his glory years. He guided the Demons to seven NCAA tournaments, including each of his first five years, and also made three NIT appearances.

"He was good at some aspects of the game. He had some flaws, but even Dean Smith has his flaws," said Marcus Singer, a DePaul senior guard. "One thing that hurt his career is his father's success."

Mario won over Steel City's hearts

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Finally, Mario Lemieux has learned how to say never.

They said a team as bad as the Pittsburgh Penguins could never win the Stanley Cup. Lemieux proved them wrong.

They said a hockey player could never be as revered as a Roberto Clemente or a Terry Bradshaw in a city that tolerated hockey but had never taken to it. He proved them wrong.

They said an athlete could never undergo debilitating cancer treatment in the morning, then be his game's best player that night. He proved them wrong.

Now, they say a relatively young athlete such as Lemieux could never retire happily. Again, Lemieux intends to prove them wrong. Asked when his seemingly premature retirement will end — after all, Gordie Howe came back at 44 — and he will rejoin the Pittsburgh Penguins to win perhaps a seventh NHL scoring title, Lemieux said, unhesitatingly, "Never."

Weary of all the clutching and grabbing that has reduced his scoring average, Lemieux has had enough. As of 11 p.m. Saturday, the end of the Penguins' season, he is officially retired." He quit on his terms, not those of some team owner or commissioner.

It is time to bid adieu to Mario Lemieux.

"I did it my way," Lemieux said.

The last comparable Hall of Fame-caliber athlete to leave on his own volition, rather than injury, while still at the top of his game was former Cleveland Browns star Jim Brown, who gave up football for the movies.

"It's hard for me to understand," said Joe Mullen, the Penguins' 500-goal scorer who also is retiring. "Everybody's different. I guess I'm driven by playing all the time and the love of the game, and maybe Mario's driven by something else." Like Brown, Lemieux is his own man, a loner unwilling to follow the status quo. Lemieux didn't just win three MVP awards while leading a once-dreadful franchise to two Stanley Cups, he elevated the act of scoring goals into an art form. He also beat two career-threatening back operations and Hodgkin's disease, a form of cancer that attacks the lymph nodes.

Through it all — 13 seasons, 683 goals, 1,649 points — Lemieux cared not about everyone else's expectations, just his own. Perhaps that is the burden of a last name that translates, in French, into "the best."

"It's a sad day for me to leave hockey, which I have been playing since I was 3, but I'm going to be a lot happier, too," Lemieux said Saturday after a season-ending 6-3 playoff loss in Philadelphia. "The way I've been playing the last five or six years has been very frustrating for me and I can't accept it.

"Not being able to challenge people one-on-one the way I could a few years ago, that's a part of my game that's been missing. I've always been able to beat anybody one-on-one... and that's why I'm stepping out."

Lemieux's marginal drop off in production is comparable to a slugger who slips from 45 homers a season to 30. Lemieux had a league-leading 122 points — his second consecutive scoring title and his fourth in his last five seasons — but the total seems minuscule to a player who once scored 199.

No, he didn't break Wayne Gretzky's single-season or career scoring records, but Lemieux never had comparable teammates until back problems undercut his career.

"I've been around for 13 years, and I've had a great run, but I think it's time to get away from hockey," Lemieux said.

He has no plans for the next year, only to spend time with his ever-growing family — wife Nathalie is expecting their fourth child — and play golf. He wants to return to Pebble Beach and some of the historic courses in Britain, and there is speculation he will turn pro.

"I'm going to take it day by day for year and do whatever I want, then decide what I want to do," Lemieux said.

Hockey does not figure in his plans, on or off the ice. He probably does not have the people skills or ambition to be a coach or the patience to be an executive. No, he is content with his life away from the rink, his fortune, his legacy as the No. 6 scorer in NHL history.

"I want to be remembered just as somebody who was able to take a team that was the worst in the league and... win a championship," he said. "A lot of players played 15-20 years and never won a Stanley Cup. I'm very proud I accomplished that. I've missed many games over my career. It's been difficult. ... But I'm happy with my place in history."

On your toes! JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Caroline Steele of the women's tennis team gets a jump on the competition.

Fuzzy returns for S.C. charity pro–am

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller, still stinging from the uproar over insensitive remarks about Tiger Woods, returned to form yesterday, wisecracking with players and spectators at a charity pro-am.

"Isn't it nice I don't have to WD [withdraw] from this tournament?" Zoeller said after teeing off in the Thornblade Classic, a one-day event to raise money for Greenville schools and other community groups. Zoeller had withdrawn from the Greater Greensboro Chrysler Open last week following the criticism that followed his comments about the Masters champion.

"You take your bumps, you take your licks and you get up and you shake them off and you keep on licking and keep moving forward," Zoeller said Sunday night at a dinner for the charity event.

Sponsors canceled the tournament because of heavy rains, then decided 45 minutes later to play nine holes after the amateurs who signed up complained. Zoeller signed autographs while waiting to determine whether the event would be canceled.

The crowd applauded when Zoeller teed off and he wasted no time in poking fun at a competitor.

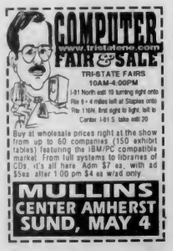
When CBS analyst Gary McCord's drive on the fifth hole dribbled off the tee, Zoeller cracked, "Now I know why you went to the [broadcast] booth."

While Zoeller was joking as usual on the course, he did skip a photo session before the tournament with 32 other professional golfers, including Fred Couples, Tom Kite, Phil Mickelson, Brad Faxon and Jay Haas.

Asked to comment on Woods' runaway win in Augusta, Zoeller referred to the new champion as "that little boy" and urged he not serve fried chicken or collard greens at next year's Masters Champions Dinner.

The ensuing furor cost Zoeller a sponsorship contract with Kmart, where he endorsed a line of golf equipment and apparel, and led him to withdraw from the Greensboro event so he could apologize to Woods personally.

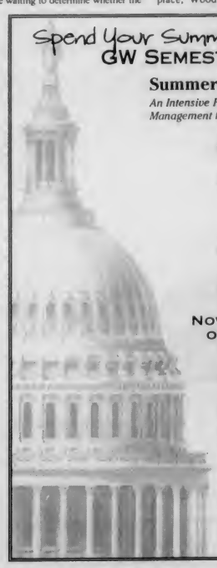
Though that meeting still hasn't taken place, Woods issued a statement Thursday night accepting Zoeller's apology, though he said he was "shocked" to hear about the remarks.



Zoeller said PGA Commissioner Tim Finchem called him before Woods' statement was released to the media.

"I said, 'What about talking to him?'" Zoeller recalled. "[Finchem] said, 'Tiger would like to talk to you just as friends on the PGA Tour.' That will happen probably at the Colonial, when I'll be out next, which is fine."

The Colonial is scheduled for May 22-25 at Fort Worth, Texas. Zoeller said he also has received many words of encouragement from supporters, including NFL coaches Marty Schottenheimer of Kansas City and Mike Ditka of New Orleans.



"They've just told me to keep my head up and keep plugging right along," said Zoeller, one of golf's most prominent quipsters.

"It's easy to run from your problems, but why run? I'm not runner. Look at this body, does this look like a runner? You know what I mean. There's no reason to run from anything."

Earth Systems
A new undergraduate Bachelor of Science degree program
Department of Geosciences • University of Massachusetts, Amherst
Global environmental changes require a comprehensive understanding of the earth's major systems, and of the important ways in which these systems are linked. The major systems are geologic, oceanic, atmospheric, cryospheric (the snow and ice-covered world), and biospheric (including human) systems. To provide students with the necessary understanding of these inter-related systems, a new major in Earth Systems has been established in the Department of Geosciences.
The goal of earth system science is to obtain a scientific understanding of the entire earth system on a global scale. The new B.S. degreee in Earth Systems will provide students with the necessary background to make informed judgements about contemporary environmental issues, based on an understanding of the complex factors involved. For those who propose to eventually pursue graduate education, it will provide a strong basis for further studies in a variety of fields.
For further information, contact the Department of Geosciences
Room 233 Morrill Science Center
or visit our Web Site at www.geo.umass.edu.

Spend Your Summer in Washington, DC
GW SEMESTER IN WASHINGTON
Summer Session 1997
An Intensive Program in Political Management for Qualified Undergraduates
★ Learn from Washington, DC's political professionals
★ Produce TV & Radio ads, construct opinion polls, stage media events, conduct field research, and more
★ Make connections to launch your career
★ Attend "insider" special events
NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS ON A ROLLING ADMISSIONS BASIS. APPLY NOW!
For more information, and to receive an application, contact:
(800) 367-4776, (202) 994-6000,
or http://www.gwu.edu/~gspm
The George Washington University WASHINGTON DC
The Graduate School of Political Management
GW is an equal opportunity/affirmative action institution

Women's crew wins A–10's again

Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Correspondent

Bob Barker of "The Price is Right" and Jim Dietz, coach of the Massachusetts women's crew team, have a lot more in common than meets the eye. While one yells at adoring fans to be the next to guess how much Pampers cost, the latter relies on his impressive undefeated record to invite anyone and everyone to come challenge his women in a meet.

This past Saturday, the UMass women's crew team won their second consecutive Atlantic–10 Championship at Cooper River Park in Collingswood, N.J., where Coach Jim Dietz was honored as the A–10 Coach of the Year for the second consecutive year. UMass totaled 49 points, followed by chief rival George Washington (40), Temple (21), Dayton (16), St. Joseph's (15), Fordham (11), Rhode Island (10), LaSalle (9), Duquesne (5) and Xavier (4), while Virginia Tech came in 11th (2).

Along with the A–10 title, UMass also rowed to first place in the women's varsity with a time of 6:26.60, beating GW (6:37.73) by a massive 11.13 second margin. Other first place finishes for the Minutewoman were in the novice (8:13), the second varsity 8 (6:57.20) and also in the novice 4 (8:47.37).

The most exciting races were the JV 8 and the first freshmen 8. In the JV, GW charged off the starting line at a blazing 44 strokes per minute, but UMass fought back to win by seven seconds. The novices weren't as successful in their comeback but still proved "their tenacity" by closing the deficit in their second place finish according to Dietz.

According to Dietz, "GW gave us a good run for our money...[it was a] tight battle." Remarkably, the 17 through 20 women proved their capabilities in defeating varsity crews from other schools, further proving the depth of UMass. The UMass varsity is ranked first in the Northeast region. Dietz hopes the JV can also jump into the ranking computer with their impressive showing this past weekend.

"We raced well," Heather Schmitz of the lightweight varsity said. "Beating LaSalle was a big accomplishment because they had been ranked ahead of us. As a boat, we are making big steps towards winning more races."

Assistant coach Kate Hubbard also cited UMass' success over other schools in that they "don't get the same backing by the athletic department as we do."

For the delighted Dietz, the highlight of Saturday was not only winning the championship but that every woman left with a medal.

"I thought it was great," Dietz said.

The diet of persistence and hard work seems to be the key to their undefeated streak and second consecutive championship. UMass is looking forward to returning to the Charles River for a meet at Boston University with Radcliffe.

■ tennis

continued from page 12

in these separate groups counted for two points toward the team total.

In the No. 1 singles grouping, Todd Cheney fell in the semifinals to the eventual group winner David Weisman from Babson.

In the No. 2 category, Pat Slyman fell in the finals to UConn's Drew Broderick in a third set tiebreaker.

Rob Manchester became a New England champion in the No. 3 slot, defeating Bentley's Tom Castineda.

"It was really satisfying to win my division. The pressure was on me as the first seed in my division. The guys I was playing against had nothing to lose. As a team, this was a fitting end to our season. I am really looking forward to the next couple of years on this team," he said.

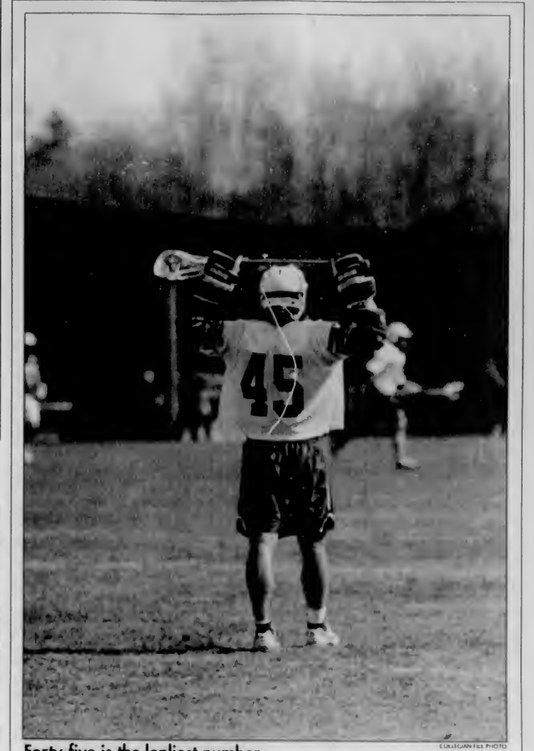
Alex Aller also captured his division, beating UConn's Mitch Katz in straight sets.

Bo Navarro was the third singles champion for UMass, holding on to No.5 division. He took care of Coast Guard Academy's Mike Turdo.

Parsa Samii bowed out in the semifinals in the No. 6 group, losing to UConn's Mike McMannus. UMass also won all three divisions of doubles play to clinch the tournament.

The success of the Minutemen this year has come as a bit of surprise. This lineup is comprised of mainly freshmen and sophomores, and although tennis is largely considered an individual sport, teamwork and experience play major factors in the college ranks.

After early victories, the coaching staff put all doubts about their youngsters on the side and displayed the utmost confidence in their abilities.



When pressed to find disappointment in this season, Coach Dixon only lists one minor failure.

"We would have loved to have knocked off George Washington in the Atlantic 10 tournament. We had them where we wanted them but it just slipped away. It was the only time this year, when some of the guys were overwhelmed. They responded to every other challenge," she said.

The Minutemen look to have a very bright future in men's tennis, with this entire 1997 New England Championship team returning for next year. Coach Dixon has already contacted several teams and it is likely UMass will play Ivy League powerhouses such as Brown and Yale in the coming season. They also hope to play the better half of the Atlantic 10 as well. This year, they played mostly their local division rivals.

Coach Dixon believes this young team can become nationally known within the next few seasons.

"This team is now a legitimate candidate for a national ranking in the very near future," she said.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Forty-five is the lonliest number

Brendan Glass of the men's lacrosse team searches for some company on the field.

BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR
American Heart Association
Volunteer.

Hit a HOMERUN for SPORTS!

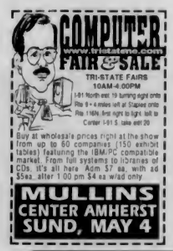
Technological Challenge.
Alternate Fridays off.
What a great way to have it all.

With more than 100 engineering positions available for college graduates, Sanders can fuel your career with a world of exciting choices. Addressing impressive engineering challenges, you can help define the future in avionics, information systems, microwave electronics and surveillance systems while working with the latest technologies, tools and systems.

Many are attracted to Sanders' reputation for technical excellence and technical diversity. Now there's a new reason to join Sanders. Starting in June, with our new 9 day/80 hour work schedule, two weeks of work will normally amount to 80 hours over 9 days. That means you'll work Monday-Friday the first week and Monday-Thursday the second. This schedule offers up to 26 three-day weekends annually to take time for a mini get-away to the mountains or beaches, spend the day shopping in the city, enjoy the outdoors or just take it easy.

Right now we have entry-level positions available in the areas of:
• Computer Science
• Electrical Engineering
• Mechanical Engineering
• Aerospace Engineering
• Computer Engineering.

Don't delay! Send your resume today to:
Sanders, A Lockheed Martin Company
Attn: 7510CR, P.O. Box 2029; Nashua, NH 03061-2029
Fax (603)885-6398
Email: kdunn@mailgw.sanders.lockheed.com



For more information, visit us at:
http://www.sanders.com

Applicants selected may be subject to a government security investigation and must meet eligibility requirements for access to classified information.

U.S. Citizenship required for most positions. Sanders is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

SANDERS
A Lockheed Martin Company

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
London $199 $370
Rome or Milan $340 $635
San Jose, Costa Rica $246 $460
Roundtrip
TOKYO $879
SYDNEY $898
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs/immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave. NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

ENTER THE TRAVEL ZONE and explore the world for less
Council Travel
44 Main Street, Amherst
Tel: 413-256-1261

North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA
549-2880
one mile from UMass on the bus route
•Free Estimates
•Lifetime Repair Warranty
•Auto Glass Replacement
•Car & Truck Rental

BANANARAMA fabulous frozen YOGURT
Small Colombe Frozen Yogurt or Small Newport Creamery Ice Cream
95¢ with coupon expires 5/15/97 +tax

GOOD THYME DELI
Cup or Homemade Soup or Boar's Head All Beef Hot Dog with homemade chili sauce if you choose
95¢ with coupon expires 5/15/97 +tax

Both Located at 25 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

YOGURT SHAKES, SMOOTHIES & AWARD WINNING CATERER

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

The famous annual Amherst International Jazz Concert Fundraiser 4/29, 7 pm , Campus Center Room 101 FREE Refreshments. Tickets= $2.50/students, $4.00/public-faculty 545-1905

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Don't Pick Your Nose
Know anyone graduating high school??? Give them SURVIVAL TIPS FOR COLLEGE. Humorous and practical guide for students entering college. Available in CC Store under local authors and bookstores in Amherst and Northa.

APARTMENT/FOR RENT

3 bedroom Puffton Apt.- Available 6/1 Take over our recently renovated apt. Spacious, good location, next to bus route. Plenty of parking. Call Scott, Seth or Mark 549-7045

Caster of town 1,2,3 bedrooms Gas, heat, hardwood floors 253-7879

Take over lease or sublet 2 bedroom apt. $685 from Juna 1st. Bus route 330/ 780 Call 253-3264

2 bedroom Available 6/1. 1010 N Pleasant #3 549-4142

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550. 2 bedroom- $425. 20 minutes from campus- no bus. Available for Sept. 665-2203

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept at Squire Village 665-2203

Take over our lease Puffton, 2-3 people Call 549-5079 Available 5/26

AUTO FOR SALE

For Sale 91 Pontiac Sunbird Good condition Call 256-6918

86 Ford Escort standard, $700 or Best Offer. Call Wendy 253-4729

87 Mazda RX7 5 speed, alarm, CD, m-roof, new engine, 13K. Have all paperwork $6500 or B/O. Call Erika 546-0545

Honda CRX 1986 Great gas mileage, 5 speed, sunroof, CD Player, $1500 or B/O. Call Alycia 549-3986

For Sale 1979 VW Bus Runs good, $800 586-3074

91 Honda Civic 12 CD Changer, 4 speakers, auto start $4800 or B/O 665-0162

96 Toyota Corolla DX loaded, 9K, less than 6000 miles. Dark green Must sell Theresa 549-2884

EMPLOYMENT

Painters Wanted for full-time summer in Westwood, Dedham area. $6-$8 an hour plus bonuses. Call Mike 549-3758

Drivers Wanted College students, anyone to sell Good Humor Ice Cream from one of our vending trucks. Work outdoors this summer. Be your own boss. RTS available in your area. Earn $750-950 weekly. Male or Female. Apply now. Call Mon.-Sat. 9am.-3pm. only. (203)366-2641 or (800)899-1009

Bar or Waitperson Apply in person The Paddock- 127 Elm St., Hatfield

Looking for summer work? Spend your summer outdoors with other students painting houses. Student Painters is looking for people to fill both Production Foreman and painters spots. No experience necessary. Call Keith 546-5199 for more info.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? $3000-$4000 for the summer. Work outside with other students in Andover area. Get a tan. Leadership positions available. 1-800-393-4848 ext. 206

On Campus Interviews Friday 4/11 University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales Marketing and PR experience Call 1-800-743-5595 ext. 122

Now Hiring/Summer Part-time Telemarketers. Amherst area, flexible hours. Earn $6-$7/hour plus bonuses. No sales- Will train. Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777

We are looking for hard-working, top-quality, competent work study student for departmental business office near fall. Intelligent individual who can work independently. Good with numbers, computer skills, reliability a must. If you prove your worth we'll pay you well. Jennifer 545-3559 detailing experience.

Summer Painters Work outside $7-$10 an hour, plus bonuses with your friends in Western Massachusetts. Call Pete at 1-800-829-4777

COMPUTER JOBS! SUMMER, PT, FT Programming, PC Support, Hardware, Software. COBOL, ISO, JCL, SQL, CICS, Visual Basic, Access. Win NT, Novell, LAN Admin, DOS, Windows. Springfield/Hartford TSI Consulting Phone: (413)567-6842 Fax: (413)786-6313 Email: tsibrnpy@map.com WWW: www.tsiconsulting.com

Hadley Office now hiring for summer and immediate openings. Looking for 15 hard working, ambitious people to assist our outside sales force. No experience required. Will train.
- On bus line
- Fun atmosphere
- Daily bonuses

EMPLOYMENT

- No selling involved
- Up to 40 hours
- Flexible schedule

Earn up to $7,810 hr For a confidential interview please call and ask for Mr. Berii or Mr. Boone between the hours of 10am.- 8pm. at 584-0215

CAPE COD RESTAURANT Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train, housing available. Eastham and Orleans (508)255-5394

Painters needed for summer Full or part-time in Chicopee-Springfield area. $6-$10/hr. + bonuses. Call Cheri 546-2130

Summer Employment
Experienced truck drivers for part-time. Approximately 12 or more days in Mid-June and Mid-August. $105.00 to $135.00 a day. (508)653-7422

Summer Employment
Looking for extraverted people to help run our office. Must have good telephone and organizational skills. $7.25 per hour. (508)653-0488 (Natick)

Now Hiring Painters for employment in The Southern Worcester County Area. Must have own transportation but no experience required. Call 546-4289

Vermont Advantera! Farm and Wilderness is now hiring summer staff. We need people who want to provide positive guidance and support to adolescents coming of age in the 90's. Counselors, nurses, cooks, general staff. Organic farming, backpacking, rock climbing, waterfront, carpentry, crafts. Challenging wilderness environment in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Contact Philip Tobin (802)422-3761 or f a n d w @ s o v e r n e t (http://www.fandw.org)

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call (413)827-7555

PAINTERS- Full-time summer, EXPERIENCE PREFERRED, vehicle, $6.50-$9.00/hr. heavy lifting required. 9:00-5:00 ONLY. 247-9480.

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

FOR RENT

Take over lease 8/1- 8/31 Fall Option. Large 2 bdrm. $500/month 665-8076 On bus line

4 bedroom apt. Available 8/1. On bus route. 253-6473

1 big bedroom- Puffton Heat and H20 included. A/C. Available June 1. Call 549-5178

Take over lease 1 bedroom apt. Colonial Village. $430/month. 253-0313

3 bedroom- Puffton Renovated. 2 bathroom. Available 6/1. Nice place! 549-6758

2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. with Fall Option for all three rooms. Available May 27. 549-7147

Take over lease 6/1 One bedroom, $525/month. Heat/Hot water incl. Prasidential Apts. Call 549-4561

West Yarmouth Large house, 4 bedrooms. Small house, 2 bedrooms. 253-7436

2 Rooms for Rent Private home. $335 + utilities. Kitchen privileges. Kosher/Vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. Available May 1. 549-4853

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September. Lease $1300+. 253-7879

Cape Cod group & summer rentals Waterfront houses. Falmouth area (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

P-166 Full Package PC $1200 Sharpe VCR, TV, Microwave, Aiwa Stereo and more. Cheap! 256-0767

SOFA BED Queen Size, mattress, good shape. $125 or B/O. DINING ROOM SET Table and 4 chairs, all wood. Excellent condition. $150 or B/O. 549-4996

AMERICAN AIRLINES VOUCHER Transferable. Worth $200. Price- $105. Cash. Call 546-3857

Trek 830 w/Kryptonite Lock. Brand new. Only $250 or B/O. Call 548-8042

Weightbeach & Weights Brand new. Only $250 or B/O. Call 548-8042

Word Processor with Monitor and Laser Printer functions. Include spreadsheets and more! $200 ois B/O. Call 548-8042

Trombone for sale Bach 42 Stradivarius. It is in great shape. Has a straight wrap and an F trigger. Please call 587-0768 to look at instrument. Best offer gets the trombone

Bark Mulch
$21/yd. delivered
2 yard minimum
Please call Leon 323-4447

FOR SALE

65 gallon tank stand, accessories. $150 or B/O. 19" Color TV. $90. Akai Stereo with JVC Tapa Deck. $50. Assorted furniture, kitchenware. Call Jim 253-6458

Laptop Notebook $99. VGA Color Monitor $75. Hard Drive $10. Software $5. 386 Motherboard $25. Call Steve 586-3324 ext. 2

HOUSE FOR RENT

4 bedroom house- Northampton, near Look Park. Extra room, porch. For Sept. or maybe June. $925 plus utilities. Call 584-3428, afternoons. Skibiski Realtors.

4-5 bed houses for June. Northampton-Hadley. Call 584-3428 Skibiski Realtors, afternoons.

House For Rent $1700 per month. 4 bedrooms, ona-half miles from Mullins Center. Gas, heat. Call 253-7879

HOUSE FOR SALE

Contemporary- 4 bedroom, 3 bath. 3050 sq. ft. in Wilbraham. $199,900 (413)596-8191

MUSICIANS

Modern Rock Guitarist Auditions being held for the "Dabi DeRosa Band." Experienced only! Vocals preferred. Gigs average 4 to 6 times a month. Leave message at (413)589-1440

Stop talking about Social Justice and start working for it. Organize low-income people to build power and have control over their communities. Call Lisa at Acorn 1-800-651-8448

PERSONALS

Beet,
What it is Hoov

ROOM FOR RENT

Beginning September Walk to UMass. Furnished, large, quiet, comfortable. Male grad/professional. $74/week continuously through May 1998. 349-1578

1 large room in two bedroom apartment. Looking for two females. Available 6/1 and half and Spring Option. On bus route. Very spacious, great location. Call 549-3992

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+. Call 253-4954 for more info

ROOM FOR RENT

Spacious room in house June 1/Fall Option. $320 per month. Karolee or Rachel 256-4119

Gigantic double room available to rent June 1 in 3 bedroom apt. Next to campus. Fully furnished. Robin 549-5164

ROOMMATE WANTED

WANTED: Responsible, quiet roommate who doesn't do drugs to share 2 bedroom apartment for Summer and/or Fall RENT FOR SUMMER IS CHEAP! Call Alison 546-5612

Wnated: 1 or 2 Females Non-smoking, to share a four bedroom apartment. No cats/dogs. Call 665-7712

1 or 2 people to share large bed room in a 6 bedroom house. Close to campus. Call 549-9237

Looking for one roommate this Summer '97. This large two bedroom apartment is in excellent condition. Please contact David or Collin at 256-1764

SERVICES

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Expert Piano Tuning Call Jeremiah Driscoll 583-3013 Leave a message

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

1 room is three bedroom apartment. 549-7068. 1 mile from campus. Heat and hot water included.

2 bedroom- Puffton Furnished, next to bus stop. $525. Available June 1. Call Pohan or Anders @ 549-4689

1 bedroom apartment at Crashview. 6/1- 8/31. Short walk to UMass. On bus route. Hot water included. Will be partially furnished. $550/month. Call 549-7605

3 bedroom apartment Puffton Village. Available 6/1. Call 549-5405

One room in 4 bedroom house with 4 males. North Amherst. Rent and move-in neg. $730/month + utilities. Call 8:30- 11:30 am. 549-1832

1 room is 4 bedroom Sunset Village. Bus route. 665-1680

3 bedroom/Puffton Semi-furnished, renovated. Pool and tennis courts. Available 6/1. Call 549-4748

1-4 rooms 1 mile to UMass. FP, porch, lots of appliances! On bus route. 6/1 with Fall Option $295/month. 256-0672

SUMMER SUBLET

Close 2 bedroom in Brandywine. A/C, pool. 6/1 with Fall Option. $775 NEG. On bus line, UMass, one mile. 549-9879

2 bedroom apt. Puffton Village. Available 6/1. $575 Neg. Call 549-1259

1 bedroom in 3 bedroom house in Belchertown. $707 plus electricity. Fall Option. Call 323-8740. Prefer older/grad student.

2 bedroom- Puffton newly renovated, furnished. Next to bus stop. 549-4374

Upscale, 2 bedroom townhouse on bus route. Full basement, each bedroom has shower and bath, patio, large kitchen, living and dining rooms, available after May 20th. 2-4 occupants $1000 a month. Call 253-8458

Need 2 to share with1 in 2 bedroom apt. Bus stop @ end of drive or 10 min. walk to campus. Hdwd floors. B-ball hoop w/ 3. It's $208/month. Hot H20. Presidential. Mark 549-1086

Housemate Summer with Fall Option. Share 3 bedroom house with 2 mature grad students and one lazy dog. 2 miles from campus. 549-4492

Two room apartment in Downtown Amherst. Large living room, large bedroom. $520/month includes heat and hot water. Available 6/1/97. Call 256-0227

For Rent 3 bedroom apartment. June- Aug. with Fall Option. $725. Call 253-7128

2 bedroom in Brandywine $850/month. Available 6/1 Call 549-0181

Summer Sublet with Fall Option. 2 bedroom apt. in a house available 6/1. 20 min. walk to campus. 5 min. to laundry, grocery, uptown. $1000/month. Heat and hot water included. Call 549-0941

Mill Valley- 2 bedroom, 2 bathroom, 2 air-conditionars. Fully Furnished! Call 253-6660

4 rooms in super huge house in Uptown Amherst. Cheap summer sublet with Fall Option. Females preferred. Call Erica or Ann at 253-1776 ASAP

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths, first floor, backyard. June-August, Fall Option. Call 253-6467

3 bedroom- Puffton Just renovated. Furniture available. Starts 6/1. 549-4934

2 bedroom apartment 6/1- 9/1. On bus line. $500/month including all utilities! Great deal! 546-0026

Single and huge double room available in a 3 bedroom apt. Next to campus. Fully furnished. Fall Option. Robin 549-5164

SUMMER SUBLET

One bedroom in Amherst House. Available 6/1- 8/31. $275 + utilities. Andrew 549-2696

2 bedroom- Besidere One month free. $695/month. Available 6/1. 256-4767

2 bedrooms in a 4 bedroom apt. Huge lots of light. $332 each person per month. Southpoint Apts. 256-8966

Sunny Spacious House Three bedrooms. Great summer location with hiking and bike paths, deck and backyard. 5 miles from UMass. 256-6336

2 bedroom apartment with Fall Option. 1 month free rent. Call 549-4089

2 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Great location near pool/courts. Heat/hot water included. $840/month. Available 6/1. 549-7762

3 bedroom Puffton Available 6/1 549-5941

3 bedroom apartment in Northampton. On bus line, walk to downtown. Available 6/1. 585-8574

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apartment. Available 6/1 Cheap with Fall Option

Going abroad next Fall Sublet my room for Spring '98. Great roomies, on bus line, close to campus and bars. Don't wait. Call 549-4568

2 bedroom in the Boulders. On bus line. Heat included. Room for 4 people. Option to renew lease. Call 256-5990

Take over our lease 3 bedroom Mill Valley Apt. Available June 1st. Call 253-7157

WANTED

Looking for cheap Playstation and Games. Call 665-1278. Ask for Josh

Your ad could be here.
- 3 bedroom Puffton Available 6/1 549-5941
- 3 bedroom apartment in Northampton. On bus line, walk to downtown. Available 6/1

Collegian Classifieds

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name must be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or typo.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY APRIL 29

Lecture — The Mount Holyoke College Psychology and Education Department and the Women's Studies Program jointly present a talk by Abigail J. Stewart entitled, "Personality in Middle Age: Gender, History and Mid- Course Corrections," at 7 p.m. in Room 101, Dwight Hall, MHC. Free and open to the public.

Meeting — The United Christian Fellowship at UMass and Habitat For Humanity invites students interested in going to South Carolina May 26–31 to rebuild a burned-out African American church to an orientation session for Project Rebuild at 367 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, from 7:30–9 p.m.

WEDNESDAY APRIL 30

Lecture — The Women in Sport Management present Anne Flannery, manager of women's athletics for Spaulding Sports, at 7 p.m. in the V.I.P. Room in the Mullins Center.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series features Lois Yachetta, Economist, Nasar Institute for Social and Economic Research, on "A Feminist Economics Approach to Discrimination," from 12:15–1:10 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165–169.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Free and open to the public.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Tired of the same old over-priced, pub-style food? Sick of boring, crappy, plastic chain restaurants? For great food, cooked to order, try Walker's Grill. We don't take anyone else seriously, either.

Full menu 'til 1 A.M. ~Every Night ~

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Vodka & Tonic

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 29, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Siamese Twins" (R)		Frontline "The Navy Blues"		Family Doctor... At the Heart		Mysteries of Deep Space
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Promised Land (In Stereo)		"Too Close to Home" (1997, Drama) Judith Light.				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land (In Stereo)		"Too Close to Home" (1997, Drama) Judith Light.				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Home Imp.	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Spin City	NYPD Blue "Bad Rap"		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		"Pretty Woman" (1990, Comedy-Drama) Richard Gere, Julia Roberts.					News	Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Moesha	Homeboys	Burning Zone (In Stereo)		News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Saint?	"The Mask" (1994, Fantasy) Jim Carrey. (In Stereo)				News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "The Doomsday Asteroid"		Frontline "The Navy Blues"		Entrepreneurial Revolution		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Home Imp.	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Spin City	NYPD Blue "Bad Rap"		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 "Violated"		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Moesha	Homeboys	Burning Zone (In Stereo)		News		Real TV	Mad Abo. You
WTBS		Family Matters	Family Matters	NBA Basketball Playoffs Teams to Be Announced. (Live)						NBA Basketball Playoffs Teams to Be Announced. (Time Approximate) (Live)
A&E		Quincy "Nowhere to Run"		Law & Order "The Troubles"		Biography "Shah of Iran"		Touch of Frost "House Calls"				Law & Order "Seed"
CNN	28	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Bonsen-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	38	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	Canned Ham	Comedy Net 1	Comedy Net 2	Fooworthy	Lizards	Viva Variety	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC		Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "The Killer Bee" (R)		Wild Discovery: Monkey God		New Detectivas		Invisible Places "Subtropolis"		Wild Discovery: Monkey God
ESPN		Up Close	Sportscenter			Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Quarterfinal Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced						Baseball Sportscenter
LIFE		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait "Yoko Ono"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Double Standard" (1988, Drama) Robert Foxworth.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV		Volunteer Summit Concert		Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Unplugged (In Stereo)		Music Videos (In Stereo)		Austin Powers-Shindig		Singled Out	Lovalina
NICK		Clarissa Expl.	Titty Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Sonny & Cher	Rowan-Martin	Flip Wilson	Dean Martin	Best of SNL	Ed Sullivan	M.T. Moora
SCIFI		Twilight Zone	Darkside	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest DSV "Ride and Seek"		Forever Knight "Black Buddha"		VR.5 "Sirens" (In Stereo)		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	26	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Medical Detect	Danger Zone	Eartn's Fury		Electric Skies (R)		Medical Detect	Danger Zone
TNT		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball Playoffs Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					NBA Basketball Playoffs	Teams TBA
USA		Renegade (In Stereo)		Highlander The Series		Murder, She Wrote (In Stereo)		Boxing: Antonio Byrd vs. Joseph Kiwanuka. (Live)				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO		(5:00)		"The Quick and the Dead" (1987, Western)		"The Arrival" (1996, Science Fiction) Charlie Sheen. 'PG-13'				"In the Gloaming" (1997)		"Skeletons" (1997) 'R'
MAX		"The Truth About Cats and Dogs" (1996) Uma Thurman.				"Point of No Return" (1993, Drama) Bridget Fonda. 'R'				"Breakaway" (1996, Drama) Teri Thompson. 'R'		Erotic
SHOW		(5:30) "Par and Away" (1992, Drama) Tom Cruise. 'PG-13'				"The Silver Strand" (1995, Drama) 'R'						"Riot" (1997, Drama) Luke Perry, Cicely Tyson. (In Stereo)	South Central

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Generation X By Chris Lehman

University By Frank Cho

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Keep a close watch on details, especially those involving finance. Not all changes could mean a big payout. Take time for yourself. Don't become overly involved in other people's stress that is push/pull.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Stick to a routine, and avoid high pressure and follow them. Your natural defense energy, especially if you have an audience. Old friendships are renewed and new ones are formed this week. Don't take circumstance or people for granted.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Keep emotions under control. Study situations before taking action. Pay attention to health. Quit. Pressure on the domestic business will be over if you let them. Preach one person when talking another one. A slow down when a burst of energy points for a new pursuit of work.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Let others take the lead. Wait and watch for the right moment to make a move. Don't worry, you'll know when the time is right. Things will become clear over time. Share concerns, urges and emotional ones with your wife.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Watch hard and stop focused on your goals. Ignore distractions and try to keep tension to a minimum. Things will work out as they should. There is a growing chance for travel and/or new ideas. Be aware of the signs and act on them.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
The pressures of conflicting duties and desires could build up. Be aware of what is really required. Try to see the big picture and let the little things work themselves out. Avoid accepting poor favors or spending yourself too thin.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Learn from past mistakes and mistakes. Don't try to force your opinion—talking softly is better now. Work on the less delegated and let others take credit for the end results. Even small setbacks can have big consequences. Take time to consider others.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
See things as others see them. Giving in a little now can get you more in the long run. Take short-term when you need it. Pushing yourself too hard could backfire and keep you down in nothing gains. Bear to do really does want to help if you allow it.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Don't let work get in the way in any of things for best results. Keep to the schedule and start and don't. Stick to a middle of the road manner for best results. Resist others to draw you into an extreme position. Now is the time to step on the sidelines.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Avoid the time pass and study details closely. Domestic problems could be surfacing just below the surface. Deal with them now rather than later. Your attention will get better in time. Take time to tie up loose ends.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A potential ally is waiting in the wings for the right moment. Don't throw on health and relationships. Trying to do the same only makes the situation worse. Now is the time to avoid unnecessary expenditures and watch your budget.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
You have to be the one doing. Hold others accountable and be sure to get it right. Time is on and treatment partners may preclude doing it. Be they will thank you in the end. Asking the right questions at the right time could give the answer you need.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Oh, all right. I guess we could stop at one more house to 'ask directions' before we deliver the check."

Quote of the Day

"You need to take these life-threatening drugs seriously & get them on the market."

–Dan Quayle

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH: Hamburger, Spaghetti, Harvest Burger
DINNER: Roast Turkey, Pastabilities, Cardini Chili, Fried Steak

Worcester

LUNCH: Harvest Burger, Spaghetti, Burger, Vegan Falafel
DINNER: Roast Turkey, Pastabilities, Sicilian Spaghetti

Hampshire

LUNCH

SPORTS

Tuesday, April 29, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Baseball looks to keep streak alive vs. UVM

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

How sweet it is.

The Massachusetts baseball team (26–6, 12–3 Atlantic 10) has hit the sweet sixteen mark, currently holding the nation's longest winning streak at 16 games. Combining great performances on the mound with a lineup that averages 9.7 runs per game, they've got a team that has taken the world of college baseball by storm.

The only question that remains is, "Who's next?"

As far as the Minutemen are concerned, it doesn't seem to matter. Just like coach Mike Stone always stresses, if the team comes out and plays to the best of its ability, it can beat anybody.

"We'd like to," Stone said. "We just have to stay focused. Sometimes we get lackadaisical, but if we swing the bat, we can distance ourselves from the other team."

In an interstate rivalry, the University of Vermont is traveling down to Amherst today for a mid-week matchup at 3:00 p.m. at Earl E. Lorden Field. The Catamounts post a 19–15 record and would like nothing better than to bring UMass' hot streak to a screeching halt.

"They're a good ballclub," Stone said. "They're playing some good baseball right now. They'll be excited to play us."

At the top of the charts for the Catamounts is Heath Squires, who in 34 games is batting .354 with six home runs, 22 RBI and is 12-for-12 in stolen bases. Dana Forsberg is also someone for whom UMass will have to be ready. He leads the team with seven round-trippers and 29 RBI.

Travis Veracka (3–1) will start today's game on the mound for the Minutemen. He earned his third win of the season last Wednesday against Central Connecticut State. Today's start will be Veracka's first on Lorden Field.

"We'll see how he does," Stone said. "Hopefully, we can get some quality innings out of him."

UMass baseball team notes: Collegiate Baseball named Scott Barnsby one of the National Players of the Week, along with ranking UMass No. 19 in the country.

Splitting this season down the middle, there are two distinct halves: the 10–6 start, and then the 16–0 run in the last three weeks. Since April 7, UMass' lasr loss, the hitters have oiled out all the kinks, batting a combined .348, while averaging 10.6 runs per game. And it hasn't just been a few batters, the entire lineup has been contributing. Over the weekend series against Rhode Island, it wasn't just Doug Clark and Brian Samela who were knocking the ball around; Adam Correa went on a hot streak (9–for–12) along with Aaron Braunstein, who went 5–for–8 on the weekend with three RBI, four walks and four runs scored.

On the mound, it seems Jason Bennett (7–1) has done just what he wanted to do. Since breaking the record for all–time wins in a UMass uniform on April 12 against Temple, Bennett has pitched two complete game wins against Fordham (10–4) and URI (13–2).

It also helps to get the run support that Bennett has received. Even with his one loss (11–2 against Virginia Tech.), UMass has averaged 12 runs per game when he is pitching.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Doug Clark and the Minuteman baseball team received a number 19 ranking this week

Minutewomen finish 3rd; earn trip to Nationals

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

A mere four years ago, Massachusetts Women's Water Polo was just a club sport. The past three years they've played at varsity level, slowly gaining more national recognition each year they competed. Each year, they play better — their hard work and talent helped them this weekend to achieve something they have never done before — a trip to the National Championships.

The Minutewomen finished third of eight at this past weekend's Eastern Championships, falling only to Maryland, who finished first and Slippery Rock who edged them out for second place. The No. 7 team now stands at 24–5 on the season.

"It's a nice feeling to know that the hard work these girls have put in is going to pay off," Head Coach Bob Newcomb said. "They really deserve it. We set up right at the beginning, that's what people were talking about, realizing that we are a team that could go to Nationals."

The Minutewomen came on strong Friday night, crushing No. 18 Brown University 10–1. On Saturday, they won their first game against No. 16 Bucknell 15–6, before meeting their nemesis in the form of No. 10 Maryland.

UMass had a lead after the first quarter, outscoring the Terrapins 3–1, but Maryland quickly came back in the second quarter tying it 3–3 before gaining a lead in the third quarter that they would hold the rest of the game. The Minutewomen lost 6–8.

Later that afternoon, The Minutewomen fell to No. 6 Slippery Rock. UMass was down 3–0 to start, but then came back to tie the game 4–4. Unfortunately, that was not enough — they lost 7–10.

"We kept it close with them, which was something we had never been able to do with that team before," Newcomb said. "One thing, we did lose Katie Grogan in the third quarter, she fouled out, but we managed to play well without her which I think is a good sign on how good this team is."

Grogan, who has been a sensation all this year, scored four goals against Maryland, 15 in the whole tournament and was also named first team all–tournament. Andrea Vazquez who scored 17 goals this weekend and Peggy Nieves, who recorded 41 saves this tournament were named second team all–tournament.

"It's a pretty big honor to do that," Newcomb said.

The Minutewomen played the Championship game on Sunday, against Princeton. Once again, UMass dominated, winning 13–1. The initial reaction to winning that game, explained Newcomb, was one of relief.

"It's kind of funny," Newcomb said. "I think for some, it was more relief because we really anticipated going to Nationals all year long, and it's like, wow, that game is finally out of the way, we are really going now, especially after we had lost both to Maryland and Slippery Rock."

Going into the tournament, the Minutewomen were looking primarily for one thing — a top three finish and a chance to go to Nationals. In addition to that goal, however, the Minutewomen were also looking to edge out the two teams that were their toughest competition, Maryland and Slippery Rock.

While UMass lost to both teams, Newcomb said both games were good, and the close scores show that the Minutewomen gave their competitors a run for their money.

"We made some big improvements between the Maryland and Slippery Rock games. The team really concentrated on doing some things we asked them to do and it really showed in the way we played," Newcomb said. "They are two teams I would like to have another shot it, because I believe we can beat them both."

The Minutewomen will be one of 12 teams competing in the USWP Collegiate I Championships May 9–11 in Ann Arbor, Mich. They will take this time to work on the fundamentals and skills that have taken them this far.

"They're going to work real hard [today], and you can put that right in the paper," Newcomb said with a smile.

But for now, the Minutewomen can proudly look back on this weekend knowing that they played extremely well.

"We left there with our heads held high, knowing that we played some very good games," Newcomb said. "We have some things we can work on for another two weeks before we get to the big show."

UM Men's Tennis wins N.E. Championship

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Men's Tennis Team concluded its 1997 campaign in style. Over the past week, they annihilated local rival Hartford, and won the New England Championships for the first time.

Winning this tournament solidifies this outfit as the best men's tennis team in school history at 16–3.

"We accomplished everything we set out to do and then some," UMass coach Judy Dixon said. "We won a tournament no other UMass team has won, and we won more matches than any previous team. Therefore, it is pretty clear, this is the best team this school has put out on the court."

Last Wednesday, the Minutemen traveled to the University of Hartford and cruised home with a 7–0 match point victory. The serve and volleyers from UMass were in rare form for this one.

The victory was especially gratifying because Hartford rolled past UMass 5–2 last year, with a similar team to this year's squad.

Assistant Coach Doug Knuth realized this was another step in the right direction for his team.

"We have beaten several of our rivals that we have had trouble with in the past few years. Our program is clearly headed in the right direction, and a big win like this is further proof," Knuth said.

As the score indicates, the triumph was routine. In singles, Todd Cheney, Pat Slyman, Rob Manchester, Alex Aller and Bo Navarro all won in straight sets. Parsa Samii pulled out a tough three set victory to preserve the shutout. UMass took the doubles point as well.

"It was a transitional day for us," said Slyman, who won his match 6–3, 6–3. "The energy was a little down from the A–10 tournament, but at the same time we were preparing for the New England Championships. Once we took the court in Hartford, we just locked in, and did what we had to do."

This match set the stage for a return trip to Connecticut this past weekend, with the desthnation being the long awaited New England Championships. This was a chance for the Minutemen to strut their stuff and finish the season as champions.

This goal sounded realistic not only to the headstrong players but to Coach Judy Dixon as well.

"We set some goals for ourselves early on in the season. We wanted to win 15 matches and we did, we wanted to finish at least fourth in the A–10, and we did. Our last request was to win the New England Championships for the first time in team history," she said.

Due to a terrific team effort, this goal was accomplished. The Minutemen fought off tough competition and an enthusiastic UConn crowd to edge the second place Huskies 62–48.

The way the tournament was set up, all the No. 1 seeded players were put in one round robin, all the No. 2 seeds in another. Every match won

Turn to TENNIS, page 9

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
The men's tennis team beat Harvard on their way to the New England Championship this past weekend.

Minutewomen on streak; face BU Terriers on road

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

During the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team's 15–12 win over Boston College last Saturday, the assistant coach of the Minutewomen (5–6), Janet Maitland, was knocked out by her team's performance. Literally.

A foul ball off senior softball player Stephanie Mareina's bat from a lower Totman Field went against all betting odds, hitting Maitland's head, and knocking her out for a short time. Today, the entire coaching staff will look to be figuratively knocked out by their team's performance, taking on Boston University (3–11) at Nickerson Field at 4 p.m. today.

Even with the woeful record of the Terriers so far this season, coach Francesca McClellan will not take this team lightly. The Minutewomen are on a roll right now, and after their win over Boston College, UMass has set its highest win total since reinstatement by winning three straight.

With those factors involved, McClellan wants to keep the team's recent success rolling into Thursday's game against nationally ranked Brown University.

"The Terriers are a team that will challenge us," McClellan said. "I like to think that BU is a lot like UMass, meaning that they are a team you don't take lightly. They have some good freshmen on their team, and we need to be prepared for a tough test."

BU will be coming into this contest winning two out of their last three games, which shows the team's rebounding from a 0–7 start. The Terriers boast two scorers that have broken the 20–point barrier, with Jennifer Manning (26 goals, 6 assists) and Michelle Ellsworth (16g, 4a) leading the team in scoring. The goaltending duties have been split between Laura Garrick (11 games played, 4 games started) and Madeera Kathpal (13 gp, 10 gs), but Kathpal will most likely get the starting nod.

The Minutewomen have been on fire the last three games, led by the complete game of sophomore attacker Laura Koruz (20g, 13a), who has scored 14 points (10g, 4a) in that span. After breaking the 100–point barrier in career goals and points scored, senior attacker Stephanie Walsh (16g, 5a) has been a little off her game. However, Walsh still holds second place in team scoring, just one point above freshman midfielder Rebecca Minaker (14g, 6a).

The key to UMass' success in recent weeks can not be totally attributed to scoring, but in the team's complete game. Senior defender Erica Bryan, who was voted by her teammates as their MVP, and the junior tandem of Jen Bowen (16 points) and Jennifer Herker (13pts) have stepped up their game. For Bowen, that has been done in the midst of a heel injury, forcing her to sit out the game against New Hampshire on April 5.

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN
The women's lacrosse team will face a potentially dangerous Boston University squad today.

Men's track and field competes at Penn Relays

By Matthew Perrault
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's track and field team competed at the world's largest annual track meet this past weekend as it took part in the Penn Relays.

In the past, Carl Lewis, Mary Slaney and countless other world–class athletes have taken part in the Penn Relays, an event second only to the NCAA's in size in collegiate track and field.

UMass had high hopes, coming off an impressive 8–0 regular season. Although only a few team members qualified, the Minutemen were sending their best running team in years to compete.

The 4x100 team that broke the school record in the regular season was doubling up on the 4x200 as well for the meet. In addition, three runners from that team were going to run in the mile relay.

This was going to be a tiring few days for the Minutemen, but it was what they had been training for, and they were determined to come out winners from this meet.

First up for the group consisting of senior co–captain Christian Abbot, junior Scott Price, sophomore Neil Concepcion and sophomore Tom Toye were the trials for the 4x100, 4x200 and mile relay on Friday. They would need to finish in the top eight in the college bracket to move on to the IC4A championship on Saturday.

In the 4x100 relay, the Minutemen once again smashed the school record with a time of 41.5, and finished second in the bracket, moving them to the finals.

The 4x200 race also came off without a hitch, with the Minutemen breaking a school record for the second straight race with a time of 1:26:45.

For the mile relay, Abbot was replaced by Mike Cahill. This team did not qualify for the finals, but did run a school record time of 3:14:11.

"Friday was a great day," UMass coach Ken O'Brien said.

Saturday did not start out as well as the Minutemen hoped. The first race of the day was the 4x100 finals.

The baton hand–off between Toye and Abbott was clean, but immediately after, Abbot dislodged the baton from his hand by hitting his leg. The team did not place.

"This happens a lot down there," O'Brien said. "I saw 12 batons dropped by high level athletes. it's like a drop in football, It just happens. The pass was perfect otherwise."

The Minutemen had about an hour before the finals of the 4x200, and Abbot regrouped his troops and told them to forget about it. And so they did.

"They showed their stuff and together, what they could do under pressure," O'Brien said. "They put the drop aside and placed second. It is a sign of how mature the team is that has been working since last year and they were not about to let [the dropped baton] affect the rest of the meet. I give Christian a lot of credit for holding the team together with his leadership. They turned a negative into a positive."

Other performers for UMass who either didn't place or did not make the finals in their events were Ian Stevenson on shot put (49'11), Matt Beale in the 10,000 (1:14:25) and Andre Roach on the triple–jump (45'5).

Next up for the Minutemen is the Atlantic 10 Championship Meet at LaSalle in Philadelphia this weekend.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Carlos Peralta and the Massachusetts men's track team took their show to the Penn Relays this past weekend

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 130 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, April 30, 1997

"Take a load off, fannie!"

The Band's original drummer/singer Levon Helm brings his smokey rock 'n' roll to the Iron Horse. Check out our preview (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Powerful pitchers pop Eagles

Pitchers Liz Wagner and Danielle Henderson each threw shutout ballgames as the Minutewomen rolled Boston College 9–0 and 3–0 yesterday (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Croat pleads innocent to Bosnian war crimes

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A Croat pleaded innocent yesterday to charges that Bosnian Muslim inmates were mistreated and killed at a camp he commanded.

At his first appearance before the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal, 37–year–old Zlatko Aleksovski wore a dark suit and white shirt and calmly denied all charges.

"I consider myself absolutely innocent," he said.

Aleksovski, the first suspect to be extradited to the tribunal by Croatian authorities, is charged with war crimes in connection with the command of a prison in Kaonik in central Bosnia early in 1993.

Bosnian Muslim inmates were subjected to inhumane treatment, including physical and psychological harm, and some were killed, according to Aleksovski's indictment.

Aleksovski was arrested in June in the coastal Croatian city of Split and handed over Monday by Croatian authorities. His lawyer, Goran Mikulicic, said the extradition was delayed because Aleksovski had heart problems.

The United States reportedly pressured Croatian authorities to cooperate with the U.N. tribunal, which has struggled to get custody of its 75 indicted suspects, including 15 other Bosnian Croats.

NATION

Environmental activists take on DuPont mining

FOLKSTON, Ga. (AP) — Amid the rustle of a gentle breeze and the sounds of pig frogs and yellow–rumped warblers, a 13–foot alligator suns itself on the banks of a lagoon in the Okefenokee Swamp, oblivious to the great blue heron dancing coyly around it. The outside world rarely encroaches on this wildlife refuge made famous by Pogo, the comic strip possum.

And defenders of the swamp want it to stay that way.

They are trying to stop industrial giant DuPont Co. from expanding its titanium mining to the eastern edge of the Okefenokee in Georgia.

"It's too much of a risk and a very inappropriate neighbor for the Okefenokee," said Judy Jennings of the Georgia Sierra Club. Titanium is a lightweight metal used in golf clubs, jet engines and bone replacements. Its biggest use is as a white pigment in paper, paint and plastics.

Critics fear the round–the–clock mining would foul the Okefenokee's waters and destroy wildlife habitat. Also, the dredging machinery and floodlights at night would ruin the back–to–nature experience for the swamp's 400,000 annual visitors, they say.

Although DuPont has been buying up or leasing a tract near the swamp for three years, the $150 million mining project didn't begin drawing opposition until last fall from Georgia and federal officials, including Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

Earlier this month, DuPont made a retreat while it further studies the effects of mining near the Okefenokee.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 70	HIGH: 70	HIGH: 60
LOW: 40	LOW: 40	LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Acclaimed poet, Adrienne Rich discusses her work & capitalism

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

Adrienne Rich, poet, author, lesbian, activist, essayist, feminist and mother spoke yesterday at Bowker Auditorium as part of the annual Troy Lecture Series, on the issues that have fueled her life and her writing.

A distinguished poet since the age of 21, Rich had her first book of poetry published in the Yale Younger Poets series the same year she graduated from Radcliffe College in 1951.

One of the continuous topics she linked throughout her lecture, entitled "Arts of the Possible," was the importance of silence in the writing process and her concern that Americans do not take enough time to allow silence to open creative doors.

"The study of silence has long engrossed me... not only the study of what is there, but what is missing... through these holes is where poetry makes its way for women and marginalized people," Rich said.

Rich stated that real poems are born from silence. "Every real poem is the breaking of an existing silence. Silence is not always oppressive... it can be fertilizing... it can bathe the imagination."

The presence of silence has been abhorred by television, according to Rich, elaborating on the fact that North Americans "dread the imaginative space that silence might open."

Although appreciative of silence as an imaginative force and inspiration in her work, Rich discussed how "everything that has fertilized and sustained my work is in danger."

Her concerns stem from the act of censorship, which "can assume many faces," and has invaded magazines and books while restricting the means of production and distribution.

Rich questioned the "free market's devotion to freedom of expression," by citing the censorship of Salman Rushdie's 1988 book The Satanic Verses as an example.

Rich also displayed her concern with the capitalist system that the United States has operated since its founding.

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN
Adrienne Rich

"Capitalism presents itself as a law of history or a law beyond history," Rich said.

"We may have heard that the slavery era is history, the genocide of Native American people is over and done with the last wagon train — from the people who are still benefiting from it," Rich said.

Rich expanded on the subject of capitalism stating it reduces relations and communication making people commodities. "We are, whatever our generation, marked as consumers," Rich said.

She also connected capitalism with such problems as downsizing and the "mean spiritedness" of people.

"Mean spiritedness has been as American as cherry pie. Mean spiritedness is a national social system," Rich said.

She stated that American people have been devalued by the capitalist system citing prisons and schools which are "holding pens for youth," and "blue collar and white collar workers who have lost their jobs and pensions to downsizing and restructuring... each of these people is more than a pinpoint on a chart," Rich said.

"We're now seeing the worst of unrestrained capitalism... it's all we got, all we in this country have ever known," Rich said.

Funding of The Voice creates chaos at GSS; shouting match ensues

By Tomar Cerroll
Collegian Staff

In a three hour meeting filled with accusations and heated argument last night, the University of Massachusetts Graduate Student Senate (GSS) debated its budget for fiscal year 1998, including funding for its newspaper, The Voice.

After a speech by members of Western Massachusetts Labor Action, who asked the graduate students to donate their time and resources to help the labor organization aid low–income service workers in Berkshire County, the Senate began its discussion of its budget.

Senators Timothy Shary and Ed Cutting requested that the Senate first consider two separate issues, funding of The Voice and a contingency budget, before discussing and voting on the overall budget.

This motion to change the order of issues addressed caused vigorous and drawn–out dispute; over 45 minutes later the motion was defeated in a roll–call vote.

The debate over GSS funding of The Voice then began in earnest. Shary argued that the paper be defunded, resulting in a savings to the GSS of $13,000 a year.

Senator and recently named co–editor of The Voice Hussein Ibish voiced his opposition to the proposal.

"The Graduate Student Senate does not have much money or many members. How can we make ourselves heard?" Ibish asked. "I would submit that to exercise influence it is necessary to utilize the power of the press."

"Propaganda and news is necessary for any political body," Ibish said. "You should listen to me. [Defunding The Voice] would be the dumbest thing you can do, an idiotic mistake."

Cutting then said that graduate students had other ways to have their opinions heard, and that the GSS should allocate those funds for childcare.

"We have alternative methods of publication — the [World Wide] Web, the Collegian and other publications," Cutting said. "Which is more important; childcare or The Voice?"

Senator Shelly Weinstein joined is support of defunding The Voice, stating that she did not feel the content of The Voice was representative of the whole graduate student body.

"It is not including women's issues, it is not covering important issues such as day care," Weinstein said. "It is not published on schedule and does not reflect the wide range of interests of graduate students on campus."

Collin Covell, a graduate student, said that he felt that the purpose of the GSS was to protect graduate students from the administration, and that The Voice was a key tool in achieving this goal. Covell went on to say that the graduate students who had criticized the paper were white students commenting on articles concerned with racism.

"The complaints against The Voice were consistently made by white people about racial struggles on campus," Covell said.

At this point, Cutting said that he felt Covell was issuing racist statements and that he would be filing a complaint at the Chancellor's office today.

Turn to VOICE page 2

Civil Rights Commission hears student complaints

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

NORTHAMPTON — Last Friday in the Alumni House at Smith College, the Massachusetts Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights convened after a hiatus of two years to decide it's agenda for the upcoming year.

The agenda for the meeting however, included briefings by University of Massachusetts Ombudsman, Robert Ackermann and Rodina Cave and Salwa Shamapande, two student representatives from the current student– administrative negotiations resulting from Goodell.

Members of the Advisory Committee include: Chair, Fletcher Blanchard, Mr. Young Hoon Jung, Dr. Marc A. Miles, Mrs. M. Paula Rapos, Ms. Deidra A. Almeida and Eastern Regional Director Ki–taek Chun.

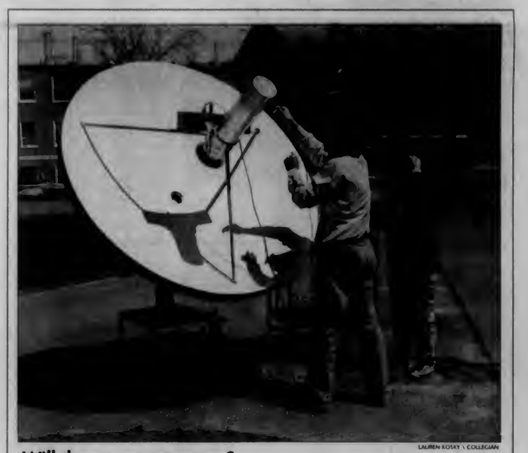
The briefing by the UMass contingent began with Ombudsman Ackermann. Chair Blanchard prefaced the Ombudsman's statement by clarifying that Ackermann was not a University Administrative representative, and was invited to the meeting to tell the Committee his experience with the Goodell takeover as an Ombudsman.

According to Ackermann, the Ombuds office is funded through the Chancellor's Office, but can only be discontinued through joint resolutions by the Faculty Senate, the Graduate Student Senate and the Student Government Association.

Ackermann's briefing consisted of reading a statement he wrote and passed out to an audience of 50, which consisted mainly of UMass students.

Ackermann said that the current negotiations between students and administration were not going well. According to him, the administration went into the talks thinking they were discussions while the students believed they were negotiations.

According to him, the Living Document states that a committee of the Faculty Senate was given "the question of monitoring compliance with the signed agreement, and that committee has not issued its first report as to whether the agreement is being kept."



Ackermann said that while there may be individual civil rights violations, the civil rights violations of all ALANA and other student groups is not the case at UMass.

"Some students seem to believe that in addition to individual civil rights violations, the civil rights of all ALANA students [and some other student groups] are systematically violated on the campus of the University by virtue of policies and procedures that are intended to single them out and treat them collectively in a negative way," he said. "If civil rights are restricted to current legally enforceable civil rights, then I do not think that this is true."

After his presentation, Ackermann fielded questions from the committee.

Student speakers, Cave and Shamapande then briefed the committee on their role as members of the student

Turn to RIGHTS, page 3

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN
Will the sun measure up?
Professor Ron Snell and teaching assistant Georgina Berstian of the Astronomy department take measurements of the sun outside Draper Hall yesterday.

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN
BZZZZ!
A bumble bee finds what it's looking for in a flowering tree near Totman gym yesterday afternoon.

Skinner Hall celebrates 50 years

The Dept. of Consumer Studies plans full day of activities

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Consumer Studies Department has put together a series of activities to pay tribute to the department's founder, Edna Skinner, and commemorate the 50th anniversary of Edna L. Skinner Hall.

The activities, slated for Friday, will stretch throughout the day and will take place in and around Edna L. Skinner Hall, which was completed in 1947 and houses the consumer studies department and offices for the 4–H Youth and Family Development Program, among other things.

"We've been planning this since the fall of last semester," said Jon Gould, a teacher's assistant in the consumer studies department who helped organize the event. "We want to honor all that has taken place in the building for the past 50 years. We also wanted to pay tribute to Edna Skinner."

According to a press release, Skinner was "a leading proponent of women's education who established the program in home economics on this campus."

The department she founded has been called the department of consumer studies since its name change in 1991.

"We're expecting a mix of alumni, current students, faculty, retired faculty and administrators from our campus," Gould said. "And interested students and alumni are also welcome."

The first of the day's activities will be open classes, which will take place in four class periods from the 9:05 a.m. to 1:25 p.m. time slots. They are intended to give interested students and alumni the opportunity to see what consumer studies classes are like.

"The department has changed its curriculum over the years, and we wanted to give the alumni a sense of what students are studying today," Gould said.

After the open classrooms, informal presentations will be made by consumer studies students and faculty. In one of the presentations, "My, have you changed! 50 Years of Skinner Students," Professor Patricia Warner will discuss how consumer studies students have changed over the past 50 years, from aspects of their clothing to the gender shift that has brought male students into a traditionally female department.

Amy Armenia, a consumer studies student, will discuss research she has been conducting on families. The lecture is titled, "An Undergraduate's perspective on Family Research."

At 3 p.m., the Skinner Rededication Ceremony will begin. According to Gould, when the cornerstone of the building was laid 50 years ago, there was a time capsule installed. On Friday, Physical Plant will excavate the capsule.

According to Gould, current students will reseal the capsule with new objects

Turn to SKINNER, page 3

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor:
Mike Burke

Copy Editor:
Lisa Oliveri

Photo Technician:
Lauren Koski

Production Supervisor:
Marc Dionne

Production Staff:
Daniel Bodah
Matthew Guilmette

■ Voice

continued from page1

The meeting quickly deteriorated into general chaos, with members from across the room shouting at each other. Following attempts to restore order to the Senate by President Deepika Marya and Executive Officer Rosie Castaneda, a motion to adjourn the meeting was passed at 10:20 p.m.

Since the GSS did not come to a vote on the budget, or the other nine issues on its agenda for the meeting, they will be taken up at its next meeting on May 6.

Tomorrow night at 7:15 p.m., in Campus Center 174-76, the Senate will hold Candidates Night for GSS positions for the fall semester.

Write for the Collegian
and you will prosper
113 Campus Center

LAUREN KOSKI \ COLLEGIAN

A quiet spot
The pond near Sylvan Residential Area is a nice peaceful place to spend a beautiful sunny day.

Phi Sigma Pi plans trip to Grand Chapter Conference

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

In the fall of 1996 a new fraternity, Phi Sigma Pi, was formed on campus to advocate the values of community service and scholarship at the University of Massachusetts/ It serves as an honors fraternity created through the UMass Beta Upsilon chapter.

Unlike the Greek fraternities and sororities, Phi Sigma Pi is a co-ed organization where pledges are required to have a certain amount of credits and at least a 3.0 grade point average. In addition, the ideals of this fraternity's community are centered around the tripod of scholarship, leadership and fellowship.

"It's a great way to meet people with diverse interests who are working towards the common goals of togetherness and brotherhood," said Suzanne Sennette, a sophomore art history major.

Meredith Everson, a sophomore communications major and member of the fraternity added, "It's a low pressure way to get involved. You don't have all the weight of Greek fraternities or sororities or the huge time commitment of music or sports."

Presently, there are 74 active Phi Sigma Pi chapters across the United States.

From July 31 until August 2, members from this UMass chapter will travel to Lancaster, Pa. to participate in the Grand Chapter Conference, a convention of chapters across the country to meet, discuss and invent new ideas for the Phi Sigma Pi fraternities.

"All of the United States chapters of Phi Sigma Pi are coming to this conference," Sennette said.

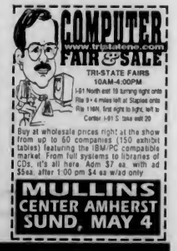
"They're coming to know and meet other people from other chapters and to share ideas and relate experiences between chapters," Everson added.

Erin Durette, a sophomore communications major explained that the fraternity was more than just an organization centered around scholarship. "It's not all academics, it's a great way to meet people."

Similar to Greek fraternities, students are still required to rush the organization, pledge and be voted into membership. Students interested in the fraternity, according to Durette, are always welcome to submit questions to the RSO mailbox located in the Student Union. Additionally, interested persons will be able to rush next fall.

"I think [the fraternity] offers a lot of leadership positions and a lot of opportunity to get involved. There's lots of different committees so there are many chance for students to participate," Everson said.

Recently, elections were held to vote new members into office. First chapter president Tancy Kelly will be replaced by Cheyenne Ferro and Vice President BJ Abbruzzese will be succeeded by Jeff Hirschberg.



Presently, chapter members meet once a week for approximately one hour. Activities, though, are a greater part of this fraternities agenda. This year members have participated in Into Amherst Day and volunteered at the Amherst Survival Center.

According to these three members, the activities are a strong aspect of the fraternities commitment to the area.

Sennette concluded, "There's a real sense that you're part of a community through the activities that Phi Sigma Pi offers to Amherst and the UMass community."

Correction

An advertisement placed on page 6 of Monday's paper contained incorrect information regarding Southwest Week. All events take place on the Horseshoe starting at 8 p.m. The Collegian regrets the error.

Sgt. convicted of raping six trainees

By David Dishneau
Associated Press

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md. — A drill instructor was convicted yesterday of raping six women trainees in the most serious case yet to come out of the sex scandal that has rocked the Army. Staff Sgt. Delmar G. Simpson, 32, could get life in prison for his conviction on 18 of 19 rape counts.

The 6-foot-4 soldier stood at attention facing the judge as the verdicts were read in rapid-fire succession by the head of the military jury.

Prosecutors said Simpson raped the women while he was a drill sergeant at Aberdeen in 1995 and 1996, mostly by intimidating them with his size, his superior rank and implied threats of harm or punishment. One trainee said Simpson threatened to kill her if she told about having sex with him.

The jury of three white men, two black men and one white woman, all of superior rank, will decide Simpson's sentence after hearing additional testimony, perhaps not until next week.

Simpson already has pleaded guilty to having consensual sex with 11 trainees, including five of the rape victims. He could get up to 32 years in prison on those charges and five sexual-harassment offenses he admitted.

Women's advocates had said the court-martial would show if the Army is serious about dealing with sexual misconduct.

The Pentagon said it would have no comment on the case until the appeals are completed.

Simpson, a father of two whose wife is stationed at an Army post in Virginia, was at the center of the most politically and racially charged case to emerge from a sex scandal that Army Secretary Togo D. West Jr. called "the worst we've seen."

The scandal has exposed the complexities of integrating women into the military and renewed debate over the issue.

Since the scandal broke in November, the Army has fielded more than 1,200 sexual misconduct complaints and opened more than 300 criminal investigations at U.S. installations around the world. Twelve soldiers were charged at Aberdeen Proving Ground, where the investigation revealed a breakdown in discipline that led to regular sex between instructors and trainees.

One of Simpson's accusers testified that he and another sergeant were rumored to be in competition over who could have sex with more trainees. Sex was so common there were even code words for it: Sergeants sleeping with trainees were "in the game." Trainees who participated were "locked in tight."

Defense lawyers contended the women willingly had sex with Simpson — some in hopes of getting favorable treatment — then lied to avoid prosecution for having sex with their commander or because investigators bullied them.

Defense witnesses from the same company as Simpson's accusers said two of the women were frequent liars who had confided a desire to have sex with him. They said one of the women paraded by his office in shorts and a bikini top "to see if he could be broken," and the other admired his "sexy bald head."

All of the victims said they feared reporting Simpson because they felt no one would believe them. One described Simpson as a "demigod" at Aberdeen. Another said she felt like a puppet as Simpson ordered her to have sex nine times in his office, empty barrack rooms and his on-post apartment.

Puffton Village . . .
Your First Choice
1, 2 and 3 bedroom apartments

Featuring

Newly renovated units that include:
New appliances New carpeting New kitchen cabinets & counter tops Central air conditioners
Rents starting at $615 per month

or

Traditional units that are:
Fully applianced Freshly painted Carpeted/Tiled Floors Central Air Conditioned
Rents starting at $545 per month

All rents include Heat, Hot Water & Cooking Gas and use of an olympic size pool, 5 tennis courts, basketball court, laundry rooms and on-site parking.
Now accepting rental applications for summer and fall. Call today 549-0145

Earth Systems
A new undergraduate Bachelor of Science degree program
Department of Geosciences • University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Global environmental changes require a comprehensive understanding of the earth's major systems, and of the important ways in which these systems are linked. The major systems are: geologic, oceanic, atmospheric, cryospheric (the snow and ice-covered world), and biospheric (including human) systems. To provide students with the necessary understanding of these inter-related systems, a new major in Earth Systems has been established in the Department of Geosciences.

The goal of earth system science is to obtain a scientific understanding of the entire earth system on a global scale. The new B.S. degreee in Earth Systems will provide students with the necessary background to make informed judgements about contemporary environmental issues, based on an understanding of the complex factors involved. For those who propose to eventually pursue graduate education, it will provide a strong basis for further studies in a variety of fields.

For further information, contact the Department of Geosciences
Room 233 Morrill Science Center
or visit our Web Site at www.geo.umass.edu.

LEARNING FOR THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE
• LEARNING FOR A LIFETIME •

UMASS
SUMMER SESSION
1997

Now is the time to advance your career, explore other options, plan for a new future, get ahead in your studies, or enrich your life.
- Hundreds of Credit Courses
- Workshops for Personal and Professional Enrichment
- Part-time Specialized Degree Programs–Bachelor's and Master's
- Professional Development Courses for Teachers

Classes held days, evenings, and weekends
- Session I: June 3-July 11
- Session II: July 15-August 21
- Variable Sessions

Call 413-545-0107 for a free course catalog or e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Find it on our website: http://www.umass.edu/contined/

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION • UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

UM students & officials walk the route to safety

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

In an effort to make the University of Massachusetts campus a safer place for its students, the Student Government Association's Women's Issues Committee will be sponsoring the first annual campus safety walk tomorrow night.

Together, students, public safety officials and administrators will tour the campus to locate places that need more lighting and emergency call boxes.

"A lot of students have been expressing the need for a safer campus," said Stacey Shackford, Chairperson of the Women's Issue Committee which was formed last September.

According to Shackford, the Committee has found out through research that the University has enough funds and resources to install three new call boxes per year on campus and in addition to improving lighting across campus.

"Students want to be able to help with the direction of where to put the call boxes and in order to provide this direction we will go on five different tours across campus will University officials," Shackford said.

The five tours, which will begin at 9:30 p.m. from the Student Union steps, will cover the entire campus.

"The walks will go through all the academic areas and around the library. There are very few call boxes in the academic area," she said.

The tours will primarily focus on paths near each residential area and the commuter lot (E lot) located near Mather Career Center.

"Students who live in Southwest [Residential Area] may know of hazards that other students don't know about when walking to Southwest," Shackford said.

In addition to these paths the Committee also wants to lead the administration up the "rape trail" which leads to Orchard Hill and Central Residential Areas.

According to Shackford, "the basic focus of the walk will be the rape trail... we can fund the call boxes, it's just a matter as to where to put them. That trail needs them."

Each student who attends the walk can choose which course to go on.

Participants on the walk will also be asked to fill out a survey about campus safety. The responses will be compiled and recommendations will be sent to the Vice Chancellors Committee on Public Safety.

"With these recommendations, the Public safety Committee will form a an outline of a five year plan. This five year plan will prioritize where the call boxes need to be put first," Shackford said.

All students are welcome to attend the walk.

UM senior presents work at research poster session

By Victoria Graves
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts senior computer science major was one of 40 students chosen from across the country to attend an undergraduate research poster session on Capitol Hill for Members of Congress.

Brian P. McColgan was chosen from a pool of 250 applicants and presented at the session research from work he performed at the Los Alamos National Laboratory last semester. His project involved mapping regions of the visual cortex using "magnetoencephalography," a process of measuring magnetic fields.

McColgan hopes that his research will ultimately lead to a better understanding of neurological and psychiatric abnormalities.

"It was a brain imaging project. The overall goal was to experiment with new brain imaging techniques to use in the medical field," McColgan said.

Also selected to attend the session was Marsha Crawley, a biology major at Smith College. Her project consisted of research involved in the study of the genetic control of mitochondrial differentiation.

"What I was looking for was why the organelle has the particular shape that it has," Crawley said.

The purpose of this session was to encourage continued funding for programs devoted to undergraduate research and for the scientific community to work together to guarantee that members of Congress understand the programs they fund and realize that undergraduate research plays a vital role in the nation's future.

"It's helping those students participate and getting them exposed to state of the art equipment because we are replacing the next generation," McColgan said.

While in Washington, D.C., McColgan and Crawley also had the opportunity to meet with Massachusetts Senator John Kerry and Danielle Ripich, a congressional fellow for the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

"I think as a whole the poster session really got it's message out there. I did speak to Senator Kerry and I did get to mention what my research meant to me and the benefits of undergraduate research," Crawley said.

"In the new millennium, our economic competitiveness, health, national security and quality of life will depend on how wisely we invest today in research and in those who will replace the current generations of scientist and doctors," McColgan said.

National/International

Chicago Tribune's Mike Royko dead

By Mario Fox
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Mike Royko, the Pulitzer Prize-winning newspaper columnist whose biting sarcasm and empathy for the common man captured the gritty essence of Chicago for more than three decades, died yesterday. He was 64.

The Chicago Tribune announced Royko's death on its World Wide Web site.

Royko, whose Chicago Tribune column was syndicated to more than 200 newspapers nationwide, underwent surgery last week for an aneurysm, a rupture or weakening of a blood vessel.

He had suffered a stroke in early April while vacationing in Florida and had been hospitalized there.

Royko's column was a cornerstone of the daily newspaper for generations of Chicago readers, first in the now-defunct Chicago Daily News, later with the Chicago Sun-Times and since 1984 with the Tribune. For most of his career he wrote five days a week.

"I think Mike Royko brought a great deal to his readers, both in humor and in skepticism and in spotting phonies," said longtime Chicago columnist Irv Kupcinet of the Sun-Times. "He expressed his mind without fear and did so no matter who he crossed and who he hurt."

He gained stature as a critic of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley at a time when most prominent Chicagoans treated Daley with cautious respect. Royko's 1971 biography, Boss: Richard J. Daley of Chicago, portrayed Daley as a shrewd, autocratic politician who tolerated racism and corruption.

In typical tongue-in-cheek fashion, Royko suggested the city's motto of "Urbs In Horto" — city in a garden — should be changed to "Ubi Est Mea" — where's mine?

The book so infuriated the Daley family that the mayor's wife persuaded a grocery-store chain to remove the book from its stores.

Yesterday, Mayor Richard M. Daley, Richard J. Daley's son, said, "Through the years my family filled many of his columns, some critical and some supportive, but whether you agreed with him or not, you had to respect his honesty and his love for the city."

White House, Congress conduct budget talks

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House and Congress cranked up their effort for a budget deal yesterday, hoping to craft a compromise this week. After Republicans had seemingly ruled it out, the two sides discussed savings from smaller cost-of-living increases in Social Security and other benefits.

But participants were also battening down for what could be a long year of searching for compromise on balancing the budget by 2002 while cutting taxes. The two sides remained tens of billions of dollars apart over President Clinton's plans for boosting education, children's health care and other domestic programs, and over a GOP drive to pare taxes.

"While there are issues to be resolved, we're getting closer and closer on the critical components," Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, (R-N.M.,) told reporters.

In intensive, behind-the-scenes talks, bargainers were discussing embracing new inflation indexes that the Bureau of Labor Statistics has been experimenting with for years, said Democrats following the negotiations who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Though different numbers were being discussed, the new formula could reduce current inflation measures by between 0.25 percent and 0.5 percent, enough to provide tens of billions of dollars for budget bargainers.

■ Skinner

continued from page 1

within.

"The seniors are coming up with some new things to go into the time capsule," Gould said. "We expect them to make an interesting selection."

In attendance will be one student, Delight Rosbery of the class of 1947, who was at the original ceremony 50 years ago.

After the ceremony, the department's Outstanding Alumnus of the Year will be announced at the Rossman Alumni Career Forum. Eugenia Elasewicz of the class of 1975, who is the regional vice president of stores at Saks 5th Avenue has been announced as the recipient.

An invitation-only reception and dinner for alumni will be held to cap off the day. The dinner will be catered by the new restaurant and travel administration (RTA) department and held at the UOC Restaurant.

■ Rights

continued from page 1

negotiation team inside Goodell and in the current negotiations process.

"We didn't just think about [taking over Goodell] the night before. It took years and years of building up to this. All students participated in one form or another in meeting with the administration prior to the takeover — these concerns consistently fell on deaf ears. This was an act of desperation," Cave said.

Cave and Shamapande then proceeded to cite various examples of why the students protested against the administration and why they issued their demands.

According to Cave, one example of alleged administrative discrimination is the school's policy on counting members of the ALANA community; students who do not cite an ethnicity on their applications are assumed to be ALANA students. For this reason, according to Cave, the University has not truly reached the point where 20 percent of the undergraduate student body are persons of color as stated in the 1992 ALANA Agreements.

Another example the students highlight was the four ALANA outreach positions in the Admissions Office that students negotiated for in 1992. According to Cave, three of these positions have been vacant since September, 1996.

"These are positions which were promised which have not been filled," Cave said.

"CCEBMS [Collegiate Committee for the Education of Black and other Minority Students], UALRC [United Asia Learning Resource Center] and BCP [the Bilingual Collegiate Program] are understaffed. If the ratio is supposed to be 150 students per one advisor, that's not going to work," said Shamapande.

Shamapande also commented that the budget for CCEBMS has not changed, even though there are now currently 900 black students on campus.

"Why doesn't the budget match the students coming in?" asked Shamapande.

Cave also mentioned that while students were occupying Goodell, religious leaders were not allowed into the building, specifically Native American leaders and Buddhist leaders.

Other issues presented by the students included: the need for more faculty and staff of color, more teaching assistants of color and the elimination of the Upward Bound program in 1992, diversification of the administration, ethnic studies, the oppression of students with disabilities and the total cut of the Curriculum and Learning program in the School of Education — a program in which many of the students are Native American.

After the student presentations, the committee asked questions and Director Chun requested several documents from the students including the 1992 ALANA Agreements, the list of 21 Commitments from Goodell and any other documentation of the issues they presented.

Also giving briefings were, Darnell Williams, President of the Springfield NAACP (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People), Linda Yuu Connor and Vicki Kaufman Hill from the Office of Civil Rights, in the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The committee then recessed and planned to discuss their future activities later on in the meeting.

Texan secessionists surrounded by the feds

By Eduardo Montes
Associated Press

FORT DAVIS, Texas — Two armored personnel carriers rolled into place yesterday in the siege of the Texas secessionists as their leader's lawyer warned of "another Waco" if officers move in for an arrest.

"There's the potential for a lot of killing and that's what we want to stop," said Terry O'Rourke, the lawyer for Richard McLaren, the self-proclaimed ambassador of the Republic of Texas. McLaren and his followers have been holed up in the mountain community since Sunday, when they took two neighbors hostage in retaliation for the arrest of two followers. They released both hostages Monday in exchange for one of the jailed comrades, who had been arrested on weapons charges.

By yesterday, nearly 100 state and federal officers were stationed within two miles of the trailer the group calls its "embassy" in the rugged Davis Mountains, 175 miles southeast of El Paso. Officers negotiated with the group by telephone.

"We're very positive, very optimistic," said Mike Cox, spokesman for the state Department of Public Safety.

Cox said 15 people — all adults — were holed up. The group has demanded the release of the other jailed follower, a woman arrested on contempt charges. McLaren has also demanded a statewide referendum on independence for Texas.

Six of the holed-up Republic of Texas members are wanted on kidnapping charges or other offenses related to the hostage-taking. Two armored personnel carriers arrived around midday from Tyler, 520 miles across the state. They were borrowed from the Smith County Sheriff's department, which obtained them free as surplus from the Army.

"We have ample manpower out here and we have augmented that some, as you've seen today. And (McLaren) is aware of that... He is aware that we have slowly moved in his direction," Cox said.

The Texas Ranger in charge of the negotiations "has been steadfast in saying we have some felony arrest warrants here and they're going to get served," Cox said.

O'Rourke said of McLaren: "Clearly there are people up there with weapons and hundreds of guns pointed at him. If they attempt to execute those warrants, he will likely be killed... Nobody wants another Waco."

The
Edwin M. Rossman
Alumni Career Forum
G L B T
Date: Thursday, May 1st, 1997
Time: 7p.m.
Location: Campus Center Room 804

Moderator and Keynote Speaker:
Liz Winfeld — •President of Common Ground, a consulting firm specializing in sexual orientation workplace issues and co-author "Straight Talk about Gays in the Workplace".

Alumni/ae Panelists:
Mark McGrath '87, Polisci and Management — •Boston Mayor Tom Menino's liaison to the Gay and Lesbian Community
Tuti Scott '87, Exercise Science — •Director Corporate Relations for the Women's Sports Foundation
Karen Drummey-Curtis '88, Psychology — •Small business owner; former Higher Education Administrator, Student Affairs
Sharon Moore '88, Finance — •Global Accounts Manager for ATT

Sponsored by:
Office of Alumni Relations
University Career Center
Stonewall Center

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Volodan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W. P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Reinillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prentes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Puppas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Adrienne Rich

Editor's Note: Last night the highly praised poet, feminist and political activist Adrienne Rich presented a lecture at Bowker Auditorium (for review, see front page). Below is a brief sample of some of Rich's works of poetry over the past 35 years.

"Prospective Immigrants Please Note"

Either you will go through this door or you will not go through.

If you go through there is always risk of remembering your name.

Things look at you doubly and you must look back and let them happen.

If you do not go through it is possible to live worthily

to maintain your attitudes to hold your position to die bravely

but much will blind you,
much will evade you,
at what cost who knows?

The door itself
makes no promises.
It is only a door.

— 1962

"In Those Years"

In those years, people will say, we lost track of the meaning of we, of you
we found ourselves reduced to I
and the whole thing became silly, ironic, terrible:
we were trying to live a personal life and yes, that was the only life
we could bear witness to

But the great dark birds of history screamed and plunged into our personal weather
They were headed somewhere else but their beaks and pinions drove along the shore, through the rags of fog where we stood, saying I

— 1991

"Cartographies of Silence" (Excerpts)

1.
A conversation begins with a lie. and each speaker of the so-called common language feels the ice-floe split, the drift apart

as if powerless, as if up against a force of nature

A poem can being with a lie. And be torn up.

A conversation has other laws
recharges itself with its own false energy, Cannot be torn up. Infiltrates our blood. Repeats itself.

Inscribes with its unreturning stylus
the isolation it denies.

2.
The classical music station playing hour upon hour in the apartment the picking up and picking up and again picking up the telephone

The syllables uttering the old script over and over

The loneliness of the liar living in the formal network of the lie twisting the dials to drown the terror beneath the unsaid word

3.
The technology of silence
The rituals, etiquette

the blurring of terms silence not absence of words or music or even raw sounds

Silence can be a plan rigorously executed

the blueprint of a life

It is a presence
it has a history a form

Do not confuse it with any kind of absence

— 1975

Calling all writers!

The Collegian Ed/Op page will be holding a workshop for anyone interested in writing during Fall '97. Come down to the Collegian and speak with Mike Burke, Seema Gangatirkar, or Dan Bodah to to sign up — or call 545- 1491.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The benefits of an Honors College

John Lanzerotta

It saddens me that some "student leaders" of UMass- Amherst have recently embarrassed the student body through their attempts to influence the Honors College proposal. On April 25, a dozen students met with Aaron Spencer, a member of Massachusetts' Board of Higher Education, in order to — in essence — express their view that the proposed Honors College would be "elitist and unfair."

The students argue that funding for the Honors College would come at the expense of other more important budget items. Spencer diffused this argument by noting that the Board would be asking the State Legislature to fund the construction of the Honors College building — the major cost associated with the proposal — and that the legislature would be more likely to fund a prestige-building proposal such as the Honors College than other, less-tangible proposals.

Spencer's strategy focuses on extracting as much funding out of Beacon Hill as possible, given political biases. That the students would be unpersuaded by his arguments is perfectly understandable and acceptable. What I find astounding is the students' subsequently-revealed lack of basic information concerning Honors Program policy. Any student at the University of Massachusetts can enroll in any of the many Honors courses offered each semester. Honors courses are usually smaller in size, more demanding academically, taken by students interested in rigorous learning and offered as a four-credit classes. Any student who is willing to maintain a 3.2 GPA can join the Honors program.

Mr. Spencer and I believe that this institution is not elitist due to the fact that it is open to anyone willing to work hard academically and it provides invaluable support to those dedicated students who see so much apathy and laziness exhibited by some students in traditional classes.

An Honors program already exists and thrives at this University, and our Honors proposal would basically fund the construction of a building for that program and grant it more legitimacy. Through the program's increased visibility, more students might be willing to take advantage of the stellar opportunities offered, and all students would benefit from a more positive perception of the University, increased value attached to a UMass degree and increased alumni donations.

That the students speaking with Mr. Vechhio could have held an educated opinion differing from the previous line of reasoning is also understandable. What I found positively appalling about the meeting was the series of statements made by one student, calling Spencer "socially irresponsible" for promoting a "racist and classist" institution. What exactly is racist and classist about expanding a program that is open to all who desire to work hard academically? What is socially irresponsible about desiring to increase UMass' in- state public image — which is currently abysmal — thereby increasing funding and donations? Spencer was also berated for "harm[ing] UMass" and called "[an] embarrassment to the state." Such caustic vitriol I have rarely seen aimed at a citizen donating his time and energy to advance his view of a better university system.

In hindsight, I believe that elementary decorum was breached at the meeting, and that all UMass students should be outraged that our "leaders" could have conducted themselves so grotesquely. The student who issued the comment would be wise to apologize to Mr. Spencer, the UMass community and the entire state for his unsolicited rudeness. I would like to personally distance myself from the contemptuous statements, apologize to Mr. Spencer, laud his often-unappreciated dedication and formally offer my support for the Honors College proposal.

Students may have a "right to complain," but unless they voluntarily embrace the associated responsibility to be informed, their actions may be based on ignorance. Questionable action coupled with detestable rudeness is all the more repulsive.

I hope that the students who attended the meeting heed Spencer's call to draft their own proposal, and then ensure that "articulate and open-minded" students present it to the Board member. Despite student claims of having gone to the meeting with "information [and] objectivi[ty]," many Collegian readers have come to a different conclusion. In the future, we hope that our student leaders can hold true to such proclamations.

John Lanzerotta is a UMass student

Letters to the Editor

The Rainbow Coalition

To the Editor:

Are you fed up with a system that maintains itself mainly at the expense of working people and people of color?

Do you feel disempowered by the political process? If so, as Stokely Carmichael/Kwame Ture reminded us, the current racial, economic and political crisis in America dictates that all those calling for change and social justice become organized and view themselves as leaders as young people did in his day.

The policies and agendas of universities and colleges are reflective of state and federal initiatives that connect our concerns and realities as students to the world in which we live. Less funding for education, cuts in financial aid, reductions in social services and narrowing job opportunities lead to an ever greater marginalization of working people and people of color who are the majority while wealth becomes ever more concentrated. The Democratic Party has increasingly neglected national and international racial, economic, gender and social inequality and oppression while the Republican Party has exacerbated these conditions.

The polarization of America based on race, class, gender, ethnicity, age, physical ability, sexual orientation and religion has inhibited those who seek change and social justice from forming alliances. This trend can be reversed if we come together on common interests, acknowledge our differences and organize with diversity as the leg upon which we stand. No one seems to be representing us while we are blamed for being the "X" generation. As students and non-students, we need to be in charge and in command of our own future. It is time to motivate, mobilize and organize ourselves into an educated and active coalition. The challenge we are faced with is to think beyond today and "I," and to focus on tomorrow and "We." The Goodell Occupation and follow-up proves that we can come together as leaders and continue to meet the challenge of organizing on common issues while affirming diversity.

The Rainbow Coalition Party provides an opportunity for students from every background to unite with both students and non-students to fight for racial, economic and political justice in their present and future lives. If you are looking to participate in a political and social movement based on these principles through action, call 586-2462 for more information.

Andrew P. Susen
Christine Lopes

Honors College is a good start

To the Editor:

While reading the paper today, I was slapped in the face with "Clash ensues at Honors College meeting." The more I read the more ridiculous the arguments seemed. Why are you (those who are supposed to be representing the student body as a whole!) attacking them for trying to raise the standards here? What does biting the hand that feeds you get? No more food that's what. Would you rather they just scrapped the whole idea? Is status quo that good? This is a start, and it's more than what I read of you all doing.

I wanted to come to UMass the first instant I saw the campus, but what can this school offer people who want more than just a "public school" education? This school's [reputation] suffers enough without our own students fighting the Board of Education for trying to raise it, trying to make this more than "ZooMass." You can join honors just as I did, work at it, apply to get in, don't settle for less.

Valid points were made concerning budget and finance, and by the way I am of "the working class of Massachusetts." I work hard at my studies, I work too hard for my $5.25/hr to come home to puking in the hall on a Tuesday night, hey we all need to unwind, but where do we draw the line. I live in a TAP dorm also, can I tell you how discouraging it it to not see the motivation these students claim to have. The only way I can afford this school are by scholarships and financial aid, and this is a relatively inexpensive school. Every penny I make is accounted for: books, Health Services and cancelled grants just to name a few.

Of course there are lots of students in need, but if the Board will swing the casts on top of the regular budget, then what is the problem? What is wrong with giving those who want to excel, who put in the effort the attention they deserve— no, not deserve, are entitled to with their tuition. I have no choice but to find a way to pay my bill — work, loan, there are ways. Fighting the system gets us nowhere. We are just hurting ourselves if all we do is destroy. This college would be creating, building, raising the image and education of the whole school. Please don't try to take that from those of us who actually give a damn. You are supposed to represent those in Honors as well as everyone else, besides we voted for you as well. If you can't see the light, you're as blind as the SAT scores you are trying to trash.

Rich Faster
richnors@student.umass.edu

Praise for UMass dancers

To the Editor:

The performance given this past weekend by the student dancers was phenomenal! Half way through the show I found myself thinking, "Does this look like the effort of paid and professional Broadway-type dancers, or like an effort of students struggling to finish out their semester, projects and finals?" My conclusion was the former; each piece completely wowed the audience, displaying a culmination of practice, pride and pure enjoyment.

I'm not a critic. As a student, I challenge myself to take advantage of all the cultural opportunities and arts that are available so inexpensively. Therefore, I've seen dance performances as far north as Marlboro College in Vt., Greenfield Community College and Smith and Hampshire Colleges to the south. I can proudly say that the dancers from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst rule!

Their last piece of the night, "Juke Joint," was a lively, glittering and explosively fun number that sent the audience home chattering and electrified. As a fellow student who recognizes and appreciates hard work, I just wanted to give applause where recognition is due. Unbelievable job! Thanks.

Chris Geiling
cgeiling@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

UPC Presents

SPRING CONCERT 97

Redman

G. Love & Special Sauce

Jazz Mandolin Project

702 local opener

Trick Knee

Saturday, May 10th
Campus Pond Lawn
Noon - 6 p.m.

Why 2 dollars?
Because of financial constraints and the desire to provide Spring Concert in its traditional fashion, a $2 charge is necessary & supported by the Student Government Association.

Volunteers are needed for stage crew, security, and hospitality.

Spring Concert is sponsored in part by Newbury Comics, WHMP, Student Govjt Association and the Daily Collegian.

$2 for Students w/ valid UMass ID
$15 General Public

Tickets for students can be purchased at Tix Unlimited. General Public tickets are available at Strawberries, Northampton Box Office and For the Record.

Arts & Living

Wednesday, April 30, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Iron Horse suits Mould just fine

By Martin J. Keane
Collegian Staff

BOB MOULD
Iron Horse
April 28

NORTHAMPTON — If ever the term 'solo acoustic' were used in the wrong context to describe a performance, it was Bob Mould's concert Monday night at the Iron Horse in Northampton. The Horse's intimate setting befitted Mould well as he concentrated on his more introspective material, playing a generous 22-song set that spanned his entire 16 year career.

The acoustic setting, which often removes the urgency and power out of electric rock music and creates an uncomfortable and awkward atmosphere, suits Mould perfectly. The intensely personal and autobiographical nature to his self-confessional lyrics are illuminated through his passionate attachment to everything he plays.

Mould assumed his familiar stage pose, battling with his 12 string as he tried to reconcile the blinding nature of his guitar playing with the eloquence and complexity of his lyrics.

Taking the stage promptly at 8:15 p.m., Mould spent the next 90 minutes spilling his guts to a crowd that was thoroughly enthralled and seemed to hang on his every word. From the beginning strum of his guitar, Mould seemed to go off into his own world, oblivious to the gazing stare of legions of intent onlookers. Most of his songs have a decidedly negative and pessimistic slant, yet a glimmer of hope is perpetually evident in Mould's raw, emotive voice.

Mould's unwavering intensity level is legendary — his workmanlike stage presence leaves no time for idle chatter — much less song introductions. Yet on Monday he managed to surprise the audience (and himself) during a mid-set cigarette break in which he engaged the audience in some rare on-stage banter while discussing some new songs. An impromptu impersonation of Joe Satriani left everyone in stitches as Mould exposed his self-effacing humor.

Opening with "Wishing Well," off 1989's Workbook (Virgin), Mould assumed his familiar stage pose, battling with his 12 string as he tried to reconcile the blinding nature of his guitar playing with the eloquence and complexity of his lyrics.

The beginning numbers were culled almost exclusively from his Sugar days as songs like "Can't Help You Anymore," "Hoover Dam" and "Your Favorite Thing" highlighted the early portion of the show. Of special significance was Mould's inclusion of the Sugar B-side "Needle Hits E." Although rarely heard live, it established the perfect personification of how Mould's songwriting wit comes through in his relentless playing style.

After the mid-set break, Mould played three new songs. Judging from these songs it seems that Mould is taking a more sanguine approach to his lyricism. Perhaps he has finally expunged some of the bitterness which dominated last year's self-titled effort. "New Song No.1" symbolized his newly discovered pleasant disposition, as did "High Fidelity."

Digging up the past by playing the oldies in concert is usually a tactic used by artists who are over the hump and are forced to pander to their audience. Not so with Bob Mould. The two Husker Du compositions which he performed, "Hardly Getting Over It" and "I Apologize" sounded as vital as on record, and were expertly intertwined with newer material such as "Roll Over And Die."

The encores, done electrically on his six-string, were equally impressive. "Egooverride," "Man On The Moon" and "Thumbtack" brought the crowd down gently from the emotional showstopper "Poison Years."

Unquestionably the climax of the evening, "Poison Years" ended the main set with a bang, singularly encompassing all the aspects that make Mould so compelling. His introspection, vivacity and tenacity manifested in a poignant and powerful manner. It was a unequivocal articulation of the life and times of Bob Mould.

Helm: just a member of The Band

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

Over a million radios in one day will probably at one time or another emit the opening lines of The Band's classic song "The Weight:" "I pulled into Nazareth / Was feeling 'bout half past dead…" followed by the folky, smoky simplicity of the rest of that Jaime Robbie Robertson–penned, Levon Helm–sung gem of a tune about exhaustion with life's ordeals. Helm's voice sounds far away, like he's shouting from the hot swamps of his home state of Arkansas, but is being heard loud and clear in Toronto, where the rest of the lineup of The Band that played on "The Weight" hailed from.

As he is from Arkansas, Helm has got this wicked drawl that is half Jimmie Rogers, half Jerry Lee Lewis and full power at all times. Tonight, it will ricochet throughout the Iron Horse.

Helm's life before the time formation of the Band in 1967 was very erratic. Born in 1940 in Helena, Ark., his life before his teens was that of a normal blonde–haired farm boy. It was in the early '50s, sitting by the radio, that he was corrupted by that evil force turning kids towards those demons called rock and roll and rhythm and blues. This man who later became known as one of rock's most honest, no– bull drummers started out as a guitarist, but changed soon after to drums when he heard a percussion show at the F.S. Walcott Medicine Show (which later became the title of a Band song).

Being enticed by an Elvis Presley concert, Helm, still only a teenager, decided to take his drumming skills across the muddy Mississippi, over the levee and down into Memphis, where rock and roll was happening in Sam Phillips' Sun Studios as well as the segregated blues and R&B radio on Beale St. in the late '50s. Fellow Arkansas musician, rockabilly singer Ronnie Hawkins took the 17–year old Helm under his wing, and behind his back, on drums for his band, The Hawks. The year 1959 saw Hawkins & The Hawks enticed by a burgeoning rockabilly scene in Toronto, Ontario and made their name big there, reeling in a record deal with Roulette Records that produced a couple of hits, "Mary Lou" and "Forty Days." Helm was in it, and his forceful, but well–kempt drumming behind Hawkins showed it.

During the early '60s, some of Hawkins' original men like Stan Szelest and Willie "Pop" Jones began to leave the band, opening the doors one by one for native Toronto young ones to put in notes for Hawkins, by now known as a wildman on– and offstage, not unlike Gene Vincent's rebellious image. Robbie Robertson had already joined the band in about 1959 on bass, then switched to guitar. Slowly the lineup of The Hawks became Helm on drums, Robertson on guitar, Rick Danko on bass, Richard Manuel on piano and the virtuosic Garth Hudson on organ. Songs like "Mojo Man" and "Bo Diddley" represented a more bluesy side of Hawkins, brought on mostly by the Hawks. Hawkins soon decided he was a wild rock and roller and not a blues-man, and the Hawks got tired of his erratic behavior and split off to form Levon & The Hawks.

That was 1965. Stuff was changing, you could say. The Beatles did acid. San Francisco was turning on its own culture, dropping out of "normal" society. And Bob Dylan went electric. After Dylan's original electric band, which included guitarist Mike Bloomfield and organist Al Kooper, had left, Dylan picked up on this semi–known band The Hawks and employed them as his new back–up band. The rest, as they were famous. Not that they were respected by the sit–on–the–grass–and–strum folk crowd that had previously accepted Dylan as their acoustic posterboy. The betrayal these close–minded "fans" felt came in the form of boos at many '65 Dylan shows, and Helm could not take it. He headed back to Arkansas, letting his Canadian counterparts fight the fight for rock and roll on their own.

However, as Bob Seger sings, "rock and roll never forgets." Around 1967, it came knocking on Helm's door and brought him back to his old Toronto buddies and Dylan, all now shacked up in the pre–festival quiet town of Woodstock, N.Y.. Being there in the Catskills, which roll and roll, taking grey scud clouds, rain, and farm fences all along its ridges and hills, inspired the former Hawks' and Dylan's sound to get real hickory.

The sound that Dylan and the guys who were casually being called "the band" put together on the legendary 2–record set The Basement Tapes hinted at this mountainous, backwoods feel. Helm's shout of Southern joy can be heard on the tumultuous "Yazoo Street Scandal," and the surreal blues of "Don't Ya Tell Henry." Things had changed for Helm, including his band's name: from The Hawks to, honestly enough, The Band.

From there, the rest is epic history. Music From The Big Pink, with its struggle between The Band's independent folk/rock/R&B/country hybrid and their Dylan influences, culminated in an album that tops many Desert Island lists. On The Band's self–titled second album, Robertson was blessed with intellectual, narrative, innovative songwriting abilities and his pen crafted such masterpieces as "Whispering Pines" (which featured Helm's most haunting vocal backing up the sad lead by Manuel), and the words Helm sang in the character of a sad Confederate Civil War veteran in "The Night They Drove Ol' Dixie Down."

The Band went on into the early '70s, and ended up crafting a more progressive live sound which has the homeliness of their studio sound mixed with an unusual crispness and rigor. Ten years of the quintet of Robertson, Danko, Helm, Manuel and Hudson playing together can be heard to full effect on their double–live album Rock Of Ages recorded New Year's Eve '71–72, with spectacular horn arrangements by New Orleans music kingpin Allen Toussaint to add support. Due to internal problems of drug use, ego and artistic differences, The Band's momentum slowed down as the '70s wore on, documented to full extent in Helm's autobiography (written with Stephen Davis), This Wheel's On Fire (William Morrow & Co., 1993).

On Thanksgiving of 1976, The Band played their farewell concert at Winterland ("the first place we played at as The Band," Robertson explains in the Martin Scorcese concert documentary about the show called "The Last Waltz"). Friends such as Eric Clapton, Dylan, Joni Mitchell and even their old boss Ronnie Hawkins contributed to the magnanimity of the event, along with others who are too numerous to list.

With the original Band saga now over, Helm took his hand at acting, as well as recording some solo records with help from the RCO All–Stars, which included Booker T. Jones, Dr. John and others. One of his most well–known film roles was as Ted Webb, father of Loretta Lynn (played by Sissy Spacek), in the Lynn film biography Coal Miner's Daughter in 1980. In the early '80s, Danko, Manuel, Helm and Hudson decided to re– start the Band, without its main songwriter and guitarist Robbie Robertson present. The early reviews of the revived Band were abrupt, tragic interruption. Manuel took his own life in 1986. Helm had lost a great friend, and the world lost a terrific pianist and a harrowing singer.

Yet the Band wore on, with three of the original five members still playing together today, with new Band members Randy Ciarlante and Richard Bell, both of whom are members of the Crowmatics, Helm's solo touring band which will be joining him onstage at the Horse tonight. Helm's work in the '90s also includes narrating and hosting a PBS special on America's highways called "Great Drives."

So, yes, Valley dwellers, we have a rock and roll legend in our general midst, and that Iron Horse room should be full to the bar tonight to pay respects to a man who has been playing this music for 40 years. Hey, he might even let everyone sing along on "Up On Cripple Creek"!

Levon Helm & The Crowmatics play tonight at the Iron Horse at 7 p.m. Call the club at 484–0610 or the Northampton Box Office at 586–8686.

Smith College's Falsettoland delights audience

By Alex Iglesias
Collegian Correspondent

FALSETTOLAND
Smith College Theater 14
April 17–26

NORTHAMPTON — Last Saturday saw a perfect finale to a spectacular two weeks of heartwarming performances by the cast of Falsettoland. Each of the super seven cast members made their final exits stage left, or right for the remainder of the year in musical theater.

From opening night, way back on Wednesday, April 17, the Smith Theater Department displayed eight flawless performances, with the only exception being a racquetball racquet haphazardly flying off the stage on opening night during mid–show. Have no shame, folks, it was done with style and no innocent bystanders in the first row were harmed by the wild racquet.

Every night each performance surpassed the previous one. From the moment audiences entered the theater building, they were met with a southern style hospitality from the ushers. The 400+ seat theater held what appeared to be a near sell out crowd on the closing night. The side doors shut, the lights dimmed and the crowds chatter dwindled down to a slight hum…

Ere trills from an accompanying synthesizer created a feeling of chilling mystery throughout the theater, as the cast entered and stood in awe at the bluish New York City night skyline painted onto the sets background wall. One more trill and the seven– member cast turned around to face the anxious crowd as Michael Dart (Mendel) began the show with Falsettoland's motto "Homosexuals… Women with children. Short insomniacs… And a Teenie Tiny Band…"

Wham! The lights lit up the stage, the Teenie Tiny Band began its funky polka style music, and the whole cast joined the lone soloist Dart with "Falsettoland About Time." The mood was set into a warped twilight– zone–like a N.Y.C. '80s Jewish neighborhood, as the best actors in the business — the college business, that is, ignited the show. These seven veterans of the stage created the humorous atmosphere the show was intended to have with quickly blurted lines like Emily Kimmel's (Cordelia) "Gefilte fish…" Not to mention the hilarious crowd pleasing cast's line of "We're watching Jewish boys play baseball, who cannot play baseball play baseball."

But it wasn't the acting that lured the crowd into the lives of these seven characters. There was no acting, just singing. Plain and simple. Falsettoland consisted of an entire intermission–free show of only vocals and nothing more. This cast sang with great conviction, not leaving a single word or breath out. The clarity of the words was amazing and the difficult pieces consisting of continuous tempo changes and extreme fluctuations in the range of voice did not allow any room for error. And there was none.

The cast members handled themselves with calm, cool control, not showing a single sign of panic or loss of nerves. The confident demeanor of all members was well noticed as the "amateur fist–clenching shakey–singing" syndrome was not in effect. Hands were loosely hanging at the sides with not a motion in them — beautiful control.

The show did go for a flip side of the coin as the happy– go–lucky atmosphere which emanated in the early stages of the performance became a serious heart–clincher as Sara Klingebiel (Dr Charlotte) sparked our awareness of the unknown '80s disease

Turn to Falsettoland, page 7

One–woman play at Herter Hall is an effective show

By Kierc Meehan
Collegian Correspondent

THE YELLOW DRESS
Herter Hall
April 24

Last Thursday, The University of Massachusetts at Amherst hosted a one–woman play entitled The Yellow Dress in Herter Hall. The play was in recognition of Sexual Assault Awareness Month and dealt with relationship violence.

The play was a Pastiche Production written by Deborah Forston with original music by Sydney Hayes. Hayes, who is also the artistic director, conceived the idea for the play.

"I had produced a piece on smoking for the department of public health, which was very successful. Everywhere we went, people said 'please do something about violence,'" Hayes said.

In order to create The Yellow Dress, Pastiche Productions teamed up with Deanna's Fund, an organization established in memory of Deanna Brisbois. Brisbois, a young woman from Topsfield, died in 1994, the victim of an abusive relationship. Her family also established HAWK, a battered woman's shelter in Salem.

The Yellow Dress is not entirely based on Deanna's story, but a composite of a number of true stories. It has been performed at high schools and colleges throughout the country for the past three years. They put on about 45 performances a month. Deanna's Fund and Pastiche Productions hope to help stop abuse before it starts through education.

The Yellow Dress is the story of Cindy, a teenage girl played by Keri Cook, an actress from Somerville. The play begins with Cindy just being "dropped" by her boyfriend the day before the prom. She is debating whether or not she should go to the prom and tell his date some things about him. Behind her hang two dresses she is considering wearing. One is a short, royal blue dress. The other is a long, yellow dress. She asks the audience for their opinion.

Cindy changes into the blue dress she bought for the prom and begins to talk about her ex–boyfriend. She describes for the audience a typical violent relationship. The perfect

Turn to DRESS, page 7

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/ Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
*ONE MILE FROM THE BUS ROUTE.

A Branch Beyond Silver Jewelry Specialists
Great Selection Low Prices
236 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 253-4997 Mon-Sat 11-6

Do we know how to spoil you?
Worker-owned CollectiveCopies

Lincoln Real Estate
Gilreath Manor Condos
on Hobart Lane
Showings Start in April for June or September Occupancy!
• 3 Bedroom • 1 1/2 Baths • Heated Basement • Gas Heat & Hot water • Hardwood Floors • 1/2 mile to campus • On Bus Route
LINCOLN REAL ESTATE · 25 N. PLEASANT ST. · 253-7879

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
www.tristateinc.com
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 19 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles left at Staples onto Rte 116N, first right to right, left to Center 141 S take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs. It's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, MAY 4

RESULTS resume
We know what employers want.
Resumes for the real world
▶ Written by a business executive
▶ Student rates, credit cards & checks
▶ Employer lists & cover letters, too
253-9055
In your back yard at 150 Fearing Street

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. thru May 8- Two Films - Separate Admission at 7:15 (7 days only) Daily 9:10 - 3rd week
ACADEMY AWARD WINNER BEST DOCUMENTARY FEATURE
MUHAMMAD ALI
WHEN WE WERE KINGS
The untold story of the Rumble in the Jungle.
PG
A BITTERSWEET COMEDY ABOUT LOVE, SEXUAL IDENTITY, FRIENDSHIP AND THE PRECARIOUS BOUNDARIES THAT SEPARATE THEM.
"REFRESHINGLY UNFLINCHING!"
"THE FUNNIEST, MOST HONEST SEX-COMEDY I'VE EVER SEEN!"
CHASING MY
Sex is easy. Love is hard.
R
ACADEMY MUSIC Opera House 584-8435 NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN — Wednesday, April30, 1997 / Page 7

baseball

continued from page 12

Picked to hit leadoff by Jimy Williams because, well, nobody else could do it, Nomar has relished in the role. His fielding seems to be the part of his game left to polish, but he's responded to major league pitching very nicely, thank you. The Georgia Tech kid has stroked some big hits in his first full major league season. John Valentin has played second base better than anyone expected, and the Red Sox are hustling like never before. This all leaves me with one slightly surprising conclusion.

I like these guys.

Whether it's Darren Bragg flagging down a fly ball, Tim Naehring stopping a line shot or Joe Sambito closing out the ninth, (sorry, just waking you up), these Sox have cuddle–ability, something the Ivan Calderon Era never gave us. Now if we could just get Heathcliff Slocumb to leave town…

Welcome to Dairy Queen, may I take your order…

Major League Baseball decided to market itself this year with a strange new promotion. They have made 1997 "The Year of the Ugly Alternate Uniforms." So, in accordance with MLB law, I present my awards for the ten ugliest uniforms in baseball today.

1. Minnesota — for their "Baskin and Robbins, who's next in line?" red alternate jerseys.

2. Seattle — for their "We love Metallica" gray brimmed third hats.

3. Boston — for their "Let's desecrate tradition so we can make more money, Mr. Duquette" white Sunday hats.

4. Tampa Bay — for their "We don't even have to be in the league to make you puke" purple and black road lids.

5. Boston — for their "Luis Tiant lives" red Saturday hats.

6. Arizona — for their "We'll make more money than your team no matter how ugly we look" logo, home uni's, road uni's and all else associated with the Diamondbacks.

7. Pittsburgh — for their "Fish Sticks Half–Price at Captain Pete's Grill" road uniforms.

8. New York Mets — for their "Let's take the pinstripes off for no reason" alternate uniforms.

9. San Diego — for their "Softball in Southern California is kinda cool" blue alternate uniforms.

10. Toronto — for their "New Age Birdie thing" logo.

Basically, MLB has tried to market themselves in a new light, and they've failed miserably. What they have to understand is that baseball is not the NBA, in that you can't have retina–secring colors and make it work.

But of course, what do I know. I used to work at Baskin and Robbins. (Actually, it was Papa Gino's, but who's paying attention).

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

On a roll
Freshman Katie Carey and the women's lax team picked up its fourth straight win to break even at 6–6 at BU yesterday.
JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

softball

continued from page 12

Elaine Sortino said. "If I could have scripted how I'd want to play before the A– 10 tournament, I'd want to be going on all cylinders, and we did."

This weekend UMass heads to Kingston, Rhode Island to defend their crown at the A–10 Championships.

Mareina, and her teammates are excited about the challenge that awaits them.

"We've had our ups and downs this season, but we're starting to get all fired up at the same time," Mareina said. "These were big games for us today. I think we're finally ready for this weekend."

NHL

continued from page 12

the goalie. The goalie position is very important, but teams have gone to the Stanley Cup Finals with a lot less talent between the pipes (i.e. the 1991 Minnesota North Stars and Jon Casey). But, guess what reason the experts of The Hockey News gave for not giving Nolan the nod?

Yeah, yeah, yeah. In their asinine estimation, Hasek carried the team, and that is why a coach like Marc Crawford of the Colorado Avalanche got picked over Nolan. Huh? Oh, I guess Patrick Roy is a bloody sleuth between the pipes, and is a sorry sieve like BU's Tom Noble. Also, a team that boasts non–talents (right!) like Joe Sakic and Peter Forsberg is a non–lock come playoff time. Please… ex–Bruins coach Steve Kasper could even get this team into the playoffs. Believe me.

Now, the other two coaches on the list, the Dallas Stars' Ken Hitchcock and the Ottawa Senators' Jacques Martin, should be in the top three. Ottawa was in no way, shape or fashion considered a playoff lock during preseason, although they had the horses to do it. Management was in shambles before the season, with their GM, two coaches and their director of player personnel picking up pink slips.

Realistically, to think the Senators' would get this far would have been assuming just a little too much.

Don't you think?

Really now, people, they are the Senators. Come on!

You knew Dallas had the players to make a lot of noise, but no one expected them to have the amount of success that they did. Contending with the Avalanche all season, and a 38–point differential from last season, is a big feat. A hockey team in Texas (of all places) should be commended for that accomplishment. Maybe my verbose co–columnist, Leigh Torbin, knew the Stars would be this good, and that's why he picked them to do so well in his preseason picks, but please, let him squawk about that one.

Yeah, yeah, yeah. So, those picks are commendable, but Buffalo did not have All–Star calibre players like Alexei Yashin (the Senators), or Mike Modano (the Stars) on their respective squads. Yet, even those coaches are put ahead of Nolan.

Matthew Barnaby? Be'an Holzinger?

What the hell are Barnaby's and Holzinger's? Some damn solid players that wore the best new uniforms in the NHL this season, that's who. And, the coach who was able to patch these youngsters together with a group of over–the– hiller's should get the nod for Coach of the Year; even if they lost Game 7 to Ottawa last night. Without the services of Hasek, I must truthfully add.

Honestly, I hate Buffalo. Sorry, that's just the old, repressed Adams Division part of me coming out again. And, you don't need to feed me cheese and crackers to say it.

• Oh, Mario Lemieux is officially out of the game of hockey. I hate to wax Mike Myers–ian (i.e. Austin Powers) but, "yeah, freedom, baby!" I've taken this space in recent weeks to demonstrate my dislike of Lemieux as my kind of hockey player. I like them tough on the ice, and he's shown himself to be a crybaby over the years on the frozen pond.

But, this guy is as tough as nails off the ice. With all of his back problems, coupled with the courageous battle with a benign form of Hodgkins' disease, he's gone through the figurative ringer. He's free, and its time for him to become the true ambassador of the game that he's always been close to becoming — I think that's because of a guy named Wayne Gretzky, but correct me if I'm wrong.

Whether it's on the golf course, or in the board room, like helping to promote a business agreement between the NHL and Europe for a solidification of their faltering farm systems, it's time for Mario to be the man off the ice.

Farewell. Hopefully, just for now.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
London $199 $370
Rome or Milan $340 $635
San Jose, Costa Rica $246 $460
Roundtrip
TOKYO $879
SYDNEY $898
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs–immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave. NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Falsettoland

continued from page 6

of AIDS singing. "Something bad is happening…"

Keith Hallworth (Whizzer) and Ben Hellman (Marvin) destroyed misconceptions about AIDS that were prevalent in the '80s — namely that AIDS strikes all classes and types of people. Tears poured through the eyes of the audience as Hallworth and Hellman stole the show with their life–like love for each other as two middle–aged N.Y.C. city homosexual men. Both of their voices were the most powerful aspects of the show, as they touched our hearts in more ways than one. Even though the subject matter of AIDS and homosexuals left some audience members miffed, no one could resist having sympathy for Hallworth — and Hellman to an extreme — after Hallworth's dramatic collapse in the racquetball court scene which showed the pain and suffering of a full blown AIDS victim. It was a shower of tears from the crowd.

Overall, the hour and a half show seemed like 20 minutes, thanks to the stupendous efforts of the entire cast. The musical accompaniments, directed by Dana Maiben, were just as professional. A true show of life. Overall, a brilliant show.

Dress

continued from page 6

boyfriend who is sweet and loved by everyone gradually becomes possessive, then verbally abusive and finally physically violent towards her.

Cindy then leaves to change into her yellow dress — her favorite. When she returns, the audience sees that the front of the dress is covered by a large blood stain. Cindy is dead, murdered by her ex–boyfriend after refusing to get back together with him.

The play delivers a clear message to young women about how and when to get help in an abusive relationship.

"I know we're really impacting kids. It's unusual that someone doesn't come up to us and ask for help after a performance," Hayes said. "Although we usually perform for high school's we are trying to adapt for college audiences."

The performance was sponsored by the UMass Arts Council, the Everywoman's Center, University Health Services and Women's Health Project. Some of the proceeds of The Yellow Dress go to Deanna's Fund.

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
www.tristateinc.com
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 19 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles left at Staples onto Rte 116N, first right to right, left to Center 141 S take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs. It's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, MAY 4

TONITE
LIVE MUSIC
FEATURING
labb
- Original mask and great rock from the 60's-90's -
9:30 - 1:00
Drink Specials
Bacardi Spice & Coke - 2.00
Grape Crush - 2.00
Red Dog - 16 oz - 1.50
Pete's Mardi Gras - 1.50 - Bottles
2.00 Cover
Smoking Section 10-1
Fantasy Comics THE PUB and the rest
15 East Pleasant Street

!! SUMMER SPECIAL !!
$99 FLEX $99
FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
175 UNIVERSITY DRIVE, AMHERST, MA 253-3539
!! STARTS NOW !!

Blizzard chooses UM: forward signs letter

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

A Maroon and White blizzard?

Yesterday the University of Massachusetts men's basketball teamed gained some size inside when coach James "Bruiser" Flint announced that 6–foot–8 Waterbury, Conn. product Ronell Blizzard signed a national letter of intent to attend UMass in the fall.

"We're very excited Ronell has decided to come to UMass," Flint said. "He can block shots, he's solid defensively and he'll make our frontcourt deeper and stronger."

Last year, Blizzard averaged 16.1 points per game, 9.8 rebounds per game, and 6.5 blocks per game in his senior year at the Sacred Heart School. The talented power forward led coach Joe Frascatore's squad to a 21–3 record and the Connecticut state Class M Championship. In last year's state tournament, Blizzard earned Most Valuable Player honors and was a USA Today honorable mention All–American choice.

Blizzard spent his freshman, sophomore and junior years at Ceshire Academy for coach Bill Casson. By the end of his high school career, he totalled 963 points between both schools.

To Flint, Blizzard was an obvious attraction to the UMass program.

"With Tyrone Weeks and Inus Norville graduating after next season, we needed to strengthen our post play for the future," Flint said.

The rookie big man joins a tandem of guards, Rafael Cruz (Wheeling, W.Va) and Jonathan DePina (South Boston) who have already signed letters to attend UMass next year.

Brown goes to Beantown?

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana Pacers president Donnie Walsh is assembling a list of possible coaching candidates, although he won't contact any of them until he hears from Larry Brown. Brown, with two years left on his contract with the Pacers, is expected to decide this week whether he will return. Walsh has said he won't hold Brown to his contract if he wants to leave.

"I've told Larry we can't wait forever, because we have to get another coach," Walsh said.

"I'm trying to accommodate him. I'm not trying to do anything that will hurt him. We've never asked Larry to leave; he has to make that decision."

If he goes, one possible replacement is former Phoenix Suns coach Paul Westphal, who said Monday night he would be interested in coaching the Pacers.

"All I can say is, I want to get back into coaching in a good situation, and I think the Pacers situation is good," he said. "Anything other than that would be premature."

Westphal, who played 12 seasons in the NBA, was fired during his fourth year as Suns coach after averaging 59 wins in his first three seasons.

Another possibility is former Boston Celtics star Larry Bird, who met with Walsh over the weekend.

"Nothing was finalized," Walsh said. "It was a meeting to gauge interest. We talked about aspects of coaching and of coaching the Pacers, the same as you would with anybody.

"But if the coaching job is open, Larry Bird is definitely a guy I'm going to talk to — unless he says he doesn't want to do it."

Bird also could be a candidate for a front office position at Boston, although the Celtics have not disclosed their plans for M.L. Carr, who holds the positions of coach and director of basketball operations.

"It's a big decision for him, so I don't know what he's going to do, but I do know this: He'll be a great coach," Walsh said.

"I think he's prepared himself way beyond what anybody realizes…"

Bird was a 12–time NBA All–Star and three–time league most valuable player during his 13 seasons with the Celtics. But he has never held a coaching position at any level.

"I think he's knowledgeable," Walsh said. "Since he's left the game, he's gone out of his way to prepare himself for it. He's been in a position to study other guys and go back and reflect on how everyone he played for did it."

Need an apartment? Want to sell a car or computer? Looking for employees? Try a Collegian Classified — they work!

R U interested in Graphic Design
if so, we have a paid position for you
Collegian Graphics 545-1864
Campus Center Basement

Alfredo's PHOTOGRAPHIC ART LOCAL AMHERST PHOTOS MAKE GREAT GRADUATION GIFTS
SPORTS PHOTOS & POSTERS
39 S. PLEASANT ST. 413 - 253 - 1707
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Don't Pick Your Nose
Know anyone graduating high school??? Give them SURVIVAL TIPS FOR COLLEGE Humorous and practical guide for students entering college. Available in CC Store under local authors and bookstores in Amherst and NoHo.

FOR RENT

4 bedroom house in Amherst Available June 1 w/ Fell Option Call 549-5786

3 bedroom Puffton Apt.- Available 6/1. Take over our recently renovated apt. Spacious, good location, next to bus route. Plenty of parking. Call Scott, Seth or Mark 549-2645

Center of town 1,2,3 bedrooms. Gas, heat, hardwood floors 253-7879

Take over lease or sublet 2 bedroom apt. $585 from June 1st. Bus route 330/380. Call 253-3264

2 bedroom Available 6/1. 1010 N Pleasant #3 549-4142

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550. 2 bedroom- $425. 20 minutes from campus- no bus. Available for Sept 665-2202

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept. at Squire Village 665-7203

Take over our lease Puffton, 2-3 people Call 549-5079 Available 5/26

AUTO FOR SALE

1988 Jeep Grand Wagoneer runs well! $1000 or B/O Call Colin 256-8480

91 Ford Escort GT red, runs great. Sunroof, A/C, excellent condition $3000 Call Jan 665-0486

For Sale 91 Pontiac Sunbird Good condition. Call 256-6918

86 Ford Escort standard. $700 or Best Offer. Call Wendy 253-4729

87 Mazda RX7 5 speed, alarm, CD, m-roof, new engine, 13K. Have all paperwork. $6500 or B/O Call Erika 546-0545

Honda CRX 1986 Great gas mileage, 5 speed, sunroof, CD Player. $1500 or B/O. Call Alycia 549-3986

For Sale 1979 VW Bus Runs good, $800. 586-3074

91 Honda Civic 12 CD Changer, 4 speakers, auto start. $4800 or B/O 665-0162

96 Toyota Corolla DX loaded, STD, less than 6000 miles. Dark green. Must sell. Theresa 549-2684

EMPLOYMENT

Extreme Sports Catalog Looking for Sales Reps for the Cycling and Skiing Industries Call Mike (413)283-9227 for interviews starting week of 5/5

Camp Casadenaia, Pocono Mtns, Pennsylvania Excellent residential coed summer camp. Counselors to teach tennis, teathe, water-skiing, lakefront, motorcycles, gymnastics, arts and crafts, WSI, and more. Great salaries. 6/21/97- 8/18/97. Call (800)832-8228 for an application.

Painters Wanted for full-time summer in Westwood, Dedham area. $6-$8 an hour plus bonuses. Call Mike 549-3759

Bar or Waitperson Apply in person. The Paddock- 127 Elm St., Hatfield.

Looking for summer work? Spend your summer outdoors with other students painting houses. Student Painters is looking for people to fill both Production Foreman and painters spots. No experience necessary. Call Keith 546-5199 for more info.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? $3000-$4000 for the summer. Work outside with other students in Andover area. Get a tan. Leadership positions available. 1-800-390-4848 ext. 206

Do Campus Interviewe Friday 4/11 University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massechusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales, Marketing and PR experience Call 1-800-743-5556 ext. 122

Now Hiring/Summer Part-time Telemarketers. Amherst area, flexible hours. Earn $8-$7/hour plus bonuses. No sales- Will train. Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777

We are looking for hard-working, top-quality, competent work study student for departmental business office next fall. Intelligent individual who can work independently. Good with numbers, computer skills, reliability a must. If you prove your worth we'll pay you well. Jennifer 545-3559 detailing experience.

Summer Painters Work outside $7-$10 an hour, plus bonuses with your friends in Western Massachusetts. Call Pete at 1-800-829-4777

COMPUTER JOBS! SUMMER, PT, FT
Programming, PC Support, Hardware, Software
COBOL, TSO, JCL, SQL, CICS, Visual

EMPLOYMENT

Basic, Access
Win NT, Novell, LAN Admin, DOS, Windows
Springfield/Hartford
TSI Consulting
Phone: (413)567-6842
Fax (413)786-6313
email tsibrroy@map.com
WWW www.tsiconsulting.com

CAPE COD RESTAURANT Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train, housing available. Eastham and Orleans (508)255-9394

Pastors needed for summer Full or part-time in Chicopee-Springfield area. $6-$10/hr. + bonuses. Call Cheri 546-2130

Summer Employment
Experienced truck drivers for part-time. Approximately 12 or more days in Mid-June and Mid-August. $105.00 to $135.00 a day. (508)653-7422

Looking for summer work? Spend your summer outdoors with other students painting houses. Student Painters is looking for people to fill both Production Foreman and painters spots. No experience necessary. Call Keith 546-5199 for more info.

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call. (413)827-7555

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332

FOR RENT

Bleecker St - D40, NYC, NY 10014
Renovated, at Puffton Village
Fully furnished 3 bedroom apartment. Available 6/1 Call Rafael at 549-4529

Take over our lease Available 6/1 3 bedrobm Great location on bus line Call 256-6034

Take over lease 6/1- 8/31 Fell Option Large 2 bdrm $500/month 665-8076 On bus line.

6 bedroom apt. Available 6/1 On bus route. 253-5473

1 big bedroom- Puffton Heat and H20 included A/C Available June 1 Call 549-5178

Take over lease 1 bedroom apt. Colonial Village $430/month 253-0313

3 bedroom- Puffton Renovated, 2 bathroom Available 6/1 Nice place! 549-6758

Take over lease 6/1 One bedroom.

FOR RENT

$525/month. Heat/Hot water incl. Presidential Apts Call 549-4561

West Yarmouth Large house, 4 bedrooms. Small house, 2 bedrooms. 253-7436

2 Rooms for Rent Private home. $335 + utilities. Kitchen privileges. Kosher/Vegeterian preferred. Laundry parking, furnished. Available May 1. 548-4853

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September. Lease $1300+. 253-7879

Cape Cod group & summer rentals.

FOR SALE

Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-6800

Bicycles
Bayieg/Selliog all styles, good quality. Large inventory. (413)586-4781

P-166 Fell Package PC $1200 Sharpe VCR TV, Microwave, Aiwa Stereo and more. Cheap! 256-0767

SOFA BED Queen Size mattress, good shape. $125 or B/O. DINING ROOM SET Table and 4 chairs, all wood. Excellent condition $150 or B/O. 549-4996

Trek 830 w/Kryptonite Lock Brand new. Only $250 or B/O. Call 548-8042

Weightbeech & Weighte Brand new. Only $250 or B/O. Call 548-8042

Word Processor with Monitor and Laser Printer functions. Include spreadsheets and more! $200 or B/O Call 548-8042

Trombone for sale Bach 42 Stratsaurius. It is in great shape. Has a straight wrap and an F trigger. Please call 587-0768 to look at instrument. Best offer gets the trombone.

Bark Mulch
$21/yd delivered
2 yard minimum
Please call Leon 323-4447

Laptop Notebook $99, VGA Color Monitor $75, Hard Drive $10, Software $5. 386 Motherboard $75 Call Steve 566-3324 ext. 2

FOR RENT

4 bedroom house- Northampton, near Look Park Extra room, porch. For Sept. or maybe June. $925 plus utilities. Call 584-3428. afternoons Skibiski Realtors

4-5 bed houses for June Northampton-Hadley Call 584-3428. Skibiski Realtors, afternoons

FOR RENT

House For Rent $1700 per month. 4 bedrooms, one-half miles from Multins Center. Gas, heat. Call 253-7879

Contemporary- 4 bedroom, 3 bath. 3050 sq. ft. in Wilbraham. $1199.900 (413)596-8191

MISCELLANEOUS

WANTED CIGAR SMOKERS! I am doing a project on the "New Cigar Smoker." Preferably female smokers but any recent smokers. Free cigars! Call Ed at 546-6981

Stop talking about Social Justice and start working for it. Organize low-income people to build power and have control over their communities. Call Lisa at Acorn 1-800-651-8448

ROOM FOR RENT

Beginning September Walk to UMass. Furnished, large, quiet, comfortable. Male/ grad/professional. $7A/week continuously through May 1998 349-1578

1 large room in two bedroom apartment. Looking for two females. Available 6/1 and Fall and Spring Option. On bus route. Very spacious, great location. Call 549-3992

SUMMER SUBLET

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Putters Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny $300+ Call 253-4854 for more info

Spacious room to house June 1/Fall Option. $370/ per month Karolee or Rachel 256-4119

ROOMATE WANTED

Outgoing, friendly female is seeking housemates 9/97- 12/97 Call Odette 584-8597

I need a roommate. Clean, friendly girl is looking for 1 girl to share a 2 bedroom townhouse in Southpoint Apts if interested call Tina at 546-6843

WANTED: Responsible, quiet roommate who doesn't do drugs to share 2 bedroom apartment for Summer and/or Fall. RENT FOR SUMMER IS CHEAP! Call Alison 546-5612

Wanted: 1 or 2 Females Non-smoking, to share a four bedroom apartment. No cats/dogs. Call 665-7712

Looking for coo roommate this Summer 97. This large two bedroom apartment is in excellent condition. Please contact David or Collin at 256-1264

SERVICES

Rabbit Rescue coo help! Don't abandon your bunny! Call us, we'll find him a new home. Eilan 367-0105

Legal Questioos? The Student Legal Services Office offers legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Expert Piaoo Tooing Call Jeremiah Driscoll 593-3013 Leave a message

Pregoest? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Spacioos 2 bedroom apt Furnished, on Main St. near Uptown. Starting 6/1. 253-0382

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment. $270/month includes heat and hot water. Available 5/31- 8/31 Non-smoker preferred. Call Nick @ 6-0283

Beautiful apartment! One bedroom, all utilities included. Big enough for 2. Call Christine 665-9151. Cliffside Apts. $540/month.

1 bedroom available in a 2 bedroom apartment in Brandywine. $265/month + utilities. Available May 27. Call Cheryl or Christine at 549-1237

5 bedroom house on bus route 10 min from campus. Large rooms and yard. Great for BBQ's. Washer/Dryer Call Jeramie 546-6857

Doo bedroom apartmoot in Colonial Village. With Fall Option $430 furnished. Available May 23 256-4584 after 6pm

Uptown- 4 bedrooms Price negotiable. Call 253-9323

2 bedroom apartment in Brandywina A/C, fully furnished. Rent negotiable. Call 549-8452

1 room in three bedroom apartment. 549-7068 1 mile from campus. Heat and hot water included.

1 bedroom apartmeot at Cresthow. 6/1- 8/31 Short walk to UMass. On bus route. Hot water included. Will be partially furnished. $550/month Call 549-7605

3 bedroom apartmeot Puffton Village. Available 6/1. Call 549-5405

One room in 4 bedroom house with 4 males. North Amherst. Rent and heat only. $230/month + utilities. Call 8:30- 11:30 am 549-1832

1 room in 4 bedroom Sunset Village. Bus route 665-

3 bedroom/Puffoo Semi-furnished,

SUMMER SUBLET

renovated. Pool and tennis courts Available 6/1. Call 549-4748

1-4 rooms 1 mile to UMass. FP, porch, lots of appliances! On bus route. 6/1 with Fall Option. $295/month. 256-0672

Close 2 bedroom in Brandywine. A/C, pool 6/1 with Fall Option. $775 NEG. On bus line, UMass, one mile 549-0873

2 bedroom apt. Puffton Village. Available 6/1. $575 Neg. Call 549-1259

1 bedroom in 3 bedroom house in Balchertown. $320 plus electricity. Fell Option. Call 323-8740. Prefer older/grad student.

2 bedroom- Puffoo newly renovated, furnished. Next to bus stop. 549-4374

Upscale, 2 bedroom townhouse on bus route. Full basement, each bedroom has shower and bath, patio, large kitchen, living and dining room, available after May 20th. 2-4 occupants. $1000 a month. Call 253-8458

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. But stop @ end of drive or 10 min. walk to campus. Hated floors. B-ball hoop w/ 3. It's $208/month. With Fall Option. Hot H20 Presidential Mark 549-1086

Housemate Summer with Fell Option. Share 3 bedroom house with 2 immature grad students and one lazy dog. 2 miles from campus. 549-4482

For Rent 3 bedroom apartment. June- Aug. with Fell Option $725. Call 253-7128

2 bedroom in Braodywioo $650/month; Available 6/1. Call 549-0181

Mill Valley- 2 bedroom, 2 bathroom, 2 air-conditioners. Fully Furnished! Call 253-8680

4 rooms in separ huge house in Uptown Amherst! Cheap summer sublet with Fall Option! Females preferred. Call Erica or Ann at 253-1776 ASAP

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths, first floor, backyard. June-August, Fall Option Call 253-8467

3 bedroom- Puffoo Just renovated. Furnitura available. Starts 6/1 549-4334

2 bedroom apartment 6/1- 9/1 On bus line. $500/month, excluding all utilities!! Great deal! 546-0076

Doo bedroom in Amherst House Available 6/1- 8/31 $775 + utilities

SUMMER SUBLET

Andrew 549-2896

2 bedroome in a 4 bedroom apt Huge lots of light. $332 each person per month. Southpoint Apts. 256-8969

2 bedroom apartment with Fall Option. 1 month free rent. Call 549-4089

2 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt Great location near pool/courts. Heat/hot water included $640/month. Available 6/1. 549-7762

Take over our lease! 1 bedroom On bus line Available Aug. or Sept. Call 665-5191 or email-summer@aol.com

2 bedroom- Puffton Furnished, next to bus stop $575 Available June 1. Call Pohan or Anders @ 549-4699

1 bedroom apt. in Cliffside w/Fall Option. Available 6/1. All utilities included! On bus line. Call 665-7945

Dowotowns Amherst Apartment Fall Option Two large sunny rooms in great house with housemates Females preferred Non-smokers $775 Call 256-8281

Apartment for rent Great location. Large 2 bath Available 6/1 with Fell Option. $610 per month. Call Josh at 549-4789

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apartment Available 6/1. Cheap with Fell Option.

Going abroad next Fall? Sublet my room for Spring '98 Great roomies, on bus line, close to campus and bars Don't wait. Call 549-4568

2 bedroom in the Boulders. On bus line Heat included. Room for 4 people Option to renew lease Call 256-5990

Take over our lease 3 bedroom Mill Valley Apt. Available June 1st Call 253-7157

TRAVEL

One way plaoe ticket to San Francisco from Boston Depart on June 16th., $200 Call 548-2076 before May 5th

Europe $169 O/W
Mexico/Caribbean $189 R/T ONE WORLD TRAVEL It's your world- now you can afford to see it (413)587-0001

EUROPE $175.
Within USA $79 - $129
Caribb./Mexico $199 /rt
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!!!!
http://www.airhitch.org
AIRHITCH 1-800-326-2009

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30

Film — Pink Triangles and Hannah's War will be shown in the Greenough Residence Hall lounge at 7 p.m. Part of Yom Hashoah Memorial Week.

Lecture — The Women in Sport Management present Anne Flannery, manager of women's athletics for Spaulding Sports, at 7 p.m. in the V.I.P. Room in the Mullins Center.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series features Lois Yachetta, Economist, Main Institute for Social and Economic Research, on "A Feminist Economics Approach to Discrimination," from 12-1:5-1:10 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165-169. Free and open to the public. Meeting— The UMass Poetry Society will hold their next meeting at 7 p.m. in the Pierpont Residence Hall lounge in Southwest Residence Area. Anyone needing directions should call Chanel at 546-4120. All are welcome.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Presentation — "Ellen's" UMass Coming Out Cafe," to celebrate "Ellen's" one-hour coming out episode, will be held at the Top of the Campus, 11th floor of the Campus Center. A big screen TV will transmit Ellen's big news. The event opens with a comedienne performance, Julie Waggoner at 8 p.m. and will continue through the Ellen Degeneres interview following the show. The event is free and wheelchair accessible. All are welcome. Contact the UMass Stonewall Center at 545-4824 for more information.

Video1 — The Students Union Visual and Performing Arts Space "Faces" video series will feature The Last Story Quilt on Faith Ringgold at 4:30 p.m. Free and open to the public; classes are welcome.

THURSDAY, MAY 1

Film — Schindler's List will be shown in the Greenough Residence Hall lounge at 7 p.m. Part of the Yom Hashoah Memorial Week.

Forum — A Workplace Equality forum with keynote speaker Liz Winfield will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. The event will feature a panel of GLBT alumni speaking about their coming out experiences in the workplace and Liz Winfield will give an overview of current workplace equality issues. The event is free, refreshment will be served.

Lecture — Liz Weinfeld, business consultant and founder of the firm Common Ground, will speak on "Gay Issues for the Organization: The Bottom Line." This event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. Part of the GLBT Lecture Series

Meeting — An organizing meeting for students and youth interested in finding out about going to an historic international event, the 14th World Festival & Conference of Youth & Students held in Havana, Cuba July 27- Aug 6., 1997 will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Hundreds of students from hundreds of countries will be gathering to discuss the many social issues and changes in the world today. Call Lia Wong, SGA president, for room number or see Student Center listing. An information table will be set- up today from 11:30 a.m.- 5 p.m.

Presentation — "Conquest of the Amazon: Nelson Rockefeller and Evangelism in the Age of Oil," a public presentation in the UMass Commonwealth Room in the Student Union, will be held from 7-9 p.m. Authors Gerrard Colby and Charlotte Dennett will speak.

Reading — Jay Neugeboren, UMass faculty member and award winning fiction and screenplay writer, will read from his memoir Imagining Robert at 8 p.m. in Thompson Hall, room 102. Part of the Visiting Writers Series, sponsored by the M.F.A. Program at UMass.

FRIDAY, MAY 2

Film — Peace or Surrender? The Peace Process after Oslo," a movie about Jerusalem will be shown at 8 p.m. In Bartlett Hall, room 65. Sponsored by the Zeta Psi Theta fraternity Arab Students Association.

Film — A film about the sanctions on the children of Iraq will be shown on at 7 p.m. in Bartlett Hall, room 65. Sponsored by the Zeta Psi Theta fraternity Arab Students Association.

NOTICES

Financial Aid — UMass Financial Aid Services would like to announce that May 1 is the last day to apply for a new or increase Federal Direct Student or Parent Loan for the current academic year.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, meets every Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees.

Communicate — "Rendezvous with the Soul," meditation, music and prayer meetings, will be held from 4-5 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805-809 weekly on Tuesdays until the end of the semester. Sponsored by the UMass Baha'i Club. For more information, call Chris at 549-4982.

Discussion — Come experience the cultural diversity of the Princes Hampton Graduate Residence Hall. From April 8 - May 10, residents from many countries around the world will be participating in discussions and presentations about their experiences in their home countries. Scheduled topics: North America, April 29 – May 1; Latin America/Caribbean, May 4-10. The program is free and open to the public.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center room to be announced) from noon-2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GFO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6-7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilnet at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5516 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577-5166. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24 Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conferance Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Office by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPIRG, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

WEDNESDAY WINGS AT WALKER'S! 15¢ wings after 10pm! [eat-in only]

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Vodka & Tonic

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 30, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Living Edens (In Stereo)		Trial of Adolf Eichmann (In Stereo)				Mysteries of Deep Space
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Nanny	Dave's World	"The Absolute Truth" (1996, Drama) Jane Seymour. (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Dave's World	"The Absolute Truth" (1996, Drama) Jane Seymour. (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News		Inside Edition	Chronicle	Drew Carey	Coach	Ellen "The Puppy Episode"		Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Sister, Sister	Smart Guy	Jamie Foxx	Wayans Bros.	News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	★★ "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective" (1994, Comedy) Jim Carrey.				Law & Order "We Like Mike"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Sentinel (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News		LAPD	Real TV
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	★★ "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective" (1994, Comedy) Jim Carrey.				Law & Order "We Like Mike"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Pacific Palisades (In Stereo)		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Judge Judy	Hardcopy	★★ "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective" (1994, Comedy) Jim Carrey.				Law & Order "We Like Mike"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Living Edens (In Stereo)		Trial of Adolf Eichmann (In Stereo)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Drew Carey	Coach	Ellen "The Puppy Episode"		Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 "Courting"		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Sentinel (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News		Real TV	Mad Abo. You
WTBS	49	Family Matters	Family Matters	NBA Basketball Playoffs Teams to Be Announced. (Live)						NBA Basketball Playoffs Teams to Be Announced. (Time Approximate) (Live)
A&E	69	Quincy "The Money Plague"		Law & Order		Biography: Mussolin-Nightmare		American Justice		20th Century (R)		Law & Order "Discord"
CNN	33	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	29	Trick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	Comic Relief	★★½ "The Frisco Kid" (1979, Comedy) Gene Wilder.				Canned Ham	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	63	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Winge "Sowet Air Power" (R)		Wild Discovery: Wildebeest		Discover Magazine "Survival"		Invisible Places	World of War	Wild Discovery	Wildebeest
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter	Major League Baseball Teams to Be Announced. (Live)								Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	39	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait "Doris Duke"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Conspiracy of Fear" (1993, Suspense) Hart Bochner, Gheisea Field,				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	45	(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Music Videos (In Stereo)				Real World	Jenny M.	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	46	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	61	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Sequoia 25Y (In Stereo)		Forever Knight "Black Buddha"		Sightings (R) (In Stereo)		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	68	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Wondr-Weathy	Ultrascience	Earth's Fury		Landslide (R)		Wondr-Weathy	Ultrascience
TNT	65	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball Playoffs Teams to Be Announced. (Live)						NBA Basketball Playoffs Teams TBA
USA	59	Renegade "Escape" (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote (In Stereo)		a.k. "Get Has a Face" (1995, Drama) Sean Young. (In Stereo)				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	50	★★½ "Sylvester" (1985, Drama) Richard Farnsworth. "PG"		★★★ "Twister" (1996, Drama) Helen Hunt. (In Stereo) "PG-13"						Tracey Takes	Larry Sanders	"50 Years of Television"
MAX	60	★★ "Last of the Dogmen" (1995, Adventure) Tom Berenger. "PG"		★★ "April Fool's Day" (1986) Deborah Foreman.					"Fear Money" (1996, Drama) Yancy Butler. "R"			"The Perfect Husband" (1992)
SHOW	56	★★★ "Dominick and Eugene" (1988, Drama) Tom Hulce. "PG-13"		★★ "Undying Heroes" (1995) Andie MacDowell				a.k. "Dangerous Prey" (1995) Shannon Whirry.				Poltergeist: The Legacy

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Make the most of what you have, including time. Small delays could lead to major losses. Money concerns will ease, and you'll come out ahead. Listen to advice from others, but follow your instincts. Take time for some well-earned relaxation

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Keep in touch with friends and loved ones who are far away and nearby. Keep health resolutions but don't overdo. The slow and steady course works best. A younger person really does want to help, so be willing to adapt, accommodate.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Get thoughts and ideas down on paper for best results. An old friend could come back into the picture. You could be traveling soon, but be careful. Keep problems in perspective and think positively.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Asking the right question at the right time could solve a nagging problem. Try to look at situations and people in a new light but be realistic. Treat yourself to a special purchase but be careful not to overspend for something of little value.

LEO
July 23-August 23
This could be a good time to catch up on things you have let slide, but hold your impulses in check. You can't accomplish everything, so pick and choose your spots to get the best results. Your intuition is on target, so trust your hunches.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Be cautious and play it safe for the best results. Taking extreme positions could leave you vulnerable. Try to see others the way they really are, for better and for worse. Good things can turn up in the most unlikely places, so watch carefully!

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
An offer to travel may be tempting, but staying close to home also has advantages. Don't turn those down if friends and family want to help. Now is the time to be wise and let others take the lead. Watch and wait for the right time to make your move.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Don't make snap judgments about people and situations. Things aren't always as they seem. An older person could serve as an adviser. Your bargain hunting pays dividends, and you'll save on a special purchase.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Hard work and perseverance pay off, and you'll successfully handle problems at work or home. A person you thought was an ally may have their own agenda. An old friend could come back to offer advice and encouragement.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
You are attracted to a special challenge and will come out on top in the end, but it may take time. Home and family play important roles in keeping you focused. Work for balance in your life and keep your priorities in order.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Take the time to see another point of view, and be willing to accommodate differences. Don't feel guilty about taking time for yourself. Get an overview of health matters, but don't get bogged down in details and unnecessary worries

PISCES
February 19-March 20
What could be an obstacle proves to be a stepping stone if you look at it the right way. A pet could pose a problem, but it will be resolved in time. Refuse to get entangled in a long-running feud. You can accomplish more as a mediator.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

"That was the sound of a custom-made graphite 8-iron going through a 10-horsepower chipper! Let's listen to a titanium driver! Or are you finally in the mood to wallpaper the kitchen?!"

Quote of the Day

"Get the beer off the Court"

-Overheard at Haigis Hoopla

Robotman By Jim Meddick

SPORTS

Wednesday, April 30, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Baseball beats UVM, streak at 17

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

It has now come to that time of the year when the men are separated from the boys. Yesterday was Travis Veracka's day to shine. The freshman pitcher struck out a season team- high eight Vermont batters to earn his fourth win of the season. The 15–1 thrashing of the Catamounts improved the Massachusetts baseball team record to 27–6 (12–3 Atlantic 10) and increased the nation's longest winning streak to 17.

"We did what we are supposed to do," coach Mike Stone said. "On paper we're a better team and we played that way."

Massachusetts	15
Vermont	1

In the top of the first, Veracka (4–1) set the tone of the game by posting his first "K" against leadoff hitter Ryan Spillane. He would allow one hit on the inning but close out the inning with his second strikeout against cleanup hitter Dana Forsberg.

"It was important to get a couple good innings in," Veracka said. "I just wanted to work on my spots."

He found his spots and had nothing to worry about from his run support. UMass got on board early when Brad Gorrie led off the first with a single. With Gorrie on second after a stolen base, Adam Correa doubled to right–center bringing Gorrie home. Muchie Dagliere followed up with a single of his own and was then moved to third on a Doug Clark single. Dagliere scored off of Pete Gautreau's fielder's choice. After one, UMass led 3-0.

UMass scattered four runs over the next three innings as Veracka continued to amaze the largest crowd to attend a game at Earl E. Lorden Field. In the second, Veracka struck out the side with fastballs that reached velocities well over 80 miles per hour.

The fourth inning was Veracka's first real test of the game. Keith Carter started the inning with a single that was followed by another single by Forsberg. Forsberg's knock moved Carter to third. With runners on the corners and no outs, it was up to Veracka to earn his keep. With the pressure on, he struck out the next two batters and forced a ground ball to firstbasemen Matt Wolcott who made the out unassisted.

Veracka had a similar situation in the sixth. With runners on first and third and two outs he struck out Chad Emery to close out the inning. Emery's strikeout marked Veracka's eighth of the game which surpassed Bill Cooke's season high total of seven.

"I had good control in the first couple innings," Veracka said. "I threw a couple of good fastballs and a few good sliders."

The seventh inning was a boxscorer's nightmare. UMass brought 12 batters to the plate, including four pinch hitters. Starting with Aaron Braunstein, the Minutemen's first six batters all got on board safely and scored. Three pitchers later, Vermont finally put UMass away after scoring seven runs.

Vermont's lone run came off of another first and third situation in the eighth inning. Veracka walked Chris Lavoie to start off the inning. A single from Forsberg sent Lavoie to third. Then a high fly–ball to Steve Asadoorian in rightfield allowed Lavoie to tag up and score UVM's only run. Rich Hartman would come in and pitch the ninth inning for the Minutemen.

"I could have thrown in the ninth, but I wouldn't have known where it [the ball] was going," Veracka said.

The line on Veracka was eight innings, one run on seven hits with eight K's and two walks. His ERA drops to 3.07 which is the lowest on UMass' pitching staff. Also, next to starters Scott Barnsby (1.000) and Jason Bennett (.875), Veracka's winning percentage (.800) is the third best on the team.

Also putting up impressive numbers was Adam Correa. He continued his hot streak by batting 3–for–6, with two doubles, a triple and three runs scored. Correa's average has moved up to .444 in the last week, which is second on the team behind Clark's .448. He batted .667 over the last four games.

UMass travels to Loudonville, N.Y. to battle Siena tomorrow at 4:00 p.m.

JONATHAN M. PLACE / COLLEGIAN

Freshman Travis Veracka picked up a 15–1 win over Vermont yesterday with one run on seven hits, eight K's and seven hits.

Robinson's legacy lives, UM initiative remembers

In the four month span from January until now, over 4,800 articles have been written about Jackie Robinson and the anniversary of his break into Major League baseball.

One of those articles is mine.

Over the past two months I have been fortunate enough to speak with people whose lives have been impacted by Robinson. Yesterday at the Robsham Visitors Center, I met the one person whose life was effected by Robinson the most — his widow, Rachel.

Rachel Robinson visited the University as part of the school's Jackie Robinson Initiative. She was joined by Los Angeles Dodgers Vice President of Communications Tommy Hawkins, who co–ordinated the Dodgers' tribute to Robinson.

When I wrote about Jackie Robinson, I knew of his accomplishments. While I cannot begin to feel the pain and anger and even hate that he felt, I knew of it. By talking to people about how he meant to them — not just ball players, not just black people, but people in general — I began to understand, and almost feel the true depth of his impact.

CASEY KANE

"What he did as a man and for society is one of the most outstanding achievements of the 20th century," Hawkins said yesterday. "This wasn't just a black man playing baseball, it was an event that has had tremendous impact on American society."

One of the people I interviewed also considered Robinson's influence to be among the strongest this country has seen.

"He is a true hero for this country and perhaps even beyond. What he faced at that time only he could understand, and only with years of perspective can we as a nation understand," Jack Skypeck, who met Robinson thirty years ago, said.

Rachel Robinson said she thought that impact would have been felt regardless of whether or not her husband played professional baseball.

"Had Jackie never played one hour, one minute of baseball he would have been successful," she said.

Jackie Robinson was successful, a fact emphasized by the incredible fan turnout at a commemorative celebration at Shea Stadium on April 15 (the actual anniversary of Robinson's first game in the majors).

"I was very proud, as you might have suspected," Rachel Robinson said about the attention heaped on the anniversary. "I think it is a brilliant idea to retire his number. For all time that number and Jackie will be remembered. Kids will look up at the number and ask what it is."

Robinson spoke at length about witnessing the hardships her husband faced and how she helped him cope with those difficulties.

"I was his partner, not just a little lady behind a great man," she said. "I had a lot of confidence in him, he was very committed. A lot of people tried to make him out as something other than he was. He was not a black male filled with rage."

Instead, Robinson was a determined and courageous figure who helped to better not only a sport, but a nation. That legacy lives on today as the Jackie Robinson Foundation, which Rachel helped to found.

The foundation annually awards over 400 scholarships to minority students.

"It's our way of holding onto Jack and his legacy," Rachel Robinson said. "It's a living legacy."

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Women's lax rolls over Boston University

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Would you like some butter with that roll?

Yeah, that can definitely be asked of the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team (6–6) — with its 13–10 win over Boston University (3–12) at Nickerson Field yesterday afternoon, the Minutewomen are now on a four–game winning streak. Not only that fact, but this roll of victories heralds the first time UMass has won six games in a season since 1988 (7–7– 1), and the first four–game winning streak since 1987.

Massachusetts	13
Boston University	10

Out of the depths of consecutive losses to Yale and Temple a month ago, where the team was outscored 45–10, the Minutewomen have gone 5–3 to elevate their record to .500. This would be the first time the team has reached that mark this late in the season since the program's reinstatement in 1993.

Sophomore attacker Laura Korutz (24 goals, 15 assists, 39 points) has kept up her torrid scoring pace in the last four games, with her four goals in the first half which gave UMass a lead they would not relinquish. Korutz has scored 20 points in the last four contests.

Senior midfielder Michele Warrington (10g, 3a, 13pts) scored a season–high three goals, with junior attacker Jennifer Herker (11g, 6a, 17pts) keeping up her scoring roll of late as well. Herker's three goals and an assist in the win over the Terriers' comes off of a similar effort against Boston College.

The 15–12 win over the Eagles last Saturday signalled the team has turned the corner, and the 13–10 win over BU might have been a foregone conclusion, but now the Terriers' are just plain gone.

The Minutewomen scored the first three goals of the contest, while taking a 6–3 lead into halftime. BU brought the lead down to one goal in the second half, with Christine Sison making the game 9–8 in the 45th minute of the game. However, Herker scored the next three goals in a row to give a safer margin for the eventual victory. Freshman midfielder Rebecca Minaker (16g, 6a, 22pts) scored her second goal of the contest in the 58th minute of the game to put the win away for good.

One of the good signs for UMass is that even with the scoring streak of Korutz, the overall scoring is still being spread throughout the lineup. Eight different scorers tallied for the Minutewomen in the team's win over BC, and five different scorers tallied on this day, which also included junior midfielder Amy Leder.

The offense has begun to work on all cylinders, and with the last two wins combined, UMass has outshot its opponent in both contests. The Minutewomen outshot the Terriers by a 39–24 margin, with their freshman keeper Megan Haggerty making ten saves on the day.

UMass will close out the regular season this Thursday afternoon at Brown University (9–4) in Providence, R.I.- The 4:00 p.m. contest will be against the third place team in the Ivy League, who are behind Harvard and Dartmouth in the standings, respectively.

Attention Interested Sports Writers

There will be a meeting for new Sports writers for the fall semester at 6:45 p.m. on Wednesday May 7th in the Collegian newsroom. An all Sports staff meeting will follow at 7 p.m. This meeting is mandatory; fall beats will be discussed. If you have any questions call Luke Meredith at 545-1851.

Nolan gets THN slight, Stars bright

Without referring to myself as a semi–conscious NHL columnist, it seems that sometimes you have to wonder if the cheese has slipped off someone's cracker. You know, that certain someone will do or say something, and it looks like that person, or persons, have flipped their lid. I've been accused of that on many occasions (with those persons including my estimable editors), but in this case, the blame has to go a more un–obvious choice.

Just to prove that the so–called experts of The Hockey News do not know everything, in the current issue they rate the top three coaches of the NHL this season, and Ted Nolan of the Buffalo Sabres is not on the list.

Hmm, how curious... let's talk rationally about this inane attempt at analytical journalism.

JORMA KANSANEN ON COLLEGE HOCKEY

Why would you leave Nolan off the list?

Oh, maybe taking the biggest bunch of wretched refuse this side of Bill Murray and Harold Ramis to the Northeast Division title is not good enough (have you ever seen Old Yeller? Who cried when Old Yeller died? Yeah, I thought so); maybe getting said title without the team's only true goal scorer in Old Yeller, I mean, captain Pat Lafontaine (to recurring concussions) is not good enough; maybe getting through the season with a defensive corps led by re–tread Garry Galley is not good enough; maybe... er, you get my point.

Yeah, yeah, yeah. The team had goalie Dominik Hasek, and he is what you call him (i.e. the Dominator), but there is much more to a team then just

Turn to NHL, page 7

Pitching pair earns double header wins over BC

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

It was an exciting day to watch a softball game at Totman field yesterday. The crowd was much larger. The benches were much louder. And the sun seemed to shine brighter than it had all season long. Why you ask? The Boston College Eagles (30–11) were in town. And the Massachusetts softball team (28–20–1) was waiting for them.

What could have turned into a dramatic battle of East vs. West, private school vs. public school, and the fight for state–wide bragging rights, ended up as an embarrassing Minutewomen rout of the Eagles, 9–0 (5 innings), 3–0.

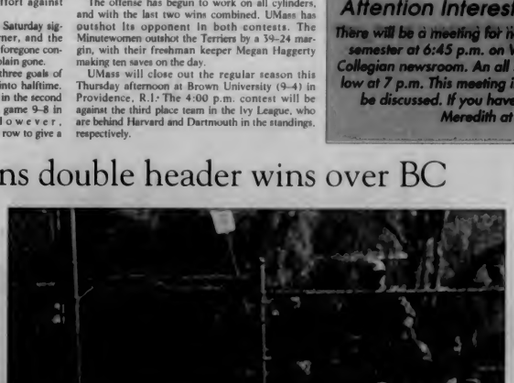
Needless to say, the story of the day was a complete defensive and pitching effort, including two complete game shutouts for Danielle Henderson and Liz Wagner.

Henderson, who received her fourth Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Week award last week, gave up just two safeties, only one of which was hit solidly. She didn't walk a batter, and struck out nine Eagles over five innings of work.

Wagner had one of her strongest outings of the season, going the full seven innings, allowing just four hits, striking out four batters, and not walking anyone.

Massachusetts	9
Boston College	0

In the field, UMass didn't miss a beat. Outstanding plays by Becky George at shortstop, Stephanie Mareina in center, and Mandy Galas at second, all thwarted possible Boston College rallies, and kept the Minutewomen comfortably ahead.



Massachusetts	3
Boston College	0

In Game No. 1, UMass came out as emotionally driven as they have all season. The Minutewomen plated nine runs in their first three at bats, deflating the hopes of the visitors from Chestnut Hill. The team was flying sky high.

Galas, not noted for her power, led off with a triple over the left fielder's head. Mareina followed with a sacrifice fly to right, driving home the first run of her huge, four RBI game. Sam Cardenas then sent a ball towering over center fielder Anne Ambros' head, and bouncing up against the wall for the second three–bagger of the inning. And Kelly Buckley's RBI single to right finished the opening frame scoring.

BC pitcher Alexis Beckman, who came in with a dominating 1.43 ERA, was rocked, but hoped to regain control in the second. But this was not her day, and the Minutewomen knocked her around for three more tallies.

UMass loaded the bases with one out, via three consecutive singles by George, Katie Kenderski, and Galas. Senior Mareina, in her final home game, delivered a ground ball to the right side to score George. Cardenas followed with a single to left that scored Kenderski, and Galas after a bobble by Ambros in center.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

The Minutewomen earned a pair of shutouts over Boston College yesterday afternoon.

In the third inning, UMass blew the game wide open, reaching the mercy rule with four more runs.

Octavia Brown, pinch running for Chris Martens, took advantage of an Eagle passed ball while on third to score the first run. George followed with a line–drive double down the left field line to score Tracey Osier. Then Mareina capped off her day with a two–out single that plated both Galas and George.

"We really needed these wins for our regional rankings, and I was just fired up for these games," Mareina said. "These were my last home games, and I wanted to go out with a bang."

After the noise of the first game, the night cap was rather quiet. UMass got all the runs it needed, in fact, all the runs in the game, with just one swing of the bat in the third.

After two quick outs, the Minutewomen loaded the bases. Galas singled to left, Mareina struck out but reached on a passed ball, and Cardenas was struck by a Mary Dietz offering. Then Kim Gutridge, who had been struggling up until this point, found the left center field gap, and plated the lone three runs of the game.

This was all Wagner needed, as the (former) No. 3 team in the region, the Boston College Eagles fell quietly in the remaining innings.

"I'm really pleased with the way we played today, I thought we did everything well," coach

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 7

Nomar: a nobody no more

Well, hey kids, what going on? April will soon be over, and with it come a few observations that have to be clarified.

San Francisco will not contend for the NL West crown. In fact, they will be out of division contention by late July. Reason? Name two of their starters.

I'm waiting...

I don't intend to be mean to the Giants. They hustle and scrap, they do what it takes to win, and all of this with nobody to protect Barry Bonds.

LUKE MEREDITH ON MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

But they've got tough competition from a Colorado squad that has found pitching, a first in the rarified air in Coors Field. They've got even tougher competition from a Dodger team that has the deepest staff in baseball, even if they couldn't hit a beach ball with a canoe paddle. Even last year's champs, San Diego, have yet to get fired up (something getting rid of punk Rickey Henderson will help).

San Francisco has caught April–itis, which means they're playing way over their heads. (Remember the Red Sox in 1994?) They're cute, they're nice and they're fuzzy (Rod Beck is, in fact, a cuddle bear), but they'll go away by the 4th of July.

Hey, Gar–ci–a–parra...

Red Sox rookie shortstop Nomar Garciaparra has done much more than expected in his first month in Boston. Brought in to shore an atrocious Sox defense, it was thought that someday Nomar might hit a little bit.

But guess what?

He's hitting a lot.

Turn to BASEBALL, page7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 131 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Thursday, May 1, 1997

The Bad and the B.

Rated: B

If the bad B-movies, directors and actors we love aren't your taste, check out page 6 for a look at some alternatives to standard summer stuff. (See Arts & Living page 5)

Beanpot rivals come to town

Jeff Pulerl gets the nod on the mound as Northeastern, UMass baseball's Beanpot rival, comes to town (see Sports, page 14).

WORLD

North Korea: Grain stores nearly depleted

BEIJING (AP) — Food warehouses in North Korea are nearly empty and officials are adding ground-up wood to rations of rice and corn to make supplies last longer, a foreign aid worker reported Tuesday.

Kathi Zellweger, who just returned from the communist state, said she saw hungry children too weak to stand, hospitals that can't feed patients and other signs that North Korea's food crisis is "heading toward a disaster if nothing is done."

Unless food aid is delivered by June or July "we will have a full-blown famine with mass starvation, and possibly also refugees heading toward China and South Korea," said Zellweger, of the Caritas aid agency.

It was her 10th visit to North Korea and every time the situation has deteriorated, she said.

One kindergarten teacher south of the capital, Pyongyang, told her that five children died of malnutrition this year alone. The North Korean Health Ministry has said 134 children died of malnutrition in 1996.

NATION

Cosby presses papers to humanize content

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Cosby urged the nation's newspaper executives yesterday to publish more stories that show readers the human side of the news.

"Seven children burned to death — no feeling," Cosby told a Newspaper Association of America meeting. "Man killed, woman raped — these are human beings. ... What we have to do is make the person reading feel the pain."

Cosby gave the executives a glimpse into his own anguish when he was told that his 27-year-old son, Ennis, had been killed on Jan. 16. "The day I got the news, 1,000 hornets attacked this frontal lobe," he said.

Cosby also prodded the newspaper industry to pay more attention to accuracy, saying that when newsmakers are misquoted, reporters often offer the excuse that their editors changed the quote. "Well, the editor told me that my piece wasn't a good piece until he got a hold of it," Cosby said, imitating such a reporter. When reporters are asked why they don't complain about such changes, he said, it all too often comes down to "the person I wrote about is not as important as my rent."

Too often newsmakers are evaluated in simplistic terms, he suggested. "Is the person good? Or is he bad? If he isn't either, he's boring," Cosby said. "How do we get him angry? How do we rip out of his mouth something he didn't mean to say and then run with it?"

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 70 LOW: 50	HIGH: 65 LOW: 65	HIGH: 75 LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword.....page 13
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 13
News.....page 2
Sports.....page 14

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Thoughts for sale

Al Shane, of Leverett, helped to set up for The League of Woman Voters 50th Annual Book Sale that will be held in Amherst commons this Thursday thru Sunday.

SGA's Wong presents Exec Cabinet choices

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Student Government Association (SGA) President Lia Wong presented her Executive Cabinet appointees to the Senate to vote on at last night's SGA meeting.

Four positions were given a unanimous vote by the senate body and were also sworn in last night. Scott D. Conlin was appointed to the position of Secretary of Public Policy and Relations; Heather Makes, Secretary of the Registry; Salwa Shamapande, Secretary of University Policy; and Khernchrist Lacoste, Secretary of Administrative Affairs.

Dominic Turano was appointed to the position of Secretary of Finance despite some controversy since he did not attend last night's meeting.

"Even though I have a lot of respect for him, I think you should see him before you vote for him," said Sen. Dan Kittridge (Central Area), who spoke against the appointment.

Chair Tom Sadlowski debated for Turano because he felt that the senate could not do without a secretary of finance for the time it would take to resolve the issue.

"We need a secretary of finance. Dom's a perfect candidate... we can't wait another two weeks," Sadlowski said.

Sadlowski himself faced some opposition to being appointed Attorney General for the senate. Questions were raised concerning questionable performance on the Title VII committee during the past two semesters.

"I serve on the Title VII committee with Tom. I don't think he's competent for the position. He's tried to take all the credit himself and cut out senate involvement," said Sen. Will Serwetman (Southwest Area).

Wong defended her choice for Sadlowski before the motion was passed by a little under half the voting senators.

"Tom is more qualified [than the other applicants]. I quizzed him on the Constitution," Wong said. "He is dedicated and committed... I admit he didn't do as good a job as he could have."

Sadlowski later requested that he not be sworn in for two weeks so that he could retain his voting rights as a senator.

"I want to retain my vote for budgets and speaker elections. Otherwise I lose it as Attorney General," Sadlowski said.

Sean Carter, outgoing Student Trustee to the Board of Trustees, gave his final officer's report last night as well. Chancellor David K. Scott and Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Thomas Robinson were present for Carter's speech.

"We work tirelessly for students... for this University," Carter said. "I hope I have exceeded your expectations, for me it has been a wonderful time at UMass. Take advantage of your good fortune and opportunity and take this university where it needs to go."

Amid dissent, a motion was passed last night for the Undergraduate Senate to publicly condemn the Graduate Student Senate (GSS) and the Voice for what some are calling "hurtful and racist article" printed within the newspaper. The Voice receives its funding from GSS.

The motion, brought by Chair R.J. Lemar and Sen. Brian McManus (Southwest Area), states that "over 30 percent of the paper is dedicated to anti-Israeli propaganda".

"The Voice is the paper of the GSS," Lemar said. "If you've ever read this paper... it continuously contains anti-Semitic remarks. The more you look at it, the worse it appears."

Chair Jennifer Casasanto debated against this motion because of concern that it wouldn't affect the publication of the newspaper.

"The senate body doesn't have the place to tell graduate students what to do..." she said. "I don't think it will carry

Turn to SGA, page 3

Photo display to push for new SU's accessibility

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

Students of Susan Jahoda's Advanced Photography 497 class set up a display in the Campus Center Concourse yesterday afternoon, addressing the issue of campus accessibility for students with disabilities.

The display was part of a class presentation which the students have been working on all semester. The students made up a list of suggestions for the renovation of the Campus Center/Student Union which is supposed to take place in the year 2000.

Representatives from the Chancellor's Office who are involved with a renovations study called "University 2000" came to the concourse to listen to the recommendations and feedback of the students.

Associate Chancellor Beverly Ward, who is involved in "University Center 2000," was present to listen to students' feedback. Wood said that currently the committee in charge of renovations is trying to provide all kinds of channels for accessibility to students in order to gain their feedback and plan for the fall.

Wood said the committee will be on the concourse May 7 from 11 a.m.-1 p.m. for students to come give ideas about renovations.

The spokesman and the project's support recipient is Tony Recchra, an undergraduate junior art major. Recchra, who had a brain tumor removed 13 years ago, is the only disabled student in the class.

Recchra presented the student's list of 17 suggestions to the representatives from the Chancellor's office, and shared his own experiences as a disabled student who uses crutches and a wheelchair.

Some of the issues Recchra addressed from the list concerned more accessible bathrooms, computer labs, Automated Teller Machines, information desk, doors and food areas. Recchra shared how individuals who are blind and/or wheelchair disposed have a hard time obtaining access to and within these main areas on campus as well as many other areas.

Visual alert systems, lower sinks, mirrors, tables, flat-bed escalators, automatic door openers and specialized telephones are some of the features which the students included in their list to fix for future renovations.

A student at UMass for the past 13 years, Recchra said he has seen very little change in the accessibility of disabled students.

Recchra, once a football player, was unable to continue playing after he found out he had cancer. Recchra says that the University of Massachusetts is a "rehabilitation for my mind" academically, but he still feels there are a lot of campus issues that need to be addressed.

Recchra explained the difficulties he has encountered with his mobility on campus including unsafe elevators which are poorly lit and unstable; escalators which have been shut-down, limiting his access to ATM machines; limited van transportation on and off campus; and inability to enter Machmer Hall, where his Dean's office is located.

Issues regarding accessibility for disabled students will be addressed at the next Peer Mentor Network meeting in the Campus Center. Paul Appleby, the ADA Compliance Officer, will be present to speak and address issues and concerns. Time and location of the meeting can be obtained from the information desk on the concourse.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

A time to study...

Junior accounting major Erin Wong sat in a oversized chair and studied yesterday afternoon.

McVeigh attorney rips star witness as opportunist

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

DENVER — The woman who testified Timothy McVeigh confided his plans to blow up the Oklahoma City federal building was portrayed yesterday as a drug-using liar who changed her story to save her own skin and make a buck.

In a persistent cross-examination of Lori Fortier, McVeigh attorney Stephen Jones sought not only to discredit one of the government's star witnesses but to suggest she shared blame in the deadliest terrorist attack on U.S. soil.

"If your testimony is accurate, all you had to do to prevent the deaths of 168 people was pick up a telephone?" Jones asked. "Yes," Mrs. Fortier responded.

"And you did not do that, did you?"

"No," she whispered.

On Tuesday, she testified that six months before the bombing, McVeigh divulged plans to blow up the building to avenge the deadly government siege at Waco, Texas. She said he even used soup cans to diagram how he would stack barrels of explosives in the back of a truck for maximum destruction.

In his cross-examination, Jones suggested McVeigh was nothing more than a "Walter Mitty" — someone who merely fantasizes about grand schemes.

The 24-year-old wife of one of McVeigh's Army buddies acknowledged in a soft voice that after the bombing she lied to friends, family and the FBI by saying she didn't think McVeigh was involved.

Through his leading questions, Jones suggested that Mrs. Fortier and her husband, Michael Fortier, changed their stories after they learned co-defendant Terry Nichols was arrested and they feared they could be next.

And only after she was promised immunity from prosecution did she start saying McVeigh divulged detailed plans for the bombing. Michael Fortier pleaded guilty to lesser charges in exchange for his testimony and could get up to 23 years in prison.

"Mrs. Fortier, would you agree with me that you either made false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation ... or you're making false statements to this jury of strangers?" Jones asked.

The question was quickly disallowed.

At Jones' request, Mrs. Fortier read aloud a news release she and her husband issued shortly after McVeigh's arrest, in which Mrs. Fortier says that McVeigh was "crucified" by the media and that there's "no way that he was responsible for this crime." "You were not distancing yourself from Mr. McVeigh, were you?" Jones asked.

"No," Mrs. Fortier said.

McVeigh, who could get the death penalty if convicted of murder and conspiracy in the April 19, 1995, bombing, stared intently at Mrs. Fortier, leaning back in his chair with his hands folded in front of him.

Much of the attack on Mrs. Fortier focused on her acknowledged drug use. She said she smoked pot and

Turn to TRIAL, page 2

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Chris Conner
Copy Editor Raghuram Vadarevu
Photo Technician: Jennifer Jutras
Production Supervisor: Josh Sylvester
Production Staff: Sam Smullin, Leon Latino

Controversy over postering in Amherst is topic of event to be held on the Common

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

Today from noon–2 p.m., the Coalition for Postering Rights and Responsibilities will be sponsoring a Pro-Poster fest on the Amherst Town Common to celebrate their political and cultural rights.

John Furbish, an Amherst resident who is spearheading the event, views this fest as a cultural springboard to express its political and free-speech point of view.

Included within the day's festivities will be a sequence of four musical bands, headlined by the Northampton band Funnilingus.

Additionally, there will be poetry readings, scheduled musicians, speeches and information tables by a variety of area organizations.

Food for the event will be provided by the Northampton eatery Food Not Bombs at a cost.

Supporters and co-sponsors of the event, according to Furbish, include the Socialist Pany USA and the Gray Panthers of the Pioneer Valley.

From 4–5 p.m. the Gray Panthers will be conducting a "Vigil for Peace and Justice in a Nuclear-Free World," and the Worthy Wage Campaign which will emcee its own event on the common from 4–5 p.m.

"The main thing is that we are co-sponsors of a vigil on Amherst Common every Sunday against nuclear weapons. We hand out leaflets about current events to pedestrians," said Lee Holt, a member of the Gray Panthers. "We believe in mediation not confrontation."

The rain date for the event will be May 4.

In addition to the Pro-poster fest and the up-coming events scheduled for the Amherst Town Common, the Amherst Area Chamber of Commerce is currently accepting volunteers to fill positions in the information booth located on the North Pleasant St. side of the common.

According to Cherrel Rybolt, office manager for the Chamber, "Volunteers are desperately needed to fill shifts."

Shifts are three hours long and volunteers will be scheduled to work one shift per week.

The booth will be open from 10 a.m. – 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, mid–May through mid–October.

A knowledge of Amherst is helpful but not necessary. Additionally, orientation will be provided by the Chamber staff and brochures, maps and calendars for local events will be available at the booth for distribution.

For further information, call 253-0700.

Campus Police Log

Alarm — Fire
April 29
A lamp post was on fire on Orchard Hill Drive.

Annoying Behavior
April 28
An individual from Mary Lyon Residence Hall reported threats from another individual.
Offensive signs were placed in a Mary Lyon Residence hallway to harass an individual.

Assist Agency
April 29
Hadley Police Department was notified of a deer struck by a vehicle on Route 116.

Drug Law Offenses
April 29
An odor of marijuana was reported by an individual in Wheeler Residence Hall.

Health/Safety Hazard
April 28
Environmental Health and Safety was asked to check the electrical system in a Morrill Science Lab.

April 29
A water leak was reported in Kennedy Residence Hall.

Larceny
April 28
A telephone was stolen from the main lobby at Health Services.
A book bag with a video camera was reported stolen form the Bluewall.
April 29
A computer was reported stolen from the Student Union.
A wallet was reported stolen from Coolidge Residence Hall.

Leisure time
Jill Cohen, of Shutesbury, spent the afternoon painting in front of Grace Episcopal Church in Amherst.

■ trial

continued from page 1

used methamphetamines, or speed, since she was a teen-ager, with her drug use accelerating in the weeks before the bombing.

She admitted taking speed in the days prior to some of the most important dates of her testimony, including the days she says McVeigh revealed his bombing plans in the living room of the Fortiers' Kingman, Ariz., trailer.

During a break, Nichols' attorney, Michael Tigar, held a news conference to belittle Mrs. Fortier's testimony. He is not bound by the judge's gag order.

"Welcome to the dope-smoking, methamphetamine-swilling world of Kingman, Arizona. Terry Nichols had nothing to do with that world," Tigar said. "I'm informed that regular usage of methamphetamine doesn't do a great deal for your ability to perceive and remember things."

Yet Tigar also held up that same testimony as exonerating his client. Mrs. Fortier had recalled McVeigh's statements that Nichols didn't want to be involved in the bombing.

Privately, Fortier was telling friends and family that he thought he could make some money by selling his story, according to FBI wiretaps of the mobile home that were read into the record by Jones.

"Did you talk to Michael privately about making a cool 'mill' off this case?" Jones asked.

"No," said Mrs. Fortier. She added: "I never had an intention of selling my story."

In other testimony, explosives expert Paul Rydlund described in detail how to build a bomb similar to the one authorities say was used to blow up the federal building.

Rydlund said it was relatively easy to acquire the materials and to construct an ammonium nitrate-fuel oil bomb. And, he said, it would be inexpensive. The key ingredient — ammonium nitrate — costs $5 for a 50-pound bag.

Criminologist gives suggestions to curb violent youth activity

By Jean McMillan
Associated Press

BOSTON — Random drug testing for people on probation and rewards for youths pointing out people illegally carrying guns are two ways communities might curb violence, criminologist James Q. Wilson told lawmakers.

Wilson spoke at the Statehouse yesterday as part of the Lyceum Lecture Series organized by House Speaker Thomas M. Finneran. Former U.S. Labor Secretary Robert Reich was the first speaker.

Wilson has been a professor at the University of California-Los Angeles since 1985. He also taught at Harvard University for 26 years and is the author or coauthor of 14 books.

He said youths are freer now, because the control of families, many conaisting now of one parent, have eroded. For a small part of the youth population, this freedom has led to a life of gangs and drugs.

"Children have been liberated," Wilson said.

He said the problem will grow worse when the large population of children now in elementary schools reach high school age.

Despite this grim forecast, Wilson suggested ways communities might try to curb crime, including:

-Having police and probation officers ride in the same car to check on those on probation. He said probation officers often have more power to enter a home. The program is being done in Boston.

-Pressuring people to avoid using guns by being more aggressive in punishing those caught illegally with the weapons.

-Enforcing the truancy law, even if it means having police pick up youths and deliver them to their parents or directly to school authorities.

-Making greater use of drug tests for those on probation or parole, perhaps even randomly testing the most serious drug offenders two to three times a week.

END OF THE SEMESTER
With NYC band:
Friday
May 2, 1997
8:00 PM
Bluewall Cafe
followed by the movie Jerry MaGuire in CC163
"A TERRIFIC MOVIE! VERY FUNNY AND VERY TOUCHING! IT MIGHT BE TOM CRUISE'S BEST PERFORMANCE EVER!"
TOM CRUISE
Jerry Maguire

Puffton Village . . .
Your First Choice
1, 2 and 3 bedroom apartments
Featuring
Newly renovated units that include:
New appliances New carpeting New kitchen cabinets & counter tops Central air conditioners
Rents starting at $615 per month
or
Traditional units that are:
Fully applianced Freshly painted Carpeted/Tiled Floors Central Air Conditioned
Rents starting at $545 per month
All rents include Heat, Hot Water & Cooking Gas and use of an olympic size pool, 5 tennis courts, basketball court, laundry rooms and on-site parking.
Now accepting rental applications for summer and fall. Call today 549-0145

Financial Aid Voice Response System
Available at a phone near you
Designed to improve student services, the University of Massachusetts - Amherst Financial Aid Voice Response System allows you to:
- Get general financial aid information
- Check the status of documents
- Check the status of your financial aid awards
Have your PIN number and Social Security Number ready, use a touch-tone phone and dial:
(413) 546-8100
It's that simple!
Quick Commands to help you navigate FA-VRS:
- Press 1 to get general information.
- Press 2 to get to your own file.
- Press 8 to speak with a financial aid representative.
- Press # to return to the main menu.
- Press #0 to exit the system.

NATIONAL/ INTERNATIONAL

McCurry says fund raising documents are ready for review

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House, accused of stonewalling the investigation into Democratic campaign fund raising, dared the chief House investigator Tuesday to "come on down here" and review documents in the case.

"They are available for his inspection. He knows that. I think he's having some fun with the issue," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said in response to complaints from Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind.

Burton, chairman of the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee, said Tuesday that the White House is deliberately dragging its feet on his request for documents to help prepare for hearings on the fund-raising controversy.

Burton said he needs documents on fund-raiser John Huang, Indonesian businessman James Riady and Webster Hubbell, former associate attorney general. The panel has sought White House documents on Huang since November, when reports first surfaced that the Democratic National Committee received large donations from foreign donors, contrary to federal law.

"The president promised the Congress 'full cooperation,' and instead the committee is being stonewalled," Burton said in a statement.

McCurry told reporters that they've agreed to allow Burton to have access to documents. But, McCurry complained, Burton has been "unable or unwilling, one or the other" to assure the White House that he would protect the privacy of certain documents.

"Here's a quarter. Go call him, tell him to come on down here and he can look in any document he wants to," McCurry said. "We're not holding anything back from him. We just don't want Chairman Burton or his staff investigators to pass documents out on the street corners."

He said Burton could have the documents as long as there are safeguards in place "to make sure that things aren't leaked that shouldn't be leaked."

Burton's committee is investigating Huang's role in raising millions of dollars from Asian-American and foreign donors. The Democratic National Committee has returned nearly $3 million that came from questionable sources, most of it raised by Huang.

■ SGA

continued from page1

any weight and will just make us look foolish."

Next Wednesday's senate meeting will address Registered Student Organization (RSO) budgets for the fiscal year 1998.

A motion was passed last night to dictate the process for RSOs to appeal their budget recommendation by the Ways and Means Committee.

"This motion is essential to the work of this body. It creates the ability for RSO's to come before the Senate about budgets," Speaker Brian Tirrell said.

Members of the Women's Issues Committee organized a campus safety walk to begin after the adjournment of the meeting. The walk was designed to inform students, faculty and administration where call boxes and good lighting on campus were lacking.

Chair Lisa Cook announced her intentions to run for Assistant Speaker of the Senate with current Assistant Speaker Peter Kilbourne. Kilbourne announced at the last meeting that he will be seeking the position of Speaker of the Senate. These two positions will be voted upon by senate members at the May 14th meeting.

Heavy rainfall cause of death, destruction in '96

GENEVA (AP) — Heavy rainfall that caused widespread death and destruction was the chief feature of global weather in 1996, the World Meteorological Organization said Tuesday.

For some parts of the world, 1996 was one of the coldest years in recent decades, the U.N. weather agency said in its annual report. Overall, however, it was the eighth-warmest on record since 1860.

It was also the second consecutive year with above-normal hurricane activity, making a near record two-year total.

"The extent and the magnitude of heavy precipitation that affected many parts of the world" resulted in part from the continuation of the so-called "La Nina" effect.

This refers to colder-than-normal water in the Pacific Ocean west of Peru and Ecuador that began in 1995. La Nina caused the above-normal rainfall in the Indian and Australian monsoons, the report said.

La Nina is the opposite of the better known "El Nino" effect, which features warmer-than-usual conditions in the eastern Pacific. Both phenomena are believed to cause changes in rain and drought patterns around the world.

While 1996 was an extremely dry year from Britain across central Europe to Russia, large amounts of rain fell in northwestern Africa, Spain and Portugal, the U.N. agency said.

The rainfall brought much needed relief to southwestern Europe and northwestern Africa after six years of extreme dryness, but "also resulted in some deaths and dislocations due to local flooding," the agency said.

Central Africa experienced nearly double the normal rainfall totals, while the Middle East got three to seven times the normal amount.

China saw its worst spring and summer floods in 50 years, which caused more than 1,000 deaths and property damage affecting 20 million people.

Heavy rains occurred in parts of Australia and New Zealand and northern and central South America.

The Pacific Northwest of the United States experienced flooding because of heavy rain and snow, while the eastern United States and Canada had heavy summer rains.

First lady talks on scandals, Chelsea's higher education

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, the subject of overlapping investigations throughout her turn in the White House, said Tuesday she's resigned to the accusations and saddened that they have felled some of her onetime friends.

About her daughter, Clinton promised an announcement yesterday of where Chelsea would attend college in the fall. She all but ruled out Georgetown and Wellesley, her parents' alma maters. "I think she wanted to branch out and be her own person," Clinton said. "She loves Georgetown but it's too close to home."

Other schools reportedly anxious to call the first daughter their own: Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Brown and Stanford.

Asked on CNN's "Larry King Live" about the misfortunes of former law partner Webster Hubbell, and friends Susan and James McDougal, the first lady said she was "very sorry about a lot of things that have happened to people."

"In the great scope of things, the numbers of people who have been our friends ... have sustained us and we have tried to be sustaining friends to people," she continued.

Hubbell was jailed for bilking his former Little Rock, Ark., law partners. Susan McDougal was jailed for refusing to testify about the Clintons' Whitewater activities and her husband, James, was recently sentenced to three years in prison for fraud and conspiracy in the Whitewater land deal.

His sentence was lightened by an agreement to cooperate with Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth Starr — an agreement that should leave the Clintons "deeply concerned," McDougal says. "I'm not going to comment on anything he has to say. This matter is being investigated and looked into," Clinton said Tuesday.

Asked if she felt beleaguered by the protracted Whitewater investigation and her subpoena last year — unprecedented for a first lady — to testify before a grand jury, Clinton shook her head.

"I think that initially I might have felt that way when I thought that this was something that would, you know, end. But now I'm very resigned to it, and I don't think about it," she said. On the campaign fund-raising controversies that are the subject of congressional probes this year, Clinton said Democratic fund-raisers may have been too aggressive in soliciting money, but they broke no laws.

"I think that people worked hard and did a very good job under extremely pressured circumstances," Clinton said. "It will be shown, at least based on everything that I know, that no one deliberately set out to do anything wrong."

Heated discussion
Mens Resource Center volunteers Paul Abbott (left) and Mike Dover ate lunch outside in Amherst yesterday afternoon.

You're smart. Have fun. Take the money and run.
CASH BONUS $400 purchase
$650 red carpet lease or red carpet option
Take a fully interactive road trip with the new Ford Escort ZX2 on www.ford.com
The new 1998 Ford Escort ZX2
While there may be lots of good deals out there for smart people, this one is available only to college seniors and grad students. Get $400 cash back* toward the purchase or $650 cash back* toward the Red Carpet Lease (or Red Carpet Option) of any eligible Ford or Mercury. Smart going. And that includes the exciting new Ford Escort ZX2, a terrific way to grab life by the wheel. Big fun. For more College Graduate Purchase Program info, call 1-800-321-1536 or visit the Web at www.ford.com
*To be eligible, you must graduate with an associate's or bachelor's degree between 10/1/95 and 1/0/98 or be currently enrolled in graduate school. You must purchase or lease your new vehicle between 1/4/97 and 1/3/98. Some customer and vehicle eligibility restrictions apply. See your dealer for details.
Ford
College Graduate Purchase Program Mercury

when classes
STOP
GO
to buyback
Textbook Buyback
Campus Center
May 14 - 15 - 16 9:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
May 17 11:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
May 19 - 20 9:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
May 21 - 22 -23 9:00 A.M. - 6:00 P.M.
Textbook Annex
May 14 - 15 - 16 9:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
May 19 - 23 9:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
May 27 - 28 9:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
Hampden D.C.
May 21 - 22 10:00 A.M. - 6:00 P.M.
May 23 10:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1992
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Presies Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

May Day: The forgotten holiday

Tom Coish

Today, May 1, is May Day, which is celebrated around the world as the international workers' holiday. Ironically, the only industrial nation that does not recognize it is the United States, the country from which the holiday originated. The vast majority of Americans know nothing about it, or labor history in general, or even the contemporary role of the labor movement in our society.

The year 1886 was a momentous one in American labor history. This was the era of the "robber barons" — a time of tremendous growth in the size, wealth and power of industrialists and corporations in the United States. Unions had no legal rights to bargain collectively with their employers; the law and the courts were generally used against workers and their unions by corporations and their allies in government. Unions had few options other than strikes, often long and bitter, to pressure employers to negotiate fair labor agreements.

On May 4, 1886, union leaders in Chicago held a mass rally in Haymarket Square to advocate for the eight-hour work-day (something most Americans workers now take for granted, but was in fact achieved only after decades of struggle). During the rally someone — to this day no one really knows who — set off a bomb in the crowd which killed and wounded many. Eight policemen were killed and over 70 people were wounded. Police then fired on the crowd, killing and wounding even more.

Almost immediately, authorities and the sensationalist press of the time blamed several labor activists who organized or addressed the rally, and a severe anti-labor sentiment was whipped up throughout the country. Despite no evidence which linked them to the bombing, eight activists were convicted on the theory that their political expression of "radical" ideas such as the eight-hour day directly caused the deaths and injuries at the rally. Despite an international outcry of protest, the eight were executed by hanging.

In honor of the Haymarket martyrs, May Day became the international workers' holiday everywhere except the United States, where it all began.

Besides the eight-hour day, the labor movement went on to win many other victories for working people, such as laws prohibiting child labor; establishing minimum wages; occupational safety and health rules; social security; and unemployment insurance. Its support was crucial in obtaining passage of much other progressive legislation such as civil rights and anti-discrimination laws, and will be crucial in the future if we are ever able to have meaningful national health care reform, or laws to protect workers and their communities when corporations desert them for low- wage locations around the world.

However, unions have been in decline since their peak membership and influence in the 1940s, to the point where now they only represent about 15 percent of the private sector work force. It is no coincidence that the decline in the labor movement has paralleled the decline in incomes, public services and other aspects of our standard of living.

Meanwhile, the rich elite in our country have seen their incomes and control over the nation's wealth skyrocket in the past few decades. Doesn't it seem strange that in this "land of equality" whenever unemployment goes down and wages increase, the stock market plummets and interest rates are raised in order to discourage employment and wage increases? Meanwhile, mean-spirited "welfare reform" legislation is punishing poor people and pitting the unemployed poor against the working poor. It has been said of the United States that yes, we do have class warfare, but only one class is actually fighting.

While unions have their faults and have made mistakes, they have been singled out for negative treatment by the media, which is largely owned and controlled by large corporations and conservative, anti-labor interests. Many unions are struggling to reverse these trends through new and innovative organizing strategies. They are also building alliances with other grass-roots community organizations with progressive agendas, labor unions and activists around the world.

The labor movement remains one of the largest and most progressive forces for economic and social justice, in the United States and internationally. Without a strong and revitalized labor movement here and abroad, it is very unlikely that our serious social and economic problems can be solved, and the quality of life for most people will continue to erode. Learning about and remembering May Day and labor history could be an important part of such a revitalization.

Tom Coish is a member of Local 509, Service Employees' International Union, the professional staff union at UMass.

A day in the life of C. Taylor Conner

C. Taylor Conner

And so it all draws to a close without many students even knowing precisely what the hell we do down here at the Collegian.

And, to be honest, it all comes to a close without many folks down at the Collegian knowing what the hell we do down here. But we try damn hard, and put out a quality product Monday through Friday.

However, I thought it was high time to demystify our primary UMass media source, at least on my part. The following is a detailed account of one day's work as Managing Editor at the Massachusetts Daily Collegian:

8 a.m. — Christ, I'm still in bed. Why aren't you?

11 a.m. — Arrive at Collegian after morning class. Receive first complaint call of the day.

Caller: Uh, is this the Managing Editor?

Me: Who wants to know?

Caller: Well, there was a problem in today's paper, and a lot of people are upset about it.

Me: Tell me about it, stud.

Caller: In today's "Dilbert," in the last panel, uh, Dogbert's tail was slightly blurred at the end of the strip. A lot of us are really upset about it. We live for Dilbert. We die for Dilbert. We kill for Dilbert.

Me: I can't apologize enough, friend. By the way, to which Scott Adams suicide cult do you belong?

Caller: Pardon?

Me: Er, nevermind. Sorry about the strip. We'll try our best to remedy future errors. Say "hi" to the rest of Northeast.

Caller: How'd you know I lived there?

Me: Call it a hunch. Gotta go. Peyote in the coffee again. Ad reps outside the Campus Center selling space to squirrels. Take care, Chachi.

Noon — Lunch break. Eat fried chicken at the Hatch. Unafraid of the effects this might have on today's track practice. Afraid of what mayhem might ensue were Fuzzy Zoeller to stroll by. Might have to kick the fuzz out of him.

1 p.m. — Return to Collegian. Incensed woman waiting on my couch proceeds to call me and the newspaper a racist, homophobic, sexist, elitist, chauvinist, misogynistic, anti- Semitic, blasphemous entity with sadomasochistic tendencies. I concur that making people watch Joe Versus the Volcano — that's right, I dig the flick — may prove her last point, but explain that I haven't a clue about the rest of the allegations.

She responds with a swift, sudden kick to my 'nads. Luckily, I wear a protective cup, as this sort of unexplained phenomena occurs at least once a day down here.

1:30 p.m. — Second complaint call comes in. Spidey-Sense told me to leave the room before the first ring, but why try to run and hide?

Caller: Is this Chris Conner?

Me: Is this Structure? Look, I just sent the check yesterday. Don't send the fashion thugs to rough me up again. You know how long it took me to get that cavalry twill out of my teeth?

Caller: Um, I don't know what you're talking about. I was just calling to say that I think the paper sucks.

Me: Which part?

Caller: The whole thing.

Me: Can you be more specific?

Caller: Well, the coverage of certain entertainment.

Me: Which... wait a minute, who is this?

Caller: Uh, just a concerned student.

Me: You're full of camel poo. You can't fool me this time. This is NBC again, isn't it?

Caller: Rats. Can you please just give us a chance? An Arts cover story? A filler?

Me: Look, I told you last time you called, if you want people to watch your Saturday night line-up, get rid of that glassy-eyed, glassy-acting "Profiler" chick and get that "Pretender" guy a haircut that doesn't look like he just came out of the Tupperware salon.

Caller: But...

Me: Love to talk but I gotta roll. Some photo guy just burnt out his corneas taking a picture of the copier machine at work, and those ad reps are eating the fax paper. Later.

1:45–2:57 p.m. — Field a number of community qualms. The most interesting: Boogie Eaters for Jesus Club president visits. I opt not to shake hands, but do shake my head when I find out SGA actually gave them a budget. Consider applying for RSO status as Disgruntled Black Midgets Club if I don't win the Editor-in-Chief election.

2:58–2:59 p.m. — Get changed and drive to practice.

3–4:45 p.m. — Torture by way of sprint coach, alias Faster–Than–You'll–Ever–Be Jamaican Guy. His easy workouts? Minimal breaking of sound barrier required for desired splits.

4:50–5:30 p.m. — Budget — the meeting at which the news stories are laid out — at the Collegian. News Editor barely audible above the din of ad reps bawling because the graphics terminals won't talk back to them. Receive final call of the day.

Caller: Is this C. Taylor Conner?

Me: Yes, ma'am, although some people call me "Space Cowboy."

Caller: I cannot believe some of the tripe you write. Aren't you supposed to lead by example?

Me: That wasn't nice.

Caller: Well, if I had anything nice to say, you wouldn't be getting this call. You have the writing touch of a rhesus monkey. Only the monkey knows when it's not funny.

Me: Thanks. This has been productive, but I simply must jet. Ad reps. Peyote. Java. Pencil sharpener. You put it together. And will you please stop calling me at the office, mom?

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

The Ed/Op page will be holding workshops for those interested in writing for the section next semester. If you are interested in attending, stop by the Collegian and talk to Mike Burke at Rm. 104A. Or call us at 545-1491.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Lukie Dookie

Luke Meredith

Somebody once told me, "I think I'm gonna puke again."

That was my housemate Sammy, on the night of his 21st birthday. That, among other things, was one of the highlights of a year that is coming to an end.

Since the warm weather has killed any ambition I once had, I thought a little highlight reel of the 1596–1997 school year would do for this week. (Oh, by the way, sorry about yesterday. I couldn't come up with an idea. Some might argue I still haven't.)

Just call it "A Year in Mill Valley — The 381 Story." Like many of us who live off-campus, my house is breaking up soon, and so I'd like to salute it with a little soliloquy. Listed along is various anecdotes of people in my little "circle", all of which are true. (Believe me, truth really is a lot stranger than fiction, A hell of a lot stranger, baby).

"Skippy turns 21"

So this is what happened to Skip. He does upwards of 15 shots between Time-Out and the Pub, all the while telling us he's fine. By 10:30 p.m., he's begging to go home because he can't lift his head. We drive back to the Valley, and after assuring a passing policeman that he was fine (not that said cop seemed to care), he hung his head out the window so he could puke. He then spent an hour walking around Mill Valley, before falling asleep next to the toilet. A definite highlight.

"Travis comes to UMass"

My friend from Kansas flew out to see me in early March. (It's a long story. Basically, we worked at camp together last summer. More on that next week. Maybe.) Travis is a little wacky, (he taught me the "booty dance", which is similar to the "lawnmower" but much, much different) and we had fun. We had a party to trumpet his arrival, which he was late for, (another long story), the highlight of which was a certain young lady bringing with her a certain sausage with a certain amount of extra ketchup to celebrate a certain editorial I had written the week before. It was pretty funny.

By the way, I never ate the sausage. I hate ketchup.

(Actually, my housemate Dave stole it from me before I could eat more than one bite. The ketchup wasn't actually that bad.)

"Sammy turns 21"

This one was fun because Sammy didn't live to see midnight. My only memory is me buying Sammy a "Screaming Nazi" shot and trying to get him to drink it. (He wasn't really conscious at this point.) Since I decided to share in the festivities myself (as sometimes I like to hit the bottle), I was half in the bag, and was hiding behind the shot yelling, "You must drink me, Sammy" in my best German accent. (which really isn't that good, if you must know).

When we got home, Sammy asked me to put saline solution in his contacts because he was too busy puking. Turns out, I put in disinfectant instead, and I ruined them. Sammy made a presentation for his class later the next morning, and I will always respect him for the fact that, despite a lack of contact lenses that left him blind and a hangover that left him hung over (I guess it's not that bad), he stepped it up.

P.S. Word of advice. When you turn 21, wear somebody else's clothes so you don't puke on your own. Sammy knew this, which is why I found my new sweater soaked in puke the next morning.

There have also been mini-highlights, such as...

- The time me, Dave and Sammy had a 20-minute argument about the talents of Notre Dame quarterback Ron Powlus, before 10 a.m. (He sucks, by the way).
- New Years Eve, when Slump and I stayed inside and drank hard liquor until we ran out of it. (Slump made a new friend that night, by the name of "Jack Daniels." He's a mean son-of-a-bitch, if you ask me.) All I remember by the time 1997 rolled around was Slump crawling around the carpet muttering, "I have a new friend. His name is Jack."
- The time our friend Garv (see, I told you I'd put your name in the paper) told the Domino's Pizza guy that we were watching "soft-core pornography." (I had no idea Cinemax has such filthy movies on after 11:00 on Friday nights. I'm appalled, if you must know.)
- The time our pals Kayleen, Liz and Lindsay told me to write an editorial about them, (I forget which time because I lost count a while back), and when I asked what I would say, they told me "Just write about how you had two hot girls on your bed on Saturday night." (I almost wrote it, but I didn't think you guys would believe me.)

This column, if you haven't already figured out, is a completely gratuitous attempt to put in the names of all the people who ask me to write about them all year. If I hadn't written this, they would have killed me. So here's your 15 minutes of fame, kids.

Now will you leave me alone?

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Who's that again?

Bob Dunn

Spring is finally here, and with it thoughts of the end of year and the coming summer.

Fresh-cut grass, idyllic, warm afternoons spent on the lawn in front of the Student Union, spending time between studying for finals and blowing off steam at any number of parties or trips uptown.

Oh yeah, that Spring Concert thing is happening this year. Yak.

After weeks of speculation, "Who's playing? Is there going to be a concert at all? Are they going to use whatever funds were raised last year?" etc. the lineup for this year's concert was announced yesterday. People opened up their newspapers to find a full page ad outlining this year's line-up. The news was received campus-wide with a resounding cry of, "Who the hell are these guys?"

With the exception of G. Love and Special Sauce, no one I talked to has heard of any of the other bands slated to play. In addition, a significant number of people who had heard of G. Love have never actually heard any of his music.

Let's run down the rest of this year's rouge's gallery, shall we?

Redman: Scores an absolute zero on the recognition meter. One person got excited but then realized he thought I told him "Rodman" was playing the concert. Which actually probably isn't a bad idea. He probably can't sing, but at least people know who he is.

Jazz Mandolin Project: I'm hoping that the name is meant as an ironic jest, but since even less people have heard of these guys than the aforementioned, I'm really not sure.

702: Again, no one has the slightest clue who these folks are, but based on the name alone, maybe they'll be 2.26 times better than 311 and about 2.9 times better than Front 242. I doubt it, though.

Trick Knee: Well, who better to open up a concert full of national bands no one's heard of than a local band no one's heard of.

Let's assess where we find ourselves this year, shall we? After the cancellation of last year's concert, the campus was told that the money raised would be pooled together with this year's funds to provide a quality show. Add to that, the sponsorship money from WHMP, Newbury Comics, the SGA and the Daily Collegian (yes, we're helping to pay for this pig, too), not to mention the $2 that students are getting charged and the $15 the general public (who I'm sure will be showing up in droves for this one) will have to pay, and this is the best that UPC can do?

Is that the concert we've been waiting two years to see? I mean, I know UPC tries hard. They're stuck in the unenviable position of trying to entertain the entire campus and not piss anyone off at the same time. This year, however, I think someone got their wires crossed and managed to put together a concert that has the entire campus community engaging in a collective yawn.

I'm assuming that there was some purpose in setting up a table and having people request bands they'd like to see. Unless one Redman fan (I'm assuming somebody has heard of them) signed a couple of thousand times, I'm not sure what the point of that little exercise was.

I know money's tight, I know that touring schedules have to be taken into account, I know that as many tastes as possible need to be considered, but I think that the campus and surrounding community was expecting a little more after having to wait for two years.

Maybe if UPC tries really hard, next time they can cancel two concerts, make people wait three years and come up with a lineup that absolutely no one will want to see. Based on this year's evidence, I'll bet they can do it.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

More environmental coverage needed

To the Editor:

I would like to criticize the Collegian for their dismal record on covering environmental issues on and around campus. In particular, I am concerned about the Collegian's total lack of coverage, even after being notified of both the Five College Earth Day and Bike to Campus/Alternative Transportation Day. These events were both given good coverage in the Daily Hampshire Gazette, a publication which does not devote itself to campus or student activities. While some editors may argue that the selection of events to be covered is based solely upon the "interest" of the reporter, I suggest that reporters should actively seek out events which are of social or political relevance to the student body and the local community. Apparently, the Collegian does not feel that environmental issues and events are important enough to publish. I strongly suggest than an editorial/news position be created to cover environmental affairs on a regular basis.

Jason Davis
Amherst

Show some respect

To the Editor:

What's my favorite thing to do after a UMass weekend? Is it picking up your half-eaten bean burrito in the road after it [has] been run over 10 times? Or maybe it's throwing away your empty Coke bottle after you've urinated in it and left it for me, inches from the trash can. Even better, perhaps you have deliberately smashed a beer bottle in the parking lot so I cut my hand picking it up the next morning. This is a typical weekend for some of us.

This may be why the University is known as "Zoo-Mass." I can understand all the partying and getting drunk, but not to the extent that it looks like a hurricane hit the town of Amherst after a weekend. How would you like to pick up a wrapper only to find vomit underneath? Does this sound like fun? We only get $5.25/hour for working all night to serve you.

The least you can do is give yourselves, your fellow students and your University a little respect. Don't throw snowballs or tacos inside a store, and by all means do not leave disgusting presents for me outside.

Pam Fyzocha
Amherst

"Speedy" comic in poor taste

To the Editor:

Ha!Ha!Ha! I just read another captivating "Speedy" comic and I can't help but be refreshed with this innovative comic strip. Who would have thought that a cross between Garfield, Heathcliff and a smack-addict would make for such entertainment? Seriously, using a speech by Martin Luther King in [yesterday's] super-crazy episode was a stroke of genius — how someone could take the "I have a dream" speech and make it so funny, I simply can't comprehend.

Sorry, I just couldn't help myself. But come on, what the hell is up with "Speedy"? At first I thought it was some kind of "Far Side," only with humor that was more difficult to grasp. I now realize that I am not alone, that there are others like me who also do not understand the significance of "Speedy," which leads me to one conclusion: that it is "Speedy" which is idiotic, and not me. Not that I am trying to sound like an Amherst PC-er but in my opinion, putting a speech by Martin Luther King is in poor taste, especially when there is a fat, ugly cat commentating on it. Maybe it's unfortunate that Speedy's political implications are lost on me, but I don't think so.

"It's time to start dreaming." Okay, I'll start dreaming about a day when Speedy's slot is taken up by something amusing, and not something that rips off Jim Davis or a great civil rights activist.

Jesse Carpenter
Orchard Hill

Once upon a time, they were all [illegible]

The type of actors whose popularity studios could depend on to spur a release to at least a decent opening weekend. The caliber of thespian who would receive calls incessantly, not make them, to snag a job in a major film. They were names.

Then something happened. A misstep or series of blunders. The wrong role at the wrong time. A flop of gargantuan proportions. Before they could phone CAA to drop their agent, they had contracted an STV (Straight-To-Video).

The following ex-names are a few of the tragically stricken:

Rutger Hauer: One has to wonder how you go from delivering the harrowing soliloquy at the climax of Blade Runner to unintentionally harrowing performances in any number of cut-rate action STVs. For Christ's sake, he's even appeared opposite Thomas Ian Griffith, a far cry from C. Thomas Howell, his co-star in The Hitcher.

C. Thomas Howell: Speak of the devil. Okay, so you're an affable, young talent who's just showcased some semblance of comic timing in an offbeat hit. What do you do if you're C. Tommy, star of Soul Man? Why, venture into STV tough-guy stuff, of course.

Jeff Speakman: While it's true he only had one major theatrical

Turn to STV, page 2

"Can trash ever become respectable?" asks John Waters in the new introduction to the 1981 memoir, Shock Value. When John Waters refers to terms like "trash" and "shock value," he means it — he's not just some misunderstood neb who needs to be hugged like Howard Stern. The release of a 25th anniversary edition of Pink Flamingos, playing in select theaters now, reaffirms his title as the Prince of Puke.

The term "B-movie" doesn't even really fit Waters' movies well. Inspired by violent and exploitive cinematic garbage that came out of the '50s and '60s, Waters has aspired to "make the trashiest motion pictures in cinematic history."

"To me, bad taste is what entertainment is all about," Waters explains. "If someone vomits watching one of my films, it's like getting a standing ovation. But one must remember that there is such a thing as good bad taste and bad bad taste.

"It's easy to disgust someone; I could make a ninety minute film of people getting their limbs hacked off, but this would only be bad bad taste and not very stylish or original. To understand bad taste one must have very good taste. Good bad taste can be creatively nauseating but must, at the same time, appeal to the especially twisted sense of humor, which is anything but universal."

By combining his fascination of "sick" elements in our society, the oddities that he observed growing up in Baltimore and heavy doses of irony, Waters has created some of hilarious, albeit revolting, films — with a little help from his friends. At the front of

Turn to SHOCK, page 2

Edward D. Wood Jr. has been hailed by both critics and movie buffs alike, as the worst film director of all time. When considering his unmatchingly bizzare career, as well as the contributions he inevisably made in the world of schlock cinema, one must realize that Wood merely contained a unique perspective of filmmaking. However, despite how poorly he may have been recieved during his time, Ed Wood's accomplishments will not be easily forgotten. So I ask of his disbelivers to retract their statement and rephrase it as such: "Ed Wood — the most entirely unique film director of all time."

The Ed Wood story represents an important time period in cinema history — the golden age of Hollywood. Film students learn about this period of the '40s and '50s as a time when the five major studios were more like galactic corporate empires rather than entertainment providers. The entire planet looked at Hollywood as a glimmering city of gold where the stars frolicked about among the rich and famous. This was a time when movies were dazzling and TV was still a curiosity which hadn't quite caught on in the mainstream world.

Ed Wood was the perfect antithesis to the Hollywood persona. He was the prime example of the darker side of this so-called magical city. Lost in the shadows of the great directors such as Cecil B. DeMille, Billy Wilder and Wood's personal favorite, Orson Welles, Wood was, to no avail, determined to "tell stories about things that he finds interesting." He worked for a studio as a maintainance hand to help pay his bills and relentlessly wrote scripts with the intention that somewhere, somehow, he would one day be taken seriously.

To look at Ed Wood on the surface was to see an incredibly kind and pleasant man. Often described as an eternal optimist, Wood always wore a bright smile and contained the enthusiasm of a young innocent child. He was born in Poughkeepsie, NY in 1922, the son of a postal worker. He was your average little kid, a boy scout who was in love with his pulp magazines.

Turn to WOOD, page 2

■ Wood

continued from page 5

comic books and of course, movies. Recieving his first camera at the age of seventeen, Wood found a deep affection for the art and skill of filmmaking.

After Pearl Harbor, Wood quickly joined the Marines and was awarded a purple heart for his services. Upon returning home, he moved to Los Angeles to realize his dreams and found pain and hardship in the bitter world of movie production. In addition to his screenplays, Wood wrote plays and television pilots and surrounded himself in the close company of his stock actors. His leading lady also doubled as his real life girlfriend, the beautiful Delores Fuller, who later went on to a successful songwriting career, including a number of Elvis Presley hits.

There was however, another side to Wood's boy–next–door image. Behind his wide–eyed smile, there contained the secret life of Ed Wood, that eventually only through his first feature film, 1953's Glen or Glenda, he could show to the world. Edward D. Wood Jr. was a transvestite who felt that wearing women's clothes not only relaxed him, but made him feel more close to women in general. He defended his heterosexuality gravely and used Glen or Glenda as a propagandish way to express that not all cross dressers are in fact gay. Often at parties, Ed would dress up in lady's attire and perform sexy dance numbers or even conduct stage production in angora sweaters, angora being his most favored fabric.

It was eventually through his unlikely frienship with former horror film superstar Bela Lugosi that Wood found much of his inspiration. Bela had been one of Wood's favorite actors while growing up and Dracula, which starred Lugosi as the head vampire, was supposedly the first movie Wood saw as a child. Lugosi's story is another tragic drama of Hollywood's insecurities. During the '30s, Lugosi was one of the biggest stars in the business, but as he got older, Hollywood seemed to forget what a sensation he had once been. Wood believed he could save the aging "boogie man" from severe drug addiction and depression if he gave him the opportunity to work again.

Lugosi stared in three of Wood's most "sort of" remembered film's including Glen or Glenda, Bride of the Monster, and a short segment of Plane 9 from Outer Space (Lugosi died even before production began). In Glen or Glenda, Lugosi played the mythical spirit who oversaw the confused, young transvestite. In order to make the film feature length, Wood was forced to include several minutes of random S&M footage of a man and woman taking turns whipping each other on a couch. Needless to say, one can assume why the film's producer, George Weiss, threatened to kill Wood if he ever saw him again. Wood, being the eternal optimist he was, was unwilling to accept this criticism and decided to show off his film to 20th Century Fox. After their understandable lack of interest, Wood decided to heighten his credentials to include producer.

The suspense thriller Jail Bait followed in '54, but it was with 1955's horror flick Bride of the Monster that Wood hoped to find recognition. Lugosi was cast as Dr. Erich Vornoff, a betrayed scientist who decides to get even by creating a super human race of genetically altered people. Swedish wrestling sensation Tor Johnson played Vornoff's lackey, while female lead Loretta King practicly conned herself the role of the innocent victim.

Obviously Bride of the Monster was a financial disaster, but this did not stray our young hero. In 1956, after selling his film noirish script The Violent Years, Wood was filled with a renewed confidance — until that movie bombed too. Depressed about Lugosi's death and quickly falling into the depths of alcoholism (not to mention his girlfriend had left him), Wood's life was in shambles. Then things began to change. He met a new girl and found investors to produce what he intended to be his science fiction masterpiece: Plan 9 From Outer Space.

The investors who decided to put up the money for Plan 9 were none other than a Beverly Hills Protestant church. Their one condition was that Wood and his friends had to be baptized before production could begin. Wood even found a replacement for Lugosi in his new girlfriend's chiropractor, whose forehead seemed to match the dead vampire's strikingly. Eventually the Protestants felt Wood's filmmaking techniques were too primitive for comfort. They did not approve of Wood's reluctance to shoot a scene more than once or even care about why during one cut it would be light out, and during that same scene it would all of a sudden be dark. Wood, however, urged them that the audience is not concerned with the small details, but rather with the big picture.

Plan 9 did eventually get made, and included such innovative props as paper plates dangling on string as threatening hostile alien invaders. Wood's aliens believe that human kind is too irresponsible to control nuclear energy, so they should be killed. The weapon of choice used by the sadistic enemies is raising the dead to have them terrorize the countryside.

After Plan 9 bombed, Wood's career took a drastic turn for the worse. He became disenchanted and degressed to writing sexploitation novels like "The Sex Library," "The Sexecutives" and "Death of a Transvestite." His later film works included a divulgence into the genre of monster nudle flicks. He both wrote and directed such unfortunate

Turn to WOOD, page 9

■ shock

continued from page 5

Waters' groupies was Divine, a heavy–set, nasal drag queen who became synonymous with Waters' films until his death in 1988.

John Waters' films

The following is a partial list of Waters' films that are available on video and are recommended:

• Pink Flamingos (1972) The film that made John Waters, well... John Waters. Divine plays Babs Johnson, who is forced to defend her honored title as "the filthiest person alive" when locals get jealous of her famed position and an all-out battle ensues. After 25 years, copulating with a chicken, obsessing over eggs and noshing on dog shit still seems delightfully strange, and yes... shocking.

• Desperate Living (1977) A lesbian and her true love, her 400 pound maid, hit the road to the magical kingdom of Mortville a Shangri-La for criminals ruled by a demented queen, played by Edith Massey. Unapologetically crass and violent, Waters says "Desperate Living is a munstrous fairy–tale comedy dealing with mental anguish, penis envy, and political corruption. Its target audience is very neurotic adults with the mentalities of eight–year–olds."

• Polyester (1981) Divine is at the center of this comedy about alcoholism and infidelity. As the abused wife, she finds love and support from '50s heartthrob Tab Hunter. What makes Polyester really super is that it was originally released in "Odorvision," a scratch-and-sniff card was distributed to the audience and when a flashing number appeared on the screen, you smelled the corresponding number. You can imagine the results.

• Female Trouble (1973) The rise and fall of Dawn Davenport (Divine). Bad seed Dawn knocks the Christmas tree onto her mother when she doesn't get the pair of "cha-cha heels" she wanted, gets acid thrown on her face and adopts a life of crime, espousing the motto "Crime is Beauty."

• Hairspray (1988) One of the Prince of Puke's most accessible films — there are no murders, sexual deviants or overt use of drugs. Instead, Waters contrasts the teen dance shows of the early '60s with the early Civil Rights Movement. Cameos abound, with Sonny Bono, Debby Harry, Jerry Stiller, Pia Zadora and Cars frontman Rich Ocasek.

• Cry-Baby (1990) Waters' homage to everything that makes teen delinquency fun features Johnny Depp as the bad boy who wins the hearts of Ricki Lake. "Melrose Place" alumni Amy Locane and exporn queen Traci Lords. Also on board are Iggy Pop, Willem Dafoe, '50s heartthrob Troy Donahue and Warholia ex–porn-star Joe Dallesandro.

• Serial Mom (1995) Kathleen Turner stars as Beverly Sutphin, a homicidal matron who turns against her suburban neighbors when they refuse to recycle, brush their teeth and rewind their video tapes. Ricki Lake and Sam Waterston star as the daughter and husband Beverly is hell-bent on protecting. Waters skewers the lionization of violence in the media and includes riotous cameos by L7, Patty Hearst and Suzanne Somers.

Jeremy Brothers is a Collegian columnist.

■ STV

continued from page 5

release (The Perfect Weapon), the martial artist comedian/actor Kevin Pollak referred to as "the Kung Fu Jew" still pulls down a paycheck in the land of STVs.

Molly Ringwald: Here's the lowdown. John Hughes prodigy shines in early '80s. Prodigy splits with Hughes. Prodigy makes Fresh Horses with Andrew McCarthy (who, incidentally, is excluded from the Wall of Fame only by virtue of the Weekend at Bernie's series). Prodigy unwanted by Hollywood. Prodigy goes to France. Prodigy returns from France. Prodigy stuck in STV "guns and buns" mire, despite ABC sitcom, "Townies" (which failed anyway).

Brad Dourif: Possibly the only other major player from One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest (see High School High to check out the depths to which Louise Fletcher has sunk) not to go on to bigger and badder stuff. A veteran of, and perhaps the most talented actor of, the STV scene.

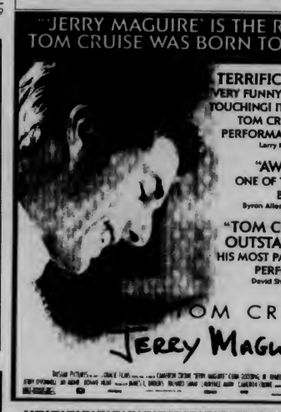
Michael Madsen: An ace at toeing the fine line between A–movie bliss and B–movie purgatory, Mike can bang out the big–budget stuff like Species, then show up on the set of some God–awful pieap of STV celluloid the next day.

Tia Carrere: If you never trust Siskel and Ebert again, here's the reason: they named her a talent to watch after her performance in Wayne's World. Um, yeah.

Erle Roberts: Hail to the king. Although le roi might have spent the '80s too coked out too notice that the Star 80 quality roles had given way to absolute schwank, he is still by far the greatest Method actor ever to appear in a Best of the Best sequel.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

The Gatehouse Programs in Graduate Education
Tel.(203) 932-7037 Fax (203) 931-6099



Free Tuition!!!

Let our Gatehouse Programs be a Gateway to your New Career in Education

- Master's degree in Teacher Certification
- Sixth Year Diploma in School Administration
- Internships & residencies
- 1 year programs available
- Conveniently scheduled classes
- Sites throughout Connecticut
- Fully accredited & State-approved
- Nationally recognized program

creator & director:
Dr. Louise M. Soares
University of New Haven
Department of Education

The
Edwin M. Rossman
Alumni Career Forum

GLBT

Date: Thursday, May 1st, 1997
Time: 7 P.M.
Location: Campus Center Room 804

Moderator and Keynote Speaker:

Liz Winfeld — President of Common Ground, a consulting firm specializing in sexual orientation workplace issues and co-author of "Straight Talk about Gays in the Workplace".

Alumni/ae Panelists:

Mark McGrath '87 PoliSci and Management	Boston Mayor Tom Menino's liaison to the Gay and Lesbian Community
Tuti Scott '87 Exercise Science	Director Corporate Relations for the Women's Sports Foundation
Karen Drummey-Curtis '88 Psychology	Small business owner; former Higher Education Administrator, Student Affairs
Sharon Moore '88 Finance	Global Accounts Manager for ATT

Sponsored by:
Office of Alumni Relations
University Career Center
Stonewall Center

THE
EDWIN M. ROSSMAN
ALUMNI CAREER FORUM
DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER STUDIES

DATE: Friday, May 2, 1997
TIME: 3:30 PM
LOCATION: Mitchell Lounge - Skinner Hall

SPONSORED BY:
UNIVERSITY CAREER CENTER
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER STUDIES

This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!

ALUMNI PANELISTS:

Malini Biswas '92	Work/Family Directions Client Services Manager Boston, MA
Jill Chiaro '95	Sales Account Executive Weatherproof Garment Co. New York, NY
Stephen Sandler '96	Insurance Analyst Mass Mutual University of Hartford Campus Hartford, CT

Outstanding Alumnus of the Year
Eugenia Ulasewicz
Senior Vice-President
Director of Stores, Midwest Region
Saks Fifth Avenue
New York, NY

For more information, Please contact:
Mather Career Center
545-2224

Summer Special Issue

A Special Supplement to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Places to go this Summer:

Riverside Park (413) 786-9300	Water Country (603) 436-6566
Meadows (860) 621-0000	Tanglewood (617) 266-1492
Foxwoods Casino (860) 885-3000	Greatwoods (508) 339-2333
Boston Red Sox (617) 267-8661	NY Yankees (718) 293-6000
Six Flags Great Adventure (908) 928-1821	Mohegan Sun Casino (860) 204-8000

And for those of you who had fun at symposiums!
UMass Continuing Education.....545-2414

Summer

Freshman English I & II	$261.00*
Introduction to Sociology	$261.00*
Introduction to Psychology	$261.00*
Calculus I & II	$348.00*
College Chemistry I & II	$468.00*
Statistics	$348.00*

Add to your course credits for 1/2 the cost.
Take courses while you're home for the summer at Massachusetts Bay Community College

Massachusetts Bay Community College
50 Oakland Street • Wellesley Hills, MA 02181
19 Flagg Drive • Framingham • MA • 01702

Info: (617) 239-2500
E-mail: mbccinfo@mbcc.mass.edu

*costs listed are valid for Massachusetts residents for Summer Sessions 1997. Call for more information on non-resident rates.

The joys & benefits of in-line skating

UMMMM... Are the sweet smells of barbecues making your mouth water with delight for flame broiled chicken, hamburgers, hot dogs and shish-kabobs? Then watch out and get a grip on your appetite before you take another sip of cold beer to wash down a golden cheeseburger or grilled veggies because today is May 1 and swimsuit season is right around the corner.

That's right, the month of May has finally arrived and now is the time to whip your legs into shape for a summer full of trekking up rugged nature trails, lunging for volleyballs, diving for frisbees and parading around the perimeters of suburban estates behind a lawn mower.

Strong legs are vital to support you in these endeavors and are the foundation of summer recreation. If you are interested in powerful, walnut–cracking thighs, then slip into a pair of rollerblades and get in shape for the summer on the Northampton Bike Path and the Norwottuck Rail–Trail.

A diligent in–line skating routine (three to five times a week), exerting a high amount of force at a relatively low frequency, will build powerful quads and glutes. Skating also strengthens hip abductors and adductors, ultimately enhancing your legs' ability to make quick lateral movements.

In–line skating requires skaters to adapt a low stance and skate in a crouched position as if they were going to sit down in a chair. Skaters must transfer their weight by gliding on one skate, using the other skate to propel their body by pushing off to the side, swinging the opposite arm forward for momentum. It is very important that skaters really thrust with their legs and resist from twisting their shoulders.

A bike path is a smooth way for attaining enjoyment on wheels over a paved surface where the production of fumes and noises associated with internal combustion engines is prohibited. Northampton is a densely populated city with numerous cafes and bookstores that thrive in brick-front buildings and century old houses.

Accessible to the center of this colonial renaissance is the 2.7 mile Northampton Bike Path, a flat, shady corridor of tranquility which links Northampton's outlying neighborhoods to its busy downtown streets. The Northampton Bike Path was created in 1983, ten years after it was first proposed, and is managed by the city.

This 10–foot–wide bike path enjoys high standards of maintenance and safety. Its paved surface is buffered with additional width of mowed grass along each side giving the path a pleasant and friendly feel. Although throughout this path road crossings are relatively numerous, all of these intersections have stop signs, and cross walks are painted directly on the path's pavement.

Alfresco News with: Liz Anderson

The best point to start the Northampton Bike Path is at the northwestern end in Frank Newhall Look Memorial Park, located on the opposite side of Main Street (Route 9). A small entrance fee is charged for vehicle parking. To find the bike path from the park, exit the main gate, cross Main Street and follow Bridge Road for fifty feet.

The Norwottuck Rail–Trail is named after the Native American word Norwottuck, which means "In the mist of the river." The Norwottuck Rail–Trail links together the Pioneer Valley's prosperous farms, diverse academic institutions and various commercial sectors. It bonds Amherst, Hadley and Northampton together with an 8.5 mile path of smooth, car–free pavement.

The Norwottuck Rail–Trail follows the route of the Massachusetts Central Railroad, which was established in

Turn to IN-LINE page 5

Amherst summer season offers quiet peace of mind

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

Summer can be one of the most enjoyable, peaceful times — especially here in Amherst. Traffic is non–existent and you never seem to wait in line anywhere (even Antonio's). With all this time students seem to have on their hands as summer approaches, their thoughts usually turn to new forms of recreation — and with good reason. Even is you pick up some sort of job for the summer, odds are it won't suck up nearly as much time as you've spent trying to do all the reading for that silly Gen Ed course you're stuck taking.

So, the question arises, "What are you going to do with all your free time?"

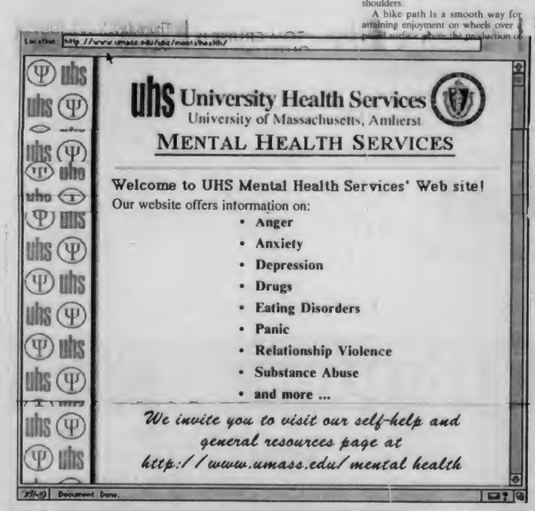
One idea is to enjoy the beautiful weather summer often provides by laying out with a book. Books haven't been around as long as summer has, but they're an excellent escape. There are two ways you might be able to approach summer reading. First option: two words — big books. If you don't have the time to read Dostoyevsky's "The Brothers Karamazov" during the school year, then summer might be the time to pick up the slack. Other big books you might try to find time to pick up are local–student–turned– good David Foster Wallace's "Infinite Jest" (it has a subplot about the Quebecois — what more could you want?) or wacky Italian Umberto Eco's medieval monastic potboiler, "The Name of the Rose." Before you know

Turn to SUMMER, page 5

University Health Services
Summer Health Coverage

1997 Basic Health Fee:
$208.00

1997 Student Family Plan:
$463.00



Coverage Period: June 1, 1997-August 31, 1997
(if enrolled by June 1)

(Only UMass students with Basic and SHBP are eligible for the Student Family Plan)

Visit the Member Services Department located in the main lobby for enrollment

577-5490

Eligibility: Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke, Smith, and UMass Students

LEARNING FOR THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE
• LEARNING FOR A LIFETIME •

UMASS SUMMER SESSION 1997

Now is the time to advance your career, explore other options, plan for a new future, get ahead in your studies, or enrich your life.
• Hundreds of Credit Courses
• Workshops for Personal and Professional Enrichment
• Part-time Specialized Degree Programs–Bachelor's and Master's
• Professional Development Courses for Teachers

Classes held days, evenings, and weekends
• Session I: June 3-July 11
• Session II: July 15-August 21
• Variable Sessions

Call 413-545-0107 for a free course catalog or e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Find it on our website: http://www.umass.edu/contined/

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION • UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

WORDS & PICTURES MUSEUM

HOLY SET-UP! WE'VE BEEN FRAMED!

BATMAN

JUNE 5th - SEPTEMBER 14th

ON EXHIBIT • ON EXHIBIT • ON EXHIBIT • ON EXHIBIT

RESTLESS JOY
THE ART OF PAUL MAVRIDES
NOW THRU JUNE 1ST

140 MAIN ST., NORTHAMPTON • 413-586-8545
http://www.wordsandpictures.org

IRON HORSE
ALL AGES
ALL THE TIME
thursday, may 1, 7 pm
CHRIS WHITLEY
thursday, may 1, 10 pm, $8 adv.
JAZZ MANDOLIN PROJECT
& JONAS HELLBORG
WITH SHAWN LANE & JEFF SIPES acoustic & heavy jazz grooves
friday, may 2, 10 pm, $8 adv.
BUCKETHEAD
AND SLUMBERLAND
Jimi Hendrix for the 21st Century
monday, may 5
FREEDY JOHNSON
AND THE MAGGIES AND WILLIE WISELY
tuesday, may 6, 7 pm, $6 adv.
WARE RIVER CLUB
AND JACK INGRAM
Ray Mason and Texas Honky Tonk
tuesday, may 6, 10 pm, $8 adv.
GUSTER
and the Pushstars
Boston's best bongofloat aftermarock
wednesday, may 7, 7&10 pm
JOHN MAYALL
Powerhouse Brit Blues • $17.50 adv
thursday, may 8, 7&10 pm
BELA FLECK &
TONY TRISCHKA
DAVID IMPROV
tuesday, may 13, 8:30 pm, $6 adv.
SLEATER-KINNEY
and PIRATE JENNY
MAY 24: TUATARA MARK ERTEL MINUS 5
JULY 24: CHARLIE HUNTER QUARTET
TICKETS: For the Record, at the Northampton Box Office or call 586-8686
24 HOUR CONCERT INFO
413-584-0610

The birthplace of it all: New Orleans

New Orleans, La., is able to lay claim to being the cradle in which most jazz styles were born out of a tradition that mixed European classical sensibilities with African vocalizations and syncopation. This musical nursery spawned many great musicians such as Louis Armstrong and, more contemporarily, Allen Toussaint, and the Marsalis and the Neville families as well. One of the lures to New Orleans still is its strong jazz culture.

After Dixieland had its time and began metamorphosing into the Swing/Big Band era of jazz, New Orleans did not just shrink away into another dead scene town like Seattle or Athens, Ga. has its rock music, New Orleans, still retaining a Dixie feel, became a safe haven for blues and soul music, creating a sound that mixed cajun sounds with a deep, swampy feel and stirring it all in to create a unique regional sound that made it big worldwide.

Larry Hamilton grew up in New Orleans after WWII and fell in love with its soulful vibes early on. When he was 15, he got his first job singing behind David Batiste in his band, The Gladiators. After that job ended in the mid-'70s, Hamilton was also able to look back on side gigs with Curtis Mayfield, Jackie Wilson and Li'l Johnny Taylor. In the late '70s, he joined Allen Toussaint's group and has remained associated with the legendary producer/arranger/ songwriter since.

Hamilton's voice, comparable to Otis Redding's, graces his eponymous debut on the NYNO (New York–New Orleans) Record Label. Within the disc's bounds, he balances many styles that can all be traced back to origins in New Orleans, such as soul–blues, funk and modern R&B. His duet with Tricia Boutté on the subtle Bonnie Raitt–ish "You Make It Hard" (written, like most of the songs on the album, by Toussaint) is an example. "Still The One," with its funky horn riffs, sounds like it should be a Toussaint tune, but it's a Hamilton–penned tune, with a lot of influence from his pal. The album is a little repetitive in bouncing between soul, funk and blues, but it holds up well, nevertheless.

The brass band, with an instrumentation of bass drum, snare drum (two separate people often), trombone, trumpet and tuba is one of the ensemble set–ups that can be immediately traced to New Orleans. The New Birth Brass Band's recent album, D–Boy (NYNO), takes this Dixieland jazz lineup into the '90s, tossing in modern urban music rhythms, raps and ad libbed chants, much like at a New Orleans street jam. From the bluesy Dixie feel of "Whoopin' Blues" to the aptly titled danceable number "Shakin' That Ass," this music could be good for any party in Crescent City or wherever.

When discussing New Orleans music, you just can't leave out something about Louis Armstrong, even something as minor as dropping the name in casual association with New Orleans like I did in that first paragraph. Verve has recently released an album that brings together two different generations of New Orleans jazz separated by over 60 years of age between the representatives of these generations: Doc Cheatham & Nicolas Payton.

Cheatham's career began in the early '20s gigging around New Orleans, even sitting in as a substitute trumpeter in some of "Satchmo" Armstrong's earliest big band shows, as well as bouncing around between the bands of Teddy Wilson and Cab Calloway. Now, the 91–year old singer/ trumpeter meets the 23–year old Payton (with two previous Verve releases under his belt also), whose trumpet style is so forceful and melodic that he is being called the "New Satchmo." The two trumpeters come together on this new combo disc to run through some of Armstrong's favorite tunes like Hoagy Carmichael's romantic "Stardust," Eddie Heyman and Johnny Green's "I Cover The Waterfront" and Neil Moret and Richard Whiting's "She's Funny That Way," one of many tunes on this album that features Cheatham's low, smooth vocals. Repetition and unoriginality bog this disc down from becoming anything memorable, but it is a relaxing, casual listen that doesn't offend.

And ah, those Marsalises. From Ellis' early beginnings in the post–Dixie New Orleans sound to his children Wynton, Branford and Delfeayo's dabblings in be–bop, synth–jazz, and now funk/R&B/hip–hop styles, these boys have done almost everything in the African–American music pantheon. Buckshot Lefonque's new album, Music Evolution, is truly a fine conglomeration of modern urban sounds, spearheaded by Branford's loping saxophones.

There are straight–up rap tunes like "Black Monday" (about the 1995 Million Man March) and the title track. frame R&B ballads sung and wrote by silky–voiced keyboardist Frank McComb ("Another Day," "Phoenix"), as well as energetic jazz/hip–hop instrumentals ("James Brown Parts I & II," "Jungle Grove," which features a hair–raising solo by trumpeter Russell Gunn, and a hidden final track) and a Fishbone–esque rock/funk tune, "My Way (Doin' It)." This mix of sounds, and the way they were sequenced, is an excellent illustration of where jazz is going how it's progressed since leaving the Bourbon Street of the first two decades of the 20th Century.

Elsewhere in the world of jazz and blues, we have the new album by harmonica player/singer Charlie Musselwhite, Rough News (Pointblank/Virgin), which is, like Music Evolution, a portrait of the many offshoots of a kind of music — in this case the blues. The powerful acoustic Delta blues of "Clarksdale Boogie" is well–mixed in with the electrified Chicago sounds of "Rainy Highway" and "I Sat & Cried," the Latin flavor of "Feel It In Your Heart" and the jazzy "Harlem Nocturne," providing a portrait of a versatile blues musician in Musselwhite whose harmonica skills are also very commendable all over next to his guttural voice.

And, as I did last week, I will continue with featuring yet another disc in the latest batch of Fantasy Inc.'s "Original Jazz Classics" huge series. Kenny Burrell and Coleman Hawkins led a band into the much–used Van Gelder Studio in Englewood Cliffs, N.J. one rainy day in 1962 to put in their contribution to the Prestige/Moodsville label, which presented - ta-dah! - quiet, moody jazz.

Burrell's sound on this album, Bluesy Burrell, is almost acoustic–sounding in its thickness at times. A lot of jazz guitar (and even Burrell's own sound at times) sounds a little too rounded and thin, but not on Bluesy Burrell. Supported by the Latin flavor of Osvaldo Ferres' "Tres Palabras," the mellow jazz balladry of "Guilty," and the upbeat jump of Burrell's own "Montono Blues," he had a good framework for his fret mastery, prodded on by the soulful cunning of the veteran Hawkins' moving sax sounds. Bluesy Burrell is a great album to chill to, and I'm sure the rain only added to its mysterious density.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian Columnist.

COURTESY CHARLIE PIZZARELLO

Buckshot Lefonque's new album, Music Evolution, paints a portrait of modern urban music that has evolved from New Orleans styles.

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
www.mustangcomputer.com
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 19 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles left at Staples onto Rte 116N, first right to light, left to Center I-91 S take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs. It's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only.
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, MAY 4

Summertime in PARIS from $199* one way
Non-Stop B747 service from Boston
Hotels from $38 per night based on double occupancy/ flexible voucher program go as you please.
Phone cards-Youth Hostel ID Cards - Metro Passes - Museum Passes - Rail Passes - All issued on the spot.
Car Rentals also available
Credit cards welcome no fee.
20% - 25% Discount to all students on scheduled carriers, with service to Spain, Italy, Germany & France.
Domestic travel also included.
AIR TRAVEL SPECIALISTS
Phone: Toll Free 888-837-6448
Fax: (310) 937-6587
Internet: http://www.francetravel.com

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385
• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

Ride The Wave of Knowledge
Summer School
Registration begins May 5th
• Over 100 Undergraduate and Graduate Courses
• General Education and Major Courses
• Low Cost
Day and evening classes available
Session I Evenings May 27 - July 3
Session II Days July 7 - August 1
Session II Evenings July 7 - August 14
~For a free catalog call 413-572-5224~
Westfield STATE COLLEGE
Division of Graduate and Continuing Education
Western Avenue • Westfield, Massachusetts

Students at these colleges returned from vacation with more than a tan. So can you. Summer at Dean.
ASSUMPTION, BENTLEY, BRIDGEWATER, BRYANT, BU, CALIFORNIA STATE, FRAMINGHAM, FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL, HARVARD, HEIDELBERG, HOLY CROSS, LEHIGH, MASS. BAY, NORTHEASTERN, PROVIDENCE, STONEHILL, UMASS, UNH, UNIVERSITY COLLEGE CORK IRELAND, URI, U VERMONT, VANDERBILT, W VIRGINIA, WESLEYAN, WHEATON, AND 37 MORE...
CONTINUING EDUCATION
Earn extra credits this summer and improve your tan. Bring your degree closer. Improve a grade. Students from leading colleges earn their place in the sun at Dean. You'll find accelerated learning programs with flexible schedules. Choose from accelerated 6-week day or evening sessions, or a 12-week evening program. (If you don't care about the tan, go days and evenings!) Dean offers free parking, easy rail access. Register now by mail, phone, fax or walk-in. For complete information call 800-870-6369 or 508-541-1629.
Special late-night registration May 21
Session I — May 27-July 1
Session II — July 7-Aug. 14
12-Week Session May 27-Aug. 14
Dean COLLEGE
A private two-year college
FRANKLIN, MA

NO TIME FOR "SIESTA" WITH THESE GREAT PRICES!
LIQUORS 44
Celebrate CINCO de MAYO
BUD & BUD LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS 30 PACK $14.99 + DEP.
MILLER HIGH LIFE, GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS 30 PACK $10.49 + DEP.
CORONA BEER & DOS EQUIS AMBER 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.49 + DEP.
GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY REGULAR & LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS $7.29 + DEP.
SAMUEL ADAMS SUMMER ALE & BOSTON LAGER 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.99 + DEP.
WOODCHUCK CIDER ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, MICH, MICH LT, MICH AMBER BOCK $39.99 + DEP.
WINE OF THE MONTH
C.K. Mondavi CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $5.49
BERINGER WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.99
CARLO ROSSI WINES ALL FLAVORS 4.0 LITER $7.49
RENE BARBIER RED & WHITE 1.5 LITER $6.49
KENDALL JACKSON VINTNER'S CHARDONNAY 750 ML $9.99
ROBERT MONDAVI WOODBRIDGE CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, SAUVIGNON BLANC 1.5 LITER $10.99
JACK DANIELS COUNTRY COCKTAILS ALL FLAVORS 4 PK. BOTTLES $3.49
JOSE CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA 750 ML $9.99
SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.75L $14.49
JIM BEAM BOURBON 1.75L SALE $14.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $11.49
GILBEY'S GIN 1.75L $12.49
Old Smuggler SCOTCH WHISKEY 1.75L SALE $13.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -4.00 FINAL COST $9.49
Captain Morgan SPICED RUM 750 ML $8.99
T.G.I. FRIDAY'S AUTHENTIC FROZEN DRINKS ALL FLAVORS 1.75L $10.99
We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
Don't Drink and Drive
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 5/1/97 THRU WEDS. 5/7/97
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

■ in-line

continued from page 7

Rail–Trail links together the Pioneer Valley's prosperous farms, diverse academic institutions and various commercial sectors. It bonds Amherst, Hadley and Northampton together with an 8.5 mile path of smooth, car–free pavement.

The Norwottuck Rail–Trail follows the route of the Massachusetts Central Railroad, which was established in 1887 to carry passengers and industrial products from the Connecticut Valley to Boston. Almost 100 years later the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management acquired the property in 1985, and created a recreational trail that continues to grow in size due to its popularity.

Stretching from east to west, the Norwottuck Rail–Trail begins at Station Road in Amherst and ends at Damon Road in Northampton. Mileage markers are displayed along the trail and plot the distance of runners, bikers and in–line skaters. The paved surface measures approximately eight feet wide including several feet of mowed grass along its edges.

In–line skating has become one of the country's newest and fastest growing sports and has found a welcome home on the Northampton Bike Path and the Norwottuck Rail– Trail. On these paved paths, skaters are free to focus their attention on shaping up for summer recreation rather than passing cars, and can smoothly roll for long distances through the heart of the Pioneer Valley's sweet beauty.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian Columnist.

■ summer

continued from page 7

it, summer's over and you've got a great tan. (Just hope you don't run into any Canadian traditionalists.)

Maybe medieval semeiotics isn't your cup of tea, maybe you're burnt out. Easy solution: pick yourself up a nice "light–reading" paperback (preferably something by John Grisham or Michael Crichton), sit back and enjoy the ride. I overheard someone in the book aisle of Stop and Shop tell his friend that he used to be a big fan of Tom Clancy until "he went and sold out." Crichton fever should be spreading even more this summer when The Lost World, Steven Spielberg's uber–sequel adaptation of his Jurassic Park, opens in theaters.

Maybe books aren't your thing. Maybe you're illiterate, maybe reading hurts your head. I know, I feel like that too, sometimes. That why a trip to the movies is your ticket to ride this, and every, summer. I have two more words that make the movies a for sure air conditioning, big dinosaurs, Bat–Boys and a cool breeze flowing through ceiling vents are all that your really need this summer.

If movies are too loud for you — or you're trying to stay away from the extra butter — try live theater. Hown the road at Mt. Holyoke College, a smorgasbord of different dramatic productions have been lined up for this summer, including Noel Coward's Blithe Spirit and the classic musical Auntie Mame. In the past, Amherst has hosted wonderful Shakespeare productions. If you're up for the ride, visit Edith Wharton's old estate in Lenox, where drama festivals are held each summer.

Whatever you wind up doing this summer, remember –enjoy yourself.

■ Wood

continued from page 6

movies with titles like Orgy of the Dead and Bride of the Beast, in which a bride finds herself strangely attracted to a gorilla, only to find that in a previous life she was queen of the gorilla people.

Wood died in 1978, at the age of 54, of a heart attack and was mourned by his wife Kathy. The forgotten director was cremated and had his ashes scattered at sea. Wood was the quintessential film buff, a victim of unfortunate circumstance, truth that the American public is predjudiced of filmmaking crossdressers. All right, maybe I'm going to far; but Wood definitely had a flair for the dramatic.

In 1992 author Rudolph Grey collected various interviews and conversations from those who new Wood best. He compiled his material in the form of an oral biography entitled "Nightmare of Ecstacy." This bio later served as the inspiration for screenwriters Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski for their film version of Ed Wood's life and was directed by Tim Burton. Burton's budget was more than twice as big as every one of Ed Wood's films combined.

May these efforts keep Wood's amazing passion–driven spirit alive. I urge all film fans out there who can appreciate the absurd to please, give! Ed a chance.

Adam Levine is a Collegian columnist.

CHRIS CESNER / COLLEGIAN

UMass Theatre Guild prepares for this weekend's performance of "The Heidi Chronicles."

"Heidi" to be chronicled this weekend

By Alex Iglesias
Collegian Staff

Tonight a fresh new genre of theater will be rolling into town for the first time in weeks, giving a breather from the intense mainstream of musical theater which has been barraging the Five Colleges with back to back shows.

Reaching the stages of Broadway on March 9, 1989 this play instantly became a sensational hit. Now The Heidi Chronicles by Wendy Wasserstein will once again be revived from its state of hibernation as the University of Massachusetts Theater Guild is proud to present its final theater production of the year.

Under the direction of Richa Kaul — a first time Theater Guild director — The Heidi Chronicles should be hitting the stage in full force without a flaw in sight. Kaul has been enthusiastically preparing her dedicated cast for weeks.

The storyline is your typical Broadway–ish autobiographical write–up which takes place in the vicinity of where else but New York City — what show isn't located in N.Y.C. The protagonistic character of Heidi Holland — played by stage veteran Darcie Dennigan — is a successful art historian who is trying to find her true self through all of the twists and turmoil of living in the city.

As the show takes the audience on an eventful journey through her troublesome life, we venture through the years beginning in the reformatory "marijuana" age of 1965 and ending towards the end of the Star Wars decade in 1989. Along the way Heidi Holland learns a few lessons about life as she grows within herself after experiencing the thrills of having an affair with an arrogant, womanizing lawyer by the name of Scoop Rosenbaum (Erik Bergman). Her lesson is not learned as she finds herself in an even more migraine–filled situation with Peter Patrone (Benjamin Ware) who happens to be a gay male. Talk about luck.

The Heidi Chronicles show should be your Sunday afternoon, laid–back Broadway performance where the crowd can relieve themselves with a few hearty laughs. The diverse cast, a mix of first time stagers and annual veterans, should be a pleasing act to follow, as this youthful and vibrant group of performers will not be a disappointment. Behind the scenes, the artistic team (the well–known UMass "A– Team") have been and will be hard at work to bring you the best light and sound possible.

The Heidi Chronicles will be performed at the Student Union Ballroom in the Student Union. May 1–3, 8 p.m. with a Saturday matinee at 2 p.m./ $6 general public, $4 students. Tickets available at Tix Unlimited, UMass. For more info call 545–0415.

Classe Cafe
eat heavy, eat light, eat sweet, eat smart
eat natural, eat veggie, eat meat, eat soup
EAT GOOD IT'S HERE
morningOnoonOnight
wine & beer
OCMP
M-Sat. 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
166 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291

The UMass Department of Theater presents
OH DAD, POOR DAD, MAMMA'S HUNG YOU IN THE CLOSET AND I'M FEELIN' SO SAD
A COMEDY BY ARTHUR KOPIT
$3 Rand Theater, UMass $6.5
May 1-3 & 6-10, 8 p.m.
+ a 2 p.m. matinee on Sat., May 3
Tickets: (413) 545-2511
sponsored by DAILY COLLEGIAN

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. thru May 8 - Two Films - Separate Admission
at 7:15 (7 days only) Daily 9:10 - 3rd week
ACADEMY AWARD WINNER BEST DOCUMENTARY FEATURE
MUHAMMAD ALI
WHEN WE WERE KINGS
The untold story of the Rumble in the Jungle.
PG
A BITTERSWEET COMEDY ABOUT LOVE, SEXUAL IDENTITY, FRIENDSHIP AND THE PRECARIOUS BOUNDARIES THAT SEPARATE THEM
"REFRESHINGLY UNFLINCHING!!"
"THE FUNNIEST, MOST HONEST SEX-COMEDY I'VE EVER SEEN!"
CHASING AMY
Sex is easy. Love is hard.
R
ACADEMY MUSIC Green House 584-8435 NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

Always get more at PRUDDY'S
9:00 pm to 1:00 am
• FOOD • TROPICAL DRINKS • FRIENDS •
More Music
Wed/ Fri - House with DJ JA -'97 Spring Concert DJ
Thursday - Hip Hop & Request with DJ Jusef -
The Hip-Hop Master
Saturday - Club Music & Retro with DJ Magic Mike
More Food
Chicken Wings - 5¢ or FREE
Nacho/Cheese - 10¢ or FREE
Hot Dogs - 25¢ or FREE
Meat Balls - 25¢ or FREE
Meat Ball Sandwich - 50¢ or FREE
More Drink Specials
The Best 16oz drinks in town
Come check our weekly specials!!
Celebrate Cinco De Mayo with us this Sunday!!

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Genuine Draft & Light" 30-pk $10.49
Corbett Canyon White Zinfandel $8.99 3 bottle
Super Buys!
12-Pack Special
Honey Brew Lager & Light
Michael Shea Irish Amber
Michael Shea Black & Tan
$6.99 bots
"Fantastic Pricing!"
"MICRO MADNESS" CONTINUES!
Red Hook "ALL FLAVORS!" Blue Moon
Black Dog Devel Mountain
Mix & Match "TWO" 6/PKS... $9.95
Seagram 1.75 Liter $11.99
Bicardi Limon 1.75 Liter $19.99
Cider Jack 1.4L $4.99
Check Out Russell's Indoor Specials!
Wow!
•All Beers Plus Deposit• OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

Easy Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
WEDNESDAY • APRIL 30
BENEFIT FOR THE BOSTON/NEW YORK AIDS RIDE 3
UPSTAIRS DANCE PARTY 18+
DOWNSTAIRS LIVE MUSIC FEATURING "HANK" 18+
EVERY THURSDAY
THE AREA'S BIGGEST HIGH ENERGY
Dance Parties
A FULL HOUSE EVERY WEEK 21+
EVERY FRIDAY 9-2am
RETRO NIGHT
FREE BEFORE 10:00pm
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
SATURDAY
TEEN NIGHT
AGES 15-19 • 7:30 - 11:30 PM
PROPER ID AND DRESS REQUIRED
SATURDAY • MAY 3
GAY PRIDE
TEA DANCE 3-7pm 18+
DANCE 10pm-2am (after The Pleasuredome)
SATURDAY • MAY 17
INTERNATIONAL NIGHT
LIVE MUSIC
Wed. Apr. 30 @ 7:00 pm 18+
HANK
EMPTY-UP-TILLIE / MIND FLOW
Thu. May 1 @ 9:00 pm 18+
SHAKEDOWN
(Bruce Springsteen Tribute)
Fri. May 2 @ 8:00 pm 18+
THE FLIRTATIONS
Wed. May 7 @ 8:00 pm 18+
DINOSAUR JR.
SWEET 75/DITCH CROAKER
Fri. May 9 @ 8:30 pm 18+
STARSAILOR
SKY TRICK KNIFE / CAMUS
Sat. May 10 @ 7:00 pm 18+
MEPHISKAPHELES
ROYAL CROWNS/BIG LICK/JOKER
Mon. May 12 @ 7:30 pm 18+
ERIC JOHNSON
CARVIN AMELON
RESERVED SEATING • ADVANCE TIX AVAILABLE
Fri. May 16 @ 8:30 pm 18+
JAMES COTTON
UPCOMING
FRI. MAY 23 LETICIA
SUN. MAY 25 SNAPCASE ALL AGES
WED. MAY 28 KOKO TAYLOR 21+
SAT. MAY 30 SLIPKNOT 18+
SPECIAL CLUB APPEARANCE
SAT. JUNE 7 THE ROBERT CRAY BAND
FEATURING THE MEMPHIS HORNS
SAT. JUNE 14 ROOMFUL OF BLUES 21+
WED. JUNE 25 CHARLIE MUSSELWHITE 21+
FRI. JUNE 27 ITCHY FISH 18+
FRI. AUG. 15 SON SEALS 21+
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office, 586-8686, 1-800-THE TICK, Streetwaves Record Stores, For The Record in Amherst, About Music in Greenfield, Tix Unlimited at U. Mass, Plantagon Records in Westfield, Music Outlet in Enfield, & B-Side Records in Northampton, 586-9556
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
http://www.virtual-waiting.com/pearl-street
413-584-7771

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
www.mustangcomputer.com
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 19 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles left at Staples onto Rte 116N, first right to light, left to Center I-91 S take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs. It's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only.
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, MAY 4

Goten in Sunderland
Tuesday - Sunday
Tues., Weds., Thurs., Fri., and Sat. 5 til close
Sunday 2 til close
Excellence in Japanese Cuisine
OF JAPAN
COOKING AT YOUR TABLE
TWO DINNERS FOR $18
SHRIMP AND STEAK COMBINATION
TWO DINNERS FOR $16
SHRIMP AND SCALLOP COMBINATION
TWO DINNERS FOR $15
STEAK AND CHICKEN COMBINATION
All Dinners include salad, vegetable noodle, soup, rice tea & ice cream
Please call for reservations today! (413) 665-3628
Rt. 116 Sunderland
Function Room available for your party
Casual Dress • Full Bar • Exotic Specials • Take the Sunderland Bus from campus, get dropped off at our front door

Creepy delight comes with O Dad

By Alex Iglesias
Collegian Staff

One right after another, the dramatic play genre is hitting the stages of the UMass campus tonight right around the time of sundown. The choice of which show to attend will be a difficult one, especially with the bizarre selection made by the UMass Theater Department for this spring's final production.

The University Theater Department is bringing to life the zany and creepy production of Arthur Kopit's off-Broadway hit, Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mamma's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling so Sad. This wild and humorous play was written with the simple intention of winning a contest at Kopit's alma mater, Harvard University, when much to his surprise the show became his ticket to stardom in the theater business.

New professor and director Julian Olf has taken the opportunity to bring this almost 40-year-old show to the stage of the Rand Theater. An admirer of the dramatic format, Olf is one man who enjoys directing contemporary plays with a passion.

"I like experimental and avant-garde theater," Olf said at a recent rehearsal.

With 20-plus years of directing experience, Olf has been at the helm of shows such as Ionesco's Amedee and Iphigenia, and even though — according to Olf — Oh Dad, Poor Dad is not the oddest of his endeavors in producing plays, it sure doesn't stray from his earlier pack of departmental plays.

Oh Dad, Poor Dad was originally created in the 1950s to spoof of the typical American family. A typical wealthy American family is more like it, as the experienced cast consisting of ten members shows the audience the estranged relationship between all of the socially elite characters.

In the fictional Port Royal Hotel, somewhere on a small and isolated Caribbean island, Madame Rosepettle (played by Mt. Holyoke College graduate Julie Dixon) shows how evil and devilish her jealous rage over her obesity leads her to the murder of her husband — who is secretly hidden in the show — and obsessive control of her only son Jonathan Rosepettle (played by first time Theater Department actor Jamie Arsenault).

The elegant touch of the Commodore Roseabove (James Clark) reminds the audience of the existence of the outside world as he enlightens us with his noble English accent. Keep a sharp eye out for the young and innocent Rosalie (Pamela Bloom), who just when you will least expect it will show you her true colors. A wolf in sheep's clothing would be an understatement.

The most eye and ear catching features of the show have to be the brilliantly colored set designs, which if you keep a close eye out for take the shape of the petals on a flower — hence the name Rosepettle.

Along with the statue-like hotel bell hops, the random and abnormal house pet piranha and the Madam's man-eating plants, this show is the cream of the crop in weirdness.

Oh Dad, Poor Dad will be playing at the Rand Theater May 1–3, May 6–10 at 8 p.m./ May 3 Sat. matinee at 2 p.m. $3.50 for students and seniors/ $6 for general public. Reservations are highly suggested.

For tickets or questions please call (413) 545–2511. Non- reservations may attempt for tickets at door.

COURTESY TAMARA BONIN

Bend over. Grimace. Wave. Folk Implosion wow on their new album.

Barlow's new Folk Implosion release explodes

By Martin J. Keane
Collegian Staff

On their first full-length release, Boston's The Folk Implosion have given life to an eccentric amalgam of songs that are both oddly catchy and unnervingly elegant. Dare To Be Surprised (The Communion Label), while lacking another hit single on the level of 1995's "Natural One," is a more fully realized articulation of the quaint and intimate sound which made their contributions to the KIDS soundtrack such a pleasant surprise.

The Folk Implosion — named in tribute to The Jon Spencer Blues Explosion — should not be looked upon as another of Lou Barlow's seemingly endless Sebadoh side projects. They are a meritorious outlet for some of his more engaging and quirky compositions.

Barlow, along with Harvard librarian and former Palace brother John Davis, create a curious brew spiked with Stereolab synth effects, punk-rock noise, wolf-howl and language-instructions soundbites, and Beck/Beastie Boys- style white groove rap. There's a pronounced geek factor in Barlow's lyrics that prevent anything from getting too serious ("River Devotion" lies somewhere between Cibo Matto and Devo), but surely that's just Barlow's shrewd sarcasm.

Not being burdened with Sebadoh's indie tradition has clearly enabled Barlow and his 50/50 partner Davis to experiment more freely with a sound that defies any discernable classification. The abstract sonic pastures found on Dare To Be Surprised are as diverse as they are puzzling. Foremost is the intriguingly minimalist "Wide Web." A song about survival with a deep-groove backbeat, it features a trance-inducing rhythm that makes Barlow's fragile tenor all the more haunting.

There's also the current single "Insinuation," a whimsical mimic of "Natural One," and "Burning Paper," the album's most overtly effective song, which sounds like a leftover Sebadoh track penned by Bob Fay.

While chock-full of solid tunefulness and melodic ingenuity — there is nary a throwaway tune in the 14 songs — Dare To Be Surprised is nonetheless somehow incomplete. The 24-track production gives the music an overly poppy aesthetic while concurrently detracting from the unpolished quality of earlier efforts, chiefly the EP Take A Look Inside... (The Communion Label). While this approach is suitable for listening to and evaluating the merit of individual tracks, it does not bode well for the album as a whole.

Listened to from beginning to end, the album sounds like a collection of singles, which reduces the potency and vitality of the songs themselves, causing them to ring hollow, the otherwise stellar "Ball & Chain" being one such example of this pitfall. This disjointed feel pervades throughout and makes the album's overall lack of a conceptual continuity even more apparent.

Still, with its choppy rhythms, oddball lyrics, and skewed keyboards, Dare To Be Surprised is better than 95 percent of what's hit record store shelves recently (yes, that includes the new Rollins Band album). It's a much needed pill to alleviate the pain of having to see Gavin Rossdale on MTV every third video, providing an ideal respite from such hell. Dare To Be Surprised just needs to be swallowed in small doses as the sum of its parts are greater than the whole.

A-

COURTESY UMASS THEATER DEPARTMENT

Jamie Arsenault and Pamela Bloom are featured in Arthur Kopit's Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mamma's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feelin' So Sad.

Hatters

Bootlegs

Steve Madden

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

R&P Liquors
• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
• Largest Selection of Micro Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
549 West St. • South Amherst
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Beehive, & The Pioneer Valley

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
8 Bigger 9 Is Better
Best! ★ 1997 ★
• 14 ft. • All Sporting Events • Every Thursday

Cotton Affordable Rayon
Cards Rings Incense Candles
T-Shirts Dresses Shorts Earrings
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Th-Fri 9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

Knowledge Grows Here!
Summer Session at Stony Brook
Terms start June 2 and July 14
260 courses in 40 subjects
Day and evening classes
Low NYS tuition
Live on campus or commute

Please send me the 1997 Summer Session Bulletin; or check out our web page at Http://www.sunysb.edu/summer/
Name
Street/Box No
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation
STONY BROOK STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
Mail coupon or call 24 hours 1-800-559-7213
E-mail summerschool@ccmail.sunysb.edu
Or write Summer Session Office, Dept. CN, University at Stony Brook, Stony Brook, NY 11794-3370

Give Us Some Face!
Between April 14-May 2, come to Hampden Lobby, Southwest and have your picture taken for the new UMass I.D. Card; Monday-Thursday, 3 p.m. to 8 p.m. and Friday 3-5 p.m.
When you do, you'll get a coupon worth 50¢ at Antonio's* plus a FREE small soda at Hampden Snack Bar!
*Hampden location only
The photo is FREE, takes about 2 minutes, and you'll AVOID SOME BIG LINES IN THE FALL.
The new card will be issued then, and it's going to make your life a lot easier! THE ALL-CAMPUS CARD can be used as your library card, Meal Plan ticket, residence hall key, and as a cash card for on-campus purchases.
I.D. Card photos are also taken in the I.D. Office, Franklin Dining Hall anytime during regular business hours.
Don't miss this photo opportunity!

sports notice

Attention all sports writers:

New writers interested in writing for the fall semester should attend a meeting on May 7 at 6:45 p.m. in the Collegian newsroom at 113 Campus Center. A mandatory meeting for all sports writers will follow at 7 p.m. Fall beats will be discussed. If there are any questions, contact Luke Meredith at 545-1851.

■ Korutz

continued from page 14

Media friendly

An athlete who scores 20 points in her last four games is more than media friendly. Its a fact, in the media, the players who put the numbers on the board get priority over the players that help those players get the numbers on the board — sad but true. However, Korutz is media friendly in more ways than her recent scoring streak, especially looking back at her beginnings in her hometown of Media, Pa.

In the Quaker State, the game of lacrosse is stitched into the athletic fabric, and that goes the same with Korutz. She received her first lacrosse stick from her mother Judy in fifth grade, but it was not until seventh grade that she started the sport. Korutz started out fast, becoming the team's leading scorer in her first year of playing, but her lacrosse education would run the entire gamut, and the entire field, in the following years.

"It was a little intimidating at first, and I didn't know how to play when I picked up a stick for the first time," Korutz said. "My eighth grade coach decided that since I was the team's leading scorer the year before, let's try to put her on defense. So, I played cover point in eighth grade, and third man in ninth grade.

"When I moved up to varsity, I tried attack again, and I tried to put a little bit of both into my game. I loved scoring goals, but I loved passing, too. I always was the person from behind the net feeding the ball in, and I just love assisting."

At Penncrest High School, the three-year letterwinner was a three-time All-Delco County selection, and also earned letters in volleyball and basketball. In Korutz' senior year, the team was the runner-up for the state championship, and the quality of that team is what prepared her for the jump to UMass and Division I competition.

"My teammates pushed me a lot in my senior year," said Korutz, who was also recruited by Penn State and George Mason. "That senior year was incredible, and our level of play was so high. I think five players went on to Division I, and it was just my teammates pushing me harder and harder each practice to improve myself, so that I could be ready to come to UMass."

Secret to her success

The hard work by Korutz in high school has paid off, and her brief tenure at UMass has generally been a successful one, but not without its stumbles. After her freshman year, Korutz was hobbled by a back injury, and wasn't able to work out with the team last fall. It was good that she had time to heal, but skills can erode when that healing time becomes too long. Consequently, Korutz had a slow start to this season, and it hasn't been until the last few weeks that the attacker has been fully able to attack.

McClellan sees her sophomore scorer as an important addition to the team, but the mixture of physical (i.e. back) and psychological stress (i.e. sophomore-itis) seemed to adversely effect her. The coach sees the 15-8 win over New Hampshire two weeks ago as the turning point for Korutz, who has been on fire since that game.

"Its been exciting, because I think that Laura came in last year for us as a tremendous addition," McClellan said. "Last year, we didn't have many finishers, and some of our kids weren't that organized in putting the ball in the net.

"The one thing she really understood was that if she wasn't shooting well, she could do other things to help us out, like playing some defense, feeding the ball, that kind of stuff. This is a real maturing season for her."

Korutz was more than surprised with her fast start freshman year for the Minutewomen. She pointed to the presence of junior Jen Bowen, senior Stephanie Walsh and the rest of the upperclassmen on the offense as the secret of her success. But this year, she was discouraged by the back injury, and the struggle to get back into the scoring flow.

"I didn't think I'd come in so strong as a freshman, especially with the way I played last year," Korutz said. "But I think it was just the way the coach pushed me and pushed me. The first few games of this season, my back problem was on my mind all the time. I'm not using that as an excuse, but I always knew that it was there.

"I had a really slow start, and I got upset because of that. The coach wanted to see more from me, and it just made me work harder, and go out and show everyone what I can do."

Whether UMass is victorious over Brown today or not, the future for the team looks bright. It would be foolish not to admit that a win over the Bears would help, but first things first. Only a sophomore, the Minutewomen do not have to worry about losing Korutz for two more years. And that's a good thing, even if it is in a small package.

"Looking ahead to the future, we should step it up each year," Korutz said. "I can't believe we're even at the point we're at right now, and I think each year we're going to get better and better. I just know its going to be hard next year without our seniors. Since I've been here, they've been the ones that have pushed me, and it's going to be real hard without them."

JOHNA KANJANIEN / COLLEGIAN

The future of UMass women's lacrosse looks bright, as sophomore Laura Korutz will be back for two more years.

■ baseball

continued from page 14

from role players. Utility players like catcher- designated hitter-first baseman Matt Wolcott and catcher-DH Jason Kudrikow have stepped up where needed, which, according to Stone, has been critical to the team's win streak.

"The entire team has to play well [for a win streak like this]," Stone said. "It can't be just two or three guys playing well. It helps us because it gives us flexibility, but they're all quality ballplayers."

Incredibly, this is the second straight year in which UMass has broken off a winning streak of more than 16 games. Last season, the Minutemen won 18 straight games during the regular season, which for a time was also the longest streak in the country.

The Minutemen are winding down the regular season. They play three games at home against St. Bonaventure this weekend, followed by the final home date of the year, May 6 against New Hampshire. UMass has a road game against Harvard, whom it beat for the Beanpot crown last week, followed by a three-game series against St. Joseph's.

The A-10 Championships go from May 15-17 in Boyertown, Penn. UMass has won the last two A-10 tournaments, and are on track to win its fourth straight A-10 regular season title.

Jeff Puleri gets the start today for the Minutemen. Puleri pitched three innings against Northeastern in last week's game, before being lifted for eventual winner Adam Robinson. Puleri was on a strict pitch count, which limited the number of innings he could pitch.

■ Faessler

continued from page 14

paid off for me, and I'm thankful for him.

"Sometimes I don't believe in myself, but my dad always believes in me. I can call him up and he'll make me feel better. He'll tell me what I did wrong, and what I need to do to fix it. I'd be nothing without my confidence, and without my dad I'd have no confidence."

Faessler is as genuine a person off the field as she is committed on it. Her bright smile and down to earth demeanor disguise her as the girl next door rather than a rising softball talent.

Only on 25 percent scholarship, Faessler faces the same hardships as other students. She is working to not only become a better softball player, but to keep her grades up and finance her education.

"I'm hoping to get my grades up and possibly get more scholarship money," she said. "But it's hard because a lot of teachers aren't understanding of the commitment I have to softball."

Still, Faessler wouldn't change a thing for the world.

"I'm so happy with my decision to attend UMass," she said.

We have your reasons for living off-campus!
Come by and see our model
Monday - Friday 8 am - 4 pm
or
Saturday & Sunday 10 am - 4 pm
Brandywine The Stables
Spacious 1 and 2 Bedrooms • Beautiful Grounds • On the Bus Line • Swimming Pool • Private Balconies • On-site Laundry Facilities • Close to UMass • Heat, Hot Water, Gas Included • Central Air Conditioning • Private Parking • Sorry, No Pets
Brandywine Apartments 549-0600
16G Brandywine Dr., Amherst, MA 01002

BARNSTABLE RECREATION
SEASONAL OPENINGS AVAILABLE AS FOLLOWS:

POSITIONS	RATE	MUST HAVE
SUPERINTENDENTS	8.50	SFA, CPR
GATE ATTENDANTS	6.00	SFA, CPR
BATH ATTENDANTS	5.00	NOT REQUIRED
LIFEGUARDS	7.50	SFA, BLS/CPR, LGT, WSI
SWIM INSTRUCTORS	8.00	SFA, BLS/CPR
SAILING INSTRUCTORS	8.00	LGT, BLS/CPR
SEASONAL RANGERS	6.50	SFA, CPR
CAMP COUNSELORS	6.50	SFA, CPR
CAMP DIRECTORS	8.00	SFA, CPR

CALL (508) 790 - 6345, M - F, 8 - 4 FOR AN APPLICATION AND JOB DESCRIPTION.
OTHER POSITIONS AVAILABLE: GYMNASTIC INSTRUCTORS, TRACK COACHES, TENNIS INSTRUCTORS

!! SUMMER SPECIAL !!
$99 FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA $99
175 UNIVERSITY DRIVE, AMHERST, MA 253-3539
!! STARTS NOW !!

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
www.tristatenet.com
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 19 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles left at Staples onto Rte 116N, first right to light, left to Center I-91 S. take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs- it's all here. Adm $7 ea., with ad $5ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only.
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, MAY 4

SpRing Whitewater!
Whitewater Rafting is one of the best ways to break out of the mid-semester blues! Our great Spring Rates make the most exciting season a real bargain.
From April 15-May 15 rafting for as little as $54 on the Zoar Gap section of the Deerfield River.
ZOAR OUTDOOR
Charlemont, Massachusetts
CALL NOW TO BOOK YOUR SPRING RAFTING ADVENTURE!
800 532-7483

RESULTS resume
We know what employers want.
Resumes for the real world
▶ Written by a business executive
▶ Student rates, credit cards & checks
▶ Employer lists & cover letters, too
253-9055
In your back yard at 150 Fearing Street

25th Anniversary come in to Register for Many great prizes
Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Specials
Pyramid Apricot Ale, Brown Ale, Pale Ale, Scotch Ale) $4.99/six
Magic Hat (Ale, Stout, #9, Blind Faith) $5.99/six
Petes Wicked Summer Brew 12-Pack Bottles $8.99
Jonny Mash Cider $4.99/six
1/2 Keg Special Redhook E.S.B. $80.00
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
Beer Specials
Milwaukee's Best 30-pack $9.99
Bud & Bud Light 16oz. bottles $4.99/six
Corona $4.99/six
Rolling Rock 12-pack bottles $6.99
Liquor Specials
Smirnoff Citrus Twist 1Lt $9.99
Goldschlager 375ml $8.99
Bacardi Limon 750ml $8.99
Jack Daniels 750ml $10.99
253-5384
Rt. 9 East - College Street one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
London $199 / $370
Rome or Milan $340 / $635
San Jose, Costa Rica $246 / $460
Roundtrip
TOKYO $879
SYDNEY $898
Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations. Europasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. INTL student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Beer Die Tournament! You got game? Saturday, May 10! for info and registration call 256-0417

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Tagalong Car Wash with Sorority Women! Come see what all the talk is about on Saturday from 11-3! Bring your car!

Don't Pee On The Seat
That's just one of the 542 suggestions in Survival Tips for College. Makes a great gift for high school graduates! Available in CC Store under local authors and bookstores in Amherst and Northa

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Great apartment Great Price Located in The Townhouses. Summer Sublet! Beautiful blue carpeting, 3 bedrooms, 1 1/2 baths! Call Jessica and Adrienne at 549-7092

Take over our lease - 2 bedroom apt Brandywine. Gas heat and stove included! Available from 5/1. $710. 549-3570

4 bedroom house in Amherst. Available June 1 w/ Fall Option. Call 549-5788.

3 bedroom Puffton Apt. Available 6/1 Take over our recently renovated apt. Spacious, good location, next to bus route. Plenty of parking. Call Scott Seth or Mark 549-2645.

Custer of town 1,2,3 bedrooms Gas heat, hardwood floors 253-7879

Take over lease or sublet 2 bedroom apt $885 from June 1st. Bus route 330/380. Call 253-3264

2 bedroom Available 6/1 1010 N. Pleasant #3 549-4142

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550 2 bedroom- $425 20 minutes from campus- no bus Available for Sept. 885-2203

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept. at Squire Village. 665-2203

Take over our lease Puffton. 2-3 people Call 549-5079 Available 5/26.

AUTO FOR SALE

Volks Jetta 89 white, 5 speed $2650 Call 253-5448

1986 Renault Medillac Wagon auto, original owner Great car. $1492. 256-4153

1988 Jeep Grand Wagoneer runs well. $1000 or B/O Call Colin 256-0482.

91 Ford Escort GT red, runs great. Sunroof, A/C, excellent condition. $3000. Call Jen 695-0488

For Sale 91 Pontiac Sunbird Good condition Call 256-8118

86 Ford Escort standard. $700 or Best Offer Call Wendy 253-4729

87 Mazda RX7 5 speed, digital, CD, in-dash, new engine. 13K. Have all paperwork. $6900 or B/O Call Erica 546-0545

EMPLOYMENT

CAPE COD RESTAURANT Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers Will train, housing available. Eastham and Orleans. (508)255-5594

Poznan needed for summer Full or part time in Chicopee-Springfield area. $6-$10/hr + bonuses Call Chen 546-2130

Summer Employment
Experienced truck drivers for part-time. Approximately 12 or more days in Mid-June and Mid-August. $105.00 to $135.00 a day. (508)853-7422

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being on the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call. (413)827-7565

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century", tenth out (paperign) "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D46, NYC, NY 10014

Virgin Records College Rep. Position Get music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position. 10-15 hrs/week. Please fax resume and cover letter to Elizabeth Gruenewald at (310)289-2433 or call 1-800-242-7421 to apply. Sophomore or Junior with car preferred. Previous music industry experience is a plus!

Painters Wanted for full-time summer in Westwood, Dedham area. $6 $8 an hour plus bonuses. Call Mike 549-3756

Bar or Waitperson Apply in person The Pastoos. 127 Elm St., Hatfield

NEED A SUMMER JOB? $3000-$4000 for the summer. Work outside with other students in Andover area. Get a tan. Leadership positions available. 1-800-392-4848 ext. 209

On Campus Interviews Friday 6/11 University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts-Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales Marketing and PR opportunity! Call 1-800-743-5006 ext. 122

Now Hiring/Summer Part-time Telemarketers Amherst area. Flexible hours. Earn $6.97/hour plus bonuses. No sales- Will train Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777

We are looking for hard-working, top-quality computer work study student for departmental business office near fall. Intelligent individual who can work independently. Good with numbers, computer skills, reliability a must! If you prove your worth we'll pay you well. Jennifer 545-3559 remaining experience.

COMPUTER JOBS! SUMMER, PT, FT
Programming, PC Support, Hardware, Software COBOL, TSO, JCL, SQL, CICS, Yresxt Basic, Access
Win NT, Novell, LAN Admin, DOS, Windows
Springfield/Hartford
TSI Consulting
Phone (413)567-6842
Fax (413)789-6313
email tsiamy@mno.com
WWW www.tsiconsulting.com

FOR RENT

2 bedroom apt.- Crosview Available 8/1. A must see. Call 548-7017

Available June 1st to rent or sublet 1 bedroom Puffton Apartment. $515 includes heat and H20. 549-7886

Take over lease in June or September. Southpoint Townhouses. 2 bedrooms, 1 1/2 baths. Hot water included. On bus line. 253-1457

1 bedroom apt.- On bus route 5 minute walk to campus. Crestview Apts. Starting June 1st. Call 549-8943

Rent in Brandywine Call 549-0318

Renovated, at Puffton Village Fully furnished 3 bedroom apartment. Available 8/1. Call Rafael at 545-4529

Take over our lease Available 6/1. 3 bedroom Great location on bus line. Call 256-8034

Take over lease 6/1. 8/31 Fall Option Large 2 bdrm. $900/month. 665-8219 On bus line

4 bedroom apt. Available 6/1. On bus route 253-5473

1 big bedroom- Puffton Heat and H20 included A/C. Available June 1. Call 549-5178

Take over lease 1 bedroom apt. Colonial Village. $435/month. 253-8013

3 bedroom- Puffton Renovated, 2 bathroom Available 8/1. Nice place! 549-5758

Take over lease 6/1 One bedroom. $525/month Heat/Hot water incl Presidential Apts. Call 549-4561

2 Rooms for Rent Private home. $235 + utilities. Kitchen privileges. Washer/Dryer. Parking. Laundry. Available May 1. 549-4853

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September Lease $1300+ 253-7879

FOR SALE

Microwave $70
Couch and Loveseat $200
Phone and Answering Machine $40
All in great condition
Call Vickie @ 549-4940

Bank Bed $150 Modern, excellent condition Call 253-6449

Mens Cannondale Touring Bike Excellent condition. $250 or B/O Call Shann 549-1773

Schwinn Mens 12 Speed Road Bike. $100. Good condition. Call 253-7234

Bicycles
Buying/Selling all styles, good quality. Large inventory (413)588-4781

P-166 Full Package PC
$1200 Sharpe VCR, TV, Microwave, Area Stereo and more. Cheap! 256-0767

SOFA BED Queen Size mattress, good shape. $125 or B/O DINING ROOM SET Table and 4 chairs, all wood. Excellent condition $150 or B/O 549-4996

Trek 520 w/Kryptonite Lock. Brand new. Only $250 or B/O Call 548-8042

Weightbench & Weights Brand new. Only $250 or B/O Call 548-8042

Word Processor with Monitor and Laser Printer functions. Include spreadsheets and more! $700 or B/O Call 548-8042

Trombone for sale Bach 42 Stradavarius. It is in great shape. Has a straight wrap and an F trigger. Please call 587-0788 to look at instrument. Best offer gets the trombone

Back Mulch
$21/yd delivered
2 yard minimum
Please call Leon 323-4447

HOUSE FOR RENT

House For Rent $1700 per month. 4 bedrooms, one-half miles from Mullins Center. Gas, heat. Call 253-7879.

HOUSE FOR SALE

Contemporary- 4 bedroom, 3 bath, 3050 sq. ft. in Whitehaven. $199,900 413/268-8181

MISCELLANEOUS

Whitewater Rafting Student Discounts! $95. May 3rd! 1-800-Unicorn

WANTED CIGAR SMOKERS!! I am doing a project on the "New Cigar Smoker." Preferably females smokers but any recent smokers. Free cigars! Call Ed at 548-8881

Stop talking about Social Justice and start working for it. Organize low-income people to build power and have control over their communities Call Lois at Acorn 1-800-681-8448

PERSONALS

Mike Ross
To the geniuses scholarship. You name our lunch and dinner so much better!

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for 2 females willing to share a large bedroom in 3 bedroom Puffton Apartment Starting Sept 97 Call Nikki 549-4484

Beginning September Walks to UMass Furnished, large, quiet, comfortable. Male grad/professional $74/week continuously through May 1998 549-1579

1 large room in two bedroom apartment Looking for two females Available 8/1 and Fall and Spring Option On bus route Very spacious, great location Call 549-3992

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Putters Pond 3 rooms available 6/1 Brand new washer/dryer Clean, quiet, sunny $300+. Call 253-9164 for more info

Spacious room in house June 1/Fall Option $320 per month Karsten or Rachel 256-0119

ROOM WANTED

Outgoing, friendly female is seeking housemates 6/97- 12/97. Call Colette 584-6087

ROOMMATE WANTED

Wanted Roommate $235/month. Townhouse Contact Scott at 548-2983.

I need a roommate. Clean, friendly girl is looking for 1 girl to share a 2 bedroom townhouse in Southpoint Apts. If interested call Tina at 549-6843

WANTED: Responsible, quiet roommate who doesn't do drugs to share 2 bedroom apartment for Summer and/or Fall. RENT FOR SUMMER IS CHEAP! Call Alison 548-5812

Wanted: 1 or 2 Females Non-smoking, to share a four bedroom apartment. No cats/dogs Call 665-7712

SERVICES

Rabbit Rescue can help! Don't abandon your bunny! Call us, we'll find him a new home. Ellen 367-0105

Expert Piano Tuning Call Jeremiah Driscoll 583-3013 Leave a message

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

4 bedroom house Option of 1 to 4 bedrooms for rent Call 549-9274

2 bedroom/2 bath- Mill Valley A/C. On bus route. 253-1797

With Fall Option- Mill Valley 2 bed, 2 bath, 2 air cond. Pets 4 easy. On bus route. 253-1857

Large room in house Private bedroom. On bus line. Short walk to UMass! $275 per month inclusive 549-8588

This is it A beautiful room for rent. Possible Fall Option. Behind Victory Fuel Bar in basement. Washer/Dryer and more! Call 549-8132

Puffton! One large room and one small room in 2 bedroom apartment. Call 549-9989

2 bedroom cottage Available 6/1. 2 miles from campus On bus route Mile walk from Puffers Large yard. Call 549-5177

Single, double, triple rooms in big 3 floor house on edge of campus. 3 bath, 3 shower, kitchen, cable, utilities. Only $500 all summer. Available May 23. Call Fabio at 546-7078 for info.

2 bedroom apt. Fall Option 3 floor On bus line $575/mo Partly furnished. 256-3092

1 bedroom in 3 bedroom Puffton $215/month Available 6/1 Call Eileen 549-4972

Spacious 2 bedroom apt Furnished, on Main St near Uptown. Starting 6/1. 253-0382

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment $270/month includes heat and hot water. Available 5/31- 8/31. Non-smoker preferred Call Nick @ 5-0283

1 bedroom available in a 2 bedroom apartment in Brandywine $265/month + utilities Available May 27 Call Cheryl or Christine at 549-1237

1 bedroom apartment at Crestview 6/1- 8/31 Short walk to UMass! On bus route Hot water included! Will be partially furnished $550/month Call 549-7665

9 bedroom apartment Puffton Village Available 6/1 Call 549-5405

Den room in 4 bedroom house with 4 males North Amherst Rent and move-in neg $230/month + utilities. Call 8:30- 11:30 am. 549-1522

1 room in 4 bedroom Squire Village. Bus route 665-8865

3 bedroom/Puffton Semi-furnished, renovated Pool and tennis courts Available 8/1 Call 549-4748

1-4 rooms 1 mile to UMass/ RF porch, lots of appliances! On bus route. 6/1 with Fall Option $795/month 256-0872

Clean 2 bedroom in Brandywine A/C pool 6/1 with Fall Option $775 NEG. On bus line. UMass, one mile 548-0879

1 bedroom in 3 bedroom house in Belchertown $350! plus electricity Fall Option. Call 323-8740 Prefer older/grad student.

2 bedroom- Puffton newly renovated, furnished. Next to bus stop 549-4374

SUMMER SUBLET

Upscale, 2 bedroom townhouse on bus route. Full basement, each bedroom has shower and bath, patio, large kitchen, living and dining rooms, available after May 20th 2-4 occupants. $1000 a month. Call 253-9458

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt Bus stop @ end of drive or 10 min. walk to campus. Heat/Hwtr. Room. Bath/ hookup w/ 3 It's $308/month. With Fall Option Hot H20 Presidential Mark 549-1086

Roommate Summer with Fall Option Share 3 bedroom house with 2 smartmale grad students and one lazy dog. 2 miles from campus. 549-4482

2 bedroom in Brandywine $650/month Available 6/1 Call 549-0181

Mill Valley- 2 bedroom, 2 bathroom, 2 air conditioners. Fully Furnished! Call 253-8680

4 rooms in super huge house in Uptown Amherst. Cheap summer sublet with Fall Option. Females preferred. Call Erica or Ann at 253-7776 ASAP

2 bedrooms in a 4 bedroom apt Huge lots of light $332 each person per month Southpoint Apts 256-8998

2 bedroom apartment with Fall Option 1 month free rent Call 549-4088

2 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt Great location near pool/tennis Heat/hot water included $640/month Available 6/1 548-7762

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt Available 6/1 with Fall Option. Call 549-5310

2 bedroom- Puffton Furnished, next to bus stop $525. Available June 1 Call Pohan or Anders @ 549-4698

1 bedroom apt. on Cliftside w/Fall Option Available 6/1. All utilities included! On bus line Call 665-7945.

Downtown Amherst Apartment Fall Option Two large sunny rooms in great house with housemates. Females preferred. Non-smokers. $275. Call 256-8330

Apartment for rent Great location 2 bedroom, 2 bath Available 6/1 with Fall Option. $610 per month. Call Josh at 549-4788

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apartment Available 6/1 Cheap with Fall Option. 549-5183

Going abroad next Fall? Sublet my room for Spring '98! Great rooms, on bus line close to campus and bars. Don't wait! Call 549-4568

2 bedroom in the Boulders. On bus line. Heat included. Room for 4 people Option to renew lease Call 256-0990

TRAVEL

One way plane ticket to San Francisco from Boston. Depart on June 10th, $200. Call 546-2076 before May 5th

TRAVEL

China Classic Tours, Inc.
270 Sylvan Avenue
Englewood Cliffs, NJ 07632
1-888-733-2742
Fax:(201) 871-3620

CHINA
Great Experience

Student Tours:
Beijing RDN $235+air
Beijing/Shanghai/Hangzhou
WDN $473+air
Beijing/Xian
WDN $625+air
Departures: May-August
For details, please call or visit our web site!
http://www.chinaclassic.com

Europe $169 O/W Mexico/Caribbean $198 R/T ONE WORLD TRAVEL It's your world, now you can afford to see it (413)587-0301

WANTED TO RENT

1 to 2 bedroom apartment/house for summer, possibly Fall. Around $300. All locations considered. Leave message (413)863-4400

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE!)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Rates
Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day
$2.00 min./day
NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible hand-writing or typo.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be processed by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses and dorm room numbers are not allowed in personals.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a sexually explicit nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, sell businesses, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, MAY 1

Art — "ArtWORKS," the second Five College exhibition of student drawings, will be on view in the Community Room of the Hampshire Mall until May 8. The exhibition will feature the work of 21 undergraduates taking part in a unique Five College Advanced Seminar in Drawing.

Film — Schindler's List will be shown in the Greenough Residence Hall lounge at 7 p.m. Part of the Yom Hashoah Memorial Week.

Forum — A Workplace Equality forum with keynote speaker Liz Winfield will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. The event will feature a panel of GLBT alumni speaking about their coming out experiences in the workplace and Liz Winfield will give an overview of current workplace equality issues. The event is free, refreshments will be served.

Lecture — Liz Winfield, business consultant and founder of the firm Common Ground, will speak on "Gay Issues for the Organization: The Bottom Line." This event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. Part of the GLBT Lecture Series.

Meeting — An organizing meeting for students and youth interested in finding out about going to an historic international event, the 14th World Festival & Conference of Youth & Students held in Havana, Cuba July 27- Aug. 6, 1997 will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Hundreds of students from hundreds of countries will be gathering to discuss the many social issues and changes in the world today. Call Lia Wong, SGA president, for room number or see Student Center listing. An information table will be set- up today from 11:30 a.m.- 5 p.m.

Presentation — "Conquest of the Amazon: Nelson Rockefeller and Evangelism in the Age of Oil," a public presentation in the UMass Commonwealth Room in the Student Union, will be held from 7-9 p.m. Authors Gerard Colby and Charlotte Dennett will speak.

Reading — Jay Neugeboren, UMass faculty member and award- winning fiction and screenplay writer, will read from his memoir Imagining Robert at 8 p.m. in Thompson Hall, room 102. Part of the Visiting Writers Series, sponsored by the M.F.A. Program at UMass.

FRIDAY, MAY 2

Film — Peace or Surrender? The Peace Process after Oslo," a movie about Jerusalem will be shown at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Hall, room 65. Sponsored by the Zeta Psi Theta fraternity Arab Students Association.

Film — A film about the sanctions on the children of Iraq will be shown on at 7 p.m. in Bartlett Hall, room 65. Sponsored by the Zeta Psi Theta fraternity Arab Students Association.

Lecture — A lecture on the historical background of Jerusalem and present situation by John Worell will be held in Bartlett Hall, room 65, at 8:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Zeta Psi Theta fraternity Arab Students Association.

SATURDAY, MAY 3

Auditions — The UMass Comedy Improv Group, Mission Improvable, will be holding auditions at 1 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163. Call backs are May 4 at 7 p.m. Call Aaron for more info at 546-5225.

Benefit — A Books for Prisoners Benefit, featuring Dr. Dennis Brutus, South African political prisoner with Nelson Mandela and currently exiled to America, poet/anti- imperialist activist, with local poets and musicians, will be held in the Campus Center, room 917, at 7 p.m. Please bring books to donate.

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe, Mission Improvable, will host their weekly improv comedy show at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Basement. Free and open to the public.

SUNDAY, MAY 3

Meeting — There will be a general meeting for the UMass Sailing Club at 6:30 p.m. in the Campus Center (see Info Desk for room number). Elections will be held for next year's positions.

Vigil — A Holocaust Memorial Vigil will be held at the Campus Pond at 7 p.m. Sponsored by the Baker, Chadbourne, Greenough and Van Meter/Butterfield Residence Hall clusters.

NOTICES

Musicians — Mission Improvable, the UMass Comedy Troupe, is looking for someone who can play the keyboard in a variety of music styles, with their own equipment. Call Aaron at 546-5225 for more info.

Financial aid — UMass Financial Aid Services would like to announce that May 1 is the last day to apply for a new or increase Federal Direct Student or Parent Loan for the current academic year.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, meets every Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees.

Community — "Rendezvous with the Soul," meditation, music and prayer meetings, will be held from 4-5 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805-809 weekly on Tuesdays until the end of the semester. Sponsored by the UMass Baha'i Club. For more information, call Chris at 549-4982.

Discussion — Come experience the cultural diversity of the Prince/Crampton Graduate Residence Hall. On Saturday, May 10, residents from many countries around the world will be participating in discussions and presentations about their experiences in their home countries. Scheduled topics- North America, April 29 – May 3; Latin America/Caribbean, May 4–10. The program is free and open to the public.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kragg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester- A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them, and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577–5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Tired of the same old over-priced, pub-style food? Sick of boring, crappy, plastic chain restaurants? For great food, cooked to order, try Walker's Grill. We don't take anyone else seriously, either.

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN	Programming
15	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN/Headline News
25	BET '
26	BET on Jazz
27	UCTV
28	The Learning Channel
29	TV Land
30	Comedy Central
32	Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Vodka & Tonic

Bruno By C. Baldwin

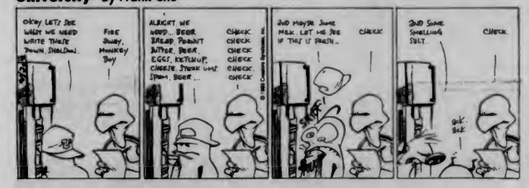
Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Speedy By Todd Hartzler



Non Sequitor By Wiley

Leedoe By Mike Rybicki

University³ By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu Call 545-3636 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger	Greek Lemon Chicken
Quiche Lorraine	Veal Cutlet Cordon Bleu
Meatball Grinder	Fiesta Rice & Cheese
Wheatball Grinder	1/4 Cowburgers

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Pucks	Greek Lemon Chicken
Fettuccini w/ Sauce	Savory Stuffed Peppers
Noodles and Pea Pods	Manicotti w/ Sauce
Scobby Snacks	Cereal w/ Sauce

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger	Greek Lemon Chicken
Grilled Chicken Sand.	Veal Parmesan
Turkey, Bacon, Swiss Pita	Wienerschnitzel
Grilled Thingy	Fried Thingy

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Pucks	Greek Lemon Chicken
Reuben	Veal Cutlet Cordon Bleu
Fettuccini w/ Sauce	Garden Chili
Noodles and Pea Pods	Manicotti w/ Sauce

The Unsilent Majority By Pukie

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
Your imagination may be working overtime. Don't succumb to fears and doubts. The situation really isn't that bad. You will get the support you need when you need it. Be receptive and know that people really are on your side.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
Personal and professional situations are changing, but you will come out ahead. Be willing to step on the sidelines and watch until things get worked out. Someone in authority is watching out for your interests so be receptive.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Focus on things that need to get done. Tackling large projects or tasks in smaller doses could lead to getting more accomplished. Keep heading toward the finish, and don't get overwhelmed. An evening of light entertainment will refresh your mood.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
An honest look at your strengths and weaknesses could pay off. Know yourself before trying to help others with their problems. You will receive some startling news from an unusual source. People who doubted you become allies.

LEO
July 23–August 23
When other people come to you with problems and concerns, offer advice and encouragement, but don't spread yourself too thin. You need to take time for yourself. Be willing to step back and focus on what's really important.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
A small setback offers a stepping stone to better things. Don't get sidetracked from your primary goal. Avoid rushing into a shaky situation– you'll gain more by playing the waiting game. Take time out with friends and family.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Personal and professional problems will be resolved to your benefit. Alternative viewpoints could help you see things in a new light. Be willing to break from the past and experiment with new ideas. Long-distance communication is in the picture.

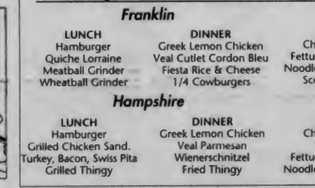
SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
A long project is finally winding down, but don't let down your guard. Pay attention to details for best results. Get input from others involved but realize that final decisions are yours. Staying cool, calm and collected is in your advantage.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
Examine all the possibilities before making a decision. The best solution may be one that was overlooked before. An old friend comes through for you, and you will get a chance to return the favor. Be on the lookout for bargains this week.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
You'll finally see progress on a long standing problem. The solution is closer than you think. Your enthusiasm will be rekindled; you're ready to charge ahead with renewed effort. A brief break with friends will do wonders for your outlook.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
Do what you know is right, regardless of what others think. Friends and family are on your side and will help you make the tough decisions. Take one step at a time and keep your focus on the goal. A sure, steady pace gets the best results.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
Pressures are piling up, but you are able to handle them. Keep planning for a long range dream to make it happen. Money concerns will be eased, and you could be in for pleasant surprise. You get welcome news from a friend or family member.



Close to Home By John McPherson

Quote of the Day

"We don't need romance... we HAVE sex"

–Steve Sanders
Beverly Hills 90210

ACROSS
1. Sour ___
5. Bring together
10. Govt. agcy.
13. "Render thereto ___ Caesar"
14. Confessional locales
15. Objective
16. List part
17. Used money
18. Singer Fitzgerald
19. Sublease
21. Showed gratitude
23. Stagger
25. Anna who was married to Zeigfeld
26. ___ and the Art of Archery
29. Lock material
31. Skeeters
34. Barcelona bravo
35. Like a benchwarmer
36. Las Vegas game
38. Bessel's abode
40. Supply
43. Bread
44. Reference book
46. Be bold enough
48. Family ___ room
49. Cosmetician Laudor
51. Dirt
52. However
53. Used the doorbell
56. Crackle and Pop's pal
57. Card game
60. Chess piece
64. Oil org.
65. "How do ___ (hee?..." (2 wds.)
66. Gianpo's aid
69. Pegleg of Steamboat Willie
70.

SPORTS

Thursday, May 1, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Small package has been big boost for UM

Women's lax faces tough one at Brown

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Good things come in small packages.

A curious saying — because you don't know if someone of the more demure type of stature made it up (to pump their brethren up a little bit), or if plain truth rings in those six words.

For the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team (6–6), plain, utter and undeniable truth rings in those words when you bring up 5–foot–2 sophomore attacker Laura Koruz.

In only her second season, Koruz has emerged as the center of the Minutewomen offense. The combination of natural skill and acquired knowledge of both sides of the game has placed her as the team's leading scorer (24 goals, 15 assists, 39 points), and not just this season, but last season as well.

With one game left in the regular season, today's contest at Brown University at 4 p.m., Koruz has already surpassed last year's scoring mark (28 pts), and any notions that not just good, but great things do come in small packages.

"I think a lot of people look at me, and don't think I can do what I've accomplished," Koruz said. "So, I know that since high school it's been a problem. It just pushes me harder to go out and show them that I might be small, but I can get the job done.

"It's been an advantage, because people look down upon me like I can't do it. I go out and do what I have to do."

UMass will have to do what it has to do in spades today, as the No. 11 Bears of Brown will be a tough contest for any team in the nation. Yet, UMass has been playing their best ball of the season of late, riding a four–game winning streak and the highest win total in a season since the program's reinstatement in 1993.

For Koruz and coach Francesca McClellan, success will be spelled in two words — confidence and communication.

"Brown is very competitive, and is one of the stronger teams in New England," McClellan said. "So, we need to go out and play with more than our skills, our ability, our technique. We need to go out and play with absolute confidence, which allows us to play an aggressive game, and that's what we're going to have to do."

"Its just like Boston College [a 15–12 win last Saturday], we need to pass and communicate," Koruz said. "We can beat Brown, and I think some people are going in with the idea that we can't beat them, but I definitely think we can. It's all about team chemistry, and we need that. If we play like we played against BC, we can beat Brown."

Turn to KORUTZ, page 11

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Women's lacrosse sophomore Laura Korutz has broken through as UMass' leading scorer this season.

Minutemen face Huskies in Beanpot rivalry rematch

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Doug Clark, who was on fire in the baseball Beanpot earlier this month, and his teammates will face Northeastern, the team they faced in the Beanpot's first round, tomorrow.

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Last time Northeastern faced the Massachusetts baseball team, the Huskies didn't have much luck.

In fact, they didn't have any luck at all.

UMass junior righthander Scott Barnsby no–hit the Huskies in the Beanpot semi–finals last week, but Northeastern gets another crack at the Minutemen today when it travels to Earl E. Lorden Field to battle the No. 19 Minutemen at 3 p.m.

The Huskies (22–15, 9–11 America East) might breathe a little easier knowing they don't have to face Barnsby again, but they can't be happy with the prospect of facing the team with the nation's longest winning streak. UMass (28–6, 12–3) has now won 18 in a row, and are steamrolling into the Atlantic 10 Championships, which begin on May 15th.

"There's a little more motivation [to keep the streak going]," UMass coach Mike Stone said. "But it's not something you can think about when you're playing. You just have to go out and play."

For the Minutemen, much of their success of late has come

Turn to BASEBALL, page 11

Faessler rising star for UM softball

Freshman's bat, work ethic helps Minutewomen

By Carey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts softball team heads to Kingston, R.I. tonight for the Atlantic 10 Championships, there will be one empty seat on the bus. Don't worry, it won't be the seat of either of the ster pitchers, Danielle Henderson or Liz Wagner. It won't be the seat of all–time leading UMass record holder Sam Cardenas, and it won't be the seat of 1996 A–10 Player of the Year winner Kim Gutridge. In fact, the player that will be missing this weekend for UMass is one of its most silent weapons.

Though just a freshman, Nicole Faessler has emerged as a rising star, and one of the strongest additions to the Minutewoman team this spring as a designated hitter and backup catcher. But sadly, she will have to sit out this year's A–10 Championships after undergoing surgery this morning.

UMass coach Elaine Sortino knows the team will be hurting without Faessler's red–hot bat this weekend, after relying on it so much this year.

"Nicole has really had a great season," Sortino said. "She has come up with some very critical hits for us, and has done a great job overall."

Nicole Faessler

For instance, Faessler's first trip to the plate in a UMass uniform was against nationally–ranked Arizona State. She delivered a bases clearing double to score the team's only two runs.

"I was so happy that day. We were losing by a lot, and it seemed that everyone was giving up before I got up," a soft– spoken Faessler remembered. "It was a really great way to start things off for me."

Atop the list of her freshman season accolades is her walk– off, game–winning seventh inning single against La Salle. And then her homerun against St. Bonaventure that kept a Minutewomen winning streak intact.

"The homerun was so exciting," Faessler recalled with a beaming smile. "It was great because my parents were up to visit, and I was already having a great weekend. It was like a dream come true."

Though she seems to have quickly jumped in as a contributor to a NCAA tournament–bound team, Faessler began playing this game over a decade ago.

As a child growing up in Queens, N.Y., Faessler worked off her athletic energy playing baseball with the neighborhood boys in park leagues. When she moved with her family to Milford at the tender age of seven, opportunities were finally available for her to get involved in softball.

But it wasn't until her freshman year at Milford High School, when she won a spot at the starting varsity shortstop, that her potential to excel in the sport came clearly into focus.

"As a freshman it was strange, because I was beating out older girls on the varsity team," Faessler said. "My father really started to push me to get more serious about it."

And that she did, putting up huge numbers as a four–year starter. Faessler batted .421 in her four years at Milford High, and .508 in her senior campaign.

During her junior year, the presence of Division I coaches were common sights at Milford home games. By her senior year, the calls started rolling in from such schools as Rhode Island, Connecticut, Georgia Southern and UMass.

"I visited UMass in the fall of my senior year, and I just fell in love with the school," Faessler said. "Deciding to go to UMass has worked out great for me."

Sortino felt the same way about landing Faessler as a recruit.

"It was a great thing for UMass, because she was a talented in–state product," Sortino said. "And we really needed that."

Though Faessler aspires to achieve bigger and better things at UMass, right now she is content with her backup role to current catcher Kelly Buckley.

"I really, really respect Buck. I think she's the best catcher I've ever seen," Faessler said. "I'm happy to back her up whenever she needs a break. I just want to learn from her."

As for her limiting role as a designated hitter, Faessler thinks it's a pleasure just to be able to contribute.

"I love to hit," Faessler said. "Everytime I go out there, I want to rip the cover off the ball and help the team. It's my favorite thing in the world to do."

And Faessler does it so well. Heading into post–season play, she has hit at a .283 clip, with 14 RBIs, 14 hits and four extra–base hits. All this comes from someone who is still trying to adjust to collegiate–level pitching.

When it comes to softball and life, Faessler looks to only one person for the answers.

"My dad is my inspiration and my teacher. He taught me everything I know about softball," Faessler bragged. "He put a lot of pressure on me in high school, and it was kind of aggravating, but it has really

Turn to FAESSLER, page 11

Blizzard likes UM's warm atmosphere

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Ronnell Blizzard, who signed a national letter of intent to play basketball at Massachusetts, said it was partly the location and partly the atmosphere that made him choose UMass over his other finalist.

"It partly had to do with location," Blizzard said yesterday of his choice between UMass and Cincinnati. "Cincinnati is in the city and it's a real fast–paced lifestyle. UMass seemed more laid back."

Blizzard, a 6–foot–8 forward, was also swayed by the team atmosphere. "I liked everything I saw from the team," he said. "It's a talented young team with a young coach."

UMass' coach James "Bruiser" Flint impressed Blizzard with the job he did in his rookie campaign.

"He showed he is capable of coaching at the top level with the way he turned things around," Blizzard said. "He was in a tough situation with a tough schedule and other things. Plus he had the job of getting acclimated to being a head coach instead of an assistant."

Another factor in Blizzard's decision to attend school in Amherst was how close the campus is to his Waterbury, Conn. home.

"It helped in my decision," he said. "My family will always be there for me and they knew that this was a big decision for me. I just decided to go where I felt I had the most opportunities."

While he has not chosen a major, Blizzard said he has considered focusing on English class work. He is also taking a realistic approach to his basketball aspirations.

"The NBA is not my only goal, although it is a good goal for me," he said. "But I realize that reaching the NBA exceeds all aspects of reality as far as an athlete making it."

* * *

Winners of UMass' yearly basketball awards were announced last Sunday at the team's annual banquet. Those presented with awards were: Carmelo Travieso — George "Trigger" Burke most valuable player award; Julius Erving scoring award; Tyrone Weeks — Mark Donoghue most productive player award, Ray Wilson rebounding award; Charlton Clarke — Jim McCoy most improved player award; Jim Laughnane free throw award; Edgar Padilla — Rick Pitino assist award; Lari Kesner — Jack Leaman defensive award; Inus Norville — Rafer Giles sixth man award.

Other winners were: Winston Smith — Skip Connors academic award; Ajmal Basit — Alex Eldridge coaches' award; Chris Kirkland — Alex Eldridge coaches' award; Mike Babul — Derrick Claiborne Mr. Hustle award; Ross Burns — Amherst Chamber of Commerce unsung hero award; and Andy Maclay — John Murphy most inspirational player award.

Rumors fly as Carr steps down as coach

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — Saying his "mission has been accomplished," M.L. Carr joked and laughed yesterday as he resigned as coach after the worst season in Boston Celtics history.

He will stay on as director of basketball operations, a post he's held for three seasons, and said he would be involved in the search for a "career coach" to replace him on the bench. He avoided most questions — including potential successors, Larry Bird's uncertain future in the organization, and a timetable for naming a new coach.

But Carr was clear on at least one thing.

"I have no interest in being a career coach," he said in a conference call. "This is the right time. This is consistent with the plan we had from day one."

He said he succeeded Chris Ford as coach two seasons ago to guide the team through rough times before turning it over to a long–term coach.

That might be Rick Pitino. Although he repeatedly has said he wants to stay as coach of Kentucky, the Boston Globe yesterday quoted an unidentified source as saying there was a "95 percent chance" that Pitino would land in Boston.

Carr refused to say if Pitino is even a candidate or to comment on Larry Brown, another potential successor who resigned yesterday as coach of the Indiana Pacers.

Asked if Bird, now a special assistant, would stay with the Celtics, Carr said, "I'm not a fortune teller." Bird is considered a candidate to succeed Brown with the Pacers.

The Celtics' 16 championships are an NBA record, but they were just 48–116 under Carr and missed the playoffs both seasons. But Carr's unshakable optimism virtually eliminated locker room dissension and put the focus for the miserable season on him rather than his players.

"I will long remember this season as one of adversity and one in which guys stuck together," he said.

Injuries and his coaching inexperience — he had never coached at any level before — contributed to a 15-67 record.

Now the Celtics reap the benefits of that ineptitude since the second-worst record in the NBA gives them the best chance for this year's top draft pick. Vancouver, which was 14-68, is not eligible because of the expansion agreement under which it entered the league. The Celtics will learn their drafting order on May 18. Boston has another lottery pick from the trade of Eric Montross to Dallas before last season and should get key players such as Dino Radja and Dana Barros back. They missed most of the season with injuries.

"The gloom days and dark days, we believe, are over. Now is the time to get excited about the draft," Carr said.

While he shied away from questions on Brown and Pitino, he said other potential candidates included Kansas coach Roy Williams and Celtics assistant coach Dennis Johnson.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 132 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, May 2, 1997

Flames in the City of Angels

Anne Heche and Tommy Lee Jones get fired up in new film Volcano. Check out our movie review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Not enough this time

Pete Gautreau had a homerun in yesterday's game, but it was not enough as UMass baseball lost to Northeastern (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Zaire President fails to show for summit

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Without explanation, President Mobutu Sese Seko failed to show up yesterday for a flight to talks with the rebel leader who has seized half his country. Mediators and Zairian officials insisted the meeting is still on, but it might be delayed.

It was not the first time Mobutu has hedged on attending talks, which mediators hope will lead to his peaceful resignation. For the past week, he has committed to meet Laurent Kabila and then reneged.

With talks set for today, Mobutu's no-show at the Kinshasa airport left the status of negotiations unclear — as are many things in Zaire these days.

Zairian Cabinet ministers and other officials waited for Mobutu at the airport Thursday, ready to depart for the talks to be held on a South African naval ship departing from Gabon. Sources close to Mobutu said the situation was "confused" and that the meeting may be postponed until tomorrow.

As diplomats scurried to keep the meeting on track, aid workers in northeastern Zaire flew more than 1,500 Rwandan refugees home yesterday and reports emerged that troops and tanks from Angola were helping the rebels in their march toward Kinshasa, the capital.

NATION

USA Today leaks new info on Cosby murder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two friends of Mikail Markhasev say he shot Ennis Cosby when they were high on drugs, and two other people told police they helped Markhasev look for a gun he threw away that night, USA Today reported yesterday.

The newspaper said the friends, who said they were driving with Markhasev the night Cosby was killed, were questioned and released and that officials would not say whether they are suspects. The only previously known witness at the scene was a female friend of Cosby, son of comedian Bill Cosby. She was unable to pick Markhasev out of a line-up.

The report came as the arraignment for Markhasev, an 18-year-old Ukrainian immigrant, was delayed so public defenders could take over the case from private lawyers he can no longer afford. Lawyers' comments on the report were limited because of a gag order.

"The USA Today story came as a surprise to me," Markhasev's former attorney, Charles Lindner, said outside court Thursday. "I'm curious as to how they obtained the documents they claim to have."

The gag order was imposed last month after Lindner said no fingerprints of value were found on a gun found in brush five miles from the killing scene.

USA Today, citing court documents and a relative of one witness, said: Eli Zakaria, 23, and Sara Ann Peters, 21, both of Huntington Beach, told police they were driving with Markhasev shortly after midnight on Jan 16.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 65 LOW: 40	HIGH: 65 LOW: 40	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 5
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

Walk explores safety problems on campus

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Administrators, public safety officials and Student Government Association (SGA) Senators participated in the first annual public safety walk on Wednesday night, sponsored by the SGA Women's Issue Committee.

"The major reason for this walk is to point out areas of concerns on campus that could use more call boxes and better lighting," said Stacey Shackford, chairperson of the SGA Women's Issue Committee.

The group of 30 people divided into four groups.

The four paths began at the Student Union steps and then went to Southwest Residential Area, the commuter parking lots on Commonwealth Avenue, the Campus Center Parking Garage and the Textbook Annex. The third route went through Orchard Hill Residential Area and Central Residential Area and the last group went through Sylvan Residential Area and Observatory Path then to Mather Career Center.

Each group had to answer questions about visibility and the location of call boxes. The groups rated the lighting due to the number of feet away that you could recognize a person.

Very good lighting equaled visibility up to 100 feet away while very poor visibility was 0 — 25 feet.

According to survey results from a similar campus safety walk which took place in 1979, UMass students said that over 30 percent of the campus was poorly lit.

Along the path from parking lots located behind Mark's Meadow Elementary School to Sylvan, an unmarked and unlit path was located.

Many participants were concerned with the amount of people who use unmarked paths.

"It all about convenience, not about what's paved and what's not paved," said Sandeep Kapoor, a student head security supervisor.

Another major concern to the Sylvan group was the Observatory path, also known as "the rape trail." Many students use this as a shortcut from Orchard Hill to Sylvan.

"I am concerned about students using that footpath in its current condition. In fact, I am strongly against them using it," said UMass Chief of Police, Jack Luippold.

Used by astronomy students, it contains one call box at the Observatory and has no lights on the unpaved pathway.

According to Kenny Velazquez, a student security supervisor, although the path is an unmarked route by the

Turn to PATH, page 2

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

UMass community members took part in the first annual public safety walk on Wednesday night.

SGA revamps web page to gather student opinion on Honors College

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

In an effort to gather student body opinion on the concept of an Honors College being created at the University of Massachusetts–Amherst campus, the Student Government Association (SGA) has modified their web page to allow for direct e–mail responses regarding the controversial proposal.

"Based on student reaction to the article printed by the Collegian [on April 28], we feel we need to gather more information from the student body before we decide what to do as the Student Government Association," said Peter Kilbourne, associate speaker of the Senate.

"In an effort to do that, we will have a link on our web page, as well as a statement from the University administration on the pros and what we feel are some of the cons on the Honors College," Kilbourne said.

Kilbourne said he expects the e–mail link to be on the web page early next week.

According to Student Trustee Brian Tirrell, the SGA currently has no formal position on the Honors College proposal, and hopes to use e–mail responses to better represent the opinion of the student body in the Senate.

SGA members and concerned students met with Aaron Spencer, chair of the Board of Higher Education's Subcommittee on the Honors College, last Friday in West Roxbury. Lia Wong, president of the SGA, and others raised concerns with Spencer about the Board's proposal, such as whether the Honors College would make UMass "elitist," and whether non–honors students would have access to new honors facilities on campus.

The meeting reportedly became emotional and tense as the student group clashed with Spencer about the Honors College.

"Some inappropriate things were said in the meeting with the Board of Higher Education, but not by SGA officers," Tirrell said.

Tirrell explained what he feels are the positive and negative aspects of having an Honors College on campus.

"In the long run, it will be beneficial if it is constructed in such a way that helps the average student," Tirrell said.

Some examples of this, Tirrell said, are non–honors students taking honors classes or using honors computer facilities. He also stated that with the creation of the Honors College, UMass will achieve an "improved image" which could help defeat its "ZooMass" reputation and receive wider recognition on Beacon Hill.

"On the flipside, it will almost certainly raise standards at the University, because if enrollment stays the same and students with higher SAT scores and high school class rank are accepted, then the bottom percentage [of applicants] are cut," Tirrell said. "What does that mean to the average student in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts who wants a better education if we make the University elitist?"

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNER / COLLEGIAN

Skate boarding and sunny days...

Josh Waterstein, a sophomore impresses the crowd as a group of UMass students skateboard by the Campus Center.

Student athlete & scholar: Perri–Lyn Cohen prepares for commencement speech

COURTESY NEWS OFFICE

Perri-Lyn Cohen will be the student speaker at the 127th undergraduate

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

A senior communications major who has been active on campus and in the community has been named student speaker for the 127th undergraduate commencement at the University of Massachusetts, which will take place on Sunday May 25, at 10:30 a.m. in Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Perri–Lyn Cohen, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gerald Leiber of Newton, was selected by a committee made up of students and faculty members based on a speech submitted to the committee.

"It's pretty overwhelming for the girl who never thought she would ever graduate high school," Cohen said. "It's a real honor."

According to a press release, in her speech, Cohen will "talk about the college experience, emphasizing that students should not regard college as a vocational school, but rather an opportunity to expand their view of the world and learn how to think."

"You get out of it what you put in. It's all up to you," Cohen said.

According to Marry Norden, a professor in the communications department, Cohen is a fine student.

"She's very conscientious, and very hard–working. The Communications Department is just delighted that she will be speaking at commencement," Norden said.

Last year, Cohen worked as a student personnel supervisor at the Bluewall coffee house, and was nominated for UMass student employee of the year for her work on that position.

Cohen was also a goaltender on the UMass women's ice hockey team. According to her coach, Justin Blackman, she had never played goal before, but developed into an excellent player.

"She's a very strong–willed and dedicated individual. I was really impressed with her dedication," said Blackman. "I never saw anybody work that hard and be that dedicated to the sport of hockey. She's the best type of student you could ask for."

On the hockey playing experience, Cohen said, "It was a dream come true, the most fun I can remember having in a long time. I wish I were still playing."

A Dean's List student for each of the last four semesters, Cohen served as a delegate to the first annual FIRST (Foundation for Individual Responsibility and Social Trust) Conference, which addressed issues of concern to young adults and has also worked at the Volunteer Center of Franklin County in Greenfield as a public relations coordinator, where she created a volunteer outreach program and managed the Volunteer Center office.

"I think volunteer work is a huge part of my life. I like to give back to the community," Cohen said.

Cohen joins Mike Barnicle, a Boston Globe columnist and noted supporter of public education, who was named last week as the main speaker for the commencement.

"I am so thrilled. I could not be happier, [Barnicle] has been a huge influence in my life. It made my year to find out he would be speaking."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Seema Gangatirkar
Copy Editor: Mike Burke
Photo Technician: Chris Cesnek
Production Supervisor: Mark J. McGrath
Production Staff: Sandi Krauss, Liz Brown

VIBES hosts Kids Carnival for underprivileged youth

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

On Sunday, the University of Massachusetts VIBES (Volunteer Initiative Blending Education and Service) Program will be holding its annual Kids Carnival outside the School of Management Building.

According to coordinator Leanne Asiaf, VIBES is a student–run organization within the School of Management which works to place student volunteers in community agencies and holds one–time events throughout the academic year to benefit underprivileged children in the Pioneer Valley.

Over the course of the school year, about 150 students volunteer through VIBES, and about 35 student volunteers are expected for Sunday's event.

"I think it's great to see that so many students in the School of Management give time on a Sunday," Asiaf said. "The reason they do it is for the children."

At the end of the year VIBES always holds its Kids Carnival, for which it creates a fair–like atmosphere for area children who do not ordinarily have such opportunities.

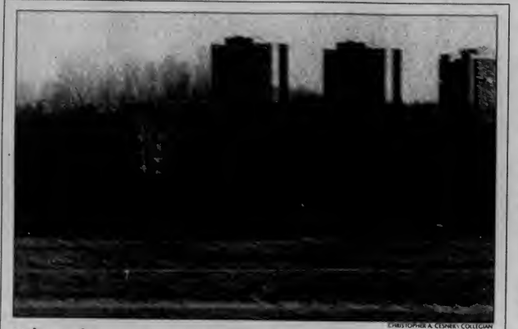
Scheduled events for this year's Carnival include face painting, pie throwing, a shave the balloon contest, balloon tosses, sno cones and relay races and ice cream provided by one sponsor, Friendly's restaurant.

Also sponsoring the event will be Milton Bradley.

The children who take part, expected to number about 100, are bussed in from shelters like the Main Street Shelter and Broderick House, both of Holyoke and Jessie's House in Northampton.

Amy Thompson–Landry, the program director of the of the Children's Museum in Holyoke, another agency taking part in the Carnival said that the children there are excited.

"This is like the event of the year. The kids have been coming in all afternoon with their permission slips," Thompson–Landry said.



Thompson–Landry said that it is good for the children to see a college campus and college students up close, especially in the part of life when feelings about college begin to develop.

Based on VIBES's previous events, student adviser Tim Wondolowski says the events should go smoothly.

"It gives you a chance to give back to the community," Wondolowski said. "It's a learning experience for me- dealing with a younger crowd.

Besides the Kids' Carnival, VIBES also coordinates trick or treating in Chadbourne and Greenough residence halls in October and an annual holiday party towards the end of the fall semester.

"The Kids Carnival is a great way to end off the semester. It's rewarding to see how excited the children get and how much fun they have," Asiaf said.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK/ COLLEGIAN

Where the country meets the city

The lush country landscape of Hadley pulls its giant body to the horizon where the towers of Southwest pierce the sky line.

■ path

continued from page 1

University, security officers routinely check the path two or three times a night.

Group members talked about installing another call box on the path but they were not sure if lighting could be installed because of the Observatory.

In addition to the Observatory path Luippold also said he was also concerned about the parking lots leading to Sylvan and the parking lots around fraternity/sorority park.

Jim Wallace, Operations Manager for Housing Services in Northeast and Sylvan said the walk was very productive for him.

"The walk was good because I often don't have the motivation to stay on campus after dark and walk around," Wallace said.

The one area that concerned Wallace the most was the shelter at a Mather Career Center bus stop next to the yellow parking lot.

"That was one of the scariest places I saw — you can't see who is in the back of it," Wallace said. "I would like to see some sort of lighting go into that bus stop."

"My priorities would be for the lot around Sylvan and the E [yellow] lot at Mather [Career Center]. I know a lot of people are concerned about that path [Observatory Road] but I am not sure how we would address that," Wallace said.

Luippold added, "I thought the walk was very productive from the standpoint of receiving immediate feed back and identifying problems that need to be fixed right away as well as issues for future plans."

The Women's Issues Committee has plans to compile a prioritized list of all places on campus that need more lighting, more call boxes and need lights repaired by the end of next week.

The Committee will present the recommendations to the Vice Chancellor's Public Safety Committee and they will create a five–year plan in which three new call boxes will be added to campus each academic year.

The Women's Issue Committee is meeting on Monday at 6:30 p.m. in the SGA Senate Office to begin recommendations.

Corrections

Tony Recchia's name was misspelled in yesterday's story on the photo display for students with disabilities. Additionally, Bonnie Page, a senior women's studies major, worked jointly on the project with Recchia.

Campus Perspectives printed on April 25 contained incorrectly matched photos with students' quotes (the first three and the seventh). The quotes below the photos do not necessarily represent the opinion of those depicted.

The Collegian regrets these errors.

Group tries to improve UMass climate

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

On Wednesday afternoon, the Resource Network met to discuss ways to improve campus climate and create a better community at the University of Massachusetts. This week's topic stemmed from a previous meeting, in which the group talked about the "ramifications of the Goodell takeover."

"A huge thing that struck us during the previous meeting was so much had to do with the overall environment and climate for everyone on this campus, students, staff, faculty and administration," said Gary Bernhard, Resource Network mediator and University Without Walls director.

"We want to find ways to improve this campus so everyone can have a better experience here and so everyone who is associated with UMass can have a better experience," he said.

"People on this campus need to realize that students come to school with a tremendous amount of baggage. If UMass would accept that students come here with all kinds of issue in their life, they would have a better experience," said Elaine Parmett, academic advisor from the University advising Center.

Parmett also commented that students must try to see thing from a faculty perspective but also faculty must learn to see students perspective.

"We can't keep demoralizing students, why would the students have want to stay here?" Parmett asked.

A student shared an experience he had with a professor in a Calculus class.

"Professors don't try to understand. The don't understand that there is more to us than just being students. A lot of them automatically assume that we are not doing well because we didn't study. They don't ask what is going on in other parts of our lives," he said.

The professor advised him to change his major because he was doing so poorly in the class.

"I think that the University is based on divide and conquer. The one thing I have seen a lot of and it keeps coming back is how no one goes home and complains about the Arts and Science department or some other department, its always, UMass did this or that," said Mike Jenkins, assistant athletic director for student athletes.

"When advising students we are talking about issues of human dignity, these are human beings who are here as students... I work with athletes but I work with human beings who go happen to be enrolled in a sport," Jenkins said.

Karen Lederle, a Women Studies advisor, said that she hears stories from students all the time of professors who ask them for documentation about traumatic event if they miss a class.

"If a student lies to me about a death in the family or being in the hospital then I think there something a bit more serious going on with them that I need to deal with," Lederle said.

Jenkins also commented that there is no "central authority."

"Who is in charge of advising? No one has that authority to say how advising should be done. Students need to feel important and they need the attention they deserve," he added.

Biological Science Librarian Cheryl Howland, said that the University must find ways to form smaller communities inside the larger community of UMass.

One way of achieving this is to create a mandatory class that teaches students college survival skills.

"No one ever told students what to expect when they get here... there needs to be a class teaches students here's what it means to be a students. Students need to know that everything that happens to them is painfully normal that every other student is going through the same thing," Jenkins said.

At the end of the meeting, participants agreed on the idea of developing a class. Outlines and plans are to be discussed over the summer.

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
www.findathome.com
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 10 turning right onto Rte 5-(4 miles left at Staples onto Rte 116N, first right to light, left to Corner I-91 S. take exit 20 Shop at wholesale prices right at the shops (from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market, from full systems to libraries of CDs, it's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, MAY 4

The TOP of the CAMPUS RESTAURANT presents
A GRADUATION BUFFET
Sunday May 25th
11th Floor Campus Center
$14.95 per person
Seatings at 12:15pm and 2:00pm
Reservations Recommended
Call 545-3216
Le Menu
Caesar salad
Mesclun Mix Salad
Chilled Cucumber Soup
New England Clam Chowder
Standing Steamship Round au Jus
Grilled Tarragon Chicken Breast
Key West Fillets
Risotto Primavera
White & Wild Rice
Rosemary Roasted Red Bliss Potatoes
Fresh Julienne Vegetable Medley
Assorted Breads
Champagne Sabayon with Fresh Berries
Chocolate Mousse
Assorted Cakes & Pies

DEPARTMENT DIRECTORS NEEDED
WMUA
is a student run, 1,000 Watt radio station with a broadcast radius of 25 miles around Amherst. We have been in continuous operation from UMass since 1949, and play a vital role in bringing a wide variety of Music, UMass sports, News and Public Affairs, year round to listeners in four states.
NEWS. SPORTS. PRODUKTION. TRAINING. PUBLIC AFFAIRS. PUBLICITY. ALANA AFFAIRS. TELETHON. MUSIC. WOMEN'S AFFAIRS. UNDERWRITING. VISUAL MEDIA. OFFICE COORDINATOR.
These are Paid Positions. For a complete job description and an application, stop by WMUA downstairs in the Campus Center 105 or call 545-2876, for more information.
PAID POSITIONS!
Completed applications due by: Thurs. May 8th
91.1FM

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Laura Forster • Photos by Ken W.P. Scott

How do you feel about this year's Spring Concert?

"I know G. Love but I'm not sure I'm going to go, because the bands are not too good and you have to pay."

Daryl Proulx
freshman,
School of Management
Lowell

"I don't even know these bands. What kind of music do they play? I've never been [to the Spring Concert] because I'm always too busy with finals. People need money for Financial Aid so we're not going to spend it on the Spring Concert."

Anant Ahuja
senior, computer systems engineering
Amherst

"I have no idea who any of the groups are, but I want to see Redman and Trick Knee, whoever they are, because I heard they are good. It's only $2 so it doesn't matter."

Cassandra Trice
freshman, biology
Leominster

"I'm not going because it's Mother's Day weekend. I don't agree that there aren't any headline bands and that it's $2. If they charge this year, they're gonna charge every year."

Sara Amiro
sophomore, legal studies
Chelmsford

"It's time members of the ALANA community can be represented in two different genres of music. If it is necessary to have a traditional Spring Concert, than a fee is necessary."

Dana Salmon
sophomore, education/sociology
Worcester

"I'm a fan of the groups. I think any concert they put on will be great because they didn't have one last year. If students want the Spring Concert, the fee shouldn't make a big difference."

Brian Girard
sophomore, communications
Worcester

"It was my understanding when I heard during the SGA elections that since last year's money would be used for this year's concert, it would be bigger and better so I don't know why we're paying."

Jose Corporan
graduate, community health studies
Boston

Labor Party headed toward landslide win

By Maureen Johnson
Associated Press

LONDON — The Labor Party surged toward a landslide election victory last night that would restore it to power for the first time in a generation and make 43-year-old Tony Blair the youngest British prime minister in 185 years.

Moments after the polls closed, a BBC exit poll projected that Labor would take 47 percent of the vote, compared to just 29 percent for the Conservatives — the poorest Conservative showing since 1832.

Independent Television News said its exit poll projected a huge Labor victory, with 159 more seats in the 659-seat House of Commons than any other party. That would mean a bigger Labor triumph than the one that swept Winston Churchill out of office in 1945.

"It looks like we're going to win in very good fashion indeed," said Labor's deputy leader, John Prescott, savoring the first exit poll reports.

Defense Secretary Michael Portillo refused to concede defeat on the basis of the exit polls, although he acknowledged that his party was hurt by internal squabbling. "I think what the party needs to reflect upon is that it has done itself no good by showing its divisions," he said.

In power since Margaret Thatcher ousted the last Labor government in 1979, the Conservatives were battered by divisions over Britain's future role in Europe and a widespread sense they had simply been around too long.

Blair and his party fought a disciplined, slick six-week campaign from the political center after dumping a raft of socialist policies and adopting the Conservatives' pro-business and low-tax policies.

"We've got to get these Tories [Conservatives] out," said publisher Ian Walden, who voted in the comfortable market town of Saffron Walden, 35 miles from London.

Police searched Britain's 45,000 polling stations following bomb hoaxes and small explosions by the Irish Republican Army during the campaign. Armed officers stood by as Blair voted near his home in Trimdon, 235 miles northeast of London.

He smiled broadly, but sounded cautious: "It depends on the people."

In Northern Ireland, which will have 18 seats in the Commons, a series of bomb threats — believed to come from pro-British paramilitaries — closed roads and disrupted traffic in Belfast. Across Britain, voters turned out steadily in brilliant sunshine, and officials predicted a traditionally heavy turnout. In 1992, the turnout was 78 percent.

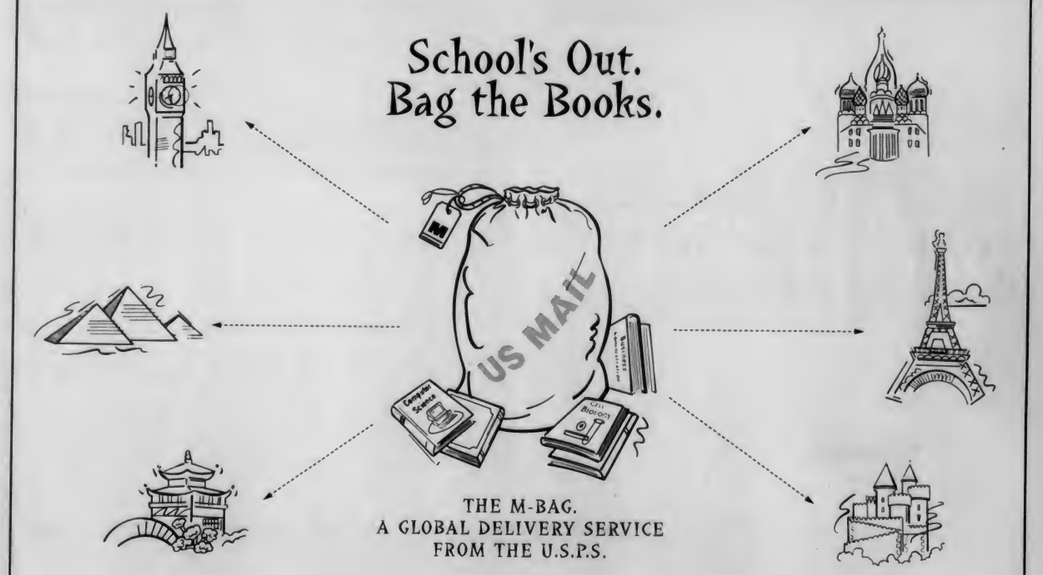
Nearly 44 million people were eligible to vote, and more than 3,700 candidates ran. A party needs 330 seats for a parliamentary majority to form the next government.

International Labor Day celebrated

(A.P.) — Workers marked the May Day labor holiday on yesterday with street protests around the world. Russians lambasted Yeltsin. Mexicans cursed Clinton. Germans protested unemployment. South Koreans marched against corruption.

Mexicans poured into their capital to denounce economic policies under the North American Free Trade Agreement, which linked Mexico's economy to those of the United States and Canada. "Die, Clinton!" some of the 60,000 marchers shouted as they passed the U.S. Embassy, just four days before President Clinton's visit to Mexico.

Real wages in Mexico are 20 percent of what they were in 1980 and nearly half of all workers earn the minimum wage or less. In Seoul, May Day demonstrators hurled rocks and firebombs, demanding the arrest of a son of President Kim Young-sam in a bribery scandal. Dozens of workers were injured and at least 100 people were detained across the country.



In Germany, union workers marched against high unemployment — 11.7 percent overall, but 18.1 percent in the eastern states. And at least 380 people were arrested in clashes around the country. Police said 120 neo-Nazis were arrested in the central German town of Hann Munden for holding an illegal rally. Authorities had to use a water cannon and night sticks to break up protests in Berlin, arresting at least 110 demonstrators. Another 150 were arrested in Leipzig.

Crowds filled Beijing's Tiananmen Square at dawn Thursday to honor model workers and watch soldiers raise the flag on the first of a three-day vacation.

But noting the 10 million layoffs from debt-ridden state industries over the past year, an editorial in the Communist Party newspaper, People's Daily, warned more bitter medicine was ahead. The commentary called for factory managers to be given greater responsibility — a code for allowing them to make decisions based on profits, rather than on full employment.

Russians, most of them communists, marched through central Moscow and gathered just off the Red Square to denounce the government and demand President Boris Yeltsin's resignation. "Yeltsin's gang to court!" chanted the crowd, awash in Soviet red flags and anti-government banners.

For his part, Yeltsin noted how democratic reforms made Thursday different from May Day celebrations in Soviet times, when hundreds of thousands of Russians marched in military parades.

School's Out. Bag the Books.

THE M-BAG.
A GLOBAL DELIVERY SERVICE
FROM THE U.S.P.S.
Here's a cool way to send your books overseas or across the border. Bag the books in our nifty M-Bag, once you have wrapped and addressed them, we'll speed them to virtually any destination on the planet. That's everything from the unabridged history of the world to alternative comics, 11 to 66 lbs.* worth, starting at only 64 cents a lb. And with the cash you'll be saving, you might be able to send yourself home, too.
GLOBAL DELIVERY SERVICES
UNITED STATES POSTAL SERVICE
To pick up your bag, drop by the local Post Office at:
Amherst Financial Station 141 North Pleasant St., Amherst, MA • Amherst Post Office 145 University Dr., Amherst, MA
*Bags weighing less than 11 lbs. shipped at the 11 lb. rate.
© 1997 USPS

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareva Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quint Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Premes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quint Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A step towards understanding

Two nights ago marked a landmark for American television. During primetime, Ellen DeGeneres, the star of the ABC sitcom, "Ellen" came out as a lesbian becoming the first homosexual character on a major network star. Ellen's coming out even sparked women across the country to do the same. By now, after the weeks of hype, almost everybody knows of Ellen's sexuality — both in real life and on the show.

For those who didn't get a chance to watch the show, it revolved around Ellen's declaration of her lesbianism to herself and her friends. The catalyst is Susan (Laura Dern), the woman with whom Ellen falls in love, and who "mistakenly" assumes is gay. After Ellen repeatedly tells Susan she is straight, she goes into therapy and comes to terms with her sexuality and realizes Susan is "the one." Ellen runs to meet Susan at the airport to tell her she is gay.

The punchline — she does it into a microphone, thus announcing it to everyone in the terminal. The rest of the episode centers on Ellen telling her friends and their reactions to the news. And the whole thing is done with typical DeGeneres–style sarcastic comedy.

"After seeing "Ellen" and its sarcasm surrounding certain stereotypes and ideas regarding homosexuality, I thought that the humor was a perfect atmosphere to help ease middle America into accepting homosexuals."

Lisa M. Oliveri

Though it was disguised in humor, her coming out does show how far we have come as a society in accepting homosexuals. But the controversy surrounding this episode also proved how backwards some still are in this country — the fact that there was this much hype at all is crazy. Why can't DeGeneres choose to disclose her sexuality without all the media frenzy? She is not the first celebrity to admit she is gay — and she won't be the last.

I must admit, I had my worries about this episode. Coming out to friends and family is a hard thing to do — I was skeptical if a sitcom could capture the difficulty of this situation. But after seeing "Ellen" and its sarcasm surrounding certain stereotypes and ideas regarding homosexuality, I thought that the humor was a perfect atmosphere to help ease middle America into accepting homosexuals.

This episode also did a great job in poking fun of those individuals who still share such barbaric and ignorant opinions of homosexuals. For instance, how many times have you heard a homophobic individual, or someone preaching morality spout off nonsense such as, "All homosexuals are promiscuous."

This was squelched in the scene in the bookstore where Susan tells Ellen she has been in a relationship for the past eight years. This was a solid effort to show that lesbians can, and do engage in lengthy monogamous relationships.

It bothers me that people in Alabama, Washington D.C. and other parts of the country feel the need to protest the show, citing that young persons who are confused about their sexuality may watch the show and become influenced by Ellen's lesbianism. When are these people, Jerry Falwell, Phyllis Schafly and members of the Christian Coalition included, going to realize that being gay is not a choice, and that having a gay character on television can only provide positive role models to those struggling with their sexuality, not a negative influence. Trust me, Jerry, gays do not "recruit."

This was another aspect that "Ellen" dealt with on Wednesday. A running joke throughout the show was Susan's attempt at recruiting Ellen to be gay. She plays it up saying that if she just got one more lesbian recruited, she would win a toaster oven. In the final credits, the audience sees Melissa Etheridge handing the prize to Susan after Ellen declares that she is sure she is gay. While it may take these comic ploys to reach people, it shows the intelligence of Ellen to recognize these misconceptions and deal with the implications.

But there were also moments of a serious nature when Ellen tried to make the public aware of the hardships gays and lesbians face. In her therapy session with Oprah, Ellen speaks of the discrimination that GLB community faces. She says that being gay wasn't a choice, because if it was, she wouldn't have chosen to be gay because of all the discrimination.

I think that it's important for all of these protestors and bible–toting folks to realize that homosexuality is not a choice. Having a gay character on a television show will not make your kids gay! But it may help that 17–year–old son of an Idaho militia leader who would rather kill himself than come out to his father. Not everyplace in America is as accepting as Amherst or Northampton, where lesbian oriented commercials were even aired during the show. By showing gay characters on television our nation's youth may finally realize homosexuality is not wrong and they are not alone.

She also says, "I thought if I just ignored it, it would go away and I could lead a normal life." This reinforces that being gay is not a choice, and that many experience feelings of shame when they realize they are gay. On the news after "Ellen," Channel 40 reported the often–cited fact that a gay or lesbian teenager is far more likely to commit suicide than their straight counterparts. So I ask to all of the protestors in Washington, who do you think that's the fault of?

Hopefully, the way Ellen's friends were portrayed, sarcastically personifying the preconceived notions many have of gay and lesbians, will show how many ignorant fools are out there. There is really no need to say, "I was just saying I don't have enough lesbian friends... I saw Bound," as Paige did. And Paige's boyfriend was a great stereotype of all those heterosexual men looking for a lesbian fantasy with, "I just want you to know that it's OK if you bring home a woman, really OK."

Ellen's flaky friend Audrey asks, as I'm sure many people do, "What should we call you, gay or lesbian?" Ellen's response, "How about Ellen?" Yes, all of these lines and situations are funny and were designed to make the audience laugh, but there is some truth in them. The writers didn't randomly come up with these expressions, they exist in people's minds.

In the end, all of Ellen's friends accepted her, as the American public should. But the question still remains, will they? Or will the folks in Alabama continue to be brainwashed by Phyllis "the ever–moral happy homemaker" and her cronies. It's time that America stops protesting and writing letters to gay celebrities who choose to disclose their sexuality. Instead we should embrace them for providing positive role models for a continually antagonized community.

Lisa M. Oliveri is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Make room for mommy!

During the student occupation of the Goodell building, when I first learned that child care was one of the issues, I made an assumption that the University of Massachusetts didn't provide any. As it turns out, I was almost right. UMass does, in fact, have child care, I was informed of 76 slots, to be exact. That's right... "slots."

Never mind the qualitative aspect of the term that was used to describe the current UMass child care provision.

Let's just examine this information on a purely quantitative basis. For the total UMass population of 32,000 (26,000 students and 6,000 faculty and staff), childcare on campus currently accommodates 76 children. Let's see, I'm not a math major, but it seems to me that this is a rather small representation... less than one quarter of one percent, yes? No wonder it hasn't gotten much attention, it barely exists.

Constance M. Smaldone

When I later learned that the administration/student negotiations produced an agreement to have a committee go to work on this issue and report back, I made another assumption — that there would be lots of discussion with little or no action. So far, unfortunately, I am right about that, too.

So how did I get to be so smart, you say? Well, sometimes being old has its advantages. You see, I'm one of those old folks who attend class with you young whippersnappers. There aren't too many of us so we're easy to see. I look like your mother. If you pay attention, you can see the gray and white strands in my hair, and you may notice the faint fragrance of anti–wrinkle cream as I pass by. It just so happens that child care and committees are two things I know something about first hand. After all, where do you think the gray hair and wrinkles come from? Kids and committees!

All I can say is, the students in Goodell must have been really worn out when they agreed to the committee thing. Committees do not have a good reputation for getting things done. It takes a lot of hard work to earn a reputation like that — lots of talk, meetings, documentation, etc., and precious little positive change or contribution. Think of it this way: If you received one college credit for every committee which accomplished absolutely nothing whatsoever, you could have graduated with a double major before your parents were born. Or conversely, if you received one college credit for every committee which did produce something, your progeny would have to accept your two–year degree awarded posthumously. Got it?

Since a committee offers such dismal prospects, perhaps the following action items may help. The "do's":

1) If there is any person on the committee who has been a part of past or ongoing discussions on child care at UMass, remove them. If this is not possible, diminish their relative power. Perfectly well–meaning, experienced people can become roadblocks. Length of time served on a committee produces a corresponding narrowing of vision and mind, which, in turn produces an ever–increasing perception of obstacles. It also produces nostalgic sentimentality for old positions, old justifications, old rationalizations. Sometimes serving on a committee is some thing like job security — if the committee did what it was organized to do, then there would be no need for the committee, and someone might be out of a reason to be on the payroll. No hard feelings; it's just that if nothing significantly positive has occurred under an individual's auspices in the past, perhaps they'd have greater success given a new project. In any case, understand that leaving a non–producer in place is akin to sabotage.

2) If there is any prior documentation on child care at UMass, a report, a plan, a finding, shred it. Of course you would only really do this if you wanted to succeed. So long as you are content with not having adequate childcare at UMass, go ahead and leave it all intact. Bring it to meetings as a constant reminder of all the hard work that's been done on this issue. Put it in binders and refer to it section by section. It will be daunting enough to take the life out of the issue. It will prove endlessly useful in proving that more child care at UMass is impossible. If this vital information was shredded, the committee would just have to reinvent all the methodology on how and why not to do more child care all over again.

3) State a real goal to improve on the issue of child care at UMass. Don't kid yourself into believing that agreeing to "look" at something and "report back" is a goal. It isn't. This is even stated in terms of not accomplishing anything. Unless a specific goal can be determined, the committee's work is a meaningless exercise, a waste of time. Raise your expectations. Wake up and smell the diapers. Parents don't need committees, looking and reporting — they need child care!

4) Achieve the goal. This may seem like stating the obvious, but this seemingly simple idea can be misinterpreted. I'll never forget the words of the hapless senior manager at the company for which I worked who remarked to a group of employees (before he was asked to take early retirement), "Oh, that's our goal, all right, but that doesn't mean that we are really going to do it!" This is the difference between doing something and simply trying to do something; for example, the difference between going to class, and trying to go to class. Trying isn't the same as doing, and it takes a whole lot more energy. Like the Nike slogan says, "Just Do It!"

The "how to's":

1) Share a meal together. Eat and/or drink something, anything, together as a committee. Coffee and donuts, soda and chips, water. People don't eat with their adversaries.

2) Sit on the floor. Get rid of the table and chairs. Hold the meeting outside if the weather is nice. Pretend you are part of an entrepreneurial venture, creating something exciting and wonderful. Tables and chairs create barriers, inhibit creativity and allow people who are asleep to keep it a secret.

3) Don't look for any help from Mom. She isn't here. She isn't within a hundred mile radius of this Five College system. We've kept her out of our community by failing to provide for her number one concern: child care. Especially if she's female, a single parent and black or Hispanic, it's simple as one, two, three — triple jeopardy.

4) But try to be like her! The fact is that if the committee could be as responsive and resourceful as a single parent, a new program for childcare at UMass would be in place before the first summer session. Kids can't wait until it's "feasible" to have the care they need. They need it right now!

My kids are too old for child care now; they're getting after school jobs to save for college, and I'm trying to graduate before they enroll! Would my life and theirs be different now if state universities provided affordable child care? Hmmmmm. Maybe so, maybe so?

Constance L. Smaldone is a UMass student.

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Jeremy Hurewitz

Here it is, late night, and I can't sleep, again. I'm here at my desk, trying to write down the thoughts prowling my sleepless mind and I hear my housemate watching bad television. He's actually watching "Hollywood Nights" on TNT. Wow. I didn't know anyone really watched those shows. Could it be that I live with one of the silent minority, one of the faceless masses, who crave this sort of generic tripe to supplement their existence with its ribald tales? Scary...

***

We gotta clear something up. This is a college town. Locals have to realize that on Friday and Saturday nights a significant portion of the college population will be partying. That often means noise, lots of cars, urine, beer cans, keg cups, copulating couples and gaggle–eyed vomiters. Most of the time it won't be the same house every night, so when it is one of your neighbors, take the hit of a slightly sleepless night for the cause of youth like a sympathetic neighbor should.

***

Why is it that talented artists like Shannon Hoon, Bradley Knowell and Kurt Cobain off themselves while that dude from Bush will probably survive the cockroach? That guy could step out of mushroom–cloud bomb–fallout with that same vacuous grin on his pretty boy face and the only other human being left will be Keith Richards who will stumble up to Gavin Whatever–his–name–is and say "Got a cigarette, mate?"

Is the public that easily duped by savvy record company executives who wanted to keep the girls blushing and dudes headbanging after Kurt died? Apparently they are. I heard that Bush wanted $250,000 to play the Mullins Center. The scary thing is that places are actually shelling it out for those no–talent, cardboard cut–out, rock–star posing losers. Is it any wonder why I can't sleep?

***

I have a little confession to make. I revolve my day around "The Simpsons." They're on every week day at six and I usually have diner watching them. It has gotten to the point when I feel like one of Pavlov's dogs when I'm not eating and I'm watching "The Simpsons" because my mind is psychologically trained to eat at the sight of my cartooned friends.

I can't help it, "The Simpsons" are the best thing on television, an amazing satire of modern society. Chief Wigam: The corrupt, pig–like, incompetent cop; "Diamond" Joe Quimby: The Kennedy–esque, horny, crooked politician; Apu: The stereotype Hindu convenience store clerk; and who could forget Barney, the loveable, belching town drunk; the list goes on. My personal favorite is Homer. If you see me just smiling in class or laughing as I walk around campus there's a good chance I'm reliving one of his hysterically funny idiocies in my head. Don't judge me, some of you watch "Hollywood Nights" like my housemate.

***

One last party note. Last Sunday I saw something I've never seen before at a party: Human/cow interaction. Behind the house we were at was a field with two cows in it. It was a sunny day and I guess the noise we were making attracted them over. As they got closer people were excited (LOOK, COWS!). A few guys went over to them and fed them beer from their hands. Others threw watermelon. A dog got loose and believe it or not the cows chased him off. Everyone was laughing and it was definitely an odd bonus on the day. All you animal lovers, fear not, by the time I left the party the cows had strolled off peacefully and were chewing their cud in quiet bliss. Now whether I'd drink milk from those spooked cows is a different story...

***

It's late and I can't believe my housemate is still watching television. He's been watching a commercial for "Hits From the Eighties" for at least three minutes now. Right now I hear "Ice Ice Baby" (Suge Knight should have finished Vanilla Ice off). I think I hear some snoring coming from outside my door so I can go out and shut down that obnoxious television, laugh at my sleeping housemate, and put my insomniac soul to sleep.

Jeremy Hurewitz is a Collegian columnist.

The Ed/Op page will be holding workshops for those interested in writing for the page next semester. If you are interested in attending, stop by the Collegian and talk to Mike Burke or Dan Bodah. Or call us at 545–1491.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Volcano fails on the big screen

COURTESY MAGICAL ENTERTAINMENT

Watch out for the volcano. Anne Heche and Tommy Lee Jones strive to save Los Angeles from another natural disaster.

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

VOLCANO
Directed by Mick Jackson with Tommy Lee Jones, Anne Heche, Gaby Hoffmann
Playing at Hampshire Six Theater

There is something undeniably intriguing about watching a city brutally destroyed. Whether by aliens or natural catastrophe, disaster films play on our fears of mass destruction by terrorizing our senses of security. Perhaps this is why the disaster film concept has become a legitimate genre in film. Also, disaster films are just plain fun to watch and represent the true bewilderment of movie viewing. Where these films inevitably seem to fall short, is when the filmmakers forget that often it takes a bit more than dazzling special effects to make a good movie; a plot also helps.

Volcano is no exception to this typical disaster film format. In fact, it is just one of the many films of its kind to plague the silver screen this season. So far, Dante's Peak has already come and gone and 20th Century Fox is no doubt hoping that Volcano will have a more impressive number in box office receipts.

The truth is, Hollywood is attempting to rekindle their audience's interest in the disaster film genre. Although, films of this kind have been around forever it seems, the height of the fad was in the '70s with big budget draws like The Towering Inferno and The Poseidon Adventure to name just a few. Now we have even more of these gigantic rehashed adventure yarns with larger price tags and more believable effects. The production of James Cameron's Titanic has been said to be a bigger disaster than the original ocean–liner accident. In addition, Steven Spielberg's sequel to Jurassic Park entitled The Lost World, should also be quite the homage to this well established genre.

In the case of Volcano, a rather mediocre film to say the least, there are absolutely no surprises that will get the adrenaline rush flowing. Rather in many ways, Volcano treads on the absurd with its sole saving grace being the magnitude of the spreading chaos. Included are some ridiculous slow motion shots of good hearted young citizens risking death to save their fellow human kind. We should also not forget the "don't let the dog die" rule which was made famous in that moving scene in Independence Day. Volcano stays true to the conventions here as we watch the happy golden retriever jump through the rumble of the shambled city of Los Angeles.

Tommy Lee Jones puts on the best performance he could despite the circumstances. He is the man in charge of the mayor's natural disaster committee who must save

Turn to VOLCANO, page 6

Helm rocks Iron Horse

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

LEVON HELM & THE CROWMATICS
Iron Horse Music Hall
April 30

Forty years it has been since Arkansas rockabilly singer Ronnie Hawkins roped in a then–17–year old fellow Arkansan drummer named Levon Helm. It's been a long 40 years for Helm since then: the split–off of Helm and his fellow Hawks from Hawkins' employ; teaming up with Bob Dylan in the '60s and '70s; the original lineup of his most famous association, The Band, coming and going; acting jobs; a partial reunion of the original Band that's lasted to the present day; the 1986 suicide death of Band pianist Richard Manuel... it's enough to make an ordinary man want to just throw in the towel.

An ordinary man, but not Levon Helm. Helm's energy level is still as high as its ever been, belying his nearly 57 years of age. In a pleasant pre–show interview with this writer, Helm was very enthusiastic about his music, and the current Band lineup (which, besides Helm and two other original Band members — Garth Hudson on organ and Rick Danko on bass — also includes new talent like Randy Ciarlante on drums, Richard Bell on piano and Jim Weider on guitar). "Jim, Randy and Richard add a lot to the equation" of The Band, Helm said. When asked if he and his Bandmates are looking at playing in the 21st century, he said with a grin, "Oh, sure!"

Despite Helm's association with The Band, at this show it was him playing mostly mandolin and singing with his pals, the highly talented Crowmatics, a band which pulls in the best nocturnal blues sounds to provide a high energy, soulful feeling. The Crowmatics consists of C.W. Gatlin on guitar and vocals, The Band's Ciarlante on drums and vocals, Aaron Hurwitz on organ and vocals, Marie Spinosa on vocals (hey, the more the merrier, I always say!), as well as Jim Eppard on acoustic guitar and Mike Dunn on bass.

The soul–blues groove came after a couple of real lost classics associated with The Band: "Evangeline," performed Wednesday night in a high, lonesome duet between Helm and Marie Spinosa — "Evangeline" was originally a song written by The Band's former

Turn to HELM, page 6

Hatters

Bootlegs

Steve Madden

zum
downtown amherst

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. thru May 8- Two Films - Separate Admission
at 7:15 (7 days only) Daily 9:10 - 3rd week

ACADEMY AWARD WINNER
BEST DOCUMENTARY FEATURE
MUHAMMAD ALI
WHEN WE WERE KINGS
The untold story of the Rumble in the Jungle.
PG

A BITTERSWEET COMEDY ABOUT LOVE, SEXUAL IDENTITY, FRIENDSHIP AND THE PRECARIOUS BOUNDARIES THAT SEPARATE THEM
REFRESHINGLY UNFLINCHING!
"THE FUNNIEST, MOST HONEST SEX-COMEDY I'VE EVER SEEN" VILLAGE VOICE
CHASING MY
Sex is easy. Love is hard.

ACADEMY MUSIC Opera House 584-8435 NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

BANANARAMA
fabulous frozen YOGURT
Small Colombo Frozen Yogurt or Small Newport Creamery Ice Cream
95¢ with coupon expires 5/15/97 +tax
YOGURT SHAKES, SMOOTHIES, & AWARD WINNING CATERER

GOOD THYME DELI
Cup or Homemade Soup or Bear's Head All Beef Hot Dog with homemade chilli sauce if you choose
95¢ with coupon expires 5/15/97 +tax
Both Located at 25 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

THE
EDWIN M. ROSSMAN
ALUMNI CAREER FORUM
DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER STUDIES
DATE: Friday, May 2, 1997
TIME: 3:30 PM
LOCATION: Mitchell Lounge - Skinner Hall
SPONSORED BY:
UNIVERSITY CAREER CENTER
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER STUDIES
This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!
ALUMNI PANELISTS:
Malini Biswas '92 — Work/Family Directions, Client Services Manager, Boston, MA
Jill Chiaro '95 — Sales Account Executive, Weatherproof Garment Co., New York, NY
Stephen Sandler '96 — Insurance Analyst, Mass Mutual, University of Hartford Campus, Hartford, CT
Outstanding Alumnus of the Year
Eugenia Ulasewicz, Senior Vice-President, Director of Stores, Midwest Region, Saks Fifth Avenue, New York, NY
For more information, Please contact: Mather Career Center 545-2224

Get off it. Exercise.
American Heart Association. Fighting Heart Disease and Stroke

©1995, American Heart Association

LEARNING FOR THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE
• LEARNING FOR A LIFETIME •
UMASS SUMMER SESSION 1997
Now is the time to advance your career, explore other options, plan for a new future, get ahead in your studies, or enrich your life.
• Hundreds of Credit Courses
• Workshops for Personal and Professional Enrichment
• Part-time Specialized Degree Programs–Bachelor's and Master's
• Professional Development Courses for Teachers
Classes held days, evenings, and weekends
• Session I: June 3-July 11
• Session II: July 15-August 21
• Variable Sessions
Call 413-545-0107 for a free course catalog or e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Find it on our website: http://www.umass.edu/contined/
DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION • UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Cool stops on the Web

This Week on the Wide World of the Web

For this week's World Wide Web news there is nothing to report. The Web is doing just fine and sends its regards. Are you suffering from the end of the semester agony? Are your professors tightening the thumb screws? Mine too. It seems as though you have so much work right around certain times, finals being one of them. I wish that they would learn how to spread the work out more evenly. At any rate, I will stop complaining because I know that everybody is in the same boat as I am.

Just for you this week, I have some interesting study break pages that just might tickle you silly. In fact you might just learn more from one of these pages than you would from a whole semester's worth of work. Some of these pages might actually help you research that 20 page paper that is due the 14th — others may not.

The Drudge Report
www.lainet.com/~drudge
This is a news clearinghouse. The page contains a collection of stories from daily newspapers from around the country. In addition there are briefs from the wires, such as the AP and Reuters.

The Electronic Newstand
www.enews.com
Looking for a certain article or topic? Here is the place for you. Whatever the subject may be, if it has been written about you can probably get your greedy little hands on it. When you specify the type of article that you want the search engine goes and finds it and e-mails it to you. The only draw back to this page is that you have to give personal information out that is not really secure. That is, you have to enter your home address, phone number, your name etc.

The Islam Page
www.wam.umd.edu/~ibrahim
For those of you like myself who do not know much about the Muslim faith, you should definitely check out this Web site. There is a lot of information about the faith for both the non–practitioners and the believers. The author of this page helps reinforce the faith to the members as well as ridding the outsiders of any preconceived notions they might have had. I would strongly suggest this page to anyone who is serious about learning about the Muslim religion. I found it most enlightening.

Monterey Bay Aquarium On–Line
www.mbayaq.org
If you have fond memories of the Boston Aquarium and love to look at the beautiful animals of the sea, go to this page. There is a lot to see here including updated shots of the kelp forest that is kept here.

Related Sites

Reading Hieroglyph: www.netvision.be/egyptologica/e_hiero.ht

The Stone Pages:
joshua.micronet.it/utenti/dmeozzi/HomEng.html

Raiders of the Lost Art:
iqd.advanced.org/3708

The Lighter Side of the Web
Here are a few pages that might help take your mind off of school.

Arnold's World
pantheon.yale.edu/~doliver/arnold.html
Aaanoid! Yes it is that big mass of muscle of a man who brought to you the line "I'll be baaack." This page chronicles Aaanold's life through the use of pictures. I must say it is a pretty cool pictorial history. All the way back to his Mr. Universe days. It also has a body count for all of his films. Did you know that he killed 100 people in the film Commando?

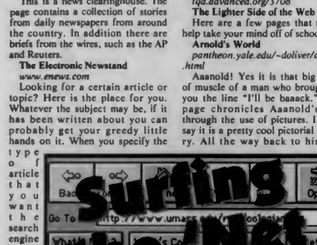
Welcome to Mudtom
www.shef.ac.uk/uni/academic/I-M/is/studwork/groupe/home.html
Have you ever wondered why people sit in front of their computers playing these text based games? What are they? Where do they come from? All this and more is brought to you by the author of this page. It is the extensive guide to MUD's or Multi–User Dungeons.

Mike Tyson Vs. Evander Holyfield
www.mtyson.com
No, I am not trying to advertise for Don King. Maybe if I was on the payroll and receiving large anonymous checks in the mail, I think I might consider putting my morals and ethics aside. This page is a free promo for tomorrow night's rematch. Like the first fight, it will be pay per view and during the fight you can vote online as to who you think won each round. Also contained within are celebrity interviews and a tour of Mike's locker.

Muhammad Ali Memorabilia
www.Webgalleria.com:80
If you love the killa of tha gorilla in tha thrilla in Manila, (try saying that 10 times fast) then try logging onto this page. There is a lot of biographical information as well as tons of stuff to be bought from the proprietor of this page.

Meatmation
www.cais.Net/frisch/meatmation
This is a really twisted site. I love it, MUHHUUHAAAAHHAAA! If you would like to see the combination of chicken wings, liver and steak doing some funky things, by all means check this site out. Vegetarians, I strongly recommend that you do not visit here because you might get really sick. Sorry. I will look for a vegemation site for next week.

Related Sites



Museum of Unnatural Mystery
unmuseum.mus.pa.us/unmuseum.htm

Hippie Haven
www.izzy.net/~lauralee/hippy.htm

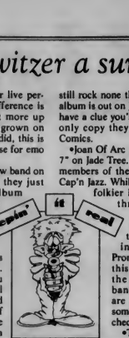
The Dj
www.thedj.com

Games Domain
www.gamesdomain.co.uk
Well that does it for this week. I hope that you have been indoctrinated quite well with amazing tidbits of nothing important at all. Hopefully next week I will have some more useless pages for you to browse so that you can have a vast knowledge of useless facts. Maybe some day you and Cliff Claven can compete in a game of useless trivia pursuit. Have a good weekend and don't forget to check out Scraggy Neck Rd (voted second best in Amherst.)

Patrick Shanley is a Collegian columnist.

New release from Howitzer a surprisingly good listen

Welcome to another column. A lot of albums have come out recently and I'll try to keep you filled in.



•I just got the advance copy of Howitzer's debut CD Strip Mall Blues. I saw Howitzer at a Weston show last semester and was far from impressed, so when a friend handed me a copy of their new album, I wasn't exactly psyched. Well I was wrong. This album rocks in a real nice emo–pop punk manner. If you took Dag Nasty, early Green Day and The Promise Ring and put them in a blender you'd have Howitzer. To keep things interesting they throw in some all– out thrash songs that will have you dancing with yourself more intensly then Billy Idol ever did. The lyrics deal with high school topics but are done in such a way that will have you longing for those days that have passed you by. The CD will be coming out on Psyke records. Buy it and feel good about things for a while.

•Boston's super emo band Karate have just released their second Lp In Place Of Real Insight. Like their first album Karate maintains that driving, mezmorizing music that is simply beautiful. Karate uses space and silence to build the songs and while the songs rarely reach a climax they simply maintain a wonderful pace. On their new LP we see Karate going for a louder more up–tempo approach which is a better representative of their live performances. The other difference is that the vocals are a lot more up front. While this hasn't grown on me the way the first one did, this is still a worth while purchase for emo fans.

•The Criminals are a new band on the Lookout roster and they just released their debut album Never Been Caught. The band features ex–members of Blatz, Gr'ups, Multifacet and the Aborted. This band is punk minus the pop. These guys come at you like a bat with a rusty nail in it and the intensity and energy doesn't let up. If you like bands like the Exploited or if you have a huge mohawk, wear bondage pants and a leather jacket, and think showering is a sin you'll probably do back flips over these guys. Oh yeah the lyrics are kind of stupid and the press kit says "A gang of do–badders hell–bent on drinking, stealing, smoking and punk–rocking." which doesn't sound like a ringing endorsement to me.

•Sweetbelly Freakdown is a band featuring ex–members of Swiz. I heard these guys sound like a quiter, mellower, calmer Swiz but still rock none the less. Their debut album is out on Jade Tree and if you have a clue you'll be purchasing the only copy they have at Newbury Comics.

•Joan Of Arc released their debut 7" on Jade Tree. Joan of Arc feature members of the Promise Ring and Cap'n Jazz. While this sounds like a folkier Promise Ring they throw some really weird sound effects that makes this a real interesting listen. I love Promise Ring and while this is not as good as the Ring if you like bands of that ilk and are willing to listen to something experimental check this out.

•This has been a busy month for Jade Tree as they also released a new Promise Ring Ep. The EP is a compilation of stuff from there debut 7", the Texas Is The Reason split and other releases. A lot of the stuff on here is out of print and even if you have the 7" you don't have to keep getting up and flipping the records.

•Hailraker finished up their debut CD which will also be out on Psyke records. I've already written a lot about how great these guys are, so buy it or pose.

•On a sadder note, rumor has it that Lifetime has broken up, but they will be releasing their final album some time towards the end of this summer.

•Look for an interview with Barrit in the paper some time next week.

•Just About Done are playing an outside concert in the Central Residential Area at 2:45 p.m. tomorrow; other UMass punk bands include Ambsace Empire.

•I went to Mystery Train the other day and after quickly looking through the punk\hardcore section I began to wonder how many kids in the area are smoking crack. Some of the CD's I either bought or saw there were The Rites of Spring discography, Ressurections first EP, Unbroken's album, Copper's album just to name a few. I couldn't believe it, well it's all your losses.

•Just in case you cared here's the top 10 releases I've been listening to lately: Kiss It Goodbye — She Loves Me, She Love Me Not..., Promise Ring — 30 Everywhere, Silent Majority — Distant 2nd 7", Hailraker and Howitzer's upcoming CD's, Ensign 7", Karate — In Place Of Real Insight, Sick Of It All — Built To Last, Avail — everything they ever released, Tripface — Some Peri Sorrow, and Civ — Social Climber 7".

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

We want you to write for us!
Call the Collegian at 545-3500

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING AVAILABILITY. PLEASE PURCHASE TICKETS AT BOX OFFICE
MT. FARMS 4 584-9153
Oil Thanks For Spotless
Warriors of Virtue PG
The Saint PG-13
Austin Powers PG-13
Grosse Pointe Blank R
HAMPSHIRE 6 586-7550
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Volcano PG-13
Liar Liar PG-13
Breakdown R
Barry and Michale's High School Reunion R
Murder at 1600 R
Anaconda PG-13

■ Volcano

continued from page 5

Los Angeles from the erupting volcano in the city's center. Anne Heche is the giddy geologist who assists Jones with her technical know how. Despite Heche's crush on Jones, the real drama is the hero's loyalty to his grouchy daughter and together they learn what being a father and daughter is really all about.

Although it is far too easy to laugh at this film, especially when the writers wanted a serious moment (like when the subway commissioner realizes he should have closed down the subway, and makes amends by saving a man only to melt in the lava), Volcano is at times a lot of fun to watch.

To see this movie with the right frame of mind can conclude to a truly entertaining movie going experience, but you better not expect to much.

It is also very important to acknowledge the positive messages that Volcano addresses. Not only is there a racist cop who comes to realize that there is good in the 'hood, the film ends with a powerful statement. A random person asks a misplaced little boy if he sees his father. The boy responds first by looking out at the multicultural crowd, each entirely covered in ashes, and says "I don't know, they all look the same." Need more be said? C–

The Arts & Living desk is hiring Associate Editors for the Fall semester. If you are interested in covering music, arts, film, books and more, stop by the Collegian and ask for Seema Gangatirkar or call 545-1491.
Arts & Living. It's what's for dinner.

■ Helm

continued from page 5

guitarist/songwriter Robbie Robertson and performed by The Band with Emmylou Harris on lead vocals, "Don't Ya Tell Henry," a romping blues–rock boogie from Bob Dylan & The Band's legendary Basement Tapes set, put forth the truth that Helm's raunchy blues shout has never wavered in the past four decades.

"I've stayed true to my roots," Helm said in explaining his endurance, meaning his beginnings in the active Memphis, Tenn., late 1950s scene that also produced stars like Jerry Lee Lewis, B.B. King, and Elvis Presley.

On these two songs and the next, "One More Shot," Aaron Hurwitz, The Crowmatics' organist, supplied some fine accordion for a distant Cajun–blues feel.

Hurwitz illustrated his roaring organ skills from then on into the night, especially highlighting the next three songs after "One More Shot." These were the funky "Blues So Bad," the country–rock of "Can't Get No Grindin'," and the more contemporary blues sounds of "Finally Got You," all with more blistering lead vocals by Helm.

Marie Spinosa took over the lead to great effect on the next song, "More Than A Fool." Her all–out vocals ended to the overall ideal of the night's set, that being in the vein of a roadhouse blues set after midnight. However, since this was the 7 p.m. show at the Iron Horse, it wasn't quite midnight, but Helm & The Crowmatics didn't leave much to the imagination that it was an after–hours scene.

Carrying on through two more beer–bottle tippers, "Milk Cow Boogie" and "Mood I Was In," with Helm's lead on both, The Crowmatics took Helm once again out of the spotlight and into the general chemistry that is what makes great music. Gatlin's deep, raspy voice moved things along into, as Helm explained, "that place where the music takes you, and not you taking the music," on the jumpy "300 Pounds." Helm's music took a harmonica to his mouth for some fine playing on that instrument.

The set ended with two classics, one being Muddy Waters' "Forty Days And Forty Nights," and the set closer, "The Weight," from the original Band's 1968 debut, Music From Big Pink. The many verses were shared between Helm, Spinosa, Hurwitz and Gatlin, and often all together. Then on top of that, you also had the well–pleased crowd singing along to the classic chorus, "Take a load off, Fannie / Take a load for free / Take a load off, Fannie / And... you put the load right on me!"

Helm & The Crowmatics didn't even get a chance to go backstage as the standing ovation put them right back onstage for a rousing barrelhouse of an encore, "Ain't Got No Home." The show ended with that song, despite the crowd's continuous applause and cheer for a second encore. The only regrets I had, and maybe some of the other audience members, was that we weren't able to be treated to Helm's drum style which is an imaginative hybrid of Motown, rock and funk styles.

Valley fans of Helm's drumming may want to take the trip down to Hartford this August when The Band plays a free show at Bushnell Park. Wednesday night, the blues came knocking and Levon Helm & The Crowmatics invited it in for some "good rockin' at midnight" as the old jump–blues song goes.

BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR
Volunteer

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n pleasant st amherst 256.0733
145 main st northampton 586.0155

short on time?
The School of Continuing Education at Fairfield University may have the answer for you!
We have a full program of credit and non-credit courses offered in a variety of formats to fit your summer schedule.
Fairfield UNIVERSITY
School of Continuing Education
Pre-Session
May 28 - June 3
First Four-Week Session
June 9-July 3
Second Four-Week Session
July 7-July 31
Post-Session
August 1-August 7
Call 203-254-4220 for information and a catalog or visit us on the web at: www.fairfield.edu

Knowledge Grows Here!
Summer Session at Stony Brook
Terms start June 2 and July 14
260 courses in 40 subjects
Day and evening classes
Low NYS tuition
Live on campus or commute
Please send me the 1997 Summer Session or check out our web page at Http://www.sunysb.edu/summer/
Name
Street/Box No.
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation
STONY BROOK STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
Mail coupon or call 24 hours 1-800-559-7213
E-mail: summerschool@ccmail.sunysb.edu
Or write: Summer Session Office, Dept. CN, University at Stony Brook, Stony Brook, NY 11794-3370

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
www.tristatene.com
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 19 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles left at Staples onto Rte 116N, first right to light, left to Center. I-91 S take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs. It's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only.
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, MAY 4

Women's crew puts streak on the line

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Correspondent

You know those "No Fear" shirts that warn people not to play with the wearer of the shirt because they either: do not play well with others; don't accept losing; or they are animals?

After this weekend, the Boston University women's crew should buy some after simply showing up to face the mighty, undefeated Minutewomen of Massachusetts.

UMass women's crew is heading east to Boston this Saturday to face Boston University and possibly Radcliffe College, if it shows. After last week's prosperous piracy in bringing home the Atlantic–10 Championship for the second consecutive year, the UMass, Radcliffe could be a no–show. The Ivy League Minutewomen are hellbent on continuing their undefeated streak.

"BU doesn't look strong, they were beaten by Northeastern by 10 seconds which equals a 17 second difference on paper which isn't surprising," UMass coach Jim Dietz said.

"BU is an up an coming team but they have been around for 20 or 25 years but [BU coach] Holly Hatton is a very good coach," he added.

If anyone plans of taking the long Route 2 East back for the meet, make sure you see possibly the only real competition of the meet, the junior varsity race.

While the varsity women are ranked first in the Northeast Region and seemed to be in cruise control, the JV women are fighting to break into the rankings with a strong showing this weekend. UMass' JV has beaten Northeastern by nine seconds and BU has beaten the Huskies by three seconds in previous races.

"It should prove to be very competitive," Dietz said.

While BU is showing no fear in going up against UMass, Radcliffe could be a no–show. The Ivy League team shouldn't give UMass any trouble in continuing its streak anyway.

"I don't know if they want to race us," Dietz said. "They shouldn't be a contest."

■ women's lacrosse

continued from page 10

the Bears on the board first, scoring her 100th career goal just 48 seconds into the contest.

Brown went up 2–0 on freshman Allison Schettini's 21st tally of the season at the 4:02 mark of the game, but the Minutewomen would quickly get that goal back. Walsh scored just 39 seconds later, and with Korutz' first goal of the game at the 8:17 mark, the game was tied.

But like the bell that tolled midnight on Cinderella's night at the ball, so ended any thoughts that UMass would get the upset.

The Bears preceded to win almost every draw for the remainder of the half, and the offense clicked to the point of wonderment.

Whenever the Minutewomen got the ball on their sticks, either a missed pass or scoring opportunity ensued, quelling any comeback attempt.

Multiple goals by Schettini and freshman Keely McDonald (4 goals on the day) sparked the 9–0 run to end the half, with a score at the 29:59 mark adding insult to injury.

McClellan tried mass substitutions to during that time to find an answer, but there was no questioning the offensive surge of the nationally ranked squad.

The second half held better fortunes for UMass, but the Bears still outscored the Minutewomen by a 5–3 mark.

Korutz scored her second of the game on a assist by junior Jen Bowen at the 35:37 mark of the game, with goals by Warrington and freshman Stephanie Pavlick rounding out the scoring for UMass.

•••

Minutewomen Notes: Walsh ended her season tied with freshman Rebecca Minaker as the team's second leading scorer (22 points), and her career ranked fifth in all–time goals (103) and seventh in points (115)... five of UMass' losses this season were to nationally ranked opponents (Harvard, Yale, Temple, Dartmouth and Brown), with four of those teams being from the Ivy League.

■ softball

continued from page 10

from Sortino, who used to be a catcher herself. Buckley spent her sophomore year learning the position, and by the beginning of this season had matured into a top catcher.

"I enjoyed it," Buckley said. "I learned a lot about the position and Elaine was such a great coach, working with me and everything. I liked it a lot."

Working with Buckley was a great experience for Sortino as well. When asked about her top catcher, Sortino is full of nothing but praise for the improvements Buckley has made.

"She's been a coach's dream," Sortino said. "Kelly has always done the best of everything, she's a great kid."

Buckley has grown more than just as player for the Minutewomen. She has grown as a person as well. During her first years, she was a very quiet person who really had to work at coming out of her shell. She is described by her coach as someone who always liked to sit back and be quiet. But switching to catcher put her in leadership position for the team, and that worked a lot at bringing out her leadership and enthusiasm.

Buckley is a very friendly person — polite and willing to talk about herself. But she does it all with a touch of modesty. Buckley sees herself as a quiet leader for the softball team, someone who leads more by her actions than her words.

"I'm not an outspoken leader," Buckley said. "I'm more like a quiet leader. I go out everyday and I give my all everyday. I always give 100 percent and I'm always trying to improve. I'm never satisfied with where I am, I know that I can always improve."

Softball is a large part of Buckley's life, and always has been. She has been playing the game since she was 6–years old, and it's something that she hopes will always be a part of her life.

"It's just a love I have," Buckley said.

After college Buckley hopes to combine her love of softball with her love of children. She spends her summers in her hometown of Horseheads, N.Y., where she plays summer ball and teaches little children to play the game she loves.

"Little kids are always asking me, 'Can you teach me, can you teach me?' and I love little kids, so it's something that I really enjoy," Buckley said.

But right now most of Buckley's thoughts are turned to the near future instead of the distant future — near as in this weekend's A–10 Championships. Buckley and her fellow Minutewomen will take on No. 4 Temple today in the opening round of the tournament. UMass split a doubleheader with Temple back on April 19, losing the nightcap 2–1. The loss sent the Minutewomen on a four– game slide, one of the few low spots in their season. But the team has things together now, and players and coaches alike feel as though the team is finally running on all four cylinders.

"We are really ready to play," Sortino said. "Things have really come along nicely. Bring it on, we're ready."

Heading up the attack for the Minutewomen will be A–10 Pitcher of the Year Danielle Henderson. Henderson is a demon on the mound, intimidating batters and logging over 200 strikeouts in this season alone.

Behind all of Henderson's fanfare will sit Kelly Buckley, quietly leading Henderson to more strikeouts, more new records, and helping the team to a probable championship. All of the excitement has been quite a change for Buckley, from the quiet days of softball in small Horseheads, N.Y. But that's alright. She's used to change. And change is good.

Kelly Buckley has made a smooth transition from shortstop to a leadership position behind the plate.

Seniors Michele Warrington and Stephanie Walsh embrace after losing the final game of the season to Brown 16–5.

■ men's lacrosse

continued from page 10

weekend in this game."

Senior Chris Grande is currently leading the Minutemen with 23 goals, totaling 47 for his career. Grande notched a goal and an assist in the crucial Army win to snag the 1995 tournament berth, and is ready for a chance to do the same against Brown.

"This game's huge for us, this is our play–off. It's a huge game too because it's the last game for the seniors unless we make the tournament," Grande said. "It would be great, I don't remember what it's like to be in the tournament, it's been two years."

Since being left out of last year's top 12, the Minutemen have had May games on the brain, and on Saturday they get their chance to secure a few more of them.

"That was our goal at the end of last season and if it doesn't work out I'll be kind of disappointed," Grande added.

Cannella has stressed the importance of the individual games all season long, from Fairfield on March 8 to Brown on May 1. Taking it one game at a time, it has come down to the one game meaning the entire season.

"With the schedule we play, we play the best teams in the country and we're not going to win all of those games," Cannella said. "Anytime you lose you're not going to feel good about yourselves, but certainly I'm happy about the way the guys have progressed and hopefully we can put it all together for Saturday. We need to."

■ baseball

continued from page 10

Correa, who hit a two–run shot over the rightfield fence in the top of the third to put the Minutemen on the board, extending his hitting streak to 14 games. Correa came into the game No. 17 in the nation in hitting at .440. Sophomore centerfielder Doug Clark leads the team with at .455, ranks 10th in America.

Rightfielder Pete Gautreau went 3–for–4, including a two– run shot in the sixth inning to round out the Minutemen scoring. Rich Hartman pitched 4 1/3 innings in relief, letting up eight earned runs, and Steve Levy let up one run in two innings of work.

The Huskies added to their lead with six runs in the seventh inning. Pena hit the ball out of the park again with two outs, but he passed the runner on first on his way around the bases. Pena got credit for two RBIs but was called out. Scott Buchie led off the inning with a triple and was driven in by Husky Justin Johnson. Singles by Lewis and Kim made it a 14–4 game. For the day, Pena went 4– for–6 with three RBIs.

"They're a good team," Stone said. "They swung the bats well, and we didn't."

Despite an April that saw the Minutemen post a 19–2 record, they still have some work to do before the A–10 tournament, which kicks off May 15 in Boyertown, Penn. First up is the Bonnies, and Stone feels this is an important weekend for UMass.

"This is a big series for us," Stone said. "We have to play hard and aggressive."

■ Minutemen

continued from page 10

allowing runners to advance.

Doug Clark also had a rough day out in center field, miscalculating the ball two times, allowing the ball to drop in for a Northeastern hit. Clark, whose batting average (.355) is ranked No. 10 in the nation had an off day. After going 2–for–4 with a homerun and four RBIs, he went 1–for– 3 yesterday and was caught off second base after Aaron Braunstein lined–out to left field.

This game can not be pinpointed into any one man's mistake. It was a team loss. A loss that was bound to happen. It just so happened that the No. 3 batting team in the nation got its bell rung by a team it is more than capable of beating.

Adam Robinson started the game on the mound for UMass, but was taken out early in the second inning after being knocked around by the Huskie lineup. Jim Richard came in to relieve Robinson, but as far as Northeastern was concerned, it didn't matter who was on the mound. It was just their day. Steve Levy closed out the game for the Minutemen on the mound. Levy has pitched in the last two games.

UMass coach Mike Stone will be calling for a more consistent effort this weekend against St. Bonaventure. The two teams will collide for a three–game series starting on Saturday at 12 p.m. at Lorden Field.

RESULTS resume
We know what employers want.
Resumes for the real world
▶ Written by a business executive
▶ Student rates, credit cards & checks
▶ Employer lists & cover letters, too
253-9055
In your back yard at 150 Fearing Street

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
www.tristatene.com
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 19 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles left at Staples onto Rte 116N, first right to light, left to Center. I-91 S take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs. It's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only.
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, MAY 4

For a Sporting Good Time
Athletic Department Year End Sale!
25% - 50% off all items
Large Selection of athletic merchandise
Monday May 5th
Tuesday May 6th
Wednesday May 7th
10:00 am - 4:00 pm
(each day)
Richard Garber Field
behind the Curry Hicks Cage
UMass Athletics

END OF THE SEMESTER
With NYC band:
Friday
May 2, 1997
8:00 PM
Bluewall Cafe
Jerry MaGuire in CC163
"A TERRIFIC MOVIE! VERY FUNNY AND VERY TOUCHING! IT MIGHT BE TOM CRUISE'S BEST PERFORMANCE EVER!"
TOM CRUISE
Jerry Maguire

Affordable
Cotton Rayon
Cards Rings
Incense Candles
T-Shirts
Dresses
Shorts Earrings
Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Beer Die Tournament! You get game! Saturday May 10! For info and registration call 258-0417

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Know anybody graduating high schools??? Give them SURVIVAL TIPS FOR COLLEGE!!! 542 humorous and practical suggestions Available in Campus Center Store under local authors and most bookstores in America and Narita Typhoon Car Wash with Sorority Women! Come see what all the talk is about on Saturday from 11-3! Fraternity Row. Bring your car!

APPARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom Brandywine Pond view $780/month Reduced rent in June and July Starting 6/1 Call 549-0023

Great apartment Great Price Located in The Townhouses Summer Sublet. Beautiful blue carpeting, 3 bedrooms, 1 1/2 baths. Call Jessica and Adrienne at 549-7082

Take over our lease- 2 bedroom apt. Brandywine Ests. heat and stove included Available from 5/1 $710 549-3570

4 bedroom house in Amherst. Available June 1 w/ Fall Option Call 549-5789

3 bedroom Puffton Apt.- Available 6/1 Take over our recently reinovated apt. Spacious good location, next to bus route. Plenty of parking Call Scott, Seth or Mark 549-2645.

Center of town 1,2,3 bedrooms Gas, heat, hardwood floors. 253-7679

Take over lease or sublet 2 bedroom apt. $555 from June 1st Bus route 330/380 Call 253-3264

2 bedroom Available 6/1 1010 N. Pleasant #3 548-4142

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550 2 bedroom- $425. 20 minutes from campus- no bus. Available for Sept. 665-2269

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept. at Squire Village 585-2383

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

Volks Jetta III white. 5 speed. $2850. Call 253-6449

1988 Renault Medillon Wagon auto. original owner. Great car. $1850. 256-4153

1988 Jeep Grand Wagoneer runs well. $1000 or B/O. Call Colin 256-6482

91 Ford Escort GT red. runs great. Sunroof. A/C. excellent condition. $2800. Call Jen 665-0486

AUTO FOR SALE

87 Mazda RX7 5 speed. alarm, CD. m-roof. new engine. 13K. Have all paperwork. $6500 or B/O Call Eric 548-0045

89 Honda Civic 12 CD Changer. 4 speakers. auto start $4800 or B/O. 885-0182

EMPLOYMENT

Campus Business Opportunity- Help UMass students protect their PC's and other equipment from theft. Largest seller of computer anti-theft devices in the US is looking for Campus Entrepreneurs For details visit our Web Site at www.pc-security.com/campusrep or call Benson at 1-800-724-4339

Are you a computer guru? The Office of Information Technologies is now hiring qualified student consultants for the Summer and Fall Semesters. We are looking for both undergraduate and graduate students. Research assistantships are available for qualified graduate students. Visit our web page: http://www.oit.umass.edu/oit/jobs to apply and for more information.

Pinecrest Seasonal Amherst Yardwork References, $5 hourly. 549-0413

Permanent, Part-Time, Housecleaning Your convenience. References. $8 hourly. 549-0413

Virgin Records College Rep Position Set music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position, 10-15 hrs/week. Please fax resume and cover letter to Elizabeth Schwartzman at (310)288-2633 or call 1-800-862-7421 to apply. Sophomore or Junior with car preferred. Previous music industry experience is a plus!

Painters Wanted for full-time summer w Weremont, Dedham area. $6.50 an hour plus bonuses. Call Mike 549-3758

Sev or Waitpersons Apply in person The Paddock- 127 Elm St. Hatfield

NEED A SUMMER JOB? $3000-$4000 for the summer. Work outside with other students in Andover area. Get a tan. Leadership positions available. 1-800-380-4848 ext. 208

Do Campus Interviews Friday 6/11 University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer at Amherst for this official University of Massachusetts Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales Marketing and PR experience. Call 1-800-743-5566 ext. 122

Now Hiring/Summer Part-time Telemarketers Amherst area. Flexible hours. Earn $6-$7/hour plus bonuses. No sales- Will train. Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the web into the 21st Century" with our copy-right "Slogan" sweatshirt! Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St. #40, NYC, NY 10014

EMPLOYMENT

COMPUTER JOBS! SUMMER, PT, FT
Programming, PC Support, Hardware, Software COBOL, TSO, JCL, SQL, CICS, Visual Basic, Access
Win NT, Novell, LAN Admin, DOS, Windows
Springfield/Hartford
TSI Consulting
Phone: (413)567-6842
Fax: (413)788-6313
email: tsiresys@map.com
WWW: www.tsiconsulting.com

CAPE COD RESTAURANT Cobbs servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train, housing available. Eastham and Orleans (508)255-9394

Summer Employment
Experienced truck drivers for part-time Approximately 12 or more days in Mid-June and Mid-August. $165.00 to $175.00 a day. (508)653-7422

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being at the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. a rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call (413)827-7565

FOR RENT

Take over our lease! 1 bedroom. On bus line Available Aug. or Sept. Call 665-5181 or email summer775@aol.com

Amherst Center 44 Kellogg Ave 2 bedroom, spacious, huge porch. Call Harlow Properties 256-3442

2 bedroom apt. - Creaxiview Available 6/1. A must see. Call 548-7917

Available June 1st to rent or sublet. 1 bedroom Puffton Apartment. $515 includes heat and H20 549-7088

Take over lease in June or September Southpoint Townhouses. 2 bedrooms, 1 1/2 baths. Hot water included. On bus line. 253-1457

1 bedroom apt.- On bus route. 5 minute walk to campus. Crabtree Apts. Starting June 1st. Call 549-4943

Rent in Brandywine Call 549-0315

Renovated, at Puffton Village Fully furnished 3 bedroom apartment. Available 6/1. Call Rafael at 549-4529

Take over our lease Available 6/1. 3 bedroom. Great location on bus line. Call 256-6034

Take over lease 6/1- 8/31 full Option Large 2 bdrm. $1,020/month 585-8070 On bus line

4 bedroom apt. Available 6/1. On bus route 253-8473

1 big bedroom- Puffton Heat and H20 included A/C. Available June 1. Call 549-5178

Take over lease 1 bedroom apt. Colonial Village $438/month 253-0813

FOR RENT

3 bedroom- Puffton Renovated. 2 bathroom Available 6/1 Nice place! 549-6758

Take over lease 6/1 One bedroom. $525/month Heat/hot water incl. Presidential Apts Call 549-4561

2 Rooms for Rent Private home. $335 + utilities Kitchen privileges. Kosher/Vegetarian preferred Laundry, parking, furnished Available May 1. 549-4853

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas. heat. hardwood floors. heated basement. Now showing for June and September Lease $1300+ 253-7879

FOR SALE

Full Size Futon with mattress cover included Must sell. Excellent condition. $100. Call 549-7882

Bunk Bed $150 Modern, excellent condition. Call 253-6449

Mesa Cassendale Touring Bike Excellent condition. $250 or B/O Call Sharon 549-1773

Schwinn Mesa 12 Speed Road Bike $100 Good condition. Call 253-7234

P-166 Full Package PC $1000 Sharps VCR. TV. Microwave. Aiwa Stereo and more. Cheap! 256-0787

SOFA BED Queen Size mattress, good shape $175 or B/O. DINING ROOM SET Table and 4 chairs, all wood. Excellent condition. $150 or B/O 549-4066

Trombone for sale Bach 42 Stradivarius. It is in great shape. Has a straight wrap and an F trigger. Please call 587-0788 to look at instrument. Best offer gets the trombone

FOUND

Found: Silver Necklace Found outside of Goodell. If yours, please call 253-8301 (Ask for Cathy)

HOUSE FOR RENT

House For Rent $1700 per month. 4 bedrooms. one-half miles from Mullins Center Gas. heat Call 253-7879

HOUSE FOR SALE

Contemporary- 4 bedroom. 3 bath 3050 sq. ft in Williamsburn $159,900 (413)268-8181

MOTORCYCLES

1981 Suzuki 400 Runs great. All it needs- horn $500. Call 256-8324

MISCELLANEOUS

WANTED CIGAR SMOKERS!!! I am doing a project on the "New Cigar Smoker." Particularly female smokers but any recent smokers. Free cig are! Call Ed at 549-6991

MISCELLANEOUS

Stop talking about Soccer Justice and start working for it. Organize low-income people to build power and have control over their communities. Call Lois at Kozol 1-800-851-9448

ROOM FOR RENT

Room- 1 or 2 people: Need car. Mile from Peace Pagoda. Pets OK. 273-2213/month Summer 549-8097 Alyssa

Looking for 2 females willing to share a large bedroom in 3 bedroom Puffton Apartment Starting Feb 97. Call Nikki 548-4484

1 large room in two bedroom apartment Looking for two females Available 6/1 and Fall and Spring Option. On bus route. Very spacious, great location! Call 549-3082

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300/- Call 253-4954 for more info

Spacious room in house June 1/Fall Option $320 per month. Karolos or Rachel 256-8418

ROOM WANTED

Outgoing, friendly female is seeking housemates 5/97- 12/97 Call Odette 584-8587

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 or 2 females to share a two bedroom Puffton Apt. Available 6/1. 549-0207

Wanted Roommate $275/month Townhouse Contact Scott at 549-7581

I need a roommate. Clean, friendly girl or lesbian to share a 2 bedroom townhouse in Southpoint Apts. If interested call Tina at 548-8943

WANTED: Responsible, quiet roommate who doesn't do drugs to share 2 bedroom apartment for Summer and/or Fall RENT FOR SUMMER IS CHEAP! Call Jhaan 546-9612

Wanted: 1 or 2 Females Non-smoking, to share a four bedroom apartment. No cats/dogs Call 665-7712

SERVICES

Rabbit Rescue can help! Don't abandon your bunny! Call us, we'll find her a new home. Ellen 367-0126

Expert Piano Tuning Call Jeremiah Driscoll 583-3013 Leave a message

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 548-1808

SUMMER SUBLET

Renovated 3 bedroom Puffton Apt. Heat/HW included A/C. parking Available 6/1 with Fall Option WW pay $180/month for summer. Call 549-0863

SUMMER SUBLET

Sunny Spacious House Two bedrooms available Great summer location with hiking and bike paths, deck and backyard $ miles from UMass 256-8236

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths, first floor Available June 1st One month free Call 253-0487

1 bedroom in a 2 bedroom apartment Available May 25-Dec 31 Cliffside Apts Sunderland On bus route Everything included $315 a month 885-7088, 885-8336

Sublet $200 a month in Amherst On bus line Call Andy 253-5462

2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. Bottom floor facing pond. Heat/hot water included. Bus route Price Negotiable 549-5065

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300/- Call 253-4954 for more info

Spacious room in house June 1/Fall Option $320 per month. Karolos or Rachel 256-8418

SUMMER SUBLET

2 bedroom cottage Available 6/1 2 miles from campus On bus route. Mile walk from Putters Linge yard Call 548-5177

1 bedroom in 3 bedroom Puffton $215/month Available 6/1. Call Eileen 549-4972

Spacious 2 bedroom apt Furnished, on Main St. near Uptown. Starting 6/1. 253-0382

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment. $270/month includes heat and hot water Available 5/31-6/31. Non-smoker preferred. Call Nick @ 6-0283

1 bedroom available in a 2 bedroom apartment in Brandywine $295/month + utilities Available May 27. Call Cheryl or Christine at 548-1237

5 bedroom house On bus route 10 min. from campus Large rooms and yard. Great for BBQ's Washer/Dryer. Call Jerome 548-8867

Uptown- 5 bedrooms Price negotiable Call 253-0323

1 bedroom apartment Puffton Village Available 6/1. Call 549-5405

2 bedroom apartment Puffton Village Bus route 585-8080

2 bedroom/Puffton Semi furnished. renovated Pool and tennis courts Available 6/1 Call 549-4748

1-4 rooms 1 mile to UMass FP porch, lots of appliances! On bus route 6/1 with Fall Option $295/month 256-0672

Clean 2 bedroom in Brandywine A/C, pool 6/1 with Fall Option $775 NEG. On bus line. UMass. one mile 549-0879

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom house in Belchertown $207 plus electricity. Fall Option. Call 323-8740 Prefer older/grad student

2 bedroom- Puffton newly renovated. furnished Next to bus stop 548-4374

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Bus stop @ end of drive or 10 min. walk to campus Mixed Floors $- bull hoop or 3 ½ $328/month With Fall Option Hot H20. Presidential Mark 549-1088

Housemate Summer with Fall Option Share 3 bedroom house with 2 immature grad students and one very dog. 2 miles from campus 549-4492

2 bedroom in Brandywine $650/month. Available 6/1 Call 548-0181

2 bedrooms in a 4 bedroom apt. Huge lots of light. $332 each person per month Southpoint Apts. 256-8898

2 bedroom apartment with Fall Option / month free rent. Call 549-4061

SUMMER SUBLET

2 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Great location near pool/courts. Heat/hot water included $640/month Available 6/1. 548-7782

TO SUBLET

Downtown Amherst Apartment Fall Option Two large sunny rooms in great house with housemates. Females preferred. Non-smokers $275. Call 256-8330

Sublet one bedroom 205 N. Pleasant- Walk to campus Call 548-7757 to view

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. Call 549-0310

2 bedroom- Puffton Furnished, next to bus stop 8525. Available June 1. Call Pinhan or Anders @ 549-8989

1 bedroom apt. in Cliffside w/Fall Option Available 6/1. All utilities included! On bus line Call 885-7945

Apartment for rent Great location- 2 bedroom. 2 bath. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. $810 per month. Call Josh at 549-4789

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apartment Available 6/1. Cheap with Fall Option 548-5193

Going abroad next Fall? Sublet my room for Spring '98. Great roommate on bus line. Close to campus and bars. Don't wait. Call 549-4589

TRAVEL

One way plane ticket to San Francisco from Boston Depart on June 16th $200 Call 546-2078 before May 5th

WANTED TO RENT

Two lesbian grad students with perfectly behaved and maintained dog need summer sublet, preferably near bus route. Willing to pay three months up front, plus deposit 584-1847

1 to 2 bedroom apartment/house for summer, possibly Fall. Around $300. All locations considered. Leave message (413)863-4400

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the Law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES	HAPPY BIRTHDAY	ROOM WANTED
ANNOUNCEMENTS	HOUSES FOR RENT	ROOMMATE WANTED
APARTMENT FOR RENT	INSTRUCTION	SERVICES
AUTO FOR SALE	LOST	SUMMER SUBLET
COMMUNITY EVENTS	MUSICIANS	TO SUBLET
EMPLOYMENT	MISCELLANEOUS	TRAVEL
ENTERTAINMENT	MOTORCYCLES	TRANSPORTATION
FOR SALE	PERSONALS	WANTED TO RENT
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)	ROOM FOR RENT	WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, MAY 2

Film — Peace or Surrender? The Peace Process after Oslo," a movie about Jerusalem will be shown at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Hall, room 65. Sponsored by the Zeta Psi Theta fraternity Arab Students Association.

Film — A film about the sanctions on the children of Iraq will be shown on at 7 p.m. in Bartlett Hall, room 65. Sponsored by the Zeta Psi Theta fraternity Arab Students Association.

Lecture — A lecture on the historical background of Jerusalem and present situation by John Worell will be held in Bartlett Hall, room 65, at 8:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Zeta Psi Theta fraternity Arab Students Association.

SATURDAY, MAY 4

Auditions — The UMass Comedy Improv Group, Mission Improvable, will be holding auditions at 1 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165. Call backs are May 4 at 7 p.m. Call Aaron for more info at 546-5225.

Benefit — A Books for Prisoners Benefit, featuring Dr. Dennis Brutus, South African political prisoner with Nelson Mandela and currently exiled to America, poet/anti- imperialist activist, with local poets and musicians, will be held in the Campus Center, room 917, at 7 p.m. Please bring books to donate.

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe, Mission Improvable, will host their weekly improv comedy show at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Basement. Free and open to the public.

SUNDAY, MAY 5

Meeting — There will be a general meeting for the UMass Sailing Club at 6:30 p.m. in the Campus Center (see Info Desk for room number). Elections will be held for next year's positions.

Vigil — A Holocaust Memorial Vigil will be held at the Campus Pond at 7 p.m. Sponsored by the Baker, Chadbourne, Greenough and Vanmeter/Butterfield Residence Hall clusters.

NOTICES

Musicians — Mission Improvable, the UMass Comedy Troupe, is looking for someone who can play the keyboard in a variety of music styles, with their own equipment. Call Aaron at 546-5225 for more info.

Support group — Overeaters Antonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, meets every Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees.

Community — "Rendezvous with the Soul," meditation, music and prayer meetings, will be held from 4-5 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805-809 weekly on Tuesdays until the end of the semester. Sponsored by the UMass Baha'i Club. For more information, call Chris at 549-4982.

Discussion — Come experience the cultural diversity of the Prince/Crampton Graduate Residence Hall. From April 8 – May 10, residents from many countries around the world will be participating in discussions and presentations about their experiences in their home countries. Scheduled topics: North America, April 29 – May 3; Latin America/Caribbean, May 4–10. The program is free and open to the public

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

VEGETABLE SONORA ✪ SCAMPI ✪ T-BONE STEAK ✪ CHICKEN BBQ ✪ PASTA ROJA
PORTEBELLO MUSHROOMS ✪ CHICKEN QUESADILLA ✪ MUSHROOM ONION CHEESEBURGER
BLACKENED CATFISH ✪ SPANISH ORZO ✪ STUFFED PORK CHOPS ✪ NACHOS
BERKSHIRE BREWING COMPANY ✪ MARGARITAS ✪ BLACK FOREST CHEESECAKE
SCREAMING COWBOYS ✪ AND MUCH MORE...

WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS!

HSCN 2 Housing Services Cable Network

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23	CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24	CNN/Headline News
4	CBS/4	Boston	25	BET
5	ABC/5	Boston	26	BET on Jazz
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27	UCTV
7	HSCN	Movie Channel	28	The Learning Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29	TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30	Comedy Central
10	NBC/30	New Britain	32	Much Music
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Vodka & Tonic

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 2, 1997

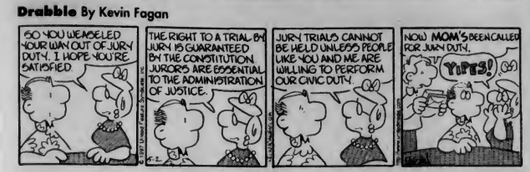
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	McLaughlin	Connecticut	Fourth Estate	First Flights	World at War	Wall Pack
WFSB	3	(12) News ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Candid Camera		Ordinary Extraordinary ⓒ		Nash Bridges "Deliverance" ⓒ		News ⓒ	Late Show ⓒ
WBZ	4	(4) News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Candid Camera		Ordinary Extraordinary ⓒ		Nash Bridges "Deliverance" ⓒ		News ⓒ	Late Show ⓒ
WCVB	5	(5) News ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⓒ	Family Matters	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Step by Step	20/20 ⓒ		News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WLVI	6		Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.	★★★ "The Witches of Eastwick" (1987, Comedy) Jack Nicholson,				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo) ⓒ
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ		Homicide: Life on the Street ⓒ	News		Tonight Show
WTXX		(1) Fresh Prince	Martin ⓒ	Judge Judy ⓒ	Real TV ⓒ	"Mother of the Bride" (1993, Drama) Rue McClanahan,				News	LAPD	M. Patrol	Real TV ⓒ
WVIT		(10) News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ⓒ	Unsolved Mysteries			Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ	Homicide: Life on the Street ⓒ	News		Tonight Show
WTIC	8	(11) Simpsons ⓒ	Roseanne ⓒ	Home Imp.	Seinfeld ⓒ	Sliders "Dinosaur" (In Stereo)		Millennium "Broken World" ⓒ		News		Coach ⓒ	Deep Space 9
WWLP	9	(22) News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ		Homicide: Life on the Street ⓒ	News		Tonight Show
WGBY	10	(6) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Stata We're In	Longsheet	Scientific American Frontiers		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	11	(28) News ⓒ	ABC News	Seinfeld ⓒ	Ent. Tonight	Family Matters	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Step by Step	20/20 ⓒ		News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WSBK	12		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)	Seinfeld ⓒ	Med Abo. You	★★★ "Crocodile Dundee" (1986, Comedy) Paul Hogan,				News		Real TV ⓒ	Med Abo. You
WTBS	13		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Major League Baseball: Pittsburgh Pirates at Atlanta Braves (Live) ⓒ						It's "The Outsiders" (1983, Drama) Matt Dillon,
AAE	14		Outney "Murder by S.O.P."	Law & Order "Prisoner of Love"		Biography: ADolf Hitler				★★★ "White Mischief" (1987, Drama) Sarah Miles, Joss Ackland,		Law & Order "Consultation" ⓒ
CNN	15	(3)	WorldView ⓒ		Moneyline ⓒ	Crossfire ⓒ		Prime News ⓒ	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ⓒ		World Today ⓒ		Sports Illus.	Moneyline ⓒ
COM	16	(26)	Tick ⓒ	Canned Ham	Saturday Night Live ⓒ			★★½ "Ca-Sllec Men" (1990, Comedy) Robin Williams,				Robin Williams: Off the Wall		Saturday Night Live ⓒ
DISC	17		Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "FYI" (R)			Wild Discovery (R)		News	World-Wond.	Hunters of the Serengeti (R)		Wild Discovery (R)
ESPN	18		Up Close	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs.		Conference Semifinal Game 1 – Teams to Be Announced. ⓒ				Baseball		Sportscenter ⓒ
LIFE	19		Supermarket	Debt		Wire	Wire	Diet	13 Blind Dates	★★ "Three Amigos!" (1986, Comedy) Chevy Chase, Steve Martin,		Homicide: Life on the Street ⓒ
MTV	20		Music Videos	Week in Rock		Singled Out	Making	Music Videos (In Stereo)		Austin Powers-Shindig		Beavis-Butt.	World Tour (R)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	21		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon		Doug ⓒ	Rugrats ⓒ	Kenan! (R)	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart ⓒ	Odd Couple ⓒ	Taxi ⓒ	M. T. Moore
SCIFI	22		Fifth Element	Darkside		★★★ "Dark Secret of Harvest Home" (1978, Horror) Bette Davis, Rosanna Arquette									"Dark Secret of Harvest Home"
TLC	23	(24) Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Myth America	Legends-isles	Earthquake! (R)				Twister Two – Terror		Myth America	Legends-isles
TNT	24		In the Heat of the Night ⓒ			In the Heat of the Night ⓒ		NBA Basketball Playoffs. Teams to Be Announced. (Live) ⓒ				NBA Basketball Playoffs. Teams TBA
USA	25		Renegade "High Rollers" (R) ⓒ			Highlander: The Series (R) ⓒ		★★ "The Sote-in-Law" (1995, Suspense) Shaina Reed, ⓒ				La Femme Nikita (In Stereo) ⓒ		★★ "The Stoned Age" (1993) ⓒ
HBO	8		★★★ "Bye Bye, Love" (1995, Comedy) Matthew Modine, "PG-13"					★★ "Just Cause" (1995) Sean Connery, R ⓒ		"The Last Days of Frankie the Fly" (1997) Dennis Hopper, R ⓒ					Dennis Miller
MAX	9		(5:25)	★★ "Going Under" (1991) Bill Pullman, "PG" ⓒ				★½ "The Surgeon" (1995, Horror) Isabel Glasser, "n Stereo" R ⓒ		★★ "The Last Boy Scout" (1991, Drama) Bruce Willis, R ⓒ
SHOW	10		★★ "Canadian Bacon" (1995) Alan Alda, "PG" ⓒ			Tyson-Holyfld		★★ "City Hall" (1996, Drama) Al Pacino, (In Stereo) R ⓒ				Outer Limits	Poltergeist: The Legacy ⓒ		"Body Count"



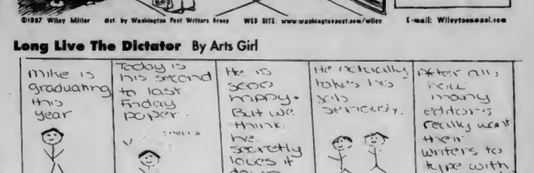
Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick



Non Sequitor By Wiley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Long Live The Dictator By Arts Girl

University² By Frank Cho

FRANK, I WISH YOU WERE HERE! DO YOU THINK OF THIS AS A NEW DRESS OR A CAT?
HMMM IT'S NICE....
AH COME ON! WHAT DO YOU REALLY THINK OF THIS DRESS?
ARE YOU TRYING TO BE HONEST WITH ME, HONEY?
ARE YOU SURE YOU WANT MY HONEST OPINION?
IT'S NICE AND ALL, BUT I THINK IT KINDA MAKES YOU LOOK LIKE A FLIGHT ATTENDANT!
IT DOES?
SURE.
OH FRANK, YOU'RE SOOO GOOD TO ME!
THANK YOU, THANK YOU, THANK YOU,

SPORTS

Friday, May 2, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

NU bats hot as Huskies end UM streak

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

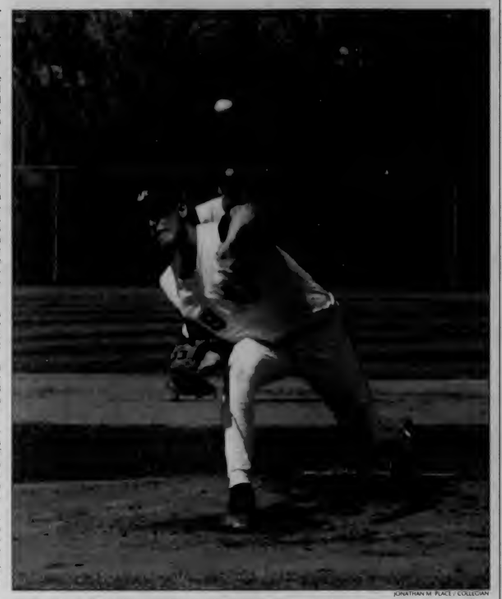
One week after being no-hit by Massachusetts, Northeastern made sure early that there would be no repeat performance.

Three straight first-inning homeruns by the Huskies gave them a early 5-0 lead, and Northeastern went on to bang out 20 hits and beat UMass, 18-4. The loss ends an 18-game winning streak for the Minutemen, which was the nation's longest.

NORTHEASTERN	18
MASSACHUSETTS	4

NU right-fielder Tim Daley had two homeruns in the first two innings, the second a three-run blast, to lead the Huskies. With the win, Northeastern improves to 23-15, 9-11 in America East. UMass drops to 28-7, 12-3 in the Atlantic 10 heading into this weekend's series with St. Bonaventure, which currently sits right behind the first-place Minutemen in the A-10's East Division. The Minutemen will host the Bonnies with a doubleheader on Saturday, starting at noon, followed by a matinee on Sunday in a 12 p.m. start.

"That's the way it is in baseball," UMass coach Mike Stone said. "One day you play well, the next day you don't. We came out flat, and we weren't focused mentally. We had a chance for a record, and we didn't do it."



If UMass had beaten the Huskies, it would have broken the school record for wins set by the 1996 Minutemen, who also won 18 games in a row. Sophomore Adam Robinson took the loss, allowing eight runs and eight hits in 1 2/3 innings of work.

Northeastern wasted no time getting on the board. After first baseman Matt Wolcott's throw to a covering Robinson put lead-off hitter Jason Lewis on first, shortstop Kevin Kim laced a double to put runners on second and third with no outs. UMass got John O'Donnell to ground out, but Lewis scored from third to make it 1-0.

Daley followed with a two-run homer, and solo jobs by Carlos Pena and Patrick Mason gave the Huskies a 5-0 cushion. The Huskies added three more runs in the second, courtesy of Daley's three-run homer, making it 8-0. Lewis would knock a three-run shot of his own in the third, giving Northeastern a 11-0 lead in the top of the third.

UMass was led by third baseman Adam

Turn to BASEBALL, page 7

JONATHAN M. PLACE / COLLEGIAN

Adam Correa had a homerun for the Minutemen yesterday, but it wasn't enough as UMass fell to Northeastern.

Buckley, Minutewomen ready for A-10 Tourney

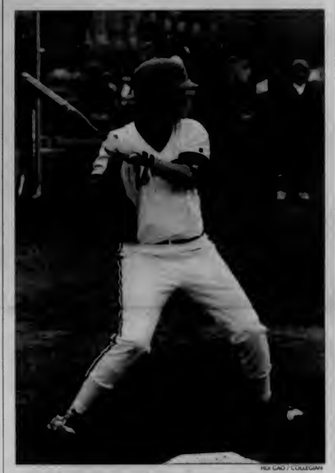
Catcher quietly leads UMass

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

Change. Change is good.

The Massachusetts softball team knows about change. It started off this season with eight losses in 11 games. Now it is the Atlantic 10 regular season champ, and is ranked No. 1 going into this weekend's A-10 Championships.

Junior Kelly Buckley, the starting catcher for the Massachusetts softball team also knows all about change. In her sophomore year at UMass she was asked to leave the familiar territory of her position at shortstop, and move in as catcher, a position she had only gotten a small taste of in her first two years in high school.



Chris Martens was scheduled to catch for the Minutewomen that year, but she ruptured two discs in her back and was unable to do it. So coach Elaine Sortino turned to Buckley.

Not only did she have to change positions, but Buckley had to catch for pitchers Danielle Henderson and Liz Wagner in their first year as pitchers. Imagine squatting behind home-plate, with Henderson's 65-mile-per-hour fastball zinging towards you with little or no control on it.

"I had to learn a lot about the pitches," Buckley said. "Everytime they threw a pitch they would need information from me, to tell them if it was good and about the spin. And I didn't know any of that stuff."

But Buckley had a lot of help

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 7

PAT CASEY / COLLEGIAN

Kelly Buckley will lead her teammates into the Atlantic 10 Championships this weekend.

History repeats itself as Minutemen's streak ends

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

History has a funny way of repeating itself.

Last year, the Massachusetts baseball had an 18-game winning streak going. During that time, it beat Harvard in the first round of the Beanpot baseball tournament, 13-2. The next week, Harvard came to Earl E. Lorden Field to play in a re-match. Harvard ended UMass' streak in a 11-10 victory.

This year, the Minutemen (28-7, 12-3 Atlantic 10) had another 18-game winning streak going. During that time, they'd beaten Northeastern (23-15, 9-11 America East) in the first round of the Beanpot baseball tournament 1-0; a game in which Scott Barnsby held the Huskies hitless.

Yesterday, Northeastern came into Amherst with revenge on the brain and took the streak away in a 18-4 romping of the Minutemen.

Both times, UMass humiliated the other team in the first round of the Beanpot, and then won the trophy. Both times, the other team came back to Amherst and put UMass' 18- game winning streak to an end.

There seems to be a pattern.

Yesterday's game was ugly, to say the least. UMass had a chance to win 19 games in a row, a streak that would have been the longest in Minuteman history. It was obvious that the team's focus was somewhere else, definitely not on Lorden Field. They came out flat and played worse. Maybe it was the wind, the rain or the bad hops, but whatever it was, yesterday was not UMass' day.

Nothing was going the Minutemen's way. Even Brian Samela, whose fielding percentage had been flawless up until yesterday's game, botched three pitches,

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 7

UM women lacrosse seniors finish season with loss against Brown

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — All's well that does not end so well. Oh, how a slightly manipulated and reworked old saying can ring so true.

Yesterday afternoon at Stevenson Field, the four-year campaign of four seniors on the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team did not end so well, falling to No. 11 Brown by a 16-5 score.

After an early 2-2 tie with the Bears (10-4), the Minutewomen (6-7) could not keep the positive momentum going for long.

It was unclear what was more obnoxious in the 9-0 Brown run that put UMass away in the first half: the uncreativity of the post-goal "noises" blaring from the loudspeakers (e.g. bear growls, air raid warnings, etc.), or the creativity of the Bear offense.

BROWN	16
MASSACHUSETTS	5

What is clear is the separation from the good teams in Division I women's lacrosse, or any sport for that matter, and the great teams is the great ones make scoring runs to put games away.

That is exactly what Brown did, and the 11-2 deficit after the first frame was just too much for the Minutewomen to overcome.

However, UMass had overcome many obstacles this season, and whatever the result of this game, all's pretty well for the reinstated program in its fourth year.

With their late season surge, the Minutewomen gave themselves the highest win total since the 1988 season (7-7-1), and also their third 40-point scorer in the last five years.

With her 2 goals today, sophomore attacker Laura Korutz (26 goals, 15 assists, 41 points) joined fellow teammates, senior Stephanie Walsh and Rachel Splaine, in that scoring category (both reached that plateau in 1993); while also finishing the season as the team's leading scorer.

For UMass coach Francesca McClellan, the one thing the team needed to overcome on this day was themselves. The third game in the last six days looked to have its effect on the Minutewomen, and the end result showed that fact.

"We just came out flat," McClellan said. "And, we weren't making the right decisions with our passing. But, the one thing that I'm proud of is that the team hung in there for the full 60 minutes. They didn't give up, and yeah, that was definitely a good thing to see."

Not only was it the last game for UMass' four seniors, Walsh, Erica Bryan, Kristen Hocker and Michele Warrington, but it was also Senior Day for the Brown seniors. Yet, it was junior Phoebe Koch who got

Turn to WOMEN'S LACROSSE, page 7

It's down to Brown game for men's lax

COURTNEY MARIN / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts men's lacrosse team can give itself a push towards the postseason with a win at Brown tomorrow.

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

The seniors on the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team hope to prolong their collegiate lacrosse careers by knocking off No. 11 Brown this Saturday in Providence, R.I. in order to position themselves to claim a New England Championship and a probable NCAA tournament berth.

At 7-5, the Minutemen are coming off a 9-4 loss to No. 2 Syracuse last Sunday at Warren P. McGuirk Stadium. Their No. 10 ranking, sliding just one rung down the ladder with the loss to the mighty Orangemen, appears to be enough to secure a season extension. But a 7-5 record last season, with losses to highly-ranked opponents just as in this season, was enough to make UMass a bubble team, and eventually a snubbed team.

"I think it's imperative for us to not allow the selection committee to make the decision," UMass coach Greg Cannella said. "We have to make it for them."

Winning a New England Championship for the third time in the 1990s would be a big factor in UMass' quest for an invitation to the big dance. The selection committee generally grants an NCAA tournament seed to the team which gains such honors, and it is viewed by many as an unofficial automatic bid.

"It's a longstanding rivalry between the two teams," Cannella said. "It's a big New England game, it's always been a huge New England game, and now it's more of a national game. I think not just because of the New England championship, but because it's Brown, it's a big game."

The Minutemen last made the tournament in 1995, with a 7-6 record and key wins against Hofstra, Notre Dame, Yale and Army in Cannella's first year as head coach. The Brown-Massachusetts rivalry has been going strong since 1954, in UMass' first home game, a 5-4 Minuteman win. The Bears were the victims of legendary coach Dick Garber's last win, his 300th, and victors in his last loss in the second round of the 1990 NCAA tournament.

This year's senior class of UMass lacrosse players would gain just their second career tournament appearance. In 1995 they made an early exit, with an 11-6 loss to Princeton in the opening round.

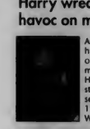
"This is a real challenge," Cannella said. "We'll find out what this team is really all about, what we're made of, because this is it.

"The seniors will hopefully make a difference in this

Turn to MEN'S LACROSSE, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 133 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Monday, May 5, 1997

Stop corporate greed!

The Dave Matthews Band are trying to shut down both stores and fans alike. Check out our editorial (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Harry wreaks havoc on mound

After pitching a no-hitter in game one on Friday, sophomore Danielle Henderson broke the strikeout record she set in the win with K's during Sports Weekend, page 12).

WORLD

Muslim group makes threats against Clinton

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A Muslim militant group threatened yesterday to kill American officials — from President Clinton to a jailer — if a blind Muslim cleric dies in a U.S. prison.

The threat by Egypt's al-Gamaa al-Islamiya, or the Islamic Group, follows reports that the health of Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman has deteriorated while he has been serving time in an American jail.

Abdel-Rahman, 58, was sentenced to life in prison in 1995 for conspiring to blow up landmarks in New York, including the World Trade Center and the United Nations. He is imprisoned at the federal prison hospital in Springfield, Mo.

"If any harm comes to the sheik... al-Gamaa al-Islamiya will target — with the help of God and his strength — all of those Americans who participated in subjecting his life to danger," the group said in a statement received by The Associated Press. "Al-Gamaa al-Islamiya considers every American official, starting with the American president to the despicable jailer... partners in endangering the sheik's life," the statement said. In the meantime, the group said it would do "everything in its power" to free Abdel-Rahman, who is widely believed to be the spiritual leader of the Islamic Group.

NATION

Standoff in Texas ends with surrender

FORT DAVIS, Texas (AP) — Using dogs, airplanes and troopers on horseback, authorities searched the woods early yesterday for two Texas separatists who did not join colleagues in a peaceful ending to a weeklong standoff.

Richard McLaren, the self-styled ambassador of the Republic of Texas faction, signed a "cease-fire document" with the Texas Rangers on Saturday afternoon. He and three others then abandoned their "embassy," a trailer in the remote Davis Mountains. McLaren's wife had given up earlier in the day.

But two men disappeared hours before the surrender into a heavily wooded canyon wearing green camouflage. Richard Frank Keyes III and Mike Matson were believed to be carrying two rifles and a 9 mm pistol.

Ralph Matson had told The Associated Press: "My brother feels that he would rather die fighting for somebody's rights than spend the rest of his life in jail."

Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said authorities watched the pair leave, and decided it was not worth risking arresting them right away.

Keyes is wanted on state charges of engaging in organized criminal activity and other charges. No charges were filed against Matson.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	day	day
HIGH: 65	HIGH: 60	HIGH: 60
LOW: 40	LOW: 35	LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds.....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword.....page 11
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 12

General education force meets; goals and outcomes discussed

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The General Education Task Force discussed the goals of a general education program last Friday afternoon in the Whitmore Administration Building Board Room.

In their last meeting of the semester, the task force members worked on a draft statement of goals and outcomes of a general education program.

Professor John Jenkins, chair of the 50 member task force, said in an interview that the task force has been working on a goals statement this semester to guide them next fall in their work of evaluating and redesigning the University of Massachusetts general education requirements.

"The general education task force has an opportunity for a great deal of impact on the education of every student here," Jenkins said. "That is a good challenge."

Jenkins said that the task force began by asking each member to reflect on what an ideal general education program would do for students.

"We asked everyone what they felt individually was most important," Jenkins said. "Overall, topics such as what capacities we would like a student to have gained and what are the desired outcomes of a general education program came up."

The task force is now working to compile these goals into one statement.

"Before summer, it is our goal to have a working draft of introductory statements and student outcomes that we think are important," Jenkins said. "Next year, we will hear much more directly whatever information we might be able to gain, including examples from elsewhere in the country."

Two of the goals the task force are considering are the ability and desire for lifelong learning and a sufficient breadth of knowledge to engage in study in a number of fields.

"We want to lay the groundwork so that in September we can start as quickly as possible," Jenkins said.

Issues that the task force will be examining at the start of next semester include service-learning, team teaching of general education classes, the intimacy level of general education classes and the appropriateness of general education classes to under and upper classmen.

The undergraduate students on the task force reported that they were satisfied with their roles on the task force and that they were being given the opportunity to make their views heard.

Donald J. Bolger, a junior psychology major, said that he is enjoying being an active participant of the task force.

"It is wonderful to be a part of [the task force]," Bolger said. "It is very inclusive. The undergraduates are active and involved in the decision making process."

Ruby Bansal, a sophomore biochemistry major and member of the task force, agreed with Bolger.

"I am looking forward to participating next year," Bansal said. "It has been good so far."

Jenkins said that although having such a large task force can make coming to agreement on issues difficult, the draft statement of goals shows that headway is being made.

"It is amazingly complicated and yet there has been progress," Jenkins said.

ANNA FEDER / COLLEGIAN

A walk in the clouds

Hadley resident Deborah Young takes a stroll an the skywalk between two Morrill buildings yesterday afternoon.

Temporary cease-fire called during talks between Zairian rebel leader and president

By Tina Susman
Associated Press

POINTE NOIRE, Congo — Zaire's embattled, ailing president met face-to-face yesterday with the rival who has overrun nearly three-fourths of his country — but all they agreed on was to hold another meeting.

President Mobutu Sese Seko did not announce his resignation, as had been expected.

U.N. envoy Mohamed Sahnoun said that rebel leader Laurent Kabila had agreed to a temporary cease-fire as a "gesture of good will" before the meeting, but it was not clear whether the truce continued or indeed if it ever took place.

"As a gesture of good will he has ordered his troops to stop their advance on all fronts," Sahnoun said, reading from a prepared statement. "They would, however, defend themselves and reciprocate if they were attacked."

Kabila's rebels, who already control three-quarters of Zaire, reportedly are pushing toward the capital, Kinshasa.

Kabila's forces claimed Saturday to have taken control of Kenge, the last major town on the way to the capital, only 115 miles to the west. Rebels also took Lisala, Mobutu's birthplace, about 150 miles south of the president's hometown of Gbadolite, a rebel officer said.

During a news conference with a grim-faced Mobutu and smiling Kabila, Sahnoun told reporters aboard a South African naval ship that South African President Mandela, who was helping to mediate the talks, would reconvene another meeting between the two rivals within 6 to 10 days to narrow the gap between them.

Sahnoun told reporters that Mobutu had proposed a cease-fire and the creation of a transitional government that would prepare the Central African nation for its first multiparty elections. Mobutu said he would hand over power to such an elected president. But Kabila, according to the statement read by Sahnoun, is demanding that the rebel alliance be allowed to take over power as the transitional authority and that Mobutu cede power to them. Mobutu left the ship without making any comment to reporters and was expected to fly back to Kinshasa later in the day. Kabila was en route to Angola.

Mandela emphasized that a permanent cease-fire had not been agreed to by Kabila.

"The question of a cease-fire is not part of his vocabulary," he said. "What he is concerned with is that negotiations will led to the end of hostilities."

Kabila said Friday he would go to the talks only to secure "Mobutu's exit and the handover of power to the alliance." Otherwise, he said, rebel forces would take the rest of Zaire within two weeks.

Mobutu has insisted he never would bow to Kabila's demand to resign, but his illness and international pressure may force him to do so.

Sources close to the talks had said that mediators were seeking an agreement in which Mobutu would step down for health reasons and appoint an interim president until elections could be held. This would allow Kabila and his forces to peacefully enter Kinshasa.

Wearing his signature leopard-skin cap and looking grim, Mobutu boarded the ship early yesterday.

Supported by a cane in one hand and his wife on the other, the ailing president was met by the South African Foreign Minister Alfred Nzo and Defense Minister Joe Modise.

AT&T vows regulatory savings will decrease long-distance rates

By Kevin Galvin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Clearing the way for a cut in many consumers' long-distance phone rates, AT&T promised Saturday to pass on to customers any savings that result from a federal overhaul of telephone access charges.

The long-distance carrier's letter to the Federal Communications Commission was applauded by consumer groups, who were concerned about how cutting costs would trickle down to callers.

"This is the biggest cut for the average consumer in long-distance for many, many years," said Gene Kimmelman, co-director of Consumer Union.

The FCC is revamping the labyrinthine subsidies that make local phone service affordable to the poor

Turn to PHONE, page 2

Iranian nuclear program set back

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press

Iran's nuclear program, once thought to have its sights set on a bomb by 2000, has run into roadblocks and won't hit its weapons target until well into the next decade, Israeli and other sources report.

"They are going to make it in the end," a senior Israeli intelligence official said. "But it will be the middle of the next decade."

The receding timetable, the result in part of U.S. pressure on Iran's nuclear suppliers, could ease any international concern that Israel will follow through sometime soon on threats to attack Iran's nuclear sites.

The Iranians deny they want to build nuclear arms.

"Definitely not. I hate this weapon," President Hashemi Rafsanjani replied when asked in a recent CBS "60 Minutes" interview whether his government wants nuclear weapons.

But the U.S. government and independent analysts say the kinds of nuclear equipment the Iranians have tried to buy for their nuclear energy program clearly suggest plans for weapons development.

It is not surprising Iran would want to "go nuclear," some say, in view of the efforts by longtime enemy Iraq to build a bomb. "If you were Iranian, would you disregard what Iraq has done?" asked Mustafa Kibaroglu, a Turkish specialist in nuclear proliferation.

The U.S. pressure has focused on Russia's 2-year-old project to build Iran's first nuclear reactor, at Bushehr on the Persian Gulf coast. After completing plant construction suspended by the Germans in 1979, the Russians will install a 1,000-megawatt, Russian-made reactor.

The plant would not contribute directly to weapons development, but U.S. officials worry that training and technology supplied to the civilian side will spill over into a military program. They also are concerned that plutonium embedded in the reactor's spent fuel could be reprocessed into bomb material — if Iran somehow obtains the necessary technology.

Washington scored a major success two years ago when it persuaded Russia to cancel part of the deal: the building of a gas-centrifuge plant in Iran to enrich uranium — the process that produces power-plant fuel and, if intensified, highly enriched uranium. Like plutonium, highly enriched uranium can make a bomb. Then, last month, Ukraine responded to U.S. appeals and announced it would not supply turbines for the Bushehr project. The Moscow government later said it had a substitute supplier, in Russia.

Among other setbacks slowing Iran's nuclear development:

•Under U.S. pressure, the Czech government blocked a Czech company's plans to sell reactor equipment to the Iranians.

• Financing for Bushehr was

Turn to IRAN, page 2

UCF plans trip to rebuild church in S. Carolina

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

The United Christian Foundation (UCF), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts is currently completing plans to take a dozen students to Barnwell, South Carolina to refurbish a church that was destroyed by fire in 1995.

"We've been working on this since last August as a part of a national effort to rebuild churches that were burned in 1995 and 1996. A good number of the churches burned were attributed to arson and a large number of these incidents were racially motivated," said Ken Higgins, the University chaplain for UCF.

As of the present, the trip consists of 12 students with room for two or three more. UCF, along with a group of Five College students from Habitat for Humanity, a group that builds housing for low income people, will travel to South Carolina on Monday, May 26 and will return on Saturday, May, 31.

The church that will be renovated is the Rosemary Baptist Church, an African American church located in Barnwell, S.C. that was damaged two years ago.

Along with co-member Reverend John Ike, Higgins and a group of approximately 25 students have been working with Project Rebuild, a Pioneer Valley effort that has collectively been working to rebuild these churches.

According to Higgins, the trip is funded by voluntary donations from civic groups and churches in the Valley.

"This is mainly a work project. It's simple hard work like roofing, siding and woodwork. As well, we'll be working with the town and the African American congregation to complete this," Higgins said. "We'll be staying in housing located on the project site and meals and transportation will be provided."

In the spare time of the renovation project, Higgins said the group will also be studying racism and participating in community events to get to know people in the church and in the town.

"It's a very transforming experience," Higgins said.

There will be a final orientation meeting for Monday, May, 12 at 7 p.m. at Amherst College Campus Center snack room located downstairs for anyone who is interested.

ANNA FEDER/ COLLEGIAN

Pump up the Bass

Bruce Bass of the Bruce Bass Band rocks Central as part of the Sonic Soul Show Saturday evening.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor:
Seema Gangatirkar
Copy Editor:
Laura Stock
Photo Technician:
Anna Feder
Production Supervisor:
Lorraine Urbanski
Production Staff:
Chris Lavin
Lauren Goldfarb

■ iran

continued from page 1

reported delayed because Iran objected to the presence of Jews among the officials of the Russian bank involved.

• The Russian construction chief at Bushehr told Moscow television the project is a year behind schedule because, among other things, he must take anti-earthquake measures that were not anticipated.

• China suspended plans to supply two smaller power reactors to Iran. It is unclear whether U.S. pressure contributed to the Chinese decision.

"None of the problems are insurmountable," said the Israeli intelligence officer, who spoke on condition he not be identified. But Gerald M. Steinberg, an Israeli defense scholar, said the problems are serious enough to have limited Iran's nuclear program to "a year or two of progress since 1991."

"Given the pressure from the United States, they're not likely to get a nuclear capability in five years," he said.

In 1992, the CIA projected Iran would be a nuclear-weapon state by 2000. By 1995, John Holum, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, was estimating the Iranians could develop a bomb by 2005. But when he appeared before a House panel in Washington two months ago, Holum pegged the Iranian target date now in the 2005-2007 range.

"I think they have slipped rather than gained on the timetable," he said.

Kibaroglu sees an even longer road toward a dependable Iranian bomb — one compact enough to be delivered by available aircraft or missiles.

■ phone

continued from page 1

and to those living in high-cost rural areas. Changes would affect businesses and residences. A final plan is due tomorrow and FCC officials indicated Saturday the AT&T action would enable them to go forward their plan.

More than $1 billion in savings could come from cutting access fees paid to local phone companies which route long-distance calls on their networks, and from changes in the regulatory formulas the FCC uses to calculate fees.

But the FCC and consumer advocates have been concerned about guarantees that savings would be passed along to customers. AT&T, which handles 50 percent of long-distance calls, responded to those concerns.

In the letter, AT&T assumed that the savings resulting from the FCC's regulatory changes would amount to at least $1.7 billion, about $900 million of which would directly affect AT&T.

"We've confirmed that if the FCC makes access reductions, we're going to give the money back to customers," said Steve Davis, AT&T's vice president for law and government affairs.

The company's final decision was made after consultation with Kimmelman and other consumer groups, Davis said. "This has been a very long and involved process," he said.

The company promised to reduce its basic schedule prices 5 percent during the day and evening and 15 percent on nights and weekends. That would mean $600 million in savings to residents and $300 million to businesses.

Kimmelman believes the FCC can cut more from the money local phone companies get, but he said Saturday's announcement was a good sign for callers.

"I'm viewing it as a first step for cutting the fat, but it's a big win for consumers because it's a long-distance rate reduction and it's the first sign that the FCC is willing to cut the fat out of telephone pricing as we move to a more competitive market," he said.

The savings were targeted at basic rate customers and it was unclear Saturday whether callers who belong to any of AT&T's promotional calling plans would benefit.

Local phone companies collect $23 billion a year in access fees. The biggest chunk — about $13 billion a year — comes from AT&T, MCI, Sprint and other long-distance companies and goes to local carriers to begin and end calls.

ANNA FEDER/ COLLEGIAN

Curtain call
The cast of The Heidi Chronicles take a bow after their performance in the Student Union Ballroom Friday night.

!! SUMMER !!
SPECIAL
$99
FLEX FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
$99
175 UNIVERSITY DRIVE, AMHERST, MA 253-3539
!! STARTS NOW !!

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS,
AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

Ride The Wave of Knowledge
Summer School
Registration now in progress
Day and evening classes begin
July 7th
• Over 100 Undergraduate and Graduate Courses
• General Education and Major Courses
• Low Cost
~For a free catalog call 413-572-5224~
Westfield STATE COLLEGE
Division of Graduate and Continuing Education
Western Avenue • Westfield, Massachusetts

Campus Center/Student Union
Weekly Specials
Are you ready for a Fiesta?
T-Mex in the hatch food court is celebrating Cinco de Mayo.
Join us for specials throughout the week.
Still Available!
Custom Graduation Announcements available at the Campus Center Print Shop
THE CAMPUS SENDER
124 Lincoln Campus Center
•Peter Pan Bus Tickets •U.S. Post Office
•Shipping Service via UPS •Fax Service
Hey you!! Worried about how you're going to get all your stuff home this summer? The Campus Sender is a convenient way to ship home all those treasures you've accumulated over the semester! Just box up all those goodies, and we'll ship them wherever they need to go!
Now Open! Come in and take a look!
Conveniently located (formerly McGregor Travel)
University Store
Stop by for weekly specials
New York Times BESTSELLERS 20% Off all the time
Save 20% Political Economy Books History Books
Save 20%
ALL SPRING JACKETS & WINDSHIRTS
Back by popular demand!
ALL UMASS GLASSWARE - Mugs, Tankards, and Glass Gifts
Peter Pan Bus Tickets to Boston, New York & Hartford with connections to surrounding cities available at the Campus Sender

~ NATIONAL/INTERNATIONAL ~

Clinton works to smooth relations in Mexico

By Anita Snow
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — "Poor Mexico! So far from God and so close to the United States!"

That lament, uttered a century ago by President Porfirio Diaz, still resounds south of the border on the eve of President Clinton's first state visit to Mexico.

Mexicans are still stinging from a public chastising in the U.S. Congress over its troubled efforts in the drug war and remain angry about tough new American immigration laws.

Clinton's main task will be to soothe sore feelings and assure the Mexicans that everything will be just fine.

"After all the bickering in Washington, I think it is now time for a little fence mending," said M. Delal Baer, a Mexico specialist at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a Washington think tank. "It is time to kiss and make up." Clinton arrives Monday night for a two-day visit before continuing on to Central America and the Caribbean.

He is expected to focus on building trust with Mexican leaders and enlisting them as full partners in the drug war. They are likely to discuss several other issues important to both nations — immigration, trade and political stability.

"In Washington, the view of Mexico is very narrow: just drugs, thugs and money problems," said U.S. Ambassador James Jones. "The visit will highlight the breadth of our relationship and the personal relationship between the two presidents."

Clinton will have to tiptoe around some potential land mines: the U.S. immigration law, trade disputes, democratic reform in Mexico.

It won't be an easy task in Mexico, where an undiplomatic joke can create a scandal. Mexicans still recall President Carter's crack during a 1979 visit about his bout with "Montezuma's revenge" — traveler's diarrhea.

With their shared trade and 2,000-mile border, Mexico and the United States have had a complicated and occasionally contentious relationship. And the unequal balance of power often prompts bad feelings.

Mexicans are still angry about the 1848 treaty that ceded most of what is now the U.S. Southwest after the Mexican-American War. Americans continue to blame Mexico for the illegal drugs and immigrants flooding their communities.

On the drug issue, much of the tension has already been relieved.

U.S. officials were pleased when Mexico scrapped its corruption-riddled anti-drug agency in late April and returned those duties to the attorney general's office.

The old agency came under fire from U.S. lawmakers after its head, Gen. Jesus Gutierrez Rebollo, was charged with being on the payroll of a major drug trafficker. The scandal nearly derailed the recertification of Mexico as a drug-fighting partner.

In a move that pleased Mexico, U.S. officials now publicly acknowledge that drug use by Americans is a major factor in the growth of Mexican drug trafficking.

Dealing with the immigration issue will be tougher, and observers do not expect Clinton and President Ernesto Zedillo to talk about it much.

Many Mexicans have relatives working north of the border and are infuriated by the new U.S. law that makes it easier to deport illegal immigrants.

Palestinian police accuse Israel of faking attacks

By Ibrahim Barzak
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — The Palestinian Authority accused Israel yesterday of engineering two fake terrorist attacks against Jewish settlers last month to make Yasser Arafat seem soft on terrorism.

A spokesman for the prime minister's office denied the claim. Ibrahim Ismael Halaby, a 25-year-old student, said Israel's Shin Bet security service asked him to arrange twin suicide bombings April 1 that killed two militants carrying the explosives but injured no Israelis.

The Israelis "want to show that [Palestinian] authorities are not preventing terrorism so they can withdraw from the [peace] agreement," Halaby said at a news conference in Gaza City. Hassan Kashef, director-general of the Palestinian Information Ministry, read out a statement backing Halaby's claims.

Shai Bazak, spokesman for Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, said the Palestinian charge was a "ridiculous lie."

"Israel expects the Palestinian Authority to fight terrorism genuinely, as it undertook to do, and press conferences and fabrications of this kind certainly do not show a serious intention to fight terrorism," Bazak told The Associated Press.

Gideon Ezra, former deputy head of the Shin Bet, said on Israel radio that it was "inconceivable" that Israel would plant bombs that would endanger its own citizens.

Halaby, who was arrested April 7, arrived at the news conference under the guard of Palestinian troops armed with AK-47 assault rifles. Kashef did not say whether Halaby would be charged. Halaby told reporters the Shin Bet recruited him nine years ago and recently asked him to keep tabs on the Islamic Jihad group and make contacts with potential suicide bombers.

His brother Ramez, a leading Islamic Jihad activist, helped him find two willing bombers — Anwar Shabrawi and Abdullah Madhoun. Then his Israeli contact, known only as "Capt. Mini," gave him explosives for them and instructions on carrying out the attacks. The men, who allegedly wore Palestinian police uniforms at Israel's request, were expecting to blow themselves up as Israeli vehicles passed them on the highway, Halaby said.

Instead, the Israelis detonated the explosives early by remote control, he said, adding "the bombers had no idea of the Israeli connection."

Gypsy beatfied by Pope; a first for Catholic church

By Daniel J. Wakin
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II beatified a Gypsy yesterday, the first time the Roman Catholic Church has so honored a member of the nomadic group.

Several thousand Gypsies from all over Europe joined the crowd in St. Peter's Square to attend a Mass in honor of Ceferino Jimenez Malla and four other people beatified by the pope. Beatification is the last formal step before possible sainthood.

Jimenez Malla, 75, was killed by Republican forces during the Spanish Civil War in 1936. He was arrested for defending a priest and died refusing to renounce his faith, his supporters say. "The blessed Ceferino Jimenez Malla sowed harmony and solidarity among the Gypsies, mediating in conflicts that plagued relations between non-Gypsies and Gypsies," the pope said in his homily.

Jimenez Malla showed that "the charity of Christ knows no limits of race or culture," John Paul told about 30,000 people under bright sunshine.

Gypsies, who are believed to have come from India six centuries ago, live throughout Europe on the edges of society, often residing in camp grounds and trailer parks.

Church officials said Malla's beatification was an effort to promote tolerance and understanding of the group.

Before the service, groups of Gypsies sang and clapped. A guitarist and violinist serenaded the pope with Gypsy melodies and a huge tapestry portrait of Jimenez Malla hung from the facade of St. Peter's.

Florentino Asensio Barroso, the bishop of Barbastro, Spain, where Jimenez Malla died, was also beatified yesterday. Asensio Barroso was also killed by Republican forces.

Also beatified were Gaetano Catanoso, a prison chaplain in southern Italian and founder of a small religious order who died in 1963; Enrico Rebuschini, a northern Italian priest who died in 1938; and Maria Encarnacion Rosal, a 19th century Guatemalan nun. Since he became pope in 1978, John Paul has beatified 768 people and canonized 276, more than all of this century's other popes put together.

Endangered Species Act ignored by government; Clinton draws criticism

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration increasingly is striking deals with states and private companies to protect fish and wildlife, ditching the Endangered Species Act as a regulatory club except in the most dire circumstances.

The tactic landed the administration in hot water this spring with three federal judges who felt the law should have been used to protect jaguars in the Southwest, lynx in the Northwest and the Barton Springs salamander in Texas.

It also has drawn heavy fire from environmentalists, who have grown increasingly critical of President Clinton's willingness to bargain away the law's stringent protections.

"We are seeing a very disturbing pattern here," said Mark Hubbard of the Oregon Natural Resources Council, a nonprofit conservation group based in Portland, Ore., that has sued the government for what it considers lax enforcement.

"We have gone from surprised to disappointed to just plain angry with the Clinton administration over their refusal to protect endangered species," he said.

Architects of the administration's policy say negotiating with state and private land owners to save species makes sense in a political climate where property rights carry much weight. The carrot works better than the stick, they argue.

"It is not a win to see a species driven to the verge of extinction and then be able to save the last of that species by hammering someone with the Endangered Species Act," said Katie McGinty, director of the White House Council on Environmental Quality.

The administration is using the law "to its fullest and most creative extent and reaching out to save those rare ecosystems by working in partnership with people who own the land," McGinty said.

By year's end, the administration will have negotiated habitat conservation plans covering more than 18 million acres of state and privately owned land.

Such pragmatism is no virtue in the eyes of Clinton's environmental critics.

Typically it is a new way to get around enforcing the Endangered Species Act," Sierra Club lobbyist Melinda Pierce said of the habitat conservation plans.

"It's just feel-good politics. They have junked the law," said Mike Bader of the Missoula, Mont.-based Alliance for the Wild Rockies, which wants federal protection for the bull trout in the northern Rocky Mountains.

Environmentalists' biggest beef is with a "no surprises" clause in the habitat conservation plans, which promises land owners that if they fulfill protection criteria, they'll be insulated from any future federal conservation requirements. "It's the only way companies would ever enter into such agreements," said Chris West, vice president of the Northwest Forestry Association in Portland, Ore.

In March, federal judges in Arizona, Texas and Washington state chided the administration for refusing to order protection for the jaguar, Barton Springs salamander and lynx.

In the case of the jaguar, the Fish and Wildlife Service was ordered to declare the rare cat endangered and set aside land to protect it.

In Washington, the agency was told to reconsider its decision to keep the lynx off the list; only a few hundred of the cats rema'n in a handful of states.

"The Fish and Wildlife Service has consistently ignored the analysis of its expert biologists," wrote U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler in Seattle.

In Austin, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton ruled that Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt had violated the Endangered Species Act after "strong political pressure was applied to the secretary to withdraw the proposed listing of the salamander."

Babbitt subsequently declared the salamander threatened. But environmentalists were up in arms again when the National Marine Fisheries Service decided April 25 against federal protection for Oregon's coastal coho salmon, opting instead to give the state a chance to try its own $30 million recovery plan with support from the timber industry.

Environmentalists say an industry pledge to log more responsibly and to help restore damaged stream beds was little consolation for the Oregon coastal coho, whose stock has dropped from as 'many'as 1.4 million in the early 1900s to about 80,000 today.

Financial Aid Voice Response System
Available at a phone near you
Designed to improve student services, the University of Massachusetts - Amherst Financial Aid Voice Response System allows you to:
• Get general financial aid information
• Check the status of documents
• Check the status of your financial aid awards
Have your PIN number and Social Security Number ready, use a touch-tone phone and dial:
(413) 546-8100
It's that simple!
Quick Commands to help you navigate FA-VRS:
• Press 1 to get general information.
• Press 2 to get to your own file.
• Press 8 to speak with a financial aid representative.
• Press # to return to the main menu.
• Press #0 to exit the system.

wmua 91.1 fm
department directors needed
paid positions!
is a student run 1000 watt radio station with a broadcast radius of 25 miles around Amherst. We have been in continuous operation from UMass since 1949 and play a vital role in bringing a wide variety of Music, UMass Sports, News, & Public Affairs to our listeners year round.
NEWS. SPORTS. MUSIC. PRODUCTION. TRAINING. PUBLIC AFFAIRS. PUBLICITY. ALANA AFFAIRS. TELETHON. WOMEN'S AFFAIRS. OFFICE COORDINATOR. VISUAL MEDIA. UNDERWRITING.
These are paid positions for a complete job description and an application, stop by WMUA in Campus Center room 105 or call 545-2876 for more information.
completed applications are due by Thursday May 8th

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/tro/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Slinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prentes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

2,000 years of hatred

Do you know who Torquemada was?

I will give you a hint, it is not the name of a car. He was the Great Spanish Inquisitor who expelled the Jews from Spain.

What relevance upon history does the day that Columbus set sail for the Americas have, besides the obvious age of exploration?

If you simply think of the slaughter of millions of natives in both Americas, then you are overlooking other repercussions. The Jews were expelled from Britain on that day about 800 years ago. We were also expelled from Spain on the day that Columbus set sail, and about two or three years later on that very day Jews were expelled from Portugal.

"Looking solely upon my Holocaust education in high school, it was essentially taught as a bizarre anomaly of history, not the culmination of 2,000 years of institutionalized hate."

Matthew Wurtzel

This week we remember the Holocaust, its victims and its survivors, but we often neglect its history and its aftermath.

Looking solely upon my Holocaust education in high school, it was essentially taught as a bizarre anomaly of history, not the culmination of 2,000 years of institutionalized hate.

Jews lived in ghettos long before Hitler was born, not because they wanted to, but because the Catholic Church dictated it. If you visit a medieval Catholic church, you are likely to find a statue of two women. One stands proud with her book to her chest, and a staff in her other hand. She is looking down upon her twin whose book has fallen to her side, her staff is crumbling, she is slouching as she walks a little behind her sister, and her eyes are covered. The proud woman represents Christianity and the broken twin is Judaism.

The Catholic Church is not the only perpetrator of medieval anti-Semitism, nor is Hitler the only modern ruler who practiced it. The proud Cossacks of the Eastern Orthodox Church use to ride on horseback into Polish and Russian Shtetls (jewish villages), behead men and then rape their wives. These atrocities, known as pogroms, were often authorized by the Tsars of Russia.

The Holocaust is evidently a climax of this hatred. Pollution and depleting ozone are not the worst evils of industrialization, but rather the Holocaust was. The Nazis used German Industrial expertise to devise "the most efficient final solution to the Jewish question."

However, most people never learn about these other atrocities committed against Jews. The Jewish question only appears in most high school history books when students study the Holocaust. However, students don't learn that Napoleon wrestled with this question — luckily he did not choose to slaughter France's Jews.

Even Holocaust education omits some truths. We are taught that the United States government did not know what was going on in Germany, but the truth is Roosevelt knew.

Gentiles often do not learn about the dark side of western civilization that the Church practiced. The post-World War II generations looked back upon the Holocaust and the War, and attempted to learn from it. Christians re-examined their practices and teachings. They purged the practice of hate, and replaced it with tolerance.

However, those who purged hate also purged the history that accompanied it, doing a grave disservice to future generations of all persuasions. Secular public education also candy coats history. The Constitution, people argue, bars teachers in public schools from talking about the evils of any religion because it might seem as if the government is favoring one religion or another.

The result is a candy-coated history that omits 2,000 years of hatred, making the Holocaust seem like a bizarre aberration. Candy-coating history does not help anyone. Today we are just as likely to repeat those evils. The next victims may not be the Jews, but could be any other minority anywhere in the world.

Today we must remain vigilant against such atrocities whether it happens to Bosnians, Hutus, Tutsis, Sikhs, Hindus, Kurds, etc. We must not only keep the history of the Holocaust alive, but that of all the achievements and evils of history.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

A Farewell to Yarns

Well, this is it. My very last column. The big hurrah. I've been writing in this windowless dungeon for over three years now, spewing forth my opinionated drivel from the pages of this fine daily publication week in and week out (mostly week out) for five semesters now.

So, what sage advice do I have left for the students of the future? What little nuggets of wisdom can I offer everyone? On what brilliant note will I punch out, leaving the University of Massachusetts in my past while I blaze a glorious trail towards the future?

Evan Young

It's very simple, really.

Become a Collegian columnist.

Wouldn't that be cool? Think about it.. Imagine seeing "/enter your name here/ is a Collegian columnist" after every one of your articles! It's like becoming a small-time hero! Fame, fortune and glory can all be yours; all you need to do it have an expressible opinion and English 112 or equivalent.

You see, unbeknownst to the general population at UMass, being a columnist down here comes with perks. Yes, there is a benefit package for writers. This package includes free photocopies. Ever have to photocopy a paper, or a book, or even just a few pages of a periodical from the library? Of course you have — we all have. Copies can be as much as 25 cents in the library!

Well, if you are a Collegian columnist, pay no more! Right around the corner from where I am sitting are piles and piles of blank paper, stacked neatly next to a sparkling Xerox machine, just waiting to be used by you. Want to guess what is next to the Xerox machine?

Free coffee!! Piping hot, always fresh — and unless you like Coffee-Mate, just bring your own milk.

You know what else is in the package? E-mail access! No long lines, no "server is full" crap, just beautiful, empty screens waiting to be logged onto. You can check your e- mail quickly and simply, at your own convenience, in between classes, without any strings attached. Except, of course, writing columns.

And really, writing columns is a pretty cool thing to do. I have thoroughly enjoyed it. People recognize your name in your classes. You know how gratifying it is to watch someone you don't know reading your article and laughing? Or crying? It's a great feeling to go up to a stranger and ask "So, what do you think of this guy?" and point to your own column. It's even better when they say "Wow he's great! I'd love to meet him sometime!" Guys — it's borderline terrific when these strangers are women who want to sleep with you.

Of course, with the good comes the bad, and whenever you voice your opinion about something there will always be people around who would love to disagree with you. I have been called a everything from a misogynist Nazi to a Neanderthal. I have had burly homosexuals actually come down to this room looking to kick my ass into sympathetic oblivion. I have had angry women chant my name below my dorm window. A long time ago, I got an anonymous call from a girl who said "you'll never get laid on this campus again."

Well.

I guess you just have to roll with the punches and live without regret, no matter how stupid some of the things that you write are (or were in the past). Be a Collegian columnist, and you will find that your friends stick with you, they stand by what you say, they call you an idiot, they point out what's wrong and what's right and what's racy. No matter what, you will always have feedback. You will learn what it means when someone says to you "Hey. I, uh, read your article yesterday."

But the most important thing; you will be doing while others are not. You will be making a difference, no matter how small or large, no matter how twisted or goofy or unintelligent. People will read what you say, they will think about it, and in some small way, you will change the way they live and think. This may sound laughable, but it is entirely true.

Just make sure you title your columns yourself; night editors can come up with some pretty zany stuff. "The Flaunting Freaky World?" Is that a joke?

So here it is... I am on to greener pastures. To everyone who read my articles, thank you. Thank you for your support. To everyone out there reading this: you have a right to be heard no matter what you say or think. Contrary to what you may believe, people are paying attention to this newspaper, and the only way to keep that true is for you to come down here and submit your two cents. Every single opinion matters.

So become a Collegian columnist.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

You can help

Daniel Bodah

Imagine it's one of the first raw, sunny days of spring and you've take your puppy out to walk around Northampton and enjoy the weather. Eventually you both sit down on a bench by the City Hall and watch all the people walking along Main Street. A lot of the passers–by stop to pet your puppy and talk about how cute she is.

One of them is a little girl in a bright pink dress, maybe six years old. She sees the puppy and breaks away from her mom and her brother immediately to come say "hi." You're surprised to see that she has a big bruise under her eye. And more bruises on her arms — which are also scratched up as if by thorns or a jagged piece of metal.

The girl seems quite confident with the dog, not at all afraid like most kids her age are. For a minute she rubs the puppy's head and throat, saying "Oh, you're such a cute doggy!" Then her mother calls her in a very concerned voice and she runs to catch up. They disappear around the corner a moment later.

According to the United States Department of Health and Human Services Child Maltreatment report of 1994, there were 56,178 reported cases of child abuse in Massachusetts that year. That's approximately one of every 25 children below the age of 18. This also means there were on average 154 reported cases of child abuse per day.

What's more, the vast majority of cases of child abuse are never reported. How many children are beaten every day in this state? In the Pioneer Valley? on our block? We can probably never know.

A lot has been written about the causes and effects of child abuse, but here I'd like to talk instead about practical considerations. For instance, the questions that ran through my mind as this young, bruised girl was petting my dog. "Where did those black and blue spots and scrapes come from? If this girl's being abused, what can I do to stop it?"

Firstly, it's important to remember that kids play hard and can get hurt that way. It doesn't do anyone any good to accuse a parent of abuse if their kid fell down by accident.

Secondly, and probably hardest to accept, is the fact that there really isn't much you can do unless you actually witness the abuse happening. Although the Department of Social Services can send an investigator to the home to see if kids are being mistreated, they are heavily loaded with very serious cases. Parents can find it fairly easy to intimidate children into denying the situation, and a DSS investigator may not have the time to look below the surface of the home environment.

If you actually witness abuse happening, there is much more you can do. Contacting DSS remains a possibility. Calling the police is also an option. However, both are institutions, and when they act to take over care of a kid, the kid is in essence institutionalized. While taking a child out of an abusive home can be good, being a ward of the state or in a foster home opens up other problems for children.

Perhaps the best thing one can do is to personally intervene when witnessing abuse. However, it is important to do so in a positive manner. Yelling at the abuser, threatening them and other combative reactions do nothing to create peace, which is really what the child needs. In fact, abusive parents confronted with an angry stranger may take their feelings out on the child later.

Trying to create peace is the real goal of intervention. When a dad at the grocery store smacks his kid on the face, ask him if everything's okay or offer to help watch the child while the dad shops. When you hear your neighbor screaming at the kids, try to break the angry atmosphere. Of course, in a very violent or chronic abuse situation it is probably better to call in DSS or the police, but personal intervention should be the basic line of resistance against abuse.

Above all, we must take child abuse seriously. It is everyone's problem when hundreds of children are beaten across this state every day.

Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Honors College will bring affordable quality education

To the Editor:

The idea of an Honors College on this campus has raised many questions about elitism. However, the establishment may actually save people from the traps of elitism.

In Massachusetts, students who are motivated to learn and who wish to go to a college that is well respected, for whatever reason, usually choose not to come to UMass. Some decide to pay over $30,000 a year to attend college elsewhere. Some have to come to UMass because it is what they can afford. If these students lived in California or North Carolina, they could forgo this ridiculous fee and attend Berkeley or UNC–Chapel Hill, and get an exceptional education at a nationally known and respected school. Students in Massachusetts do not have this option.

UMass offers a phenomenal faculty and more majors and resources that can be utilized in four years. Yet its reputation in this state does not match what it offers. If people were to know what was at UMass they might save themselves thousands of dollars a year by attending this university. An Honors College at UMass could change this. No one should feel that they have to pay $30,000 a year in order to get a respected college degree, especially when there is the option of an exceptional education at a reduced price.

It is unfortunate that within Massachusetts attending UMass is not always considered the wisest decision. This opinion is based on misconception. Those who feel this way often know nothing of what is offered here. When I decided to attend UMass as a high school senior my friends actually took pity on me. Now I pity them for their upcoming loan payments. Knowledge is knowledge. It shouldn't matter from what school you receive your education. But we all know that in society's eyes it does.

As long as you, as a student, are willing to put in the time and effort you will find success. UMass can help you find this. We as students here know this. If we want to insure a diversity of people, and a diversity of quality ideas being exchanged, we must attract intelligent, creative and hard- working students. The Honors College at UMass–Amherst would bring these students here and save them money as well. The Pioneer Valley has everything to offer students from poets to engineers, from geniuses to the average student. And so, UMass–Amherst is the ideal place for this program.

If I had known all that UMass had to offer as a graduating high school senior, I would not have even applied to other schools. Fortunately, I got lucky. Many of my friends are paying too much money to attend private schools that offer an education equivalent to that given here. If they weren't so concerned with the names of the institutions they were attending, they might have saved themselves years of loan payments. We cannot change the fact that people want to go to "big name" schools if they want to go to these places and can afford them, fine. I wish these people well. However, those who are qualified to go to these or other high-priced quality institutions, but cannot afford them, should feel that the state they pay their taxes to gives them the option of an equal education at a better price.

Catherine M. Burns
Orchard Hill

Objects to Objectivists

To the Editor:

Last week, as I sat through a history lecture, my attention was suddenly drawn to a poster that had been put up at the front of the room. On this poster was a drawing of President Bill Clinton depicted as Uncle Sam. Above him stood the words 'Clinton wants your life!' in bold black letters. My mind began to drift, wondering what this poster could be trying to tell me. However, I remembered why I was in that room in the first place and gave my attention to my instructor again. By the time, the class ended, I had forgotten about what I had noticed earlier, and left the lecture hall without getting any closer look at it.

My curiosity as to what the contents of this poster said were eating away at me. You can imagine how happy I was when I saw it printed in the April 28 edition of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. This happiness soon turned to anger once I read this bulletin. Clearly this is a wan attack on President Clinton's support of servitude. It rejects his Service Summit, which was held in Philadelphia from April 27–29, and claims that "they," meaning those leading the summit, "want you to feel guilty for living — if you're not living for others." They don't want us to feel guilt for fending for ourselves. They want us to know the benefit and importance of helping our fellow man.

This poster, which was put out by the UMass Objectivist Club, states that individuals have the right to do what makes them happy. Isn't it possible that some people are brought happiness, by, dare I say it, helping out people. If they aren't, then they don't have to volunteer for servitude, or anything schools that offer an education equivalent to that given here. If they weren't so concerned with the names of the institutions they were attending, they might have saved themselves years of loan payments. We cannot change the fact that people want to go to "big name" schools if they want to go to these places and can afford them, fine. I wish these people well. However, those who are qualified to go to these or other high-priced quality institutions, but cannot afford them, should feel that the state they pay their taxes to gives them the option of an equal education at a better price.

Catherine M. Burns
Orchard Hill

Objects to Objectivists

To the Editor:

Last week, as I sat through a history lecture, my attention was suddenly drawn to a poster that had been put up at the front of the room. On this poster was a drawing of President Bill Clinton depicted as Uncle Sam. Above him stood the words 'Clinton wants your life!' in bold black letters. My mind began to drift, wondering what this poster could be trying to tell me. However, I remembered why I was in that room in the first place and gave my attention to my instructor again. By the time, the class ended, I had forgotten about what I had noticed earlier, and left the lecture hall without getting any closer look at it.

My curiosity as to what the contents of this poster said were eating away at me. You can imagine how happy I was when I saw it printed in the April 28 edition of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. This happiness soon turned to anger once I read this bulletin. Clearly this is a wan attack on President Clinton's support of servitude. It rejects his Service Summit, which was held in Philadelphia from April 27–29, and claims that "they," meaning those leading the summit, "want you to feel guilty for living — if you're not living for others." They

The Ed/Op desk will be holding a workshop for all writers interested in contributing to the page in the Fall semester. The desk is also accepting applications for Associate Editors for the Fall semester. For more information on either the workshop or applying for a position, stop by the Collegian to talk to Mike Burke or Dan Bodah. Mike and Dan can also be reached at 545–1491.

Black Affairs

Monday, May 5, 1997

Supreme court justice allows suit against Motel 6

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Supreme Court justice refused on Friday to prohibit people who are suing Motel 6 for alleged racial bias from publishing ads seeking others who accuse the motel chain of discrimination.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy rejected, without comment, an emergency request in which lawyers for the national motel chain sought to block what they described as a nationwide advertising effort.

Kennedy was told the ad campaign, an effort to communicate with potential candidates for a class-action lawsuit, could begin as early as this weekend. A federal appeals court previously had refused to block the start of any such campaign.

Janet Jackson and Delois Evans, both Palm Beach County sheriff's detectives, say they were told there were no rooms available at a Punta Gorda, Fla., motel on March 2, 1994, and that a white woman got a room 30 minutes later.

Officials for the Motel 6 at Punta Gorda say it was understaffed that day and no clean room was available when the two black women sought one. When they later tried to rent a room, they were told all rooms had been rented.

"We regret the incident, we apologize. But it was not racially motivated," Emmel Gossen, a spokesman for the Dallas-based Motel 6 Multipurpose Inc., said after the detectives' federal lawsuit was filed last year.

The detectives' lawsuit has been consolidated with one in which several former employees of Motel 6 contend they were told to discriminate against certain nonwhite guests.

That lawsuit also was joined by people who sought Motel 6 rooms in Texas, South Dakota and Tallahassee, Fla. The consolidated legal action alleges that Motel 6 regularly discriminates with policies that include:

•Assigning rooms to guests in separate sections of motels based on their race.

•Telling black and other nonwhites there are no rooms available when there are.

•Giving black and other nonwhites poorer quality rooms.

•Charging blacks and other nonwhites higher room rates.

The plaintiffs reportedly plan to publish in national newspapers and magazines notices seeking to hear from people who believe they were victims of racial bias by Motel 6.

Such a notice "will cause immeasurable and irreparable harm to Motel 6's customer and employee relations," Kennedy was told.

Eddie Murphy picks up transvestite in order to warn him off the streets

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Eddie Murphy said he was just trying to be a nice guy when he picked up a cross-dressing male prostitute as undercover sheriff's deputies looked on.

Murphy was pulled over minutes after the man got into his car Friday morning. The prostitute was arrested on a warrant, but authorities said Murphy had not broken any law.

"It's not the first hooker that I've helped out... I've seen hookers on corners and I'll pull over and they'll go, 'Oh, you're Eddie Murphy, oh my God,' and I'll empty my wallet out to help," Murphy told television's "Entertainment Tonight."

"I'm just being a nice guy," he said.

Murphy was followed for about two miles by an unmarked sheriff's car that was working in a "prostitution abatement zone," said Lt. Mike Ford, a sheriff's spokesman.

Atisone Seiuli, 20, of Los Angeles was arrested on a prior warrant for prostitution and jailed in lieu of $15,000 bail. Marty

"I love my wife and I'm not gay. I'm married with three children. I'm not going to do anything to jeopardize my health."

Singer, Murphy's attorney, said Murphy did not know the man was a transvestite. Murphy said he gave the man a lecture about the dangers of the working the streets before letting him into his vehicle.

The 36-year-old Beverly Hills Cop actor said he was shocked at all the fuss in part "because I wasn't arrested."

"It wasn't like we drove to some dark spot to do something," Murphy said. "I love my wife and I'm not gay. I'm married with three children. I'm not going to do anything to jeopardize my health."

In 1995, actor Hugh Grant pleaded no contest to lewd conduct with prostitute Estelle Thompson, also known as Divine Brown. Grant was fined $1,180 and placed on two years' probation.

Murphy vaulted into stardom in the 1980s with a series of hit films, including 48 Hours and the first two "Beverly Hills Cop movies in which he played a wise-cracking detective. Last year's The Nutty Professor was also a hit, and Murphy is receiving a reported $17 million for an upcoming remake of Dr. Doolittle.

Eddie Murphy

Louis Farrakhan and the white conservatives

Politics makes strange bedfellows. Consider the case of Louis Farrakhan. Two years ago, at the Million Man March, Farrakhan symbolized for many, a strong black challenge to white authority. But, even then there were signs that many white Republicans were comfortable with Farrakhan's message of self help, entrepreneurism and social conservatism.

The budding romance between Farrakhan and white conservatives finally flowered several weeks ago at a luxury retreat in Boca Raton, Fla. Farrakhan was the guest of Jude Wanniski, an influential right–wing economist who has served as an advisor to both Ronald Reagan and former Vise–Presidential candidate Jack Kemp. The guest list at Wanniski's gathering read like the directory of white conservatism: Robert Novak and Rowland Evans, conservative columnists; House Budget Chairman John Kasich; and Republican Senator John Ashcroft.

Robert Novak, a bitter opponent of both affirmative action and civil rights in general, cooed like a lovestruck teenager over Farrakhan. Novak wrote that Farrakhan, "was knocking on the Republican's Party door," and argued that "some response might be appropriate."

Novak understood that in the context of the American political system, "Minister Farrakhan has been branded an anti–Semite and no repudiation of bigotry by him will suffice. He is viewed with such loathing by the Jewish community that any effort to talk with him to pursue racial harmony is prohibited." Yet, from the standpoint of white conservatism, Novak and others have recognized that Farrakhan shares many of their reactionary values. For example, black conservative radio commentator, Armstrong Williams, praised Farrakhan's emphasis on self–help, declaring to Novak "He sounds like us."

However, the real story behind the Boca Raton meeting was far more complex than the recent headlines revealed. What was really at work was a convergence of parallel interests, rather than a political marriage. White conservatives had come calling to Farrakhan because both parties recognized they can use each other for their own respective purposes.

Let us try to interpret this even from the perspective of Farrakhan. The Million Man March of October 1995 was unquestionably the largest public gathering of African Americans in U.S. history. The NAACP and establishment politicians clearly have lost legitimacy and touch with the masses of their own people. Farrakhan should have become a major U.S. figure at that time, because no other public leader could have brought one million people into the streets anywhere in the country.

However, Farrakhan was unable to consolidate any lasting political capital from this massive event. The National African–American Leadership Summit, headed by Benjamin Chavis, proved to be badly organized and ineffective. There was little political follow–up with the hundreds of local march organizing committees.

Outside of the black community, a number of both liberal and conservative white leaders still refused to have anything to do with him. The Nation of Islam's (NOI) private security firm had been pushed out of contracts protecting public housing projects with the Federal Government. Farrakhan and NOI speakers were often harassed and barred from campuses. Indirectly, black leaders who have had dealings with Farrakhan in the past were severely pressured to denounce him. The best example here is Kweisi Mfume, head of the NAACP. When Mfume was a member of Congress, it was not unusual for him to visit the local NOI temple in Baltimore. Mfume himself, as head of the Congressional Black Caucus, had endorsed efforts to build unity between black elected officials, the NAACP then led by Chavis and the NOI.

Farrakhan's recent controversial meeting with white conservatives in Boca Raton, Fla., highlights his efforts to gain access to the political mainstream. For example, Farrakhan has publicly denounced anti–Semitism on many occasions, yet virtually no one acknowledges his self- criticisms. At a Feb. 3, 1994 news conference, the Minister declared: "I denounce anti–Semitism in all its forms and manifestations... If I believe that I were an anti–Semite, meaning somebody who hates somebody simply because of their faith, I would be unfit to call myself a servant of God." Nevertheless, critics such as Abraham Foxman of the Anti-Defamation League, permanently branded Farrakhan a hopeless bigot.

From Farrakhan's point of view, he had to find a way to establish a dialogue with prominent white leaders in order to escape the charges of anti–Semitism and ethnic intolerance. As Farrakhan explained in a television interview on March 30, 1997, "How can you change me (and) understand me" if public officials and Jewish leaders refuse to talk to him. Farrakhan added "This no talk policy is irrational, nonsensical and inappropriate if we wish to solve the racial divide."

Dr. Manning Marable

Farrakhan quietly held a meeting with Edgar Bronfman, the president of Seagrams liquor and the World Jewish Congress, in the Spring of 1996. When the media leaked this information, Bronfman was pressured to denounce Farrakhan as "the incarnation of evil." When Jack Kemp praised a statement by Farrakhan renouncing anti–Semitism he was quickly forced to backpedal.

The one public figure within the white conservative establishment who was intrigued with a potential dialogue with Farrakhan was Jude Wanniski. Last December, Farrakhan invited Wanniski to dinner at his Chicago home, and the two engaged in a lively five–hour conversation. Wanniski had become convinced that Farrakhan could be converted to embrace Reaganomics — the bankrupt idea that one could drastically cut taxes and at the same time actually raise government revenues. Wanniski later declared Farrakhan was such a willing convert to supply–side economic theory that "he drank it in as if he had just come upon an oasis in the desert."

Wanniski reasured Farrakhan that he understood "that Jewish leaders fear he could lead the black electorate away from the Democratic Party and into opposition of support for Israel."

In a public letter to Abraham Foxman, Wanniski wrote that Farrakhan had expressed the belief at the Boca Raton conference that he "knows he must come to terms with the Jewish community." Farrakhan also understood that "the ADL will be the very last to come aboard, as [this] organization is the most uncompromising watchdog on the lookout for threats to the Jewish community."

Wanniski's efforts failed to impress most white political leaders and the media. Opinion journals from Tire Nation to The New Republic, denounced Wanniski and Farrakhan. An editorial in William Buckley's magazine The National Review (April 21, 1997, issue) declared that Farrakhan was "a fraud who rakes in millions from poor people who he had deluded into thinking they are contributing to black economic development. And he espouses a sort of inverted nationalism which feeds on the alienation of black Americans from their country." The New Republic questioned whether Farrakhan was a "conservative. He may know some of the words, but he is singing them to a different tune."

From the vantage point of black America, we must ask ourselves where is Farrakhan going? Clearly he is seeking acceptance in the corridors of power. Nevertheless, his economic and social philosophy embraces the worst features of Reagan and Dole's reactionary agenda. Farrakhan is a black nationalist who lacks the radical program of a Malcolm X. If Farrakhan's budding relationship with white Republican conservatives developes into a permanent alliance, the real interests of black working class and poor people will be sacrificed.

Dr. Manning Marable is a professor of history and the director of the Institute for Research in African–American Studies, Columbia University, New York City. "Along the Color Line" appears in over 300 publications throughout the U.S. and internationally.

Ex-soldier convicted in racially motivated murder of N.C. couple

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — In a case that prompted an Army review of extremism in the ranks, one of two ex-soldiers accused of killing a black couple was convicted of first-degree murder and now may face the death penalty.

Malcolm Wright, of Louisville, Ky., was found guilty Friday of two counts of murder and a conspiracy charge in the deaths of Michael James and Jackie Burden in December 1995.

Wright, 22, could be sentenced to death even though his co-defendant and the triggerman James Burmeister received a lifetime prison term earlier this year. Following the verdict, Superior Court Judge Coy Brewer denied a motion to rule out the death penalty for Wright.

Wright's sentencing phase was set for today.

Relatives of the victims were relieved but did not celebrate the verdict.

"Two years," said Ira Freeman, Burden's father, as he walked out of the courtroom. "It's been a long two years."

Wright and Burmeister of Thompson, Pa., who are white, were charged after James and Burden were shot as they walked down a dim Fayetteville street.

Prosecutors said Burmeister, 21, killed the couple for no other reason than to earn a spider web tattoo like the one Wright has on his left elbow. The tattoo was a sign among neo-Nazi skinheads at Fort Bragg that the wearer had killed a black or a homosexual. "He was just as guilty as Burmeister," said Georgia Burden, Jackie Burden's aunt.

The defense argued Wright was guilty only of being racist and that he did not know Burmeister planned to kill.

The murders resulted in an Army investigation that found little evidence of extremist activity in the service, but turned up 22 Fort Bragg soldiers, all white, with ties or sympathies toward extremist groups.

Another former soldier, Randy Meadows Jr., 22, of Mulkeytown, Ill., made a plea arrangement with the state and testified against both Burmeister and Wright.

The three accused soldiers were kicked out of the Army, where they had been in the elite 82nd Airborne Division.

Farrakhan indictment dropped against Malcolm X daughter

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An indictment against a daughter of Malcolm X has been dismissed, two years after she reached a deal to avoid trial in a murder-for-hire plot to kill Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.

U.S. District Judge James Rosenbaum signed the order last Thursday, quietly concluding an agreement reached May 1, 1995, in which charges against Qubilah Shabazz were deferred for two years. Shabazz was charged with plotting to hire a hit man to kill Farrakhan. On the day the trial was to start, the government agreed to drop charges against her if she underwent chemical dependency treatment and committed no crimes.

Shabazz signed an affidavit saying she accepted responsibility for her conduct but maintained her innocence.

Shabazz was four–years old when she and her three sisters accompanied their pregnant mother to New York City's Audubon Ballroom on Feb. 21, 1965, to hear Malcolm X speak. He was shot and killed as they looked on.

Three people with ties to the Nation of Islam eventually were convicted in the assassination.

Farrakhan denied being involved but conceded that he fueled anti-Malcolm X sentiment. He has said he believes Shabazz was set up by the government.

Shabazz, 36, works at a radio station in Texas, where she is in regular contact with federal authorities, said Larry Leventhal, one of her attorneys.

Black Affairs is Dead...
without dedicated writers to keep it alive.
The Black Affairs Page is looking for creative, thought provoking* writers
to represent on the page.
If you've been meaning to get involved, this is your time.
All members of the ALANA community with an interest are urged to contact Humphrey brown III at 546–0977 or come down to the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

A method to the madness

Gregory H. Casmir

Two weeks ago, I had the privilege of being part of the annual ALANA Honor Society banquet that honors all ALANA students for achieving academic excellence.

Looking around the room, I was proud to see how many young men and women of color were participating in the ceremony. But I was also amused by the fact that some of the people receiving awards were the very same people I see every weekend tripping out of their minds at parties. It's kind of a sharp contrast. A very important one to point out.

You see, it's these people who have mastered the college system. Many students feel that in order to clock a 3 point– something GPA, you need to spend hours in the library laboriously sifting through tons of information. But that's not true. It's all about time management.

In college, we aren't confined to the same regular six hour workaday that we were in high school. Therefore, it's possible to spend a good portion of your weekday engaging in rigorous academic activity, and still make time to waste a perfectly good weekend at an X party.

It's these people who have their priorities in order. Once people realize that school comes first and foremost, then all the rest of it: RSO activity, sports, jobs and partying, will all fall into place as well. The time for the things that are most important to you will be found if you are committed to completing the tasks set before you.

And essentially, that's what we're failing to realize: everything that we are assigned to do in class is a task that must be completed. We need to change the conversations with ourselves, as Charles Barron once said. If we think of our work as necessary tasks, then we will simply proceed to go about doing them. But this is not to say that our tasks will be simple, but at least our mindframe when approaching these tasks will be different.

However if we waste time thinking of our schoolwork as onerous chores, then a good portion of the time that we could actually be doing them will be spent complaining about how much work we have to do. This is kind of funny in a sense in that, well, what else are we here for anyway? To do work.

Are you feeling me now?

As ALANA students we must never forget that the breaks white students are privileged with, we do not have. We have to work twice as hard as they do because our retention rate is something to be desired. We must never forget the sacrifices that our parents are making to send us here, or of those ALANA students who came before us when UMass was a much more unfriendly climate for students of color. The Men of Color Conference came as a direct result of the alarming number of black students who didn't come back after Spring '96. The main focus of the conference should have been similar to that of the Leadership Conference. It should have been mostly about teaching leadership skills and networking. It shouldn't have centered around about making us realize that black men are an academically endangered species.

The ALANA Honor Society is something that we should all strive to be a part of during our stint here at UMass. Being part of it empowered me with a sense of pride in that I was recognized by my peers as a student who worked hard. It's a gratifying feeling to be honored for all those hours that one spent cooped up studying in a cold room when everyone else was out partying.

None of us would be here if we lacked the ability to do the work. But being inside the door doesn't mean that we're all entitled to a seat. We all have to work harder and harder every semester to show ourselves and everyone else that we deserve to be here and it's an honor for them to have us.

Gregory H. Casimir is a Collegian columnist.

Cosby killer may have alibi

By Constance Sommer
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A 16-year-old boy in jail for robbery claims he can provide an alibi for the teen-ager accused of killing Bill Cosby's son, authorities said last Friday.

The unidentified juvenile offender told his case worker he was with 18-year-old Mikail Markhasev and another teen in Tijuana, Mexico, on Jan. 16, the night that 27-year-old Ennis Cosby was killed, said Julio Calderon, a spokesman for the California Youth Authority.

Markhasev is accused of shooting Bill Cosby's only son on Jan. 16 while he changed a flat tire on his Mercedes Benz convertible. Border agents questioned the third teen about residency documents, which means that the Immigration and Naturalization Service may have a file confirming the juvenile's story, KCAL-TV said.

The jailed 16-year-old was apparently a member of the same gang as Markhasev, Calderon said. The youth was arrested for armed robbery in April 1996, put on probation and later taken into custody after he ran away. On Tuesday, he told his case worker that he, Markhasev and the third teen were visiting another friend who was jailed in Tijuana on Jan. 16, Calderon said.

"We don't know exactly what we're dealing with here," Calderon said. "It could be just a homeboy trying to give another homeboy an alibi."

Arts & Living

Monday, May 5, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Dave Matthews Band hit new low with lawsuits

Recently, I made my weekly rounds through the numerous local record stores in Amherst and Northampton. Much to my dismay, all of the bootleg CDs and cassettes were no longer on the shelves. After a little bit of investigative reporting, I found out why. Then I proceeded to go home and punch a wall.

It turns out that the Dave Matthews Band sent a blood-sucking corporate lawyer, Jules D. Zalon, to a number of Independent record stores in New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Zalon then sent his henchmen into these stores to buy bootleg recordings, only to later return with a federal marshal. All (not just Dave Matthews Band) bootlegs were confiscated and each store was threatened with a $100,000 lawsuit or given the opportunity to settle out of court for upwards of $10,000.

What the Dave Matthews Band is doing is essentially spitting in the face of both their fans and of music fans everywhere.

John Hendrickson

This is one of the most blatantly disgusting and fascist displays of rampant and unchecked greed and ego I've ever heard of. Essentially, Matthews & Co. don't want people making money off of their name without them getting a cut for themselves. Keep in mind, this is coming from a band who has been selling out arenas and sheds for the better part of the last two years and who have sold millions of albums. Ladies and gentlemen, these greedheads are bona fide rock stars and their main concern seems to be a petty power play aimed at stomping out the little guys — the independent retailers who are getting slapped with lawsuits.

Most indie stores can't afford to settle for 10 grand; shelling out $100,000 is absurd. It would kill them. The Dave Matthews Band does not need the money — their "royalties" on the relatively tiny amount of bootlegs sold would be negligible. However, many Mom-and-Pop stores are facing stiff competition from corporate chains and need the added revenue from bootlegs (which you can't get at the mall) to help them stay in business. (Case in point: look at what happened to Main St. Records in Northampton recently — they were killed off by the giants down Route 9).

Although this next offense is in no way comparable to ruining someone's livelihood, what the Dave Matthews Band is doing is essentially spitting in the face of both their fans and of music fans everywhere. Bootlegs have been an essential part of rock history since before these sniveling little brats were even potty-trained. For years, the only way to hear the famed "Million Dollar Quartet" session of Elvis Presley, Jerry Lee Lewis, Carl Perkins and Johnny Cash was on a bootleg. What if you didn't necessarily feel like waiting 30 years for the Beatles' Anthology series to hear some of their studio out-takes? What if you'd like to hear a recording of the Stones in '72, the Sex Pistols in '78, or R.E.M. playing a tiny Athens, GA, club in 1981? How about Nirvana's last show or the demos of Smashing Pumpkins' last album? What if a band you love is touring and you miss the gig? Or what if you see a truly Earth-shattering performance and would like to own it for posterity or personal enjoyment? (I'd personally like to thank Italy's Kiss The Stone label for providing me with a copy of Radiohead's Boston show last year). What if you weren't even born when Jimi Hendrix was alive — is that your fault? There's only one way to hear any of these things — bootlegs.

The Dave Matthews Band should appreciate bootlegs for what they are: perhaps the sincerest form of flattery next to starting a cover band. What are they worried about? That they might have been caught on an off-night." Or that their studio out-takes are too rough." Get over yourselves — you're human. And that's what fans love. Sometimes, hearing your heroes fall on their faces can be more fun than a perfect guitar solo. I own dozens of R.E.M. shows and some of my favorites are when the band was too drunk to see straight and wound up playing a bunch of horribly off- key covers from the '60s and '70s. Hell, R.E.M. guitarist Pete Buck collects boots of his own band! Groups like the Grateful Dead, the Black Crowes, and, yes, the Dave Matthews Band have made a practice of allowing and encouraging their fans to tape their shows. So tell me, Dave, what's the big deal and why are you such a damn hypocrite?

Recently, certain organizations in China have come under fire for pirating official albums by popular Western artists and selling these inferior reproductions as legitimate product. This, of course, is unethical and violates every type of copyright law known to man. Neither the musicians nor the record companies get any sort of compensation for the loss of sales on what is their legal property. They have fought back, and rightfully so.

The bootlegs in the Dave Matthews Band case, though, are far less harmful and the actions taken to stop them are far more insidious. The Matthews Mafia claims that his fans are getting ripped off with inferior-sounding shows. Boo-hoo. True, some boots do sound like they were made on a tape recorder stuffed down the front of some guy's pants (odds are, they probably were), but that's why most independent stores have listening stations so that the consumer can tell whether or not what they are about to buy is crap. If it's a question of financial loss, then I don't know how Matthews can sleep at night. Hey Dave — odds are that people buying bootlegs of your band already have your stinkin' records! What a greedy little turd. This is not Pearl Jam vs. Ticketmaster. The Dave Matthews Band is not fighting the good fight. Most artists tolerate and occasionally indulge their fans' desire for collectibles like bootlegs. Just because the Dave Matthews Band is the flavor-of-the-month with middle-class stoners does not give them the right to play God and ruin it for everybody else. They obviously have no respect whatsoever for their fans, their retailers, or four decades of rock n' roll tradition and attitude. I encourage everybody to reciprocate in kind; I'm calling for a complete boycott of the Dave Matthews Band's record and ticket sales. You should not give your money to a band who hold such obvious contempt for their audience. Let them wither away and rot in obscurity.

John Hendrickson is a Collegian staff member.

COURTESY DAN ERICKSON

Crash and Burn — the Dave Matthews Band are cracking down on bootleggers and threatening independent record stores.

Collegian classifieds...gosh darn it...they really DO work!

SUMMER SESSION

College Students...
...while you're home for the summer, why not take a course or two at Fitchburg Stat College? In just a few weeks, you can earn credits in English, art, education, philosophy, psychology, sociology or computer science. Both graduate and undergraduate, our credits are transferrable to virtually any college in the country.

Summer Session I
May 27 - June 28
Registration: ongoing through May 29
(Late charge assessed beginning May 13th)

Summer Session II
June 30 - August 2
Registration: ongoing through July 1
(Late charge assessed beginning June 17th)

Register Today! Phone In, Fax In, Mail In or Walk In (508) 665-3181, Fax 665-3658, E-mail: dgce@fsc.edu

PS...Call for information on exciting, amazingly affordable credit studies abroad in Rome, Italy and Hilo, Hawaii. Each program runs during the month of July.

Visit our Web Site at www.fsc.edu

Fitchburg State College
Division of Graduate and Continuing Education

Get off it. Exercise.

Want something to do next semester?
Write for Arts!
Come to the Collegian, Campus Center Basement, for more info.

From dorm... to class... to car, Avery CD TRACS™
Modular CD-ROM Storage System

Organize all your CD's
Organize & store your diskettes
Fits perfectly in your backpack

Modular—Snap in and out
CD Safe Non-Stick Sleeves

in the Campus Center 545-2619 UNIVERSITY STORE Hours: M-F 9am — 5pm Sat 11am — 4pm

AVERY Now will you use us today? www.avery.com

©1997 Avery Dennison

Language • Graphic Arts/Photography • Hotel/Travel/Restaurant Management • Math
Administration • Computer Programming • Criminal Justice • Culinary Arts • Foreign Languages/Literature • Mathematics/Physics • Media Technology • Office Administration • Social Science
Surgical Technology • Theatre/Art/Music • Allied Health • Biotechnology • Business

Make the most of your summer by earning extra credit.

This year, use your summer vacation to earn more than tuition money. Sign up for courses at Bunker Hill Community College, and earn college credits that you can apply toward your degree.

Whether you want to accelerate your college education, or relieve the pressure of a heavy courseload, you'll find Bunker Hill affordable, and a great place to learn. We offer classes days and evenings, so it's easy to develop a schedule that lets you make the most of your summer.

For more information about the Summer Sessions at Bunker Hill Community College, call (617) 228-BHCC. (2422)

We'll make it enjoyable and affordable to earn extra college credits. Call us!

BUNKER HILL COMMUNITY COLLEGE
Learning for the Real World
BOSTON • CHELSEA

BHCC is an affirmative action/equal opportunity institution.

Humbert: the peak of Valley rock

The Valley's own Humbert rocked the Bay State Saturday night. L-R – Tony Wescott, Paul Pelis, Ari Vais, Henning Ohlenbusch

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

HUMBERT
Bay State Hotel
May 3

NORTHAMPTON — The Valley music scene is stocked with innumerable bands, ranging from hardcore to country and touching upon almost everything in between. However, finding a group who has both an unfailing pop sensibility and a guitar-heavy sound (the two essential elements for any band, if you ask me) has been difficult. I'm happy to report, though, that one needs to look no farther than Humbert.

Rising from the ashes of early-'90s local legends Nag Nag Nag, Humbert's line-up revolves around the songwriting nucleus of singers/guitarists Ari Vais and Tony Westcott, with drummer Paul Pelis and new bassist Henning Ohlenbusch fleshing out and propelling the sound. Geographic relocations, personnel changes, and a general shift from traditional punk rock to a more varied and complex sound prompted the name change (incidentally, they are named after Humbert Humbert, from Nabokov's Lolita). A 1994 release, Are You Still Dancin', Darlin', reintroduced the band to the area, and extensive gigging has cemented the band's prominent local stature.

At first glance, Humbert's sound seems derived from the post-R.E.M. indie-rock of Sebadoh, Pavement and the Pixies. While each of those bands' influence is detectable to varying degrees, the roots of Humbert go much deeper and are far more twisted. Sparse minimalism, snotty irreverence, blinding thrash and sunny surf spirit all are detectible flavors in Humbert's complex musical cocktail.

Although such a bizarre list of comparisons may seem a bit schizophrenic, Humbert manages to pull them off — seamlessly. The 20-plus songs performed at the Bay State were not only testament to the band's versatility but also to their group dynamic — at no point did the influences overshadow the band's own personality. Case in point: "Crabcakes," a seemingly by-the-numbers instrumental — until a clarinet solo pushes the song into the previously unknown genre of Yiddish surf-rock. The impassioned lounge-pop of "Beautiful Lesbian" (the heterosexual Northampton male's unofficial theme song), the booze-drenched frenzy of "Packy Run," and the jangle of "Alkie" all highlight Humbert's arch sense of humor and power-pop instincts. Ace covers of the Beach Boys' "In My Room," Velvet Underground's "New Age," and the Greg Khin Band's "Break-Up Song" showed both the band's good taste as well as illustrating some of their influences.

In short, Humbert is a damn good band who put on one hell of a show. Great songs, a high energy level, and exceptional individual performances all gel into perhaps the finest live act the Valley has to offer. Look for a new album later this year and many more excellent shows like the one given Saturday night.

Keenan meets Bruins top brass to talk coaching

BOSTON (AP) — Mike Keenan, fired this season as general manager and coach of the St. Louis Blues, has met with Boston Bruins officials about their vacant coaching job, according to published reports.

"I'm extremely interested in the Boston situation," Keenan said in reports published Saturday. "It's a great opportunity and it would certainly be a challenge for any coach.

"I have a great respect for the franchise and the history of the franchise as well as the ownership and the fans."

Keenan met with Bruins assistant general manager Mike O'Connell on Thursday before O'Connell left for the World Championships in Finland. Keenan said the two likely would talk again next week when O'Connell returned.

"As I expressed to Michael, I want to develop a team and players into something spectacular," Keenan said. "The city deserves something to celebrate."

General manager Harry Sinden said the talks with Keenan began several weeks ago in Florida. Sinden said he was not concerned that Keenan would want a management role in addition to the coaching duties.

"I don't think there's any doubt he's first, and foremost, a coach," Sinden said. "If we offered him the job, and the terms were right, I think that's all he's interested in."

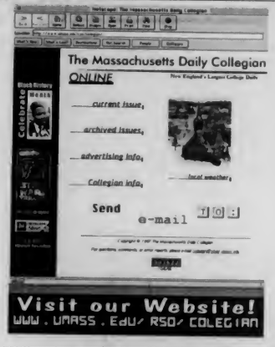
Sinden, who is launching a youth movement, also said of Keenan, "He has a good background working with young players both in Philadelphia and Chicago..."

Keenan, who coached the New York Rangers to the 1994 Stanley Cup title, is 470-318-99 overall with the Philadelphia Flyers, Chicago Blackhawks, New York and St. Louis.

The Bruins didn't make the playoffs this season for the first time in 30 years, costing Steve Kasper his job.

The Bruins also have been talking to Boston University coach Jack Parker, who was believed to be the leading candidate.

Sinden has said four candidates are being considered, but only Parker and Keenan have been identified.



JOSHUA KANJANIAN / COLLEGIAN

Post Season?

As the regular season has come to a close, the Minutewomen have their eyes on the postseason.

I see you! Why are you not writing for Sports?!
Don't let it happen again!

The biggest threat to depression is your awareness of it.
UNTREATED DEPRESSION
http://www.save.org

SELF-STORAGE
One Rate, One Payment, One Carefree Summer.

Knowledge Grows Here!
Summer Session at Stony Brook
Terms start June 2 and July 14
260 courses in 40 subjects
Day and evening classes
Low NYS tuition
Live on campus or commute

Please send me the 1997 Summer Session Bulletin, or check out our web page at Http://www.sunysb.edu/summer/
Name
Street/Box No.
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation
STONY BROOK STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
Mail coupon or call 24 hours 1-800-559-7213
E-mail: summerschool@ccmail.sunysb.edu
Or write: Summer Session Office Dept. CN, University at Stony Brook Stony Brook, NY 11794-3370

The Eli & Bessie Cohen
Kerem Summer Institute at Hebrew College, Boston
June 2-27, 1997
Apply Now For This Exciting Program! Spend One Month In Intensive Jewish Learning, Living & Self-Discovery.
Earn 6 credits
Study with distinguished faculty from:
• Hebrew College
• Brandeis
• Boston University
• Harvard
Participants from across the U.S.
Financial Aid Available
43 Hawes Street, Brookline, MA.
Phone: 617.278.4940 or 1.800.40KEREM
Email: bmesch@lynx.neu.edu
Our 4th Great Year!
Apply Now!

STUDENT TRAVEL

London	$396
Paris	554
Frankfurt	554
Rome	652
Madrid	566
Athens	720
Prague	690

All fares are round trip from Boston. Tax not included. Some restrictions apply.
STA TRAVEL We've been there.
Check out the latest fares & deals at: www.sta-travel.com
(800) 777-0112

RESULTS resume
We know what employers want.
Resumes for the real world
▶ Written by a business executive
▶ Student rates, credit cards & checks
▶ Employer lists & cover letters, too
253-9055
In your back yard at 150 Fearing Street

Auto Glass Center
• Same Day Service
• Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-2880
one mile from UMass on the bus route

Munchie Madness 3-6 PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Potato Skins Supreme 7.25 3.63
Nachos 5.95 2.98
Gorgonzola Buffalo Potatoes 6.99 3.50
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

Summertime in PARIS from $199* one way

Non-Stop B747 service from Boston
Hotels from $38 per night based on double occupancy/flexible voucher program go as you please.
Phone cards-Youth Hostel ID Cards - Metro Passes - Museum Passes - Rail Passes - All issued on the spot.
Car Rentals also available
Credit cards welcome no fee.
20% - 25% Discount to all students on scheduled carriers, with service to Spain, Italy, Germany & France.
Domestic travel also included.
AIR TRAVEL SPECIALISTS
Phone: Toll Free 888-837-6448
Fax: (310) 937-6587
Internet: http://www.francetravel.com

Information & Instructions to Seniors About the Commencement Ceremony

Pre-Commencement General Information

1. There is no pre-Commencement rehearsal.
2. Tickets are not required for your guests and there is no limit on the number of guests you may invite. There is no reserved seating. The Stadium is uncovered and the west side especially is exposed to direct sunlight. - I hope
3. Caps, gowns, tassels, and announcements, prepaid by your Graduating Fee, must be picked up at the Textbook Annex weekdays between May 5 and 23, 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m. Early May pick-up is strongly advised. Please bring your ID card so your eligibility can be confirmed. A friend can pick up the items for you if s/he knows your height, major, and ID number. On Commencement day, caps and gowns may be obtained at the Stadium -after 8:30 a.m.
4. Diplomas will be mailed after grades have been received, recorded, and processed by the Registrar's Office, and the diplomas have been engrossed. Inquiries should be addressed to the Registrar's Office, 545-0555.
5. The Index may be ordered by calling 545-0848.
6. Commencement Videotapes may be ordered by calling 545-1283.

Commencement Day General Information

1. Routes to campus/travel assistance: Please advise your guests to plan ahead to allow sufficient travel time to campus. Traffic off major routes and into the greater Amherst area may be heavy as early as 9:00 a.m., and delays may be encountered.
2. Parking and shuttle services: Guests will be directed to designated parking lots. Beginning at 8:30 a.m., free shuttle buses will circle campus every 5-10 minutes, taking you and/or your guests to the Stadium, and returning after the ceremony.
3. Snacks and souvenirs: Coffee, soft drinks, bottled water, donuts, and pastry will be available at the Stadium. University hats, banners, sweat shirts, film, and disposable cameras will also be available for purchase.
4. Food Services: Following Commencement there will be a "Food Court" adjacent to the Stadium. There will be tents from which a variety of reasonably priced items will be served including grilled quarter pounders, all-beef franks, vegan burgers, grilled chicken sandwiches, and other selections. There will be gourmet desserts, fresh fruit, chocolate-covered strawberries, and gourmet coffee. Reservations are not required. For further information about this option, call 545-2472

In addition, "Graduation Luncheons", for which reservations are required, will be featured at the Top of the Campus Restaurant (549-3216) and at the Faculty Club (545-2551). Call immediately for reservations!

Commencement Morning Schedule

1. 9:00-9:30 a.m.: Arrive at the Stadium by 9:30 a.m., carrying your cap and gown.
2. 9:30 a.m.: Robe, after which you will receive instructions from Marshals about assembling and the Processional on to the field.
3. 10:10 a.m.: Processional of Degree Candidates begins.
4. 10:30 a.m.: Ceremony begins
5. 11:45 a.m.: Ceremony ends - Alumni status begins!

What to do / Where to go / When

1. Enter via the Main Entrance Gates on the East side (side opposite the Press Box).
2. Look for the signs which will indicate which direction to turn.
3. Turn right and go to Gate 1 if the school/college of your major is:
   - BDIC
   - Continuing Education
   - Education
   - Food & Natural Resources
   - University Without Walls (UWW)
4. Turn right and go to Gate 2 if the school/college of your major is:
   - Engineering
   - Management
   - Nursing
   - Public Health & Health Sciences
5. Turn left and go to Gate 3 if the school/college of your major is:
   - Social & Behavioral Sciences (in the College of Arts and Sciences)
6. Turn left and go to Gate 4 if the school/college of your major is:
   - Humanities & Fine Arts (in the College of Arts and Sciences)
   - Natural Sciences & Math (in the College of Arts and Sciences)

NOTES:

* Each of the four gates is at the end zone ends of the Stadium.
* Each gate will be clearly marked.
* Marshals will meet you and help you to assemble for the Student Processional.

Routes to Campus (Please Alert Parents & Guests)

Traffic into the greater Amherst area may be heavy as early as 9:00 am on the morning of Undergraduate Commencement. Without careful planning, delays may be encountered.

The major points of congestion are usually at the intersection of exit 19 of I-91 and Route 9 in Northampton; Route 9 immediately after crossing the Coolidge Bridge into Hadley; and routes off Massachusetts Turnpike exit 8 (Palmer).

Local area police officers will be directing traffic at some of these points and others en route to campus.

We have arranged for radio traffic advisories to be broadcast. Tune to Amherst radio station WTTT (1430 AM) within approximately 25 miles of Amherst, or WRNX (100.9 FM), within 50 miles.

On arrival, University Police and security officers will direct drivers to designated parking lots from which free shuttle buses, with frequent departures, will take guests to and from the Stadium. For services for mobility impaired guests, please call 545-0892.

If using the Massachusetts Turnpike from the east, one of the following routes other than exit 8 (Palmer) is suggested:

Exit 7 (Ludlow):	Route 21 north to US 202 north to 9 west
Exit 5 (Chicopee):	Route 33 north to 116 north
Exit 4 (W. Springfield):	I-91 north to exit 19 to 9 east.

If traveling north via I-91, and exit 19 (Route 9 east, Northampton) is in gridlock, you may chose to continue north to exit 24, to Routes 5 and 10 north, and then immediately right to 116 south.

For other Commencement-related information please call the Visitors Center at 545-0306.

Congratulations from the entire University community!

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST — Student Affairs Special Services

1997 UNDERGRADUATE COMMENCEMENT
FINAL INFORMATION AND INSTRUCTIONS

The following general information and instructions will help you prepare for the Commencement ceremony. Since there is no pre-Commencement rehearsal, it is VERY important that you take the time to review it. Although admittedly lengthy, experience indicates that your attention to the necessary details will help to ensure that the ceremony will begin and end on time and with a minimum of confusion. It supplements the information brochure which was mailed to seniors of record as of February 17, 1997. I hope you will find the information and instructions to be helpful.

On arrival at the Stadium, staff and faculty marshals and other volunteers will assist you and answer any questions you may have. They will also prepare you for the Student Processional and escort you onto the field and to your designated seats. Please cooperate with them throughout the ceremony.

The Student Processional begins at approximately 10:10 a.m. The ceremony begins at 10:30 a.m. and concludes at 11:55 a.m. In the case of heavy rain, it will still be held outside at the Stadium, but it will shortened so as to conclude in less than one hour.

While the Commencement ceremony is, in part, a celebration, it is also a formal event. There are several significant ways in which you can contribute to its success. Perhaps most important is to observe regulations concerning alcohol. Abuses in the past unfortunately spoiled the day for many, subjecting the graduates and the University to public criticism.

Further, to preserve the tradition and the dignity of this event, please be respectful to the speakers and honorary degree recipients. Several are UMass graduates and all of them are distinguished individuals, here at our invitation, and deserving of your attentiveness.

The Commencement Planning Committee, several hundred other employees, and many unpaid volunteers, have devoted considerable time and effort, some for more than a year, to ensuring the success of this important day. We are committed to doing all that we can do to make it as memorable, enjoyable, and meaningful as possible for you as well as for your guests. We ask for your cooperation in making it a day in which we can all take pride.

Thank you, and congratulations on behalf of the Planning Committee as well as the entire University community.

May 2, 1997

Robert N. Brooks, Director
Student Affairs Special Services
Undergraduate Commencement Coordinator

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST — Office of the Chancellor

May 1, 1997

To the Class of 1997,

Within a few weeks, the completion of your undergraduate years will officially be recognized as the University celebrates - with you- its one hundred and twenty-seventh commencement.

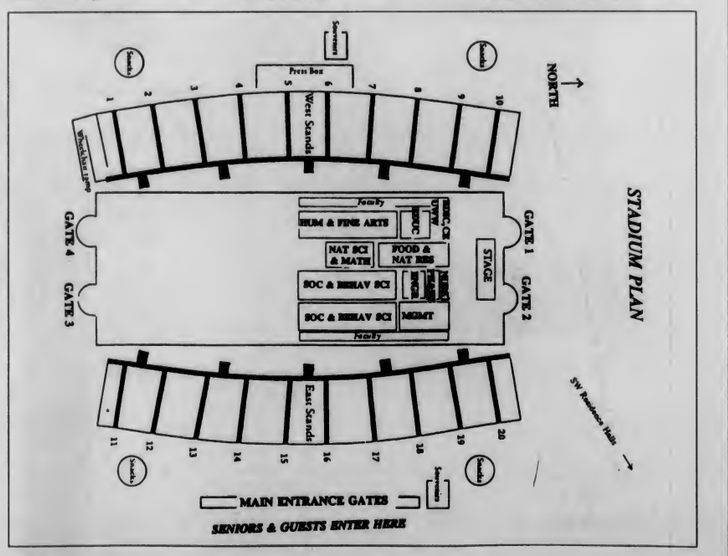
The first class of the then Massachusetts Agricultural College graduated 27 individuals, all with Bachelor of Science degrees in a very limited number of majors. Many went on to distinguished careers in the Commonwealth. Their record of distinctive accomplishments helped to establish the notable reputation of what became, in 1947, the University of Massachusetts.

And now, one hundred and twenty-seven years later, more than 4,000 of you, in nearly 100 different majors, will be graduating and making your marks not only in the Commonwealth but also throughout the United States and indeed, around the world.

On behalf of the faculty and staff, I congratulate you for having successfully fulfilled the demanding course of study leading to your degree. I know it is the result of considerable hard work, and you have every right to be as proud of your achievement as we are of you.

I look forward to joining with you, your families, and friends on May 25 to commemorate and applaud your academic accomplishments.

Best wishes to you and the best of luck in the future.



Sincerely,

David K. Scott
Chancellor

GATE ENTRANCES BY DEGREE PROGRAM/MAJOR

Chairs are allocated by section based on the number of majors. Please use the gate indicated and sit with the school or college of your major. Double majors may sit with either major.

Major	Gate	Major	Gate	Major	Gate
Accounting	2	Environmental Sciences	1	Microbiology	1
Afro-American Studies (HFA)	4	Exercise Science	2	Middle Eastern Studies (HFA)	4
Animal Science	1	Family & Consumer Sciences	1	Music (HFA)	4
Anthropology (SBS)	3	Finance & Operations Management	2	Natural Resource Studies	1
Apparel Marketing	1	Food Science	1	Nursing	2
Art Education (HFA)	4	Forestry	1	Philosophy (HFA)	4
Art History (HFA)	4	French (HFA)	4	Physics (NSM)	4
Astronomy (NSM)	4	Geography (NSM)	4	Plant Pathology	1
Bachelor of General Studies/CE	1	Geology (NSM)	4	Plant & Soil Sciences	1
BDIC	1	German (HFA)	4	Political Science (SBS)	3
Biochem/Molecular Bio (NSM)	4	History (HFA)	4	Portuguese (HFA)	4
Biology (NSM)	4	HRTA	1	Pre-Dental (NSM)	4
Botany (NSM)	4	Human Nutrition	2	Pre-Medical (NSM)	4
Building Materials & Wood Tech	1	Industrial Engr & Opns Research	2	Pre-Veterinary	1
Chemical Engineering	2	Interdisciplinary	3 or 4	Psychology (SBS)	3
Chemistry (NSM)	4	Italian Studies (HFA)	4	Resource Economics	1
Chinese Language & Lit (HFA)	4	Japanese Language & Lit (HFA)	4	Russian (HFA)	4
Civil Engineering	2	Journalism (HFA)	4	Science (NSM)	4
Classics (HFA)	4	Judaic Studies (HFA)	4	Sociology (SBS)	3
Classics & Philosophy (HFA)	4	Landscape Architecture	1	Soviet & East Eur Studies (HFA)	4
Communication (SBS)	3	Legal Studies (SBS)	3	Spanish (HFA)	4
Computer Science (NSM)	4	Leisure Studies & Resources	1	Sport Management	1
Communication Disorders	2	Linguistics & Anthropology	3 or 4	STEPEC (SBS)	3
Comparative Literature (HFA)	4	Linguistics & Chinese	3 or 4	Studio Art (HFA)	4
Computer Systems Engineering	2	Linguistics & German	3 or 4	Theater (HFA)	4
Continuing Education	1	Linguistics & Japanese	3 or 4	UWW	1
Dance (HFA)	4	Linguistics & Philosophy	3 or 4	Wildlife & Fisheries Conserv	1
Design	4	Linguistics & Psychology	3 or 4	Women's Studies (HFA)	4
Economics (SBS)	3	Linguistics & Russian	3 or 4	Zoology (NSM)	4
Education	1	Management	2
Electrical Engineering	2	Marketing	2
English (HFA)	4	Mathematics (NSM)	4	HFA = Humanities & Fine Arts
Entomology	1	Mechanical Engineering	2	NSM = Natural Sciences & Math
Environmental Design	1	Medical Technology	1	SBS = Social & Behavioral Sciences

baseball

continued from page 12

to sit on the bench and not be able to help out while the Minutemen reeled off an 18-game winning streak, which tied for the longest in school history.

"It was just nice to able to contribute," Mazzafero said. "To be honest, I don't even remember [the grand slam]. It just felt perfect coming off the bat."

Mazzafero started the year at third base, but Adam Correa has performed so well at third since Mazzafero's injury that, according to UMass coach Mike Stone, Mazzafero will likely see most of his time at DH. But Stone said that he wants Mazzafero's bat in the lineup.

"He's a good hitter at the DH slot," Stone said. "It's nice to have more than a few guys that you can count on for offense."

Massachusetts jumped out to a quick 4-0 lead after two innings. Second baseman Muchie Dagliere grounded out in the bottom of the first, and Brad Gorrie, who had doubled to lead off the inning, scored to give UMass a 1-0 lead. Gautreau later drove in Adam Correa with a sacrifice fly.

The Minutemen got two more runs in the second. With one out, UMass had the bases loaded, and Correa grounded to St. Bonaventure shortstop Rob Vogtli for what looked like an inning-ending double play. But Vogtli threw well over first baseman Chris Goyette's head, allowing Braunstein and Mazzafero to score and make it a 4-0 Massachusetts lead.

Braunstein and Gorrie went 2-for-3 in the first game to lead the Minutemen.

Massachusetts 6, St. Bonaventure 2

Back-to back solo home runs by Gorrie and Correa were the key hits in a five-run third inning that was the difference for UMass.

Cooke struck out seven Bonnies, and walked only one, en route to the win. Samela went 2-for-3, and Aaron Braunstein drove in two runs for UMass, who are now 15-3 at Earl E. Lorden Field this season. Correa's home run kept alive a hitting streak that has now reached 16 games.

Around the Bases...

By hitting .586, and coming two shy of the NCAA record for consecutive hits with 12 in a row, sophomore centerfielder Doug Clark picked up his second A-10 Player of the Week honors for the week ending April 28th. Clark also earned the honors April 14th.

Today's game marks the second to last home game for the Minutemen. UMass wraps up its 1997 home campaign against New Hampshire at 3 p.m. tomorrow. The UNH game will mark the final home games for Jason Bennett, Brad Gorrie and David Giglio, who will be honored in Senior Day festivities before the ballgame.

JORMA KANJANEN / COLLEGIAN

Jeff Puleri has not stepped onto the mound since pitching in the Beanpot Championship game last week.

NCAAs

continued from page 12

"To be in the top eight in the country is a real honor."

UMass' first-round opponent, Hofstra, is no stranger to the Minutemen. The two teams met on March 22 in Hempstead, N.Y., when UMass lost to the then No. 7 Flying Dutchmen 7-6 in double overtime.

"We know their personnel, we know how they play," Cannella said. "It's going to be a big game for us. Now our goal is to win a game and move up."

Hofstra struggled at the end of the regular season, dropping its final contest against North Carolina Saturday night.

"This is a new season, so I think they're going to be very energized coming into this," Cannella said. "I'm sure they're very relieved and happy that they made the tournament so I think they'll be ready."

Placement in the tournament's North region pleased Cannella.

"I'm happy," he said. "We've had some success at West Point and hopefully that can continue. Being in the North so a lot of our fans and family can make the drive is nice."

Also in the North region, No. 5 seed Duke (10-3) will face Brown (8-6). The winner of the UMass-Hofstra contest will advance to face No. 1 seed Princeton (11-0), while the Duke-Brown winner will square off against No. 4 seed Johns Hopkins.

In the South region, No. 6 seed Loyola (9-3) will meet Notre Dame (9-2) in the first round at Towson, Md. No. 7 seed Georgetown will play Maryland (8-4). The winner of Loyola-Notre Dame will advance to face No. 3 seed Syracuse (10-2), while the Georgetown-Maryland winner will get No. 2 Virginia (11-2).

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Men's lax is off to NCAA action next weekend.

statement

continued from page 12

after Saturday's win.

"I think [this game is enough]," Kasselakis said. "Brown's a great club, they've knocked off some big people this year. You gotta think get's us in."

Casey Costello, who tallied a pair of goals, said the New England Championship helped UMass' tourney chances.

"Usually New England champ goes," Costello said. "[Winning the New England Championship] feels unbelievable, and if we make the tournament it's like a whole new season."

It was a personal goal of Glass' to make the tournament in this, his final year of college.

"I've put eight years into this sport, there was no way I was going to end it in Providence," Glass said.

lacrosse

continued from page 12

with the arrival of heavy rain fall.

"The 12 offensive guys just came together and said 'hey man, this is it, we've got to step it up,'" Co-captain Brendan Glass said. "We love the mud, we're mudders at heart."

Glass opened up the scoring in the third, taking it upon himself to beat a double-up behind the cage and come around the front to bounce a shot five-hole for the 3-1 lead.

Brett Frood struck back to keep it close for the last time, scoring in transition. Sophomore Jed Dewick picked up the assist.

Seniors Chris Grande and Mike DelPercio exchanged imitations of each other late in the third quarter. Grande scored at 6:34 with a DelPercio-esque high crank from 18 yards out, and at 5:08 DelPercio followed with a Grandean move, rolling off a screen on the high post to beat Cattrano high to the stick side. The combo boosted the score to 5-2.

Grande and Costello added their second goals and senior Chris Martens added one before Glass finished his hat trick to round out the UMass scoring at 9 goals.

"It was a total team effort," Glass said. "I don't think this team knows how good it is, and how far it can go in the tournament. There's no telling what we could do."

Extra man opportunities would be a factor in the first period. UMass' Mike Hannah got flagged a few minutes later, and Brown captain Frood took advantage of the EMO to take the lead.

UMass tied it up soon after, with the familiar combination of Glass and Ken Sussi evening the score. Sussi brought the ball around the back of the net to goalkeeper Greg Cattrano's left side, and found Glass cutting to the crease.

In the second quarter, in which the Minutemen have outscored opponents 42-14 all season long, they were able maintain that dominance to a lesser degree. The lone goal of that period was a solo effort by senior Casey Costello, who split a double team down low to Cattrano's right, then cut to the goal and beat the All-America goalie low to the off-stick side.

softball

continued from page 12

all year in this tournament."

The A-10 tourney has been nothing but a highlight-reel for Henderson, who set and then broke the record for strikeouts in an Atlantic 10 game.

In the Minutewomen's first game of the tourney, Henderson threw the first no-hitter in A-10 tourney history as the Minutewomen blanked Temple 4-0. En route to the no-hitter, the third of Henderson's career, she struck out 13 batters, a new conference record.

The Minutewomen scored one run in each of the second through fifth innings to pull away from the Owls. Martens and Cardenas drove in the game's first two runs on a single and sacrifice fly, respectively.

Becky George ripped a double over the Temple centerfielder to score Katie Kendarski, and Gutridge doubled off the right field fence to plate Buckley for the game's final tally.

Henderson broke her own A-10 strikeout record by sending down 14 in UMass' second game of the tournament, as the Minutewomen took a 1-0 decision from St. Joseph's.

Buckley scored the game's only run after reaching base on a single. She made her way to third on a sac fly and fielder's choice, before scoring on a St. Joe's pitching error.

Named to the all-tournament team were Henderson; Gutridge, Buckley and Tracy Osier.

Collegian staff member Casey Kane contributed to this article.

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Puffton Village . . . Your First Choice
1, 2 and 3 bedroom apartments
Featuring
Newly renovated units that include:
New appliances New carpeting New kitchen cabinets & counter tops Central air conditioners
Rents starting at $615 per month
or
Traditional units that are:
Fully applianced Freshly painted Carpeted/Tiled Floors Central Air Conditioned
Rents starting at $545 per month
All rents include Heat, Hot Water & Cooking Gas and use of an olympic size pool, 5 tennis courts, basketball court, laundry rooms and on-site parking.
Now accepting rental applications for summer and fall. Call today 549-0145

LEARNING FOR THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE · LEARNING FOR A LIFETIME ·
UMASS SUMMER SESSION 1997
Now is the time to advance your career, explore other options, plan for a new future, get ahead in your studies, or enrich your life.
- Hundreds of Credit Courses
- Workshops for Personal and Professional Enrichment
- Part-time Specialized Degree Programs--Bachelor's and Master's
- Professional Development Courses for Teachers

Classes held days, evenings, and weekends
- Session I: June 3-July 11
- Session II: July 15-August 21
- Variable Sessions

Call 413-545-0107 for a free course catalog or e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Find it on our website: http://www.umass.edu/contined/
DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION · UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

For a Sporting Good Time
Athletic Department Year End Sale!
25% - 50% off all items
Large Selection of athletic merchandise
Monday May 5th
Tuesday May 6th
Wednesday May 7th
10:00 am - 4:00 pm (each day)
Richard Garber Field behind the Curry Hicks Cage
UMass Athletics

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Beer Die Tournament! You get game? Saturday May 10! For info and registration call 259-0417

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Toplese Car Wash with Sorority Women! Come see what all the talk is about on Saturday from 11-3! Fraternity Row. Bring your car!

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom Broadywise Pond view $780/month Reduced rent of June and July Starting 6/1. Call 549-0023

Great apartment! Great Price. Located in The Townhouses. Summer Sublet Beautiful blue carpeting, 3 bedrooms, 1 1/2 baths. Call Jessica and Adrienne at 549-7092

Take over our lease- 2 bedroom apt Brandywine. Gas, heat and stove included. Available from 5/1 $710 549-9039

Cooter of town 1,2,3 bedrooms Gas, heat, hardwood floors 253-7879

2 bedroom Available 8/1 1010 N Pleasant #3. 549-4142

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom $950/ 2 bedroom $425. 20 minutes from campus- no bus Available for Sept. 885-2203

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept at Squire Village 665-2303

AUTO FOR SALE

85 Nissan Maxima Sixties Wagon Good shape Includes insane music system Call 546-2002 Ask for "Z." It's a luxury college car. Sunroof/CD/Power Everything

92 Eagle Talon red/black; standard power windows/locks, moon roof, 98K miles. $7000 or B/O 549-6102 or 323-4888

Volks Jetta 89 white, 5 speed $2850 Call 253-6449

91 Honda Civic 12 CD Changer, 4 speakers, auto start. $4800 or B/O 665-0182

EMPLOYMENT

Painters Wanted Earn $3000-$5000 for summer. Westwood, Dedham area Call Mike 549-3759

Financially impaired? Expanding National Company seeking 5 motivated capitalists interested in rapid advancement Call (413)584-8182 for interview

EMPLOYMENT

Campus Business Opportunity- Help UMass students protect their PC's and other equipment from theft. Largest seller of computer anti-theft devices in the US is looking for Campus Entrepreneurs. For details visit our Web Site at www.pc-security.com/campusrep or call Benson at 1-800-724-4339

Are you a computer guru? The Office of Information Technologies is now hiring qualified student consultants for the Summer and Fall Semesters. We are looking for both undergraduate and graduate students. Research assistantships are available for qualified graduate students. Visit our web page http://www-oit.umass.edu/oit/jobs to apply and for more information

Pleasant Seasonal Amherst Yardwork References, $6 hourly 549-0413

Permanent, Part-Time, Housecleaning Your convenience References, $6 hourly 549-0413

Virgin Records College Rep. Position Get music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position, 10-15 hrs/week! Please fax resume and cover letter to Elizabath Gruenewald at (310)286-2433 or call 1-800-242-7421 to apply. Sophomore or Junior with star performed, Previous music industry experience is a plus!

Bar or Waitperson Apply in person The Paddock 127 Elm St., Hatfield.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? $3000-$4000 for the summer. Work outside with other students in Andover area Get a tan Leadership positions available 1-800-392-4848 ext. 208

Do Campus Interviews Friday 4/11 University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising. We summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales Marketing and PR experience Call 1-800-743-6666 ext 122.

CAPE COD RESTAURANT Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train, housing available Eastham and Orleans, (508)255-9394

Summer Employment
Experienced truck drivers for part time Approximately 12 or more days in Mid-June and Mid-August. $105.98 to $135.00 a day. (508)653-7422

EMPLOYMENT

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in living in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call (413)927-7555

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St - D40, NYC, NY 10014

FOR RENT

3 bedroom apt. in house. Nonki Center. $725 + utilities. On bus line. 582-7030 Available 6/1

Take Over Our Lease Will sublet, starting June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine Includes heat and hot water. Rent negotiable Call 549-0530

Take over our lease! 1 bedroom On bus line Available Aug. or Sept. Call 665-5191 or email summer2754@aol.com

Amherst Center 44 Kellogg Ave 2 bedroom, spacious, huge porch Call Harlow Properties 256-3442

2 bedroom apt.- Crestview Available 8/1. A must see Call 548-7017

Available June 1st to rent or sublet. 1 bedroom Pulfton Apartment $515 includes heat and H20. 549-7886

Take over lease in June or September Southpoint Townhouses, 2 bedrooms, 1 1/2 baths Hot water included On bus line. 253-1457

1 bedroom apt.- On bus route 5 minute walk to campus Crestview Apts Starting June 1st Call 549-4942

Rent in Brandywine Call 549-0319

Take over our lease Available 6/1 3 bedroom Great location on bus line Call 256-8034

Take over lease 6/1- 8/31 Fall Option Large 2 bdrm. $500/month 885-8076 On bus line

4 bedroom apt. Available 6/1. On bus route 253-8473

2 Rooms for Rent Private home $335 + utilities Kitchen privileges. Kosher/Vegetarian preferred Laundry parking, furnished Available May 1 549-4863

FOR RENT

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement Now showing for June and September Lease $1300+ 253-7879

FOR SALE

Mac LCIII Monitor and printer, fax modem, and lots of software $300 or B/O Call Neal 548-9170

Fall Size Futon with mattress cover included. Must sell. Excellent condition $100 Call 549-7882

Bunk Bed $150 Modern, excellent condition. Call 253-6449

Mooo Cooeeedale Touring Bike Excellent condition $250 or B/O Call Sharon 549-1773

Schwinn Mooo 12 Speed Road Bike $100. Good condition Call 253-7234

P-166 Full Package PC $1200 Sharp VCR, TV, Microwave, Aiwa Stereo and more. Cheap! 256-0767

FOUND

Found: Bracelet Tuesday 4/29 in Hampshire Dining Hall Call Holly at 6-5429

Found: Silver Necklace Found outside of Goodell. If yours, please call 253-6301 (Ask for Cathy)

HOUSE FOR RENT

House For Rent $1700 per month 4 bedrooms, one half miles from Mullins Center. Gas, heat Call 253-7879

MOTORCYCLES

1981 Suzuki 450 Runs great. All it needs- nom. $500 Call 256-6324

MISCELLANEOUS

Graduation Weekend- Beautifully furnished rooms available Fifty dollars a night. Call 259-1938

Whitewater Rafting Student Discounts $65 May 3rd 1-800-Unicorn

PERSONALS

To The Nice Guy Who Walked By South College On Wed. April 30th Around 5:30pm. May You Always Know The Warmth And Kindness Of Your Words Firsthand -A.- Writing Autobiography

ROOM FOR RENT

Room For Rent- Brandywine 549-8087 or 549-7886 Free gas and heat

Room- 1 or 2 people. Need car. Mile from Peace Pagoda Pets OK 272-220/month Summer 548-8081 Allyssa

Looking for 2 females willing to share a large bedroom in 3 bedroom Pulfton Apartment Starting Fall '97 Call Nikki 549-4484

1 large room in two bedroom apartment Looking for two females Available 8/1 and Fall and Spring Option On bus route Very spacious, great location Call 549-3992

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Pufters Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer Clean, quiet, sunny $300+ Call 253-4954 For more info

ROOM WANTED

Outgoing, friendly female is seeking housemate/s 9/97- 12/97 Call Odette 584-8587

ROOMATE WANTED

Need a place for the summer? We have 1 room available in Puffton! Male or female. 1 or 2 people. Call 549-8513 Ask for Jessica for more information Or Chris at 549-8102

1 or 2 females to share a two bedroom Puffton Apt Available 6/1 549-0207

I need a roommate. Clean, friendly girl is looking for 1 girl to share a 2 bedroom townhouse in Southpoint Apts If interested call Tina at 546-6843

WANTED: Responsible, quiet roommate who doesn't do drugs to share 2 bedroom apartment for Summer and/or Fall RENT FOR SUMMER IS CHEAP! Call Alison 546-5812

SERVICES

Rabbit Rescue can help! Didn't abandon your bunny! Call us, we'll find him a new home Ellen 367-0105

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

Large furnished bedroom on Sunset Ave. Right across from Southwest! Available 6/1 $275/month Call 549-9954

2 bedroom apt.- Boulders Newly renovated Hot water included $760 Great place One mile from campus Call 253-6870 Ask for Alyson or Amy

SUMMER SUBLET

Summer Sublet- Fall Option One room- Brandywine—Sublet one room or whole apartment- Newly carpeted- Free gas and heat- Bus route 549-8087 or 549-7886

Sublet- Sunderland PVTA stops at house Considerate housemates One bedroom $284/month 885-9366

1 bedroom available in furnished 4 bedroom house Starting 5/31 Two miles from campus Interested call Andrew 549-2896

3 bedroom apt. Pulfton Renovated Heat/hot water included Only $800/month! Available 6/1. call 546-1449

3 bedroom renovated Pulfton Apartment Available 6/1. Cheap with Fall Option

Mill Valley- 2 bedrooms Heat/Hot Water included Available 6/1 With Fall Option. 253-8534

South Amherst 2 bedroom apartment $585/month Call 256-4788

2 bedroom- Boulders Includes A/C and water On bus line Available 6/1 Call 256-0865 ASAP

2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom apt in South Amherst 2 bathrooms Rent negotiable Call 253-5806

Renovated 3 bedroom Pulfton Apt Heat/HW included A/C, parking Available 6/1 with Fall Option. Will pay $100/month for summer Call 546-0863

Sunny Spacious House Two bedrooms available. Great summer location with hiking and bike paths, deck and backyard 5 miles from UMass. 256-6336

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths, first floor Available June 1st One month free Call 253-6467

1 bedroom in a 2 bedroom apartment Available May 25-Dec. 31 Cliffside Apts-Sunderland. DII bus route Everything included $315 a month 665-7888, 665-8336

Sublet $250 a month in Amherst On bus line Call Andy 253-5482

2 bedroom Broadywice Apt. Bottom floor facing pond. Heat/hot water included Bus route Price Negotiable. 549-5066

Renovated 2 bedroom apt. in Sunderland Furnishings negotiable Washer/dryer, carpeting, pool, volleyball On bus route Great deal! Call 665-5090

Upscale- 4 bedrooms Price negotiable Call 253-9323

SUMMER SUBLET

One bedroom apartment on bus line. $550/month Call Tricia (617)247-2388

3 bedroom apartment Juns-Aug Pool/Courts Sunderland. Call 665-0298

Gus tomato to share large, furnished room in 2 bedroom apartment on bus route Close to campus Available June 1- Aug 31. Call 548-1479

2 bedroom 2 bathroom apartment 207 Sunset opposite College Pizza Very close to campus. Rent negotiable Available 6/1-8/31 Call 549-5806

CHEAP! 1-3 people needed for a clean furnished apt. Central Air/H2O included On bus line, 1 mile from campus Call 548-8850

1 bedroom in a 3 bedroom apartment Available June-August w/possible Fall Option $250/month Call Ami at 584-1478

June-August $600 Room to sublet, fully furnished Close to Pufters Pond Near bus route 549-4047

4 bedroom house Option of 1 to 4 bedrooms for rent. Call 549-9224

2 bedroom/2 bath Mill Valley A/C On bus route 253-1797

Mill Valley- Option Nice 2 bedroom Pulfton Apt Available June 1st One month free Call 253-6467

Pulfton! One large room and one small room in 3 bedroom apartment. Call 549-9569

Single, double, triple rooms in Big 3 floor house on edge of campus 3 bath, 3 shower, kitchen, cable, utilities Only $500 all summer! Available May 23 Call Fabio at 548-7076 for info

2 bedroom apt. Fall Option 3 floor On bus line $5.75/hwy Partly furnished 256-3052

1 bedroom in 3 bedroom Pulfton $215/month Available 6/1. Call Eileen 549-4972

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment $270/month includes heat and hot water Available 5/31- 8/31 Non-smoker preferred Call Nick @ 8-6283

1 bedroom available in a 2 bedroom apartment in Brandywine $355/month + utilities Available May 27 Call Cheryl or Christine at 549-1737

Upscale- 4 bedrooms Price negotiable Call 253-9323

One way plane ticket to San Francisco from Boston Depart on June 18th $200 Call 546-2078 before May 5th

WANTED TO RENT

Two female grad students with perfect behaved and maintained dog need summer sublet, preferably near bus route Will look three months to one year Jocelyn 584-1847

1 to 2 bedroom apartment/house for summer, possibly Fall Around $900. All locations considered Leave message (413)863-4400

TO SUBLET

Spacious 2 bedroom in Sunderland $830- H20 included Available 8/1. On bus route A must see! 665-8894

6 month sublet June 1 to January 1 Single bedroom apartment at Puffton Village Rent is $535 per month Includes heat and hot water Call 549-0096

Two females looking to sublet Fall Semester only Call Katy and René 549-3114

Heat and Water included 2 bedroom A/C $600/month Starts June 1st Fall Option Furnished. Call 549-4324. We can accommodate any needs.

Downtown Amherst Apartment Fall Option! Two large sunny rooms in great house with housemates Females preferred. Non-smokers $275 Call 256-8330

Sublet one bedroom 995 N. Pleasant Walk to campus Call 549-7757 to view

TRAVEL

Europe $180 O/W Mexico/Caribbean $189 R/T ONE WORLD TRAVEL It's your world. Now you can afford to see it (413)587-0001

EUROPE $175
Within USA $79 - $129
Canada/Mexico $199 r/t
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!
http://www.airhitch.org
AIRHITCH 1-800-326-2009

One way ticket to Europe Leaving anytime in May $200 Call Jen 549-0096

Europe $169 R/T Caribbean $189 R/T ONE WORLD TRAVEL It's your world. Now you can afford to see it (413)587-0001

Student Travel Services Now has Spring Break packages to Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Mardi Gras and Europe. Book early and save! Call 1-800-648-4849 or stop by our office in the Student Union

Spring Break Travel Cancun, Bahamas, Mardi Gras, Florida, Ski Vacations Lowest Prices Guaranteed Group Discounts Organize a small group and travel free! Call Inter-Campus Programs 1-800-327-6013

Spring Break Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Mardi Gras, Florida Reps needed, travel free, organize small group Highest commissions Lowest rates guaranteed Inter-Campus Programs 1-800-327-6013

Spring Break Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Mardi Gras, Florida Reps needed, travel free, organize small group Highest commissions Lowest rates guaranteed Inter-Campus Programs 1-800-327-6013

PIPs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, MAY 5

Art opening — "Underwood #14," a BFA thesis project in printmaking by Francesca M. Dudley, will open today with a reception from 5–7 p.m. in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space. The display will run through May 10.

Art opening — "Spring Training," a BFA thesis exhibition in painting by Jotham Stavely, will open today with a reception from 5–7 p.m. in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space. The display will run through May 10.

Meeting — The University of Massachusetts is purchasing a new, technologically advanced, campus–based integrated Student Information System (SIS). The SIS project will hold an open meeting from 3–5 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101. Deputy Chancellor Marcelliette Williams and Project Director John Dubach will give a short recap of the project to date. They, the Project Team, Elizabeth Pyle, Registrar, Robert Swasey, Graduate Registrar and Director of Graduate Admissions, Arlene Cash, Director of Undergraduate Admissions, Michael Gilbert, Director of Housing and Burt Batty, Director of Financial Aid will be available to answer your questions about the project. Everyone on campus is invited to attend.

TUESDAY, MAY 6

Concert — The Five College Early Music Collegium, directed by Robert Eisenstein, will present its spring concert at 8 p.m. in Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College. The program includes masterpieces by Josquin and Monteverdi, performed by voices and renaissance instruments of all sorts. Admission is free and open to the public. For further information, call 585–2079.

Show — A slide show will be held in the Cape Cod Lounge at 11 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. for Yom Hashoah. A ceremony will be held from 1–2 p.m.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 7

Film — Jacob the Liar will be screened at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Auditorium as part of Yom Hashoah events.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series presents Ann Barlow, UMass Art Department, on "The Girl Next Door," in the Campus Center, room 162–175 from 12:15–1:30 p.m. Free and open to the public.

Lecture — "Repression in Massachusetts Prisons: The Inside Story" will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center (check at info desk for room number). Come hear the accounts of two former political prisoners with their struggles. The speakers will also provide a revolutionary analysis of the prison system and how it functions as a means of national oppression, increasingly directed at members of oppressed nations. A discussion will follow. Sponsored by RAIL, MIM, Boricuas Unidos and Commuter Area Government.

Meeting — Spectrum Magazine is having a general meeting at 8:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room to be announced. This meeting will include elections for positions opening up for the fall semester. New members are welcome.

Meeting — A University Center 2000 follow–up meeting will be held from 11 a.m.– noon in the Campus Center, room 902.

Meeting — A University Center 2000 office meeting will be held from noon–1 p.m. in the Campus Center Coffee Shop.

Workshop — A Test Taking Workshop will be offered by the Learning Support Services from 1:30–2:45 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Free. Call 545– 5334 to register.

NOTICES

GEO elections — Attention GEO members: elections have been rescheduled for May 15, 16 and 19. Candidates night is May 7 at the general membership meeting. For more info, call 545–5317.

Musicians — Mission Improvable, the UMass Comedy Troupe, is looking for someone who can play the keyboard in a variety of music styles, with their own equipment. Call Aaron at 546–5225 for more info.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, meets every Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees.

Community — "Rendezvous with the Soul": meditation, music and prayer meetings, will be held from 4–5 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805–809 weekly on Tuesdays until the end of the semester. Sponsored by the UMass Baha'i Club. For more information, call Chris at 549–4982.

Discussion — Come experience the cultural diversity of the Prince/Crampton Graduate Residence Hall. From April 8 – May 10, residents from many countries around the world will be participating in discussions and presentations about their experiences in their home countries. Scheduled topics: Latin America/Caribbean, May 4–10. The program is free and open to the public.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 5 p.m. next to the information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

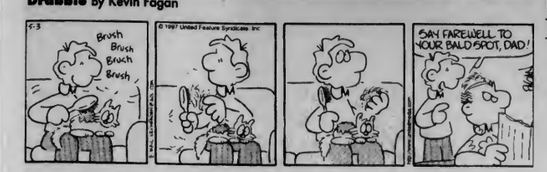
VEGETABLE SONORA • SCAMPI • T-BONE STEAK • CHICKEN BBQ • PASTA ROJA
PORTEBELLO MUSHROOMS • CHICKEN QUESADILLA • MUSHROOM ONION CHEESEBURGER
BLACKENED CATFISH • SPANISH ORZO • STUFFED PORK CHOPS • NACHOS
BERKSHIRE BREWING COMPANY • MARGARITAS • BLACK FOREST CHEESECAKE
SCREAMING COWBOYS • AND MUCH MORE...

Full menu 'til 1 A.M. ~Every Night ~

HSCN — Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN/Headline News
25	BET
26	BET on Jazz
27	UCTV
28	The Learning Channel
29	TV Land
30	Comedy Central
32	Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Rum Punch



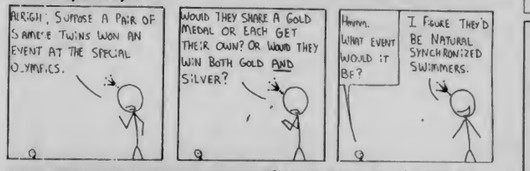
MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 5, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Eyewitness	Wild World	American Experience		Simon Wiesenthal		Living Ecens (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Are You Smar	Cosby	Murphy Brown	Cybill	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Entertainment	Extra	Cosby	Murphy Brown	Cybill	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Explosion Live! (In Stereo)		"Fatal Wave: No Escape" (1997, Drama) Corbin Bernsen				News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		7th Heaven "Say Goodbye"		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Foxworthy	Foxworthy	"Invasion" (1997, Science Fiction) Luke Perry		News		Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks	Goode Beh.	News	LAPD	R. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy	Foxworthy	Foxworthy	"Invasion" (1997, Science Fiction) Luke Perry		News		Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Mercoe Plus	"Going Places"	Married... With	Married... With	News		Coach	Babylon 5
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Foxworthy	Foxworthy	"Invasion" (1997, Science Fiction) Luke Perry		News		Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Eyewitness	Wild World	Home to Tibet		Chilcanot History		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Explosion Live! (In Stereo)		"Fatal Wave: No Escape" (1997, Drama) Corbin Bernsen		News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld		Mad Abo. You		In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks	Goode Beh.	News	Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	Major League Baseball: Atlanta Braves at St. Louis Cardinals. (Live)						Mad Abo. You	M*A*S*H
A&E	62	Quincy "Honor Thy Elders"		Law & Order "Self Defense"		Biography		Point		Mike Marple (Part 2 of 2)		Law & Order
CNN	23	World View		Newsline		Crossfire		Prime News (In Stereo)	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today
COM	26	Trick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	Lounge Liz.			"Heathers" (1988, Comedy) Winona Ryder.		On Delivery	Dream On	Daily Show	Lounge Liz.
DISC	63	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "The Nuclear Best" (R)		Wild Discovery: Piranha				Volcano: Ring of Fire		Mary Lincoln's Insanity File (R)	Wild Discovery: Piranha
ESPN	64	Up Close	Sportscenter	Outside the Lines						Stanley Cup Playoffs: Conference Semifinal Game 2 – Teams to Be Announced.			Sportscenter
LIFE	67	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait "Bette Midler"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Letters" (1997, Drama) Joely Fisher, Brian Wimmer.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	69	(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		Jenny M.	Singled Out	Indie Outing	Sports (R)	Music Videos (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Dete (R)	Singled Out	Lovaline
NICK	68	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi	M.T. Moors
SCIFI	69	Odyssey	Sci-Fi Treder	Fifth Element	Amaz. Stories	Seaquest DSV (In Stereo)		"Millennium" (1989, Science Fiction) Kris Kristofferson.				Fifth Element	Amaz. Stories
TLC	65	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Extreme Machines (R)		Connections II	Connections II	Connections III	Feedback (R)	Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	70	In the Heat of the Night		WCW Nitro (Live)		NBA Basketball Playoffs: Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Inside-NBA	WCW Nitro (R)
USA	71	Renegade "La Mala Sombra"		Highlander: The Series		World Wrestling Federation Monday Night Raw				La Femme Nikita "Simone"		Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	73	(5:45) "Sabrina" (1995, Comedy) Harrison Ford, PG				"In the Gloaming" (1997)		Father's Day		"Jade" (1995, Suspense) David Caruso.		"The Great White Hype" (1996)
MAX	74	"The Net" (1995, Suspense) Sandra Bullock. PG-13				"Lovin' It" (1982, Comedy) Tom Cruise.		Scenes		"Black Out" (1995, Suspense) Brian Bosworth.		"UV Nights"
SHOW	75	"The Sly Fictions" (1968, Comedy) Kevin Bacon. PG-13				"Dirty Half" (1996, Drama) Al Pacino. (In Stereo)						"American Strays" (1996) Luke Perry.	"Woman"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

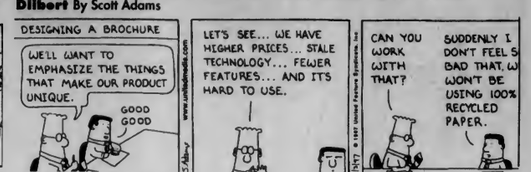
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick



Non Sequitor By Wiley

Frumpy the Clown By FJudd Winick

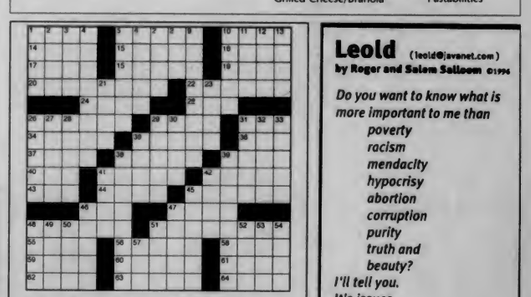


Loodoo By Mike Rybicki

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Speedy By Todd Hartzler



University® By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-3626 for more information.

Franklin		Worcester
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Pucks	Chicken Breast	Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Chicken Breast
Turkey Tetrazzini	Spaghetti w/Sausage	Captain's Catch	Black-Eyed Peas
Philly Cheese Steak	Italian Tofu Balls	Spaghetti w/Sauce	Pastabilities
	Quarter Pound Burger	Hearty Latin Stew	Meatball Grinder
Hampshire		Berkshire
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Chicken Breast	Grilled Cheese	Chicken Breast
Chicken Pucks	Spaghetti w/Sausage	Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce	Sliced Kielbasa
Turkey Tetrazzini		Wheatball Grinder	Black Eyes Peas
		Grilled Cheese/Branola	Pastabilities

ACROSS

1. One hundred dollars, in slang
5. Spit and ___
10. Before precious or sweet
14. Continent west of Hawaii
15. Orange type
16. Miscellany
17. Wise trio
18. Viscous stuff
19. Shepard of NASA
20. Certain dogs
22. Love pair
24. Taker
25. Poet's contraction
26. Half of the diameter
29. "Exile of ___"
31. Summit
34. Monsters
35. Condescending one
36. Cry of triumph
37. ___ about (2 wds.)
39. Street's boss
40. "___ the night before ..."
46. Boggy land
47. Public assembly
48. Squirts
49. Compass dir.
50. Actress Sommer
51. Ice-cream concoction
52. Guido's high note
53. Strengthen
56. Rolls ready for schmearing
61. Humor
62. Let abbr. (2 wds.)
64. "Let ___ say what it will" (Hamlet)
66. Wild goat
68. Heavy book
69. Supped
70. "Ooh!" ender
72. Put the pedal to the metal
73. Flinch
74. Derive (from)

DOWN

1. Starchy staples of Africa
2. PDQ, in a memo
3. Capital of Latvia
4. More delicate
5. Map parts
6. Valley girls' hangouts
7. Caesar's bird
8. Diadem ornament
9. Pursuer
10. Takes wing
11. Competition for Vogue
12. Unaccounted-for soldiers (abbr.)
13. Electric particles
21. Gambler's notes
23. "It is!" rebuttal
28. Housetops
27. Second Mrs. Copperfield
28. Hum
29. Follow
30. Kitchen or study
31. Pulled
32. John or Maureen
33. Sheriff's band
35. Island west of Guernsey
38. Treacle
39. Vine parts
41. Took a spill
42. Unpolluted
45. Mule
46. Went on a money spree
47. TV marine Pyle
48. Poker moves
49. Resting upon
50. Wild animals, collectively
51. Toodle-oo!
52. Blind as ___ (2 wds.)
53. Prefix for gram or port
54. Quiz
57. Old ___

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Solem Salloom ©1996

Do you want to know what is more important to me than poverty racism mendacity hypocrisy abortion corruption purity truth and beauty?

I'll tell you. It's issues issues...

No, no, I mean tissues. Tissues are very important to me....

Tissues.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
If you fail to love this week, it'll be for keeps, so take a close look at the object of your affection before giving your heart away. If you're considering a major purchase, now would be a good time to bite the bullet and make a down payment.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
An old dream gains new life this week with the return of someone from your past. Take them outside for some R&R and some quality time. You'll both appreciate the opportunity to catch up on past events. Gather all the information before offering your opinion.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Don't allow yourself to be distracted from a big decision. The time to act is now. A negative trend reverses itself, bringing new insight into another's behavior. Trust the judgment of an expert when it comes to your finances.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
To turn a dreary day into a happy one, try anticipating the needs of another person. Your thoughtful gesture could be the start of a new or renewed friendship. A reasonable relationship flourishes in silence—nonverbal communication carries the moment.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Break out of an old rut, and you could find renewed enthusiasm for a whole range of activities throughout your life. Lean on an old friend if you're feeling unsure or insecure. But don't ask for advice—the answer to your question is closer than you think.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
It's a good time to plan a social event. Your personality is at its most magnetic and you could end up drawing a dynamite crowd. Avoid taking center stage at work, however. The wrong people could be watching.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
An outdoor event turns into an adventure. To help things turn out for the best, try planning further ahead than usual. Catch up on your exercise. You could use a little extra energy in the near future, and physical activity will help you find it.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Start an anti-stress campaign to relieve tensions at home. Just a little bit of relaxation will make a big difference. But remember—change begins with you. If you want to change your lifestyle, it's best to do one thing at a time, instead of several.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
To add zest to your social life, consider adding a new activity or hobby to your calendar. You could discover a new passion. Don't be afraid of failure. Just learn from your mistakes, and you can't lose.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
An athletic activity reaps great benefits for you—both physically and socially. Turn your energies to a project that's been on hold for awhile. Then, treat yourself to something really indulgent—a bubble bath or a gourmet dinner.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Although a situation might seem hopeless, channel your feelings of frustration into a positive effort for change. You could be surprised at the results. A loved one has a pleasant surprise—if you're not too distracted to listen to them.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Avoid the temptation to be a couch potato—there's too much going on. You're exceptionally ripe for learning experiences, so go out and try something new. You could discover a real talent. A little privacy also helps you renew your energies in time for a distasteful situation.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

"I did call the builder. He said it's normal for a new house to settle a bit and that he'll give us a 25 percent discount on all caulking supplies."

Quote of the Day

"It's alright letting yourself go, as long as you can get yourself back."

–Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, May 5, 1997

▼ SPORTS THIS WEEK

LACROSSE

MAY 10 vs. Hofstra for NCAA first round @ Amherst

WATER POOL

MAY 8-11 ST. USWP Collegiate Championships @ Ann Arbor, Mich.

BASEBALL

MAY 6 vs. New Hampshire — 3 p.m.

MAY 7 @ HARVARD — 3 p.m.

MAY 10 @ ST. JOSEPH'S (PA) — noon

MAY 11 @ ST. JOSEPH'S — noon

Softball wins A–10s; lacrosse gains NCAA berth

Henderson named Most Outstanding

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

KINGSTON, R.I. — When the Massachusetts softball team took the field yesterday with the Atlantic 10 title at stake, a confident stride in the Minutewomen's step told you that this would be their day.

It may have because history was on UMass's side, as they looked bring home an unprecedented fifth straight A–10 title to Amherst.

It may have been because pitcher Danielle Henderson, who was named the tournament's Most Outstanding Player, was on the mound, fresh off of two complete game shut–outs in as many days this weekend. And it may also have been because she would face the same Temple Owl team that could not muster a hit against her two days before.

Needless to say, the Minutewomen appeared ready to strike first blood.

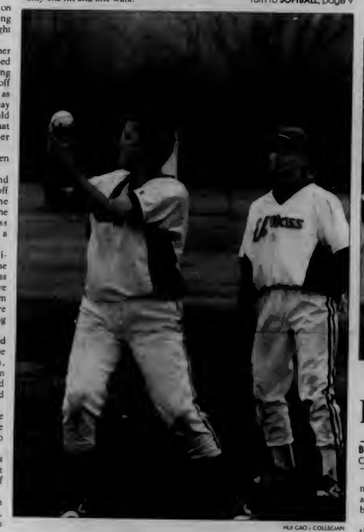
That they did, striking fast and furious with four first inning runs off the stunned Temple pitcher. The UMass offense was too much for the Owls to overcome and UMass claimed the Atlantic 10 title with a 6–0 win in its final game.

"This is a very special championship for me because we overcame so many obstacles this year," UMass coach Elaine Sortino said. "We have some exceptional kids on this team and after all these struggles, we're exactly where we want to be heading into the NCAA Championships."

In the first inning, UMass started things off on a good note with three straight hits from Mandy Galas, Stephanie Mareina and Sam Cardenas. Cardenas' single allowed Galas and Mareina to score and UMass to take a 2–0 lead.

The Minutewomen would score two more in the frame to give Henderson a 4–0 cushion going into the second inning.

In the second inning, UMass tacked on a couple more runs that gave Henderson a commanding half dozen–run advantage.



With two outs and no one on in the second, Kim Gutridge walked, Kelly Buckley walked and Martens tripled to send both of her baserunning teammates home.

Martens was a spark for the Minutewomen, as she went 2– for–3 with three RBIs.

Meanwhile, Temple could not solve Henderson. The sophomore pitcher, who was named Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year before the tourney, recorded 11 strike–outs over seven innings pitched. She allowed only one hit and one walk.

"I didn't expect to come in here and throw a no–hitter," Henderson said two days after she did just that against the same Temple team. "But I didn't think Temple was hitting very well in the first game. But I'm happy because this is the best I've thrown

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 9

HUI GAO / COLLEGIAN

Softball spent the weekend in Kingston, R.I. battling it out in Atlantic 10's.

Men's lax destroys Bears 9–4 on Saturday

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Cut to Act I, Scene 13; an overcast Saturday on the ivied campus of Brown University, at Stevenson Field on College Hill. Fade to gray.

No, grayer.

Cloudy skies were just the beginning of the list of inclemencies, from cold whipping wind to an eventual downpour. None of these could slow the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team (8–5), and neither could the Brown Bears (8–6), who fell to the Minutemen 9–4 on Saturday.

The rain drops and goals trickled in during the first half, the score just 2–1 in UMass' favor at the intermission. The Minutemen were poised to emerge from one more half of slopping around in the Stevenson Field muck with the win and the resulting New England Championship in tact.

The second half was a different story entirely. Scoring and pouring was the theme of the last two stanzas, as the UMass attack opened the flood gates seemingly in sync

Turn to LACROSSE, page 9

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Despite muddy, rainy Rhode Island weather, UMass rolled to a 9–4 win over Brown on Saturday.

Lax receives tourney bid, No. 8 seed

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — The Massachusetts men's lacrosse team's season will be at least one week longer thanks to a berth in the NCAA tournament.

The Minutemen (8–5) were among the 12 teams named during last night's NCAA selection show and will continue their season with a first round game against Hofstra (9–5) at the North region site of West Point, N.Y.

The Minutemen gathered at Rafters Sports Bar in Amherst yesterday and filled the room with cheers when their name appeared on the television screen. Players and coaches alike were on their feet and applauding UMass' No. 8 seed.

"This feels great," junior Chris Martens said as his teammates congratulated each other. "I kind of had a hunch that we were going to get in but I didn't know where.

"I'm glad they put us eighth because it shows us some respect. It's kind of like a benchmark to show where we stand. It's good," he said.

UMass coach Greg Cannella was also pleased with the No. 8 seed.

"It's nice to see our name up there, certainly as a seeded team," he said.

Turn to NCAA, page 9

Baseball claims second A-10 East title

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

It seems like everyone who gets a chance to crack the lineup for the Massachusetts baseball team these days makes the most of their opportunity.

In his first start since injuring his ankle against Bucknell in late March, sophomore designated hitter Bryan Mazzafero smacked a grand slam in the bottom of the fifth, leading the Minutemen (30–7, 14–3 A–10) past St. Bonaventure 10–4 in the first game of yesterday's doubleheader, which was moved from Saturday due to rain.

In the second game, Sophomore Adam Correa and shortstop Brad Gorrie hit back–to–back home runs in the 3rd to push UMass past the Bonnies 6–2. Sophomore Bill Cooke (5–2) pitched a complete game seven–hitter and did not allow an earned run for his fifth win of the year.

With the sweep, UMass captured the A–10's East Division title, and become the first team to clinch a spot in the A–10 Championships. The A–10's, which begin on May 15th in Boyertown, Pa., feature the top two finishers in each division. The Minutemen have now won 20 of their last 21 games, and have posted their fourth straight 30–win season.

The three game series against the Bonnies (18–23, 8–9 A– 10) concludes today at noon at Earl E. Lorden Field, with Scott Barnsby (4–0) expected to start for UMass.

Massachusetts 10, St. Bonaventure 4

Senior Jason Bennett scattered five hits and four runs, and struck out a season–high six batters, to pick up the complete game win. Bennett has now pitched four straight complete game victories, and improves to 8–1 on the year.

Mazzafero, who was second in the nation in hitting at the time of his injury with a .487 batting average, took St. Bonaventure starter Ryan Rademaker's first pitch deep over the rightfield fence, clearing the bases and giving UMass a 9–1 lead. Mazzafero ended up 2–for–3 with four RBIs.

According to Mazzafero, it has been tough having

Turn to BASEBALL, page 9

HUI GAO / COLLEGIAN

UMass baseball hosted St. Bonaventure in a double dip yesterday which was rained out on Saturday.

UM men's lax makes statement to NCAA tourney committee

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — NCAA men's lacrosse committee take note: the Massachusetts team is ready to play.

With one game left on its schedule heading into Saturday's contest at Brown, the Minutemen knew their postseason fate rested, in large part, on that game.

They knew and it showed. When the game was over, UMass had done everything it could to send a message to the folks who decide the field for the NCAA tournament: "We're not going to let you leave us out of this one."

That message came in the form of a 9–4 thumping of the Bears at Stevenson Field. The score could have been 9–2 if not for a pair of too–little–too–late tallies by Brown's Justin Coleman and Scott Banarjee.

Those late–game goals, however, did little to dampen the spirits of the victorious Minutemen.

"That's soul to the hole right there!" UMass defenseman Harold Drumm shouted as he followed his teammates into the locker room.

"A whole new season!" Brendan Glass, a senior attacker, hollered as he escaped the rain.

That is what the Minutemen were hoping to do: position themselves for a whole new season. That is what they did.

UMass posted a 8–5 record over the regular season, a mark that saw the Minutemen upset Army, play with Duke and Loyola, beat Notre Dame and destroy Brown. In addition, they held Syracuse to its lowest goal total of the season.

Saturday's win over the Bears is dually important. Not only did Brown defeat Duke and Syracuse over the course of the season, thereby giving UMass a quality win, but the win also gave UMass the New England Championship.

"It's great," UMass coach Greg Cannella said of his first New England Championship. "We're going to enjoy this for a day."

For the last few weeks of the season, Cannella has spoken about the importance of the team sealing its own fate, rather than letting the committee control UMass' future.

"I think we made the decision for them," Cannella said. "I think so. And everyone I spoke to during the week felt the same way."

The Massachusetts players felt that way as well. They cheered as they filed through the field house hallways to the locker room. They hooted and hollered as they changed for the bus ride home. And they smiled and pumped their fists as they passed by fans and parents on their way to the waiting bus.

"This team has been through so much, the ups and downs, you knew it was going to go our way. Today it did," Glass said. "It was a total team effort."

Junior goaltender John Kasselakis, who was stellar in the UMass cage, was also pleased by the game's outcome.

"I feel great, fantastic," he said. "Everyone was into it one hundred percent."

Drumm agreed.

"It was the first time game we all played as a team, we all played for one goal," he said.

That one goal, postseason play, was suddenly within a much closer reach

Turn to STATEMENT, page 9

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 134 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, May 6, 1997

Hey, Baby wanna shag?

Powers... Austin Danger Powers opened this weekend and stars Wayne and Garth... I mean Mike Myers and Elizabeth Hurley. Check out what our critic thought (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Bonnies pull out close one

Sophomore Aaron Braunstein went 3–for–5, but it wasn't enough as St. Bonaventure squeaked by UMass 9–8 yesterday at Earl E. Lorden Field. For the scoop (see Sports Page 10).

WORLD

Miners missing in Peru after crisis resolution

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Twenty-four miners who dug tunnels for Peruvian commandos under the Japanese ambassador's mansion have yet to return home — two weeks after the end of the hostage crisis — their union said yesterday.

The union sent a letter to the government-owned Centromin mining company, which hired the miners and engineers, asking the firm to say where the men are and to let them return to their families, local radio reported.

Media reports that two of the miners were either killed or injured building the tunnels and the secretive nature of the operation has led family members to fear for their safety, Radioprogramas reported.

Centromin would not comment on the miners' whereabouts. The miners spent several weeks building a network of tunnels under the diplomatic compound where leftist rebels were holding 72 hostages. The military used the tunnels — complete with electricity, ventilation and a telecommunications system — to stage a rescue on April 22.

One hostage and two soldiers died in the raid. The 14 Tupac Amaru rebels who seized the hostages during a Dec. 17 party also were killed.

The union said the company had started recruiting miners for the job on Jan. 5, offering to pay them $2,000 each. So far the miners' families each have only received $1,000, it said.

NATION

Doctors warn patches could harm children

CHICAGO (AP) — Now that nicotine patches are available over the counter, doctors warn they may pose an increased poisoning hazard to children.

Fourteen children got sick after putting new or used nicotine patches on their skin or in their mouths, according to a two-year study of poison centers. The findings appear in the May issue of Pediatrics, released yesterday.

Patches can retain up to three-fourths of their nicotine after use, the equivalent of four to seven cigarettes, said the authors, led by Dr. Alan Woolf of Harvard Medical School and Children's Hospital of Boston.

Sixteen million people are expected each year to buy patches, which became available over the counter in 1996. The authors urged users to keep patches out of the reach of youngsters.

Children exposed to nicotine can suffer abnormal blood pressure or heartbeat, slowed or interrupted breathing, general sluggishness, seizures and coma.

In the study, 36 children under age 16 were reported to have exposed themselves to the patches. Most of the 14 who became ill suffered nausea or vomiting, weakness, dizziness or rashes. Ten were taken to hospital emergency rooms and two were kept overnight. All recovered fully, authors said.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 40	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Happy 50th Birthday UMass!

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Fifty years ago today, the Old Chapel Bells rang proud as students rallied around Bowker Auditorium, cheering when they received word from Boston that the class of 1947, who entered Massachusetts State College in September, would graduate from the University of Massachusetts in May.

This afternoon, chimes will ring again to the tune of "Happy Birthday" as state and local government officials, members of the UMass Alumni Association and current faculty and staff celebrate along with class of '47 members the day that then Mass. Governor Robert A. Bradford signed into law House Bill 533 to change the school's name.

"All I can say is that it was more exciting for a small group of people of about a thousand, than getting into the Final Four and 'Refuse to Lose'," Doris Newman, class of '47 Index yearbook editor, said of the "birth" of UMass. "I look at the current 'Campaign UMass,' and see that we dreamed, we acted and we had a leadership."

A student initiative

There was a growing sentiment on campus that it was time to broaden the college years before the actual change came about. In 1932, Mass. Agricultural College became Mass. State College, but it still carried the "cow college" moniker. A drive to "go university" started in 1941, however so did World War II, and with many undergrads enlisting in the armed services, momentum was lost.

In the fall of 1946, Holyoke native Michael Donohue returned from his GI service in the Army and went to a political science class, which was part of his major. As he and a classmate waited outside for the professor — who never showed up — they started brainstorming on how to get university status for the school. When the class began, equipped with a new professor, Donohue's idea started to become a reality, as their class project became making their school a university.

Donohue headed up the University of Massachusetts Committee, which was responsible for lobbying state and local government officials and for getting the entire student population involved in their campaign. He presented student petitions (you had to be 21–years–old to sign) to then Senator Ralph Mahar, for whom the auditorium is named. Mahar would later file the bill in the Senate for UMass.

A friend of Donohue's who flew bombers in the war "bombed" the campus with flyers about the UMass Committee's goals.

"I'll never forget that day," Newman said. "The whole campus was flooded with leaflets."

The students' lobbying didn't stop there.

"I used to go down to Boston every Wednesday to meet people," Donohue said. "I made it a point to meet every representative and senator, all who turned out to be great people."

Students didn't have cars back then, Donohue said, so he would often get a ride with UMass President Hugh Potter Baker to the city. When he couldn't go with Baker, Donohue said, "I hitchhiked."

"I went out on Route 9 and put my thumb out," he said.

Donohue was a member of Pi Sigma Kappa, and when he needed a place to stay in Boston, he would sleep at the Boston University or Massachusetts Institute of Technology chapter of the fraternity.

While many key players on Beacon Hill were in support of the plan for a University, Donohue did encounter some opposition. Norman MacDonald of the Mass. Taxpayer's Association thought the name change would raise taxes in the Commonwealth, but Donohue eventually swayed him to the students' side.

"We just really kept the pressure up, and our parents kept the heat on," Donohue said. "We finally got the bill passed unanimously through the Senate."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Class of 1947 members (L–R) Doris Newman, Frederic Rothery, Delight Rothery and Michael Donohue will celebrate UMass' 50th birthday today.

Lives change with the stroke of a pen

At 10:15 a.m., May 6, 1947, student body president Gordon Smith announced that the governor had signed their bill, and the campus erupted into festivities, cancelling all classes for the day.

"I was down at the legislature, making sure the governor signed the bill," Donohue said. "Then we called the campus."

"The tears came rolling down my cheeks, and there was whooping and cheering as all the fraternity and sorority members marched down North Pleasant Street," Newman said.

A hopeful Newman had been preparing that year's Index with University logos, and by April had begun to panic that the name change wouldn't go through.

"I cried the whole month of April because I didn't think it was going to pass," Newman said.

Frederic Rothery, who served as treasurer of the University of Massachusetts Committee, explained one of the adjustments the school had to make after May 6.

"They gave us blank diplomas," Rothery said. "They mailed them to us later, because there had not been enough time to print 'The University of Massachusetts' on the diplomas."

The change enacted that day was more than just in name. Becoming a University allocated money up to the little town of Amherst, where a School of Management and engineering department would soon be created. Residence halls and auditoriums would be erected, a majority of them bearing the name of deans, presidents and senators of that year.

A sense of personal growth happened along with the physical growth of the University. Donohue decided to go to law school at Boston University, and eventually served 26 years as a judge in Holyoke. Newman attributes her career as an advertising manager of a major department store to the experience at UMass.

"I became somebody entirely different," Newman said. "Otherwise, I might have been some quiet, little history teacher.

"I really grew from the experience, lots of people did."

Bartlett renovation continues

KENNETH W. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

Liz Giza, a freshman pre–journalism major, and Kim Still, a freshman philosophy major, hang out around the construction site in front of Bartlett Hall.

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

For over one month construction has been underway at the University of Massachusetts to renovate the Bartlett Hall's west entranceway, a plan suggested in the campus Master Plan.

The renovations, which are a collective effort on behalf of multiple UMass organizations, include the creation of a depressed zone surrounded by "sitting walls and shallow terraces" to establish a courtyard atmosphere.

"It's a collaborative project with a variety of programs on campus," said Maren Brown, program director of the UMass Arts Council.

The priority of the renovations though, is the relocation of the sculpture "Playfully nodding to its Fall," a steel sculpture created by former UMass art student Stephen Oakley. The multiple dice sculpture was established in 1983 at its original location on the west edge of the Campus Pond.

"He's been very supportive of this project," Brown said. "He created the sculpture and we felt it wasn't a great location for a variety of reasons. It was being vandalized a great deal at the campus pond location."

In regards to the renovations, Dean Cardasis, associate professor of landscape architecture and regional planning, said that artistically, the refurbishings will explore the relationship between an object — the sculpture — and an outdoor space.

"The project evolved out of three different sources. First, the need to renovate the sculpture and find new location. Secondly, to find a suitable activity for the construction class of Stockbridge landscape program students, and third, to in some way bring these together to improve one of the building entrances as the campus master plan suggests," Cardasis said.

Appending the relocation of the sculpture, the reconstruction of the area will also provide an inviting outdoor classroom for lectures and gatherings. It will also provide a suitable locality for reading, eating and socializing.

Brown said the project came about as a result of the council's desire to clean and move the steel sculpture from the Campus Pond to Bartlett Hall, an academic building that has offices and classrooms for departments in English, women's studies, art history and journalism.

Students enrolled in the University Writing Program and the Bachelor's Degree with Individual Concentration (BDIC) also use Bartlett for academics.

"Dean Cardasis volunteered to design a site which would place the sculpture into a more useful and aesthetically cohesive setting," Brown said.

Cardasis said that he felt the meaning and purpose of the sculpture were getting lost in the expansive surrounding 15 acres of the campus.

Brown mentioned that Dean Cardasis was also working extensively on the project with Stockbridge students who were volunteering their time to the renovations.

"He then garnered the support of the Stockbridge School and the department enthusiastically offered its assistance as well," Brown said.

According to Brown, it is the students' participation in the project that has taken it from the drawing board to outside.

"All the students involved in it have been wonderful. The Stockbridge and landscape architecture students have been putting in an incredible number hours for which they get nothing," Brown said.

Turn to HALL, page 2

Patent disputes may prevent therapy for cancer patients

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Desperate cancer patients including children with leukemia are caught in the middle in a fight between a drug giant and a biotechnology company over a patent for better bone-marrow transplants.

Doctors for one side say the court fight could kill patients by yanking the therapy off the market. The other company accuses those doctors of scare tactics. Now, some U.S. senators and patient advocates are pushing the government to intervene, in a complex battle that illustrates how business and medicine often intertwine. The case "could be precedent-setting," said Washington patent attorney Kate Murashige. "It's a pretty extreme case, where you've got a real public interest here in people's health."

CellPro Inc.'s Ceprate system won Food and Drug Administration approval in December as the first device to purify the cells vital for a bone-marrow transplant to succeed. Purification significantly cuts the severe side effects that cancer victims suffer when their bone-marrow cells are reinfused after chemotherapy, the FDA said. In addition, 60 clinical trials nationwide are testing other life-saving uses. They include an Emory University attempt to save children dying of leukemia who cannot find matching bone marrow. Another trial involves "purging" cancer that lurks in transplant cells, an experiment that CellPro's own president believes saved him from otherwise untreatable lymphoma.

The problem: A federal judge this spring ruled that CellPro used technology it knew was patented by Johns Hopkins University and licensed to Baxter International.

Now Baxter has asked for an injunction on Ceprate sales. But CellPro says that would put it out of business — and consequently take a life-saving product off the market.

"We won't be able to offer treatment to any of these children" if that happens, said Emory's Dr. Kent Holland. In a small pilot trial, he found the experimental treatment saved about 40 percent of certain leukemic children "who have no other therapy that they could even attempt to undergo."

A furious Baxter accuses CellPro of unfairly scaring vulnerable patients. Attorney Donald Ware argues Baxter would allow limited Ceprate sales, with fair compensation, and continued experimental access to Ceprate until Baxter's own cancer treatment wins FDA approval. That could be two years away.

"I'm offended and hurt by the implication that I would be part of anything that would hurt a patient," said Dr. Curt Civin, the Johns Hopkins pediatric oncologist who patented the technology. Nevertheless, CellPro has taken the unprecedented step of asking the federal government to allow Ceprate sales to continue under an obscure law that essentially could repossess the patent.

Lawmakers including Sen. Alfonse D'Amato (R-N.Y.) and the American Cancer Society are lobbying Donna Shalala, the Health and Human Services secretary, to take that step.

It's a case that illustrates how medicine is business — because lucrative patent laws, not some charitable instinct, provide the incentive to create treatments, explained Paul Root Wolpe of the University of Pennsylvania's Center for Bioethics.

CellPro is "not the poor innocent company who got shafted," he said. "Everybody in business knows you don't use a patented product without a license. As so often is the unfortunate result, the people who end up suffering are the patients."

At issue is purifying stem cells, the progenitors of blood and immune cells found in bone marrow and certain types of blood. Patients typically freeze bone marrow before high-dose chemotherapy, and then get back the thawed cells, but remaining traces of toxic preservatives can cause serious side effects. CellPro's therapy uses a monoclonal antibody, a "cellular bloodhound" that latches onto the stem cells — the only cells the body really needs — and, with a magnetized machine, pulls the thimble-full of life-saving cells from a liter of marrow. The result is safer treatment.

But Hopkins' Civin discovered the first stem cell antibody in 1981, winning a patent to the entire class of cell hunters, including the one CellPro later used. Yet CellPro rejected as too expensive a Baxter offer for a patent sublicense in 1991, fighting the patent as too broad.

Baxter counters that CellPro should have simply spent its estimated $10 million in attorneys' fees on a patent license. CellPro President Rick Murdock argues the court action could end exciting Ceprate experiments. Emory's Holland, for example, is creating matching stem cells for leukemic children who can't find a matching bone-marrow donor.

And Murdock used Ceprate to purge from his own stem cells traces of cancer that had leaked into his bloodstream before his chemotherapy. He is in remission a year later.

"We're going to prevail when it gets to the appeals court," Murdock predicted. "But if they take us off the market in the meantime, we won't survive."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Mark McGrath
Copy Editor: Suzanne Barber
Photo Technician: Kenneth W.P. Scott
Production Supervisor: Matthew McCarthy
Production Staff: Joylyn Lombard, Kelvin Torres

■ hall

continued from page 1

"We also have an educational need that we need to fill for Stockbridge students on campus who are looking for a project that will provide them with practical experience outside the University," Brown said.

In addition to the Stockbridge School, the UMass Arts Council, the Physical Plant and the University Gallery are all taking part in the renovations.

According to Cardasis, the overall cost of the construction project is at a decreased cost because many of the services such as labor and design were donated from these area organizations.

"It would have cost us tens of thousands of dollars to implement a project that's now being done for $4,000.00 that the arts council is providing," Cardasis said.

Both said that the main completion of the project is scheduled for the end of the semester, but that plantings of bulbs, shrubs and trees for the site will continue into the fall, where the arts council will then call for volunteers to offer help.

"We're looking to complete the main structures in the site by the end of the semester and all the plantings will be put in around that," Brown said.

Many Collegian desks are hiring for positions next semester. Come down to the offices and check it out.

FBI expert's testimony links explosive receipt to McVeigh

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

DENVER — Timothy McVeigh's fingerprints were found on a receipt for explosive fertilizer, an order form for a book on homemade bombs and a lease for a storage shed, an FBI expert testified yesterday in the Oklahoma City bombing trial.

In the first physical evidence linking McVeigh to bomb-making materials, FBI fingerprint expert Louis Hupp said two McVeigh fingerprints — both of the right index fingers — were found on the back of a receipt for one ton of ammonium nitrate.

The fertilizer was purchased Sept. 30, 1994 — about six months before the April 19, 1995, bombing — under the name of Mike Havens, which the prosecution says is an alias for McVeigh's accused conspirator Terry Nichols. It was found in Nichols' home after the bombing.

Prosecutors contend ammonium nitrate was the key ingredient of the bomb that exploded outside the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building and killed 168 people.

The receipt was wrapped around two gold coins and tucked in a kitchen drawer, other witnesses have testified.

Hupp also said eight of McVeigh's fingerprints were found on a lease for a storage bin in Nichols' hometown of Herington, Kan. The lease was taken out in the name Shawn Rivers. Prosecutors say McVeigh and Nichols stored bomb-making supplies in storage bins. And, Hupp testified, McVeigh's fingerprints were found on an order form for a book called "Homemade C-4: A Recipe for Survival," which was ordered from a Colorado publisher under McVeigh's own name.

Earlier, prosecutors sought to link McVeigh and Nichols to the theft of bomb materials, with testimony that a drill bit found at Nichols' house likely broke open a lock on a quarry explosives bin. FBI toolmark expert James Cadigan testified the bit found in a search of Nichols' home matched marks made on a drilled-out padlock from a quarry break-in six months before the Oklahoma City bombing. Prosecutors contend McVeigh and Nichols stole blasting caps and boxes of high explosives from the Marion, Kan., quarry and used them to set off the fuel oil-and-fertilizer truck bomb used in the blast.

Previously, prosecutors have produced evidence the pair were in the area of the quarry around the time of the theft.

FBI lawyer Mary Jasnowski testified agents also found a prepaid telephone card that prosecutors contend was used to make dozens of calls in search of bomb components.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Smooth as a baby's bottom
Fred Washburn, of Washburn concrete floors, puts the finishing touches on the Amherst Town Hall renovations.

U.S. makes last effort to avoid violent fall of Kinshasa

By Dianna Cahn
Associated Press

LUBUMBASHI, Zaire — Desperate to prevent an all-out attack on the Zairian capital, a U.S. envoy pressed rebels yesterday to enter Kinshasa peacefully, and shuttled around Africa to talk with their leader and the influential men who back him.

Bill Richardson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, urged restraint during the eight days that rebel leader Laurent Kabila has given President Mobutu Sese Seko to resign or be chased out of Kinshasa.

"He has to choose to relinquish power and he is safeguarded, or he perishes with his power," Kabila said in the southeastern rebel stronghold of Lumbumbashi, a day after peace talks with Mobutu. The rebels said in a statement they would guarantee Mobutu's safety and that of his family if he resigned now.

Kabila's 70,000-strong rebel army has captured more than three-quarters of Zaire in its drive to end Mobutu's nearly 32-year dictatorship. Kabila said the vanguard of his forces was 40 miles from Kinshasa's international airport and would be at the outskirts of the city of 6 million within days.

For weeks, leaflets purportedly from the rebels have told Kinshasa residents that rebel forces were almost there.

Asked what would happen if Mobutu ignored his deadline, Kabila said: "He will be chased from the power, pushed out of Kinshasa in a few days."

Mobutu and Kabila apparently made little progress toward ending the seven-month war in talks Sunday aboard a South African naval ship docked in Pointe Noire, Congo. They agreed only to meet again within 10 days.

Richardson talked with Kabila for an hour yesterday and said he was encouraged by Kabila's conciliatory tone toward Mobutu. The former New Mexico congressman — who built a reputation for concluding tricky negotiations in North Korea and Sudan — said he delivered an urgent message to Kabila from President Clinton.

"We stressed our longstanding view that for the benefit of the Zairian people... there should be a peaceful entry into the capital of Kinshasa — a soft landing which avoids violence and chaos," Richardson said.

The United States also wants an "inclusive" transitional government and fair and open elections, he said.

Mobutu, 66, who is seriously ill with prostate cancer, agreed that a transitional authority should be established to organize elections. He said he would hand over power to an elected authority.

Kabila, whose forces control all but Zaire's far north and west, demands Mobutu immediately transfer power to the rebel alliance. Asked about Kabila on yesterday, White House spokesman Mike McCurry said U.S. officials "don't have a thorough assessment of him as a political leader."

The United States and other western powers have troops stationed across the Zaire River in Congo and offshore to evacuate their nationals from Kinshasa, if needed. U.S. officials in Washington expressed growing concern yesterday for the roughly 440 Americans in the city, worrying most about violence by Mobutu's forces. Unpaid, undisciplined Zairian soldiers have been looting towns across Zaire, then running away just before a rebel onslaught. A rebel assault on the capital could provoke looting and mayhem that would make evacuations more likely.

However, the streets of Kinshasa were calm yesterday, with no sign of panic and little evidence of army preparations.

WWW.UMASS.EDU/RSO/COLEGIAN

Attention Grad Students!

Elections for 1997-1998 GSS officers
Come to the GSS General Meeting for 1997-1998 Officer Elections TONIGHT!
Tuesday, May 6th, 7:15 pm
Grad Senate Taxpayers are eligible to vote.
(Bring valid Student ID and/or Bursar's Receipt)

Balloting times and locations:

When	and	Where
Tuesday, May 6th		Campus Center 904-908 During GSS General Meeting at 7:15 pm
Wednesday, May 7th & Thursday, May 8th		Campus Center Concourse Outside the Graduate Lounge 10am - 6pm

For more information, contact GSS at 545-2896

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
London $199 $370
Rome or Milan $340 $635
San Jose, Costa Rica $246 $460
Roundtrip
TOKYO $879
SYDNEY $898
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Call the News Desk with potential stories. 545-1762

Flight Check
LONDON $395
PARIS $587
AMSTERDAM $539
ROME $653
MADRID $629
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst
Tel : 413-256-1261

We want you to write for us!
Call the Collegian at 545-3500

Language • Graphic Arts/Photography • Hotel/Travel/Restaurant Management • Mathematics/Physics • Media Technology • Office Administration • Social Science • Surgical Technology • Theatre/Art/Music • Allied Health • Biotechnology • Business • Computer Programming • Criminal Justice • Culinary Arts • Foreign Administration

Make the most of your summer by earning extra credit.

This year, use your summer vacation to earn more than tuition money. Sign up for courses at Bunker Hill Community College, and earn college credits that you can apply toward your degree.

Whether you want to accelerate your college education, or relieve the pressure of a heavy courseload, you'll find Bunker Hill affordable, and a great place to learn. We offer classes days and evenings, so it's easy to develop a schedule that lets you make the most of your summer.

For more information about the Summer Sessions at Bunker Hill Community College, call (617) 228-BHCC (2422)

We'll make it enjoyable and affordable to earn extra college credits. Call us!

BUNKER HILL COMMUNITY COLLEGE
Learning for the Real World
BOSTON • CHELSEA

BHCC is an affirmative action/equal opportunity institution.

Campus servers honored at dinner

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

The Campus Center/Student Union Commission (CCSUC) honored University of Massachusetts faculty, staff and graduating students who have contributed their services in various departments of the Campus Center and Student Union Buildings at a dinner last Thursday night in the Top of Campus (TOC) restaurant.

Chair of CCSUC and graduating senior Matthew Auger, who coordinated the evening's events, said the ceremony was both an opportunity to thank the old and welcome the new members of the commission.

"It was a great time," Auger said. "For people who went, it was an excellent way to end the semester, and a way for us to connect with our constituency."

CCSUC was established in 1994 to provide student governance in matters regarding the Campus Center/Student Union complex — space on campus which, Auger feels, belongs to the students.

"We allocate space in the building," Auger said. "We recognize all space as student space, and sometimes the University does not like that."

Auger and the three other officers of the commission, Sonali Bajaj (Facilities), Claudia Prodean (Food Service & Retail) and Esther Salas (Vending), have served since its inception.

"The officers that are leaving have been there for three years," Auger said. "This will be the first time that new officers are in place."

The four current officers, as well as Larry Lee, office assistant, recieved awards for their work following a speech by Elizabeth Dale, director of Business and Facilities Service.

The commission also gave flowers to key members of the CC/SU community in appreciation of their work. Director and Assistant Director of Campus Activities Advising Leadership Program Delphine Quarles and Margaret Arsenault, Senior Associate Director of Auxillary Services Bud Wilkes, 1996-97 Student Government Association President Maurice Caston and graduate student Colin Cavell all recieved recognition.

Outstanding Community Service Awards were also given out by the commission. Richard Strycharz and Agnes Ting from Building Services, Roberta Potter from Food Services, TOC Chef Arthur Monteiro, graduating senior Njeri Thelwell, Lynn Robetaille from Student Activities and graduating masters student Nnamudi Mokwuyne from the Craft Center were recipeints of these awards.

Texas separatist fugitive killed in gunbattle

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press

FORT DAVIS, Texas — One of the two Republic of Texas members who fled after a week-long standoff was shot and killed by police yesterday in a gunbattle in the rugged Davis Mountains. The second man was apparently still at large.

The shooting took place at a bunker about a mile from the militant group's "embassy" headquarters, said Mike Cox, spokesman for the Department of Public Safety.

The suspect was shooting at tracking dogs and a helicopter that police were using in their search for the fugitives, said DPS spokeswoman Sherri Deatherage Green. The helicopter crew and searchers on the ground fired back, killing him.

The other man was still at large, Ms. Green said.

Earlier today, five shots were fired at the tracking dogs and two of the dogs were wounded. They appeared to have been shot at close range but their injuries were not considered life-threatening, officials said.

Then, the helicopters from the state and the U.S. Border Patrol circled the area.

"We're on these guys," Cox had said after the dogs were wounded. "The DPS is on their trail."

There was no word on the identity of the man who was killed. Richard Keyes III, 21, and Mike Matson, 48, fled the militant group's remote hideaway about four hours apart on Saturday before other members surrendered. Authorities let the two men go to avoid jeopardizing the negotiations that led to the surrender.

Also yesterday, Republic of Texas leader Richard McLaren and his wife were indicted on federal charges carrying potential penalties of hundreds of years in prison and millions of dollars in fines. Dogs and troopers on horseback initially were held back from the search because of possible booby traps left behind by McLaren's group. Authorities found more than 60 pipe bombs and 12 gasoline cans in the area, as well as several fortified bunkers.

Cox said the dogs, redbone hounds used as trackers by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, were unleashed this morning near a campsite found in a canyon near the Republic of Texas "embassy." Shots were fired at the dogs within minutes. The men were believed to be armed with a .30-30 deer rifle, an semiautomatic military-style rifle and a 9 mm handgun, Cox said.

Of the two, only Keyes is charged with a crime. He is accused of organized criminal activity and kidnapping related to a hostage-taking April 27 that sparked the seven-day standoff. The Republic of Texas believes the state was illegally annexed by the United States in 1845. McLaren, jailed in Marfa, said he would continue seeking independence for Texas. Other factions of the group have disavowed him.

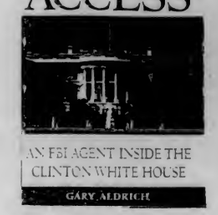
"We're still moving forward. We've not stopped it," he told NBC News on Sunday. He said then he wanted to face federal courts "because the courts in Texas are strictly military courts sitting under war powers."

McLaren, 43, was in jail today without bail, sharing a cell with his wife, Evelyn. He and three other members are charged with organized criminal activity; the others were held in lieu of $500,000 bail.

An indictment unsealed today in Dallas accused both McLarens and five other people of issuing more than $1.8 billion in bogus Republic of Texas financial documents and using them to pay legitimate bills. They were charged with conspiracy, bank fraud, mail fraud and aiding and abetting. Names of the five others were not released because they are not in custody.

"This indictment sends a clear message to those who try to rip off our residents and then ride off in the sunset by wrapping themselves in militia double speak," U.S. Attorney Paul Coggins said in Dallas this morning.

If convicted of the federal charges, McLaren faces a maximum of 725 years in prison and fines totaling $24.25 million. Mrs. McLaren, who appeared before a federal magistrate today in Alpine, faces up to 155 years in prison and fines totaling $5.2 million. Residents of the Davis Mountains Resort subdivision, the isolated development where McLaren set up his headquarters, tried to return to normal life.



KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Go Speedracer, Go
Mark Zytkovicz takes second at the UMass Transit bus rodeo held on campus Saturday.

Gary Aldrich
Author of ...
The New York Times Bestseller
Unlimited Access:
An FBI Agent Inside the Clinton White House

Will speak about his book and experiences in the Clinton White House.
Tuesday, May 6, 1997 at 7pm
In the Commonwealth Room
Student Union (Earthfoods)
Sponsored by The UMASS Republican Club and Young America's Foundation

Double Your Talk Time With Mom.
(2 minutes for the price of 1)

Now available at the University Store

Spree foncards for $5, $10, $20 $50
Rated #1 by consumers

Just in time for Mother's Day
Buy a $20 or $50 Spree foncard use it during Mother's Day weekend May 10 and 11 and it's worth double the minutes. Now that's something to call home about.

See store for details
Campus Center 545-2619
Mon-Fri 9-5 Sat 11-4
UNIVERSITY STORE

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareva Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W. P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quint Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quint Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

To my mother

Christina J. Poletto

"In all the years of her life, she created life. She created, she carried, she bled, she molded."

Again, for a third year, I'll be away from you. I'm here, but longing to leave, to flee this place and all of its suffocating walls. I'm ready now, to pack up my belongings and my dirty clothes, my books and my blanket and go home. I want home cooking and the smell of living back. I want my health and my spirit, too. I want the laughter of sisters and brothers, long drives with dad and the quiet of home. Most of all, I want to be with you again.

Mom, I miss you. Happy Mother's Day.

I can remember the last time I talked to you. Although we talk often, it's never for very long and it hardy ever solidifies around anything more than talk of bills and family.

You were sleeping when I called and I woke you up. But, you didn't mind and within minutes you were laughing. I didn't tell you, but I appreciated that.

We spoke about my life — the pretty purple house I'll be moving into, the first professional job I'll be taking on at the conclusion of this month and my ever constant progression into the realm of adulthood. In three months, you said, I'll be 21 years old.

Sometimes, though, I don't want to grow up anymore.

I think back to childhood a lot and you were always there. Do you remember the time we ran out the back door naked to visit the neighbors? Or the time I "cleaned my room" by putting all of my stuff under my bed sheets? Did you know that we used to hide in the linen closet every time you were mad at us? (I don't blame you, we were rotten children.)

I remember when Michael and I covered the port-a-spa with shampoo and flooded the bathroom and when we used to lock each other in the rabbit cages while playing super hero games. Our tomato fights in the garden were so destructive that you sprayed us down with the garden hose before we could enter the house. You just stood there and laughed.

I remember sitting with you on kitchen stools singing Roxette tunes to you. You told me I could be the next Whitney Houston if I wanted to. Or, when I took piano lessons and I'd come home and play with you in the room.

Graduation, proms, leaving home... you were never not there. Mom, I think I've taken that for granted.

I'm not sure if I ever really told you just how much I love you. I love your warmth, your hugs and your eyes. I love that you take me out for all-you-can-eat Chinese dinners and that you make chocolate cake on my birthday.

I love your humor, your reasoning, your stubbornness. It's what makes you who you are.

Now, as I look back, I begin to understand your logic. Through all of my mistakes, you never condemned my pride nor my integrity. Rather, you sidelined your position and offered help when you could.

Even in my most pitiful moments, running away from my family and my life to find another, you were there to pull me back.

I realize I wasn't the easiest person to deal with. I always blamed it on my "middle child syndrome." It didn't seem to help that I was the oldest girl too. I was always competing for your attention and for your time.

I realize that there's a place that we lose each other when we're together. It's not difficult to comprehend our clashing personalities. But you know what? I've come to the conclusion that even in being opposites, we're alike... stubborn, strangely independent but strong in heart.

Mom, I'm not going to be home again this year. I've got three books to read and multiple papers to write. I have books to sell and leases to sign. I have no time to kill right now. I do want you to know though, that regardless of where I am, in my day and in my life, that you are with me. You will never not be. I love you, Mom. Happy Mother's Day.

Christina J. Poletto is a Collegian staff member.

Exploited rankings lack a pattern

Peter Orvetti
1967-1997

Editor's Note: On May 8, the Collegian celebrates its 30th anniversary as a daily paper. To commemorate the occasion, the Ed/Op page has selected columns from the last 30 years. Today, we run a column, originally printed on Oct. 27, 1995.

Before the football and basketball seasons even begin, America's colleges go head-to-head in a tournament of another story. But unlike the NCAA, the U.S. News and World Report annual rankings of liberal arts schools would have us believe that is possible to rank an institution as a whole, not just its performance in a single area. Also unlike the NCAA, the rankings use no valid standard for doing so.

The U.S. News rankings are more like an I.Q. test than a box score. They purport to rank the inherent intellectual quality of a college, using dubious methods. The rankings cast a final number upon each school. These numbers are easily exploited in admissions propaganda, and until recently, have seldom been questioned. Either you win or lose. No one has critiqued the people doing scoring.

This year, the academic community has finally begun to examine the rankings with skepticism. This insurrection began when the president liberal Reed College refused to take part in the poll. Reed, ranked highly last year, tumbled. U.S. News lamely explained that colleges that do not participate are severely penalized.

That's right, if you school doesn't like U.S. News, you will suffer for it. U.S. News does not report why a respected college like Reed has plummeted — it just degrades the school and makes money off the hit-and-run attack.

The U.S. News method is laughably inept. Part of the process is mathematical — based on acceptance rates, SAT averages and the like (even U.S. News admits that some colleges lie about these numbers, but the magazine still goes by the school's reports). But the bulk of the score comes from a survey of national collegiate bigwigs.

This creates a vicious circle. If the U.S. News rankings for the previous year say that Amherst College is number one, and someone calls up the president of Random College and asks which school is the best, of course the answer will be Amherst. This explains why the same three or four schools have bounced around the top spots since the rankings began.

U.S. News is also a conservative magazine, so more progressive schools fail to make the cut (this year, Amherst led, Williams was a close second). The magazine invented the rankings in an effort to stay in business. U.S. News is faltering in its competition with Time and Newsweek because, quite frankly, U.S. News just isn't a very good magazine. The annual rankings sell, and U.S. News doesn't care if they are right or not.

And so, Amherst is again number one. Number one in what? The idea that any school is the best in all ways is absurd. Right now various lists tell us that Harvard is the hardest school, NYU is the most politically active and UCLA plays the best game of hoops. Students at the College of the Atlantic in Bar Harbor, Maine, are the happiest. They feel they have the best experience with the professors, the best learning environment and friendliest social scene. But where is the College of the Atlantic on the U.S. News list? Certainly nowhere near the all-important top 25.

The Smith College Sophian recently ran an insightful, and critical, analysis of the U.S. News list, while also very responsibly reporting that Smith was rated number 10 this year. By contrast, Mount Holyoke College is treating its number 19 ranking like a rallying banner. In fact, a banner, with each digit of the exalted number painted four feet high, was hung from the campus center building. The Mount Holyoke News ran a tasteless cartoon depicting a student shoving the hapless Number 26 off a plateau reserved for U.S. News' 25 winners (Mount Holyoke Itself was 26 last year).

A growing number of people affiliated with schools both on and off the list are rejecting it. Even Amherst College officials have said that, while their rank is flattering, it is ultimately meaningless. But if the "winning" schools continue to use their scores as the centerpiece of a pseudo-nationalistic school spirit, the U.S. News rankings will remain an important part of the college evaluation process. They will be profitable for the magazine, as it sells the Top 25 schools, the right to reprint the list again and again. And still the numbers will mean nothing.

And furthermore, U.S. News knows it.

Peter Orvetti was a Collegian columnist.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WRITING FOR THE ED/OP PAGE NEXT SEMESTER? IF SO, STOP BY THE COLLEGIAN AND TALK TO DAN BODAH FOR DETAILS ON AN UPCOMING WORKSHOP OR CALL 545-1491.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Letters to the Editor

Support for defunding The Voice

To the Editor:

As a graduate student at UMass, I am strongly in favor of the proposed de-funding of The Voice. I believe that accusations of racism and censorship evade the point: the Voice is evidently not a reliable source of news or objective information. Rather, it is, as the editor himself described it, "propaganda" (Daily Collegian, April 30). I am unwilling to support propaganda, whether or not I agree with the views it supports. In particular, The Voice represents the opinions of at most a single party in the political struggles within the GSS. These opinions are expressed in intemperate, ad hominem attacks on other GSS members, such phrases as "the right-wing lunatic fringe," "the most brazen member of this unsavory alliance" and "the erratic, non compos mentis approach of a bizarre coterie," which while amusing, do nothing to illuminate the nature of the disagreement at issue, or to aid in resolving that disagreement. The approach to the ongoing negotiations with the administration is similarly unconstructive. Why are we paying for this?

Paul Norris
pnorris@psych.umass.edu

Additional thoughts on cutting Voice funding

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to the article of April 30, 1997, regarding the funding of The Voice. My original motion, item 12 on the agenda, recommended devastating graduate student funding The Voice, but allowing it to become a GSO and continue publishing with its own funds. There were myriad reasons for doing this, among them the controversy surrounding the appointment of Hussein Ibish as editor. We felt that funding The Voice to the tune of over $13,000 in light of our current budget crisis was irresponsible, considering the issues we had with this publication. When the question of the budget was called, an amendment was proposed which included de-funding The Voice as a condition of passing the budget.

The Voice is supposed to come out eight times a year, which it does not. The Voice should have published clear guidelines concerning its publication and article submission process and, to the best of my knowledge, It has not. The Voice should be accessible to all graduate students since they are paying for it, but it is not. The Voice is supposed to bill for advertising revenue, which It does not. There is some controversy regarding an unpaid political ad that appeared on the back of The Voice. Huessin Ibish claims that It is not an ad, but a statement. It is not Identified as an editorial statement In the paper. Ibish also said that he was a member of that group. This raises the question of editorial ethics, if not a question of legality.

My arguments addressed several issues including a rebuttal to Ibish's claim that The Voice is the only means we have to be heard and to inform graduate students about important issues. Not one of the issues published so far this year addressed the issue of GEO contract negotiations, which affects all graduate student employees, nor did run an In- depth analysis of the child-care issue which is so important. The article it ran on the Goodell takeover was important, but it was also redundant in light of the excellent coverage the takeover was given by the Collegian and other local news media. I also criticized the lack of space given to international women's issues. This includes issues faced by women in the United States, regardless of race, class, sexual orientation, religion or ethnicity.

The accusation that we are racist and attacked specific articles dealing with racism is completely unfounded. At no time did anyone in favor of withdrawing Voice funding suggest this should be done because of published articles dealing with racism. For myself personally, I support any struggle against racism, sexism, anti-Semitism, homophobia, prejudice and hatred, except when that struggle calls for the use of violence against innocent people to further a cause.

The criticism I have regarding what is published is limited to my objection of using a student-funded newspaper to express the personal political views of a small minority almost to the complete exclusion of everything else and turning the paper into a vehicle for launching personal attacks against individuals with whom one has a disagreement. I feel the latter is beneath the maturity and intelligence level of undergraduates, let alone graduate students.

I resent being called a "racist" and a "white supremacist" simply because I believe a graduate student newspaper should reflect the views and address the concerns of all graduate students. It was my understanding that the world "all" would signify exactly that. When did the definition of "all" become limited to "whites only?" I was not notified of this change, so please allow me to extend my apologies to any student who was offended or felt excluded by my use of the term "all graduate students."

I consulted many of the people who elected me to represent them before I made my motion. They expressed their displeasure with The Voice and supported the motion. The budget proposal for next year includes a $7 tax increase for graduate students and $13,200 is allocated to fund The Voice and its editor. It Is your money and it is your paper — you decide if you think It is worth it.

Shelly Weinstein
Graduate Student Senator

Honors College provides chance to excel

To the Editor:

I am writing In response to SGA President Lia Wong's pandering to the Neanderthal knuckle-dragging lowest common denominator. I refer of course, to her open opposition to the proposed Honors College as "elitist and unfair." Isn't higher education In and of itself elitist? It does, admittedly, discriminate against the monumentally obtuse. Do we, the intelligent student community, have to suffer the remedial standards of the "common" student body? Why shouldn't we foster an aristocracy of intelligence, wouldn't that be better than an aristocracy of wealth?

Every day, the progress of my education is inhibited by the sheer stupidity of the "colleagues" who share class space with me. Is It any wonder that UMass has such a negative reputation? We have services in place to help the educationally deficient, why shouldn't we give the same opportunity to those who wish to excel?

Please, Ms. Wong, don't allow your urethretic policies to further keel-haul the education of those students who come to school to learn, rather than to guzzle booze for four years without Mommy around. This is not a communist country. We are guaranteed equality of opportunity, not outcome. Those who put in the effort to improve themselves should gain an advantage. If we continue to subsidize the laziest and most ignorant members of society, I can guarantee that we will all be equal, but do we really all want to be dragged down to the same level?

Aaron D. Morse
Southwest

Remembering Malcolm X

To the Editor:

The following excerpt was presented 5/3/97 at the Malcolm X picnic: Parties, Picnics and Foolishness.

On May 19, 1925, our brother Malcolm was born at University Hospital in Omaha, Neb., the offspring of Earl and Louise Little. Malcolm X was resurrected through Islam to give us a truthful understanding of ourselves from past to present, so we can better understand ourselves and the society in which we live. Malcolm was to become one who would change the lives and minds of millions. Malcolm was the aspiration of the oppressed, not only in the United States, but also in the international world.

Throughout his life and even to this day, Malcolm has awakened people to their self-worth, their heritage and their humanity. He was a man of peace and a man of love. He was our champion of freedom who loved humanity so greatly that he was willing to sacrifice his life for a solution to the injustices of the world. Malcolm touched our hearts and continues as we listen again to his voice of truth striking like a sword against those who deny freedom, justice, and equality for fellow human beings.

If I were to ask you, who was brother Malcolm to you, how would you respond? Was he a cheap T-shirt or a cap? Was he a basketball tournament or weekend party? Malcolm was neither of those things nor is he a picnic. Malcolm was a serious man who gave us a new meaning of self, life and purpose. I say, if you have any knowledge at all of our brother, you would not be attaching his name to foolishness. This is undeserved.

Now, I call on all the educated brothers and sisters, who love and respect brother Malcolm, to terminate any and all support to functions and programs that promote the moral debasing, character assassination and outright disrespect to Malcolm X and all that he personified. Malcolm X, our beloved teacher, a man not to be forgotten, remember his legacy and stand for freedom for all. Remember his hard work, dedication and relentless efforts. Remember his honesty and bravery. Remember his smile and his love for humanity. I say, remember him for who he was and never associate his name with who he was not.

Emanuel Pires
Alton Byrd
Gorman Nuance Public Relations

Arts & Living

Tuesday, May 6, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

COURTESY NEW LINE CINEMA

Elizabeth Hurley tries to understand what the heck Mike Myers is talking about with his hip '60s-style flair for words in Austin Powers: International Man of Mystery.

Gee baby, Austin is one shag spy

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

AUSTIN POWERS: INTERNATIONAL MAN OF MYSTERY
Directed by Jay Roach with Mike Myers, Elizabeth Hurley, Robert Wagner

Among the pile of recent Saturday Night Live alumni, Mike Myers has thus far managed to remain supreme. As America has grown distraught with their one-time favorite variety show, Myers successfully jumped ship at the right time and made the careful transition to the big screen.

Austin Powers is Myers' fourth film to date, and judging by its fierce marketing strategies— including an insane amount of MTV promotions, it may well be his biggest box office draw yet. Despite the big hype, Powers, although often quite absurd at times, is an amusing parody of the spy film genre. The wide range of satire transcends from Antonioni's artsy Blow Up to the more commercially acceptable early James Bond phenomena and nearly anything else which may fall in between.

What separates Myers from many of his colleagues is his genuine passion for his characters. It was Wayne, the host of the Aurora, Ill. heavy metal cable access show, who originally made him famous. The first Wayne's World film made over a $100 million in box office receipts and with sidekick Garth (Dana Carvey), the blueprints for Beavis and Butt-head were drawn. Wayne's World proved that Myers had a genius for characterizations as well as for writing decent humor.

Myers followed his movie success with the much praised but financially mediocre So I Married An Axe Murderer. He then attempted to rekindle his viewers affections for Wayne and Garth, yet the sequel made just over a quarter of the amount the original did.

But don't worry baby, Austin "Danger" Powers is here for a super shag-licious time at the shindig baby. (Apply pseudo-sexy British accent with emphasis on "baby" to previous phrase.) That's right, the Queen's number one secret agent, who doubles as a fashion photographer by day and finds the time to save the world by night, is back from the '60s. After Powers' arch nemesis, Dr. Evil (a bit cliche, huh?) who is also played by Myers, freezes himself in cryogenic suspension for 30 years, Powers decides to do the same and continue the battle at a later date.

The film begins with a hysterically eccentric look in '60s London in order to show Powers at home in a comfortable environment. Once we jump ahead to the present day, Powers becomes the epitome of the stranger in a strange land. With his out-of-date lingo and sexually aggressive (but very harmless) behavior, Powers finds himself in some ridiculous circumstances. He teams up with the illustrious Vanessa Kensington (Elizabeth Hurley) to battle the evil Dr. Evil (yes I know, pretty witty) and restore safety to the Western hemisphere.

The film's best laughs are the subtle Simpson's-esque one liners. Dr. Evil, who looks exactly like Dr. Spectre from From Russia with Love points out his henchman's name as Random Task. All you Bond freaks will know the reference to Goldfinger's Odd Job, but this short, over weight, Korean bodyguard breaks statues' heads by throwing his shoe at them, instead of his steel rimmed hat.

The story is also broken up into interludes of bizarre "Laugh-In" homages, with dizzy camera shots panning Myers up and down as he throws his arms around and even spanks a girl or two on the fanny. These segments, however absurd, are hysterical and paint an adequate critique of Myers' perceptions of '60s culture. These interesting perceptions make Austin Powers work. If Myers relied solely on a spy spoof, then this may have turned into another Spy Hard. Yet, Myers has taken the time to truly develop his characters and to write his comedy on a number of levels, creating a film that can be appreciated by a variety of movie goers.

There are some points in Powers that are just a bit to random, such as Dr. Evil's relationship with his snotty kid. Together they decide to seek the help of a family counselor, played by the sympathetic Carrie Fischer. Robert Wagner also attempts to find work once again in Hollywood choosing the dry role of Number Two, who is obviously none other than Evil's second in command. For the most part however, Austin Powers works wonderfully and his hip catch phrases will be stuck in your head the rest of the night. Myers has created two new great characters and has written a worthy script. Austin Powers is a definite must-see for both movie buffs and anyone who just wants to laugh. B+

Morris Group performs superbly

By Tricia Van Winkle
Collegian Correspondent

THE MARK MORRIS DANCE GROUP
Fine Arts Center
May 4

The Mark Morris Dance Group brought down the house with a standing ovation Sunday night in The Fine Arts Center. This was not a night of roughly-combined music and dance. Rather, both the dancing and the music complimented each other more than adequately.

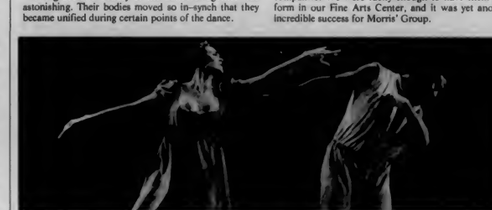
The performance began with Morris' "Love Song Waltzes," a piece known to many of his audiences. The musical accompaniment was from Brahms' "Liebesliederwalzer." This piece is a "portrait of a community dealing with love in our time, a community which unselfconsciously accepts love in all its permutations." In the performance, there were men dancing with men, women with women and men and women together. However, each was graceful and the love being portrayed by the dancers was conspicuous.

The dancers were both strong and graceful and the audience was able to visualize the music with each rush of an arm. The music's fast tempo was full of life, elevating the leaps like the highs and lows of love.

Next was "A Spell," another dance well-known to Morris' fans. The dance is set to four songs by the Jacobean composer, John Wilson. In this piece, Morris himself performs as Cupid. This performance is a funny piece about a love trying to be arranged by the devious Cupid. This piece had a sexual overtone throughout, including movements where the male dancer grasped the breasts of his companion, and tried to look up her dress.

The grace and beauty of the dancers together was astonishing. Their bodies moved so in-synch that they became unified during certain points of the dance.

The next dance was "Office," set to "Dvorak's Five Bagatelles for String Trio and Harmonium." This piece is about what was once Yugoslavia. "The human population is reduced one by one as a business-suited woman with a clipboard summons an impassive victim to exit." The dance was very powerful. The dancers had a pained expression on their faces as another of their associates would disappear.



The fast tempo set a tone of fear throughout the dance. The music and the dance in this piece helped each other and the dancers' feet played the part of the drums to the music.

The last dance was "Grand Duo," set to Lou Harrison's "Grand Duo for Violin and Piano." This dance is a bit primitive and dream-like. It opens with 14 dancers lined up across the stage pounding on their stomachs in near darkness, adding to the dreaminess of the dance. The performance seemed almost the tale of a primitive culture lost to our culture. During one part the dancers seemed to be working, then they seemed to be praying and finally, they seemed to be cursing each other.

The movements of the dancers were strong and completely in synch. The end of the dance consisted of the dancers forming a large circle and smacking their stomachs, and leaping into the air, as if to go to war. The end was spine- tingling and beautiful.

Morris' dance group began in 1980 and he has eight men and eight women. These men and women are not the norm for dancers, including one man with dread locks, one bald, and one with a beard. The company also includes its own musical ensemble made up of four vocalists and six instrumentalists on strings, piano and percussion.

The company is one of the world's leading dance companies. We were lucky enough to have them perform in our Fine Arts Center, and it was yet another incredible success for Morris' Group.

COURTESY TOM BRAZE

Two of Mark Morris' dancers perform a scene from "The Spell" from last night's performance by the Mark Morris Dance Group.

The Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi

The Provost of the University of Massachusetts, Dr. Patricia Crosson, and the Phi Kappa Phi Chapter of this University are proud to announce the following new members invited from the Junior and Senior classes as well as the Graduate School and approved by the Chapter in accordance with the bylaws of the National Society.

Phi Kappa Phi was founded in 1897 at the University of Maine and was originally named The Morrill Society, in honor of the sponsor of the Congressional Act which provided for land-grant colleges and universities. In 1900 it was transformed into a national society by the Presidents of the University of Maine, the University of Tennessee, and Pennsylvania State University. The next chapter to join was the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, which remains the fourth-oldest chapter in the United States. The society was renamed Phi Kappa Phi in 1900, from the initial letters of the Greek works forming its adopted motto: Philosopia Drateito Photon, "Let the Love of Learning Rule Mankind."

To be eligible for membership, Juniors must have a GPA of 3.70 and Senior a GPA of 3.80. Only two Graduate students per program are nominated by their Graduate Directors.

The Phi Kappa Phi Initiation Ceremony will be held in the University Rhododendron Garden, Below the Chancellor's Residence, at 11:00 a.m. on Sunday, May 18th, 1997. Initiates are invited to bring family members and friends. (In case of rain the ceremony will be held in Bartlett Auditorium.)

Undergraduate Students
Amy M. Aherne
Jill A. Aldape
Debby M. Almeida
Marlena A. Applebaum
Daniel L. Baron
Hayes C. Batten
Michael T. Behan
William E. Berghauer
Brent B. Bottamini
Marni L. Brand
Emily Brewster
Kevin Brown
William D. Brown
Sarah L. Campbell
Valerie J. Carter
David D. Cella
David M. Chaple
Angela V. DiPace
Shaynam E. Drake
David A. Drubin
Harold J. Drumm, Jr.
Carey J. Fagerstrom
Tawnya L. Ferbiak
Michell H. Fields-Nartowicz
Elizabeth L. Foley
Jamie C. Fumo
Laurie M. Fyfe
Courtney L. Garcia
Christopher M. Geiling
Mary T. Gerst
Amanda M. Gomes
Michelle A. Goodwin
Rebecca A. Gulati
Zaffar K. Haque
Cindy D. Johnson
Kara L. Hempy
Leslie J. Henry
Sharon L. Herr
Kimberly M. Holloway
Jeremy J. Hunnewell
Song Jin
Jennifer A. Jones
Alicia F. Jylkka
Jason P. Kaplan
Amy L. Kenefick
Jessica E. Kennett
Kimberly E. Kramer
Steve O. Kwon
Bethany R. Levrault
Ryan M. Loss
Katie L. Lynch
Frederick C. Macdonald
Erin A. MacRae
Laura L. Mailander
Michael N. Marchand
Jennifer L. Mayer
Jeffrey A. McClelland
Farah M. Mohd Alkaf
Cynthia L. Mottola
Janice C. Pacchiana
Melissa A. Perry
Daniel A. Pezzotta
Kristen J. Purdy
Jon M. Ritzdorf
Christpher Schulz
Cheng Kuok Seetoh
Gregory C. Silverman
Charles C. Smith
Laurel Swetland
Gregory G. Theriault
Amy L. Tien
Natanya Wachtel
Julie S. Watson
Kerry A. Whalen
Carl O. Wied
Jeffery D. Witzel
Judith Wolfman

Graduate Students
Merrick L. Berman
Jeffrey T. Cave
Elizabeth K. Donohoe
Yuming Feng
Donna A. Goff
Heather J. Hayes
Vera L. Kolias
Suzanne T. Kulik
Phung T. Lang
Mark R. Lucier
Raul A. Marrero-Fante
Christine E. McGlone
Edward L. Melanson
Nancy J. Melrose
Sreekumar G. Pillai
Colin Sears
Janet A. Tonner-Wagner
Sharon D. Tornow
Jennifer B. Stump
Amy C. Wilkins
Rachel E. Williams
Karen M. Wolf

Heidi fails to chronicle any excitement

By Alex Iglesias
Collegian Staff

THE HEIDI CHRONICLES
Student Union Ballroom
May 1–3, 1997

Three days was more than plenty for the chronicled life of Heidi Holland. The anticipated kick-off-your-shoes, laid- back Sunday afternoon show ended up more like a "is the show over with yet" performance of The Heidi Chronicles. The Theater Guild this spring had the tendency— or let us say— a fetish with overwhelmingly long shows. Even though straight play genres typically tend to run longer in performance time than musical genres, there are unwritten entertainment sympathy laws which restrict a theater company from allowing their culturally patient audience members from going comatose — As well as your drowsy- looking light and sound crew which had at least one member take an afternoon nap. Next time, let's try to run the show under three hours.

Richa Kaul's direction of The Heidi Chronicles wasn't a shameful attempt to bring Wendy Wasserstein's creation to the Student Union. The show was a wonderful story as a movie, but flopped on the Broadway stage. Though, a bit more vision in set design and a slight defiance of the status quo could have captured the audience's attention span a tad more. Wasserstein's not around anymore to reprimand your own creativity, so expand and engulf yourself in your own production — improv is good. Teach an old dog some new tricks.

Patience is a virtue and appreciation is a gift we should all endure. By these wise words, the cast of eight was a humorously pleasant group of performers who were a mix of outstanding artists, namely the caustic Peter Patrone who was played by the stage vet Benjamin Ware, and a lower mix of "don't quit your day job" entertainers who were at the performing level of Jon Secada's Broadway debut in Grease. Hopefully, the majority of the performers were fulfilling their college extracurricular dreams.

The show gave disappointing performance from stage senior veteran Darcie Dennigan, who played the leading role of Heidi Holland. The continuously repetitive and uncreative facial expressions, which became more of a facial twitch after the fourth or fifth act, made you wonder if it was really the characters' nervous tick or Dennigan's final night jitters. On the other hand, though, praise to Dennigan for her extensive flawless monologues.

With provocative barraging issues about women's equal rights throughout the entire show, the sub-plot in The Heidi Chronicles, the other two featured sub-leading roles played by the men sparkled through the tantalizing efforts by the comical, yet serious caucus of feminist characters who would blatantly blurt out lines such as "You either shave your legs, or you don't..." The arrogant and somewhat truthful portrayal of a journalist named Scoop Rosenbaum played by Eric Bergman, was a fair performance with a promising future as long as his pre-sentence mishaps of an anxious stuttering syndrome quickly disappear. Benjamin Ware was the last line of defense from a complete disaster in the making. His role as the sarcastic homosexual Peter Patrone was the lifeline of the show, taking the facetious role of an espresso coffee to give the crowd a mid-show wake up call. His extreme caustic demeanor as Peter Patrone was comparable to Howard Stern's morning sarcasm. Ware must have been into character even while at sleep at night. Ware is an actor with a sense of what it is to perform with finesse.

The Heidi Chronicles performance didn't quite have the same caliber as, how can one say... a status-quo Theater Guild show. The show was a tad trite due to the overwhelming caustic attitudes of the entire cast of characters in the play and the overall composure of the entire cast, with one or two exemplary exceptions straying away from the pack. It was a neat and simplistic show tied with a constant battle between men and women, as a splash of humor was thrown in for a good hearty laugh after the periodic naps.

If Siskel and Ebert felt adventurous and took a day trip to watch The Heidi Chronicles, it would result in a thumb down and another thumb, well, parallel to the ground.

For those of you who thought you were special for knowing that last week's quote was from Ed Wood, let's see how good you are this time around. I'll give you a hint. The mystery quote is from a fairly recent film about a bunch of recent college grads who find themselves stuck in their quaint little college town.

"Gee Grover, you have no idea how hard it is to date again. I mean I'm 50 years old and I have to start using condoms again. By the time I get the thing out of the package I've already lost my erection."

If you can guess this one, then come down to the Collegian and give your answer to Adam Levine. Whoever has the most mystery quotes correct at the end of the semester wins the satisfaction of winning.

THE ARTS & LIVING DESK IS HIRING ASSOCIATES FOR NEXT SEMESTER TO COVER ARTS, MUSIC, FILM, BOOKS AND MORE. FOR MORE INFORMATION, STOP BY THE COLLEGIAN AND TALK TO SEEMA GANGATIRKAR OR CALL 545-1491. APPLICATIONS ARE DUE ON FRIDAY, MAY 9.

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

TEXTBOOK BUYBACK INFORMATION
SPRING 1997

Students Need to be Paid Higher Prices for their Books!

We agree. That is why the Annex and the Campus Center Commission has a campaign to get faculty to order their books for next semester before the Buyback starts. If faculty submit their order before the Buyback starts, the Annex can pay 50% of the price of a new copy for books that we need for the fall. If we don't need the book, a wholesale company will pay you their price. Since they resell those books to some other schools (which require shipping), the price will always be less than the Annex pays.

A student was heard to say: "I can't sell it at the Annex unless I bought it there."
Many people think that unless they purchased the book at the Annex they cannot sell it back there. NOT TRUE! We will buy any book that has wholesale value.

When is the best time to sell books?
Though we will buy books from you any day we are open, the best time to sell books is at the end of the semester. Then we know many of the titles we will be stocking in the upcoming semester and we can pay you 50% of the publisher's list price if we are adding that book to our inventory. At other times of the year we can probably only offer you the wholesale price.

Buyback starts May 14, 1997
at the Textbook Annex, Campus Center Room 162, and Hampden Student Center in Southwest.

BUYBACK HOURS

WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, 1997
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 5PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
THURSDAY, MAY 15
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 5PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
FRIDAY, MAY 16
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 5PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
SATURDAY, MAY 17
CAMPUS CENTER	11AM - 5PM
MONDAY, MAY 19
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 5PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
TUESDAY, MAY 20
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 5PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
WEDNESDAY, MAY 21
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 6PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
HAMPDEN	10AM - 6PM
THURSDAY, MAY 22
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 6PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
HAMPDEN	10AM - 6PM
FRIDAY, MAY 23
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 6PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
HAMPDEN	10AM - 5PM
TUESDAY, MAY 27
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
WEDNESDAY, MAY 28
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM

Security Positions
Bright Moments Festival
July 10, 17, 24
You must be: A UMass student returning to UMass in the Fall and available to work the nights of the concerts and attend one informational meeting.
Pay is $5 per hour and free admission to concert.
For information call New WORLD Theater at 545-1972 before May 30th.

BANANADAMA fabulous frozen YOGURT
Small Colombe Frozen Yogurt or Small Newport Creamery Ice Cream
95¢ with coupon expires 5/15/97 +tax
Both Located at 25 N. Pleasant St. Amherst
GOOD THYME DELI
Cup or Homemade Soup or Bear's Head All Beef Hot Dog with homemade chilli sauce if you choose
95¢ with coupon expires 5/15/97 +tax
YOGURT SHAKES, SMOOTHIES, & AWARD WINNING CATERER

CONGRATULATIONS!
Biochemistry & Molecular Biology Deans List Students
The Department of Biochemistry & Molecular Biology wishes to acknowledge the following students who were named to the Deans List - Fall 1996. There were 261 honorees in Arts and Sciences - Natural Sciences and Mathematics - 31 from Biochemistry & Molecular Biology!

• BANSAL, Ruby	99	LEE, Rebecca	97
BURKE, Tara A.	00	McLAUGHLIN, Joseph S.	00
• DRUBIN, David A.	97	• NIEMITZ, Emily	98
ESTAVILLO, Athena C.	00	QUYSNER, Annie G.	00
GAO, Connie Ying	98	RYAN, Julie N.	97
• GILMORE, Lori A.	97	• SCOTT, Brian P.	00
• GOROSPE, Cecilia F.	98	SHANEHSAZ, Piam	00
GOTTFRIED, Elyssa Z.	97	STRASSNER, Stephen M. III	98
• GOWER, Adam C.	97	• STUPINA, Vera A.	97
• GROVER, Meera	99	• TAVA, Christopher P.	97
• GROVER, Neil K.	97	TEFFT, David L.	97
• KAPOOR, Bonu	00	VO, Mieu D.	99
• KOO, Sumin	99	• WARNER, Beth M.	98
• KOSINSKI, Melissa S.	00	WEITZE, Scott A.	98
• KRISTEK, Hannah C.	98	• YU, Wenshu	99
• LANDON, Bridget B.	99	* Indicates Honors

Location: http://www.umass.edu/uhs/mentalhealth/
uhs University Health Services
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES
Welcome to UHS Mental Health Services' Web site!
Our website offers information on:
- Anger
- Anxiety
- Depression
- Drugs
- Eating Disorders
- Panic
- Relationship Violence
- Substance Abuse
- and more ...

We invite you to visit our self-help and general resources page at http://www.umass.edu/mentalhealth

SUMMER SESSION
College Students...
...while you're home for the summer, why not take a course or two at Fitchburg Stat College? In just a few weeks, you can earn credits in English, art, education, philosophy, psychology, sociology or computer science. Both graduate and undergraduate, our credits are transferrable to virtually any college in the country.

Summer Session I	Summer Session II
May 27 - June 28	June 30 - August 2
Registration: ongoing through May 29 (Late charge assessed beginning May 13th)	Registration: ongoing through July 1 (Late charge assessed beginning June 17th)

Register Today! Phone In, Fax In, Mail In or Walk In (508) 665-3181, Fax 665-3658, E-mail: dgc@fsc.edu
PS...Call for information on exciting, amazingly affordable credit studies abroad in Rome, Italy and Hilo, Hawaii. Each program runs during the month of July.
Fitchburg State College
Division of Graduate and Continuing Education
Visit our Web Site at www.fsc.edu

LAUREN ROSATI/COLLEGIAN

Waiting is the hardest part...
The Massachusetts men's lacrosse team awaits the opener of the NCAA tournament, which kicks off this weekend when they take on the Flying Dutchmen of Hofstra in West Point, N.Y.

Pitino announcing today; UK coach offered C's job

BOSTON (AP) — Rick Pitino appears ready to take over the Boston Celtics, a job he called "the greatest opportunity ever afforded a coach."

Pitino, holding an impromptu news conference yesterday after a book signing in Atlanta, said he will announce today whether he'll leave Kentucky for the Celtics and a reported $70 million. "Whoever gets the Boston Celtics job is getting a great honor, Pitino said after promoting his motivational book, Success is a Choice."

Pitino planned to meet this morning with Kentucky athletic director C.M. Newton before revealing his decision.

WBZ-TV in Boston reported he already agreed to coach the Celtics for the first six years of a 10-year deal before becoming director of basketball operations for the final four. And a Boston TV station reported the agreement could make him the highest-paid coach in sports history.

There were other signs indicating Pitino would leave Kentucky, where he has three years left on his contract. If he takes over the Celtics, he would run a team with an NBA record 16 titles but coming off the worst of its 51 seasons.

He pulled out of alumni functions in Kentucky yesterday and tomorrow and called off a book-signing in Henderson, Ky., scheduled for today.

Pitino repeatedly said he likes New England, where he played basketball at Massachusetts and got his first head coaching job at Boston University.

But Celtics owner Paul Gaston, who hasn't commented throughout the search for a successor to M.L. Carr, didn't shed any light on the process.

"I will let you know if we have something to announce," he said yesterday.

Pitino had indicated last month when he signed copies of his book at a Boston University bookstore that it was unlikely he would come to the Celtics.

But at the Chapter 11 bookstore in an Atlanta mall yesterday, he said, "For me, it's a matter of whether I want to be a professional basketball coach or impact lives like I've done in the past eight years."

In that time, he led Kentucky to the Final Four three times and won the NCAA title in 1996.

Pitino was very close to moving to the NBA after last season. He said he was 99 percent sure he would accept a five-year, $30 million offer to coach the New Jersey Nets. But he turned it down after a golf excursion to Ireland with university boosters. "I'd like to end my career as a Kentucky basketball coach," Pitino said at the time. "This is my home. I didn't grow up here, but this is home."

The Celtics offer, however, appears to be even more lucrative. A Lexington TV station, WKYT, said it has been increased to more than $70 million — $7 million a year for 10 seasons — and a 3 percent ownership in the team.

Carr, who is still the Celtics director of basketball operations, quit last Wednesday after two seasons as coach. The Celtics were 48-116 and failed to make the playoffs in that stretch. Their 15-67 record this season was the seventh worst in NBA history.

One of Pitino's former players thinks he'll be reunited with his college coach. Antoine Walker, who finished fourth in this year's rookie-of-the-year balloting, talked with Pitino at the university's gymnasium on Sunday night.

"I got the feeling he's coming (to Boston)," Walker told The Boston Globe.

■ crew

continued from page10

and other programs have sent out suspicions, no one had confronted UMass.

The second reason, Dietz said, is that every student athlete at UMass has their eligibility cleared weekly. Lastly, the Minutewomen went into the race thinking it was a league race, but the contract held that it was a just a race. The Ivy League doesn't have a charter nor federal tax identifications, they just distinguished themselves as a league.

How this all ties together is that Ivy League teams no longer have the advantage of being the only schools able to recruit. Also, state schools still have to spend most of the first year battling and teaching, instead improving and perfecting.

"What it comes down to is that we would be ignored if we were slow but we're not, not hardly," Dietz explains.

"It has brought the team closer together," Wilbur said. "We all agree on the rules and we feel like it's making us stronger."

As a result of this weekend, UMass will not accept the invitation to the EWARC Sprints on May 18.

Do we know how to spoil you?
Worker-owned CollectiveCopies
413 256 6425

RESULTS resume
We know what employers want.
Resumes for the real world
▶ Written by a business executive
▶ Student rates, credit cards & checks
▶ Employer lists & cover letters, too
253-9055
In your back yard at 150 Fearing Street

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

THE CANDIRU
is a tiny parasitic fish that swims into one's urinary tract and extends its spines into the walls of the urethra, causing excruciating pain. Once there, it is impossible to dislodge. We tell you this so that if you don't get into medical school, you will know that there are others suffering more than you.
Free MCAT Seminar Wednesday, May 21 Kaplan Amherst Center Call 549-5780 for details
For information about Medical School and the MCAT, call
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST

OUTSIDE SALES
Ganz Inc., a rapidly expanding national leader in the gift and stationery industry, servicing a wide variety of retailers, has outstanding career opportunities on our sales team.
SALES REPRESENTATIVES
$30,000. - $40,000.00
first year potential earning
- Boston/Cape Cod
- Vermont/western MA
- Westchester, NY
- Maine
- Scranton, PA

In addition to excellent earning potential, Ganz Inc. provides a comprehensive benefits package including medical/dental, ongoing training and advancement opportunity. To apply, please send/fax resume to:
Ganz USA
Dottie Moretti, Regional Sales Manager
8 Barnard Lane, Eliot, ME 03903
Fax: 207-439-3440

Lincoln Real Estate
Gilreath Manor Condos
on Hobart Lane
Showings Start in April for June or September Occupancy!
- 3 Bedroom
- 1 1/2 Baths
- Heated Basement
- Gas Heat & Hot water
- Hardwood Floors
- 1/2 mile to campus
- On Bus Route

LINCOLN REAL ESTATE · 23 N. PLEASANT ST. · 253-7879

!! SUMMER SPECIAL !!
$99 FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA $99
175 UNIVERSITY DRIVE, AMHERST, MA 253-3539
!! STARTS NOW !!

LEARNING FOR THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE
·LEARNING FOR A LIFETIME·
UMASS SUMMER SESSION 1997
Now is the time to advance your career, explore other options, plan for a new future, get ahead in your studies, or enrich your life.
- Hundreds of Credit Courses
- Workshops for Personal and Professional Enrichment
- Part-time Specialized Degree Programs–Bachelor's and Master's
- Professional Development Courses for Teachers

Classes held days, evenings, and weekends
- Session I: June 3-July 11
- Session II: July 15-August 21
- Variable Sessions

Call 413-545-0107 for a free course catalog or e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Find it on our website: http://www.umass.edu/contined/
DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION · UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

For a Sporting Good Time
Athletic Department Year End Sale!
25% - 50% off all items
Large Selection of athletic merchandise
Monday May 5th
Tuesday May 6th
Wednesday May 7th
10:00 am - 4:00 pm (each day)
Richard Garber Field behind the Curry Hicks Cage
UMass Athletics

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option. 3 bedroom Puffton; renovated; A/C, heat included. Near pool. Available 6/1. Call 549-7123

3 bedroom apartment Available 6/1. $700 253-5766

Take over my lease at Tha Boulders! $20 off first month's rent and FREE rent in July. Call Jaff at 253-7872

2 bedroom Braodywioe Pond view $780/month Reduced rent in June and July. Starting 6/1. Call 549-0023

Take over our lease- 2 bedroom apt Brandywine Gas, heat and stove included Available from 5/1 $710 549-3570

Ceeter of towe 1,2,3 bedrooms Gas, heat, hardwood floors. 253-7879

2 bedroom Available 6/1. 1010 N Pleasant #3 549-4142

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550 2 bedroom- $425 20 minutes from campus no bus. Available for Sept. 665-2203

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept. at Squire Village 665-2203

AUTO FOR SALE

93 Volks Fox Nothing but highway miles Very clean Very reliable. $2500 or B/O 549-9221 Leave message

85 Nissee Maxima Statioe Wagoe Good shape Includes insane music system Call 546-2002 Ask for "Z" It's a luxury college car Sunroof, CD,Power Everything

92 Eagle Talon red/black standard, power windows/locks, moon roof, 98K miles, $7000 or B/O. 549-8102 or 323-4888

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER HELP
EARN EXTRA MONEY!!!!!!!!
FLEXIBLE HOURS!!!!!!!
SPEND YOUR SUMMER IN BOSTON!!!!!!
STARTING PAY $9.00 TO $11.00 PER HOUR PLUS TIPS!
IF YOU ARE ATHLETIC, MOTIVATED, A NONSMOKER
ENJOY HARD WORK AND A WORK OUT PLEASE GIVE US A CALL OR COME IN
PLEASE CALL GENTLE GIANT MOVING AT 617-661-3333

RETAIL SALES
Sales Staff- $6/hr + Commission
Guaranteed Minimum $8/hr
Cashiers, Stock Clerks- $6/hr
NAMCO, one of America's largest retailers of above ground pools, has immediate openings in the following locations:
Avoe, MA- 508-835-9534
Billerica, MA- 508-663-8848
Enfield, CT- 860-741-0737
Framingham, MA- 508-875-4193
Hanover, MA- 617-826-7790
Springfield, MA- 413-736-0364
Swansea, MA- 508-675-8777
Worcester, MA- 508-756-3753
Candidates should possess a customer-

EMPLOYMENT

focused "can-do" team spirit. We offer a very competitive pay plus commissioe. For additional locations in Connecticut or Southern New Hampshire call 860-646-3666 ext 216

Realdastiel Summer Camp Coasselors Waated by Nature's Classroom. Live-in position Available in Massachusetts to anyone who honestly likes being with kids 1-800-433-6375

Part-Time Positions available for hard-working, dependable people starting May 21/Competitive wages If interested contact Justin 549-1128

Drivers Weeted College students, anyone to sell Good Humor Ice Cream from one of our vending trucks Work outdoors this summer. Be your own boss RTS available in your area. Earn $750-$950 weekly Male or female Apply now Call Mon-Sat 9am- 5pm only (203)866-2641 or 1-800-899-1009

Summer Childcare Two children, ages 11 and 14. $6/hour Must have car. 256-1229

Paistero Waated Earn $3000-$5000 for summer Westwood, Dedham area Call Mike 549-3759

Financially Impaired? Expanding National Company seeking 5 motivated capitalists interested in rapid advancement Call (413)584-6192 for interview

Are you a computer gera? The Office of Information Technologies is now hiring qualified student consultants for the Summer and Fall Semesters. We are looking for both undergraduate and graduate students Research assistantships are available for qualified graduate students Visit our web page http://www-oit.umass.edu/oit/jobs to apply and for more information

Virgia Records College Rep. Position Get music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position, 10-15 hrs/week. Please fax resume and cover letter to Elizabeth Gruenewald at (310)998-2433 or call 1-800-242-7421 to apply Sophomore or Junior with car preferred Previous music industry experience is a plus!

Bar or Waitperson Apply in person The Paddock- 127 Elm St., Hartfield

University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure Training Program Excellent Advertising Sales Marketing and PR experience. Call 1-800-743-5956 ext 122

CAPE COD RESTAURANT Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers Will train, housing available Eastham and Orleans (508)255-5394

Summer Employment
Experienced truck drivers for part-time. Approximately 12 or more days in Mid-June and Mid-August

EMPLOYMENT

$105.00 to $135.00 a day. (508)653-7422

Eavironmeotal Salos. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area You'll never know unless you call. (413)827-7555

Part-Time Salos Reps Waated "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St - D40, NYC, NY 10014

FOR RENT

3 bedroom house close to Uptown Big back yard. Call 549-6510

3 bedroom apt. in house. NoHo Center $725 + utilities On bus line 582-7030 Available 6/1

Take Over Our Lease Will sublet, starting June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywina Includes heat and hot water Rent negotiable Call 549-0530

Take over our lease! 1 bedroom On bus line Available Aug or Sept Call 665-5191 or email summer275@aol.com

Amherst Center 44 Kellogg Ave 2 bedroom, spacious, huge porch Call Harlow Properties 256-3442

2 bedroom apt.- Creetview Available 6/1 A must see Call 548-7017

Take over lease in June or September Southpoint Townhouse. 2 bedrooms, 1 1/2 baths Hot water included On bus line 253-1457

1 bedroom apt.- On bus route 5 minute walk to campus. Crestview Apts. Starting June 1st. Call 549-4943

Rent is Brandywine Call 549-0319

Take over our lease Available 6/1 3 bedroom Great location on bus line. Call 256-6034

3 bedroom cozdeo Hobart Lane Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement Now showing for June and September Lease $1300- 253-7879

FOR SALE

3 Couches For Sale 2 Loveseats + 1 Huge Couch, Lawn Furniture, 2 Lounges + 2 Chairs w/Pads, Charcoal Grill. Come check it out and make me an offer! Craig 253-3338

Microwave $70 Phone and Answering Machine $40 Call Vickie @ 549-4940

Mac LCIII Monitor and printer, fax modem, and lots of software $300 or B/O. Call Neal 548-9170

Full Size Futon with mattress cover included. Must sell. Excellent condition. $100. Call 549-7882

Bunk Bed $150 Modern, excellent condition Call 253-6449

EMPLOYMENT

Maze Cazcoodle Toaring Bike Excellent condition. $250 or B/O. Call Sharon 549-1773

Schwiao Maoo 12 Speed Road Bike. $100. Good condition. Call 253-7234

FOUND

Foand: Bracelet Tuesday 4/29 in Hampshire Dining Hall. Call Holly at 8-5428

HOUSE FOR RENT

House For Rent $1700 per month 4 bedrooms, one-half miles from Mullins Center. Gas, heat. Call 253-7879

MISCELLANEOUS

Graduation Weekend- Beautifully furnished rooms available. Fifty dollars a night. Call 259-1938

PERSONALS

To The Nice Guy
Who Walked By South College
On Wed. April 30th
Around 5:30pm.
May You Always Know The Warmth And Kindoess Of Your Words Firsthand
JL- Writing Autobiography

ROOM FOR RENT

Female Noo-Smoker to share apartment with two friendly females Summer and Fall! Call Megan at 549-2626

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond 3 rooms available 6/1 Brand naw washer/dryer Clean, quiet, sunny $300+ Call 253-4954 for more info

1 large room in two bedroom apartment Looking for two females Available 6/1 and Fall and Spring Option On bus route Very spacious Great location Call 549-3992

2 bedroom available in 3 bedroom Mill Valley Apt Looking for 4 people to share $720/month Females preferred If interested call Jess @ 6-6477 or Michelle @ 665-8752

One room available 6/1 Near Puffers Pond Female non-smoker. No pets $220 + 1/4 utilities On bus route Call Darcy @ 546-5918

Summer Sublet Starting 6/1 $220/month 1 mile from campus 546-3392 Female only

Great one bedroom apt. for Summer Sublet w/Fall Option Colonial Village Available June 1st. $400/month Call now at 256-0860

Large room in house Private bathroom On bus line Short walk to UMass $275 per month inclusive 549-6589

Downatowa Amherst Apartmeot Fall Option Two large sunny rooms in great house with housemates Females preferred Non-smokers $275 Call 256-8330

ROOMMATE WANTED

Need a place for the summer? We have 1 room available in Puffton! Male or female 1 or 2 people Call 549-8513 Ask for Jessica for more information Or Chris at 549-6102

ROOMMATE WANTED

I aeed a roommate. Clean, friendly girl is looking for 1 girl to share a 2 bedroom townhouse in Southpoint Apts If interested call Tina at 546-6843

SERVICES

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Rabbit Rescue cao help! Don't abandon your bunny! Call us, we'll find him a new home. Ellen 367-0105

Pregoaat? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

Broadywioe 2 bedrooms, A/C, pool Rent negotiable 549-6452

Room Available 5/15 Great location near Amherst Center $350 includes all utilities (201)670-8228 Leave message

Phillips St. Apt. June 1- Sept 1. 4 bedrooms Excellent location. $1100/month negotiable Call 549-8994

3 bedroom sawiy reaovated apartmeat Puffton Village Best Offer Available 6/1 Call 548-5405

Sublet or Take Over Lease 6/1 2 bedroom Brandywine. Recently renovated. 549-5132

House with 2 bedrooms available On bus route in Hadley. 1 bath $170 a month + utilities/bdr Call Paul 587-0471

2 bedrooms available in condo right on campus June to August Just $46-3142

2 bedroom available in 3 bedroom Mill Valley Apt Looking for 4 people to share $720/month Females preferred If interested call Jess @ 6-6477 or Michelle @ 665-8752

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond 3 rooms available 6/1 Brand naw washer/dryer Clean, quiet, sunny $300+ Call 253-4954 for more info

ROOM WANTED

Outgoing, friendly female is seeing housemates 9/97- 12/97 Call Odette 584-8597

SUMMER SUBLET

Large furnished bedroom on Sunset Ave Right across from Southwest. Available 6/1. $275/month- Call 549-9954

Great 3 bedroom apartment In prime location 5 min. to campus, 5 min. to town. Call Rachel for more info. 253-6449

2 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt Available 6/1 w/Fall Option. 549-4493

2 bedroom apt.- Boulders Newly renovated. Hot water included. $760 Great place One mile from campus Call 253-6670 Ask for Alyson or Amy

Summer Sublet- Fall Option One room- Brandywine—Sublet one room or whole apartment-Newly carpeted-Free gas and heat- Bus route 549-6087 or 549-7886

Sublet- Sunderland PVTA stops at house Considerate housemates. One bedroom. $284/month. 665-9066

1 bedroom available in furnished 4 bedroom house Starting 5/31 Two miles from campus Interested call Andrew 549-2896

3 bedroom apt. Puffton. Renovated Heat/hot water included Daily $900/month/ Available 6/1 call 546-1449

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apartment Available 6/1 Cheap with Fall Option.

Mill Valley- 2 bedrooms Heat/Hot Water included Available 6/1 With Fall Option 253-8534

South Amherst 2 bedroom apartment $585/month. Call 256-4788

2 bedroom- Boulders Includes A/C and water On bus line Available 6/1 Call 256-0665 ASAP.

2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom apt in South Amherst 2 bathrooms Rent negotiable Call 253-6606

Renovated 2 bedroom Puffton Apt Heat/HW included. A/C, parking Available 6/1 with Fall Option. Will pay $100/month for summer. Call 549-0863

Sonny Spacious House Two bedrooms available Great summer location with hiking and bike paths, deck and backyard. 5 miles from UMass 256-6336

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths, first floor. Available June 1st One month free. Call 253-8487

1 bedroom in a 2 bedroom apartment Available May 31st-Dec 31 Cliffside Apts- Sunderland On bus route Everything included. $315 a month 665-7988, 665-8336.

Sublet $200 a month in Amherst On bus line Call Andy 253-5482

2 bedroom Braodywioe Apt. Bottom floor facing pond Heat/hot water included. Bus route Price Negotiable 549-5066

SUMMER SUBLET

Renovated 2 bedroom apt. in Sunderland Furnishings negotiable. Washer/dryer, carpeting, pool, volleyball. On bus route. Great deal! Call 665-5080

One bedroom apartment on bus line $550/month. Call Tricia (617)247-2388

3 bedroom apartment June-Aug Pool/Courts Sunderland. Call 665-0298

One female to share large, furnished room in 2 bedroom apartment on bus route Close to campus Available June 1-Aug 31. Call 549-1479

2 bedroom 2 bathroom apartment. 207 Sunset opposite College Pizza. Very close to campus Rent negotiable Available 6/1-8/31. Call 549-5806

CHEAP! 1-3 people needed for a clean furnished apt. Central Air/H20 included On bus line, 1 mile from campus. Call 548-8850

1 bedroom is a 3 bedroom apartment. Available June-August w/possible Fall Option $250/month. Call Ani at 584-1478

June-August $600 Room to sublet, fully furnished Close to Puffers Pond Near bus route. 549-4047

4 bedroom house Option of 1 to 4 bedrooms for rent. Call 549-9224

With Fall Option- Mill Valley 2 bed, 2 bath, 2 car cond. Frts 4 easy. On bus route 253-1857

Puffton! One large room and one small room in 3 bedroom apartment. Call 549-8969

Single, double, triple rooms in big 3 floor house on edge of campus 3 bath, 3 shower, kitchen, cable, utilities Daily $500 all summer. Available May 23 Call Fabio at 548-7076 for info

2 bedroom apt. Fall Option. 3 floor On bus line. $575/neg. Partly furnished 256-3052

1 bedroom io 2 bedroom apartment. $270/month includes heat and hot water. Available 5/31- 8/31 Non-smoker preferred Call Nick @ 6-0263

1 bedroom available in a 2 bedroom apartment in Brandywine $355/month + utilities Available May 27 Call Cheryl or Christine at 549-1237

Uptown- 4 bedrooms Price negotiable Call 253-9323

3 bedroom/Puffton Semi furnished, 3 renovated Pool and tennis courts Available 6/1 Call 549-4748

Cleao 2 bedroom in Brandywine A/C, pool 6/1 with Fall Option. $800. On bus line, UMass, one mile 549-0879

2 bedroom io Braodywioe $650/month; Available 6/1 Call 549-0181

SUMMER SUBLET

2 bedrooms io a 4 bedroom apt Huge lots of light. $332 each person per month. Southpoint Apts. 256-8968

2 bedroom apartmeot with Fall Option. 1 month free rent. Call 549-4089

TO SUBLET

Need a place to sublet for summer? Nice little cheap room. $230 + utilities. Call 549-9221 for more info

Spacious 2 bedroom in Sunderland $630- H20 included Available 6/1 On bus route A must see! 665-8894

6 month sablet June 1 to January 1. Single bedroom apartment at Puffton Village Rent is $535 per month Includes heat and hot water Call 549-0096

Two females looking to sublet Fall Semester only. Call Katy and Rene 548-3114

Host and Water Included 2 bedroom A/C $600/month Starts June 1st. Fall Option. Furnished. Call 549-4324. We can accommodate any needs

Sublet one bedroom 995 N. Pleasant. Walk to campus Call 549-7757 to view.

WANTED TO RENT

Two female grad stadents with perfectly behaved and maintained dog need summer sublet, preferably near bus route. Willing to pay three months up front, plus deposit 584-1847

INSTRUCTION

JOIN OUR GLOBAL VILLAGE!
1 yr. International MBA
3 Countries & Languages
Financial Aid &
Job Market
Call Texas Graduate
School of International
Management
(512) 888-5441
9 June Enrollment

Collegian Classifieds
They really work!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, MAY 6

Concert — The Five College Early Music Collegium, directed by Robert Eisenstein, will present its spring concert at 8 p.m. in Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College. The program includes masterpieces by Josquin and Monteverdi, performed by voices and renaissance instruments of all sorts. Admission is free and open to the public. For further information, call 583-2079.

Show — A slide show will be held in the Cape Cod Lounge at 11 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. for Yom Hashoah. A ceremony will be held from 1–2 p.m.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 7

Film — Jacob the Liar will be screened at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Auditorium as part of Yom Hashoah events.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series presents Ann Barlow, UMass Art Department, on "The Girl Next Door," in the Campus Center, room 162–175 from 12:15–1:30 p.m. Free and open to the public.

Lecture — "Repression in Massachusetts Prisons: The Inside Story" will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 903. Come hear the accounts of two former political prisoners with their struggles. The speakers will also provide a revolutionary analysis of the prison system and how it functions as a means of national oppression, increasingly directed at members of oppressed nations. A discussion will follow. Sponsored by RAIL, MIM, Boricuas Unidos and Commuter Area Government.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold its final meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 904. All are welcome. Call Tim at 546–0562 or Kaye at 546–1459 for more information.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold a meeting from 5:30–6:30 p.m. in room 304 of University Health Services. All are welcome to attend.

Meeting — Spectrum Magazine is having a general meeting at 8:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Coffee Shop.

Meeting — A University Center 2000 follow-up meeting will be held from 11 a.m.– noon in the Campus Center, room 902.

Meeting — A University Center 2000 office meeting will be held from noon–1 p.m. in the Campus Center Coffee Shop.

be announced. This meeting will include elections for positions opening up for the fall semester. New members are welcome.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Wednesday Night
Mentos & New Horizon Band

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN 2 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Rum Punch

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 6, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Nova "Flood" (R) (In Stereo)	Frontline "The Fixers"				Entrepreneurial Revolution		Immigrant's Gift: Juran
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Entertain Edition	Am Journal	Promised Land "Civil Wars"	Sisters and Other Strangers" (1997, Drama) Joanna Kerns			News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land "Civil Wars"	Sisters and Other Strangers" (199?, Drama) Joanna Kerns			News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Home Imp.	Grace Under	Home Imp.	Spin City	NYPD Blue (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★★★★ "Star Wars" (1977, Science Fiction) Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Moesha	Homeboys	Burning Zone (In Stereo)		News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT		9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	10	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	★★★ "Mrs. Doubtfire" (1993, Comedy) Robin Williams, Sally Field				(In Stereo)	News	Coach	Step Step ?
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	4	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Nova "Flood" (R) (In Stereo)	Colours of Infinity (In Stereo)			Mazes		Hotel Charles	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	40	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Home Imp.	Grace Under	Home Imp.	Spin City	NYPD Blue (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)	Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Moesha	Homeboys	Burning Zone (In Stereo)		News	Real TV	Mad Abo. You	M*A*S*H
WTBS	72		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	Major League Baseball: Atlanta Braves at St. Louis Cardinals. (Live)					★★ "Silver Bullet" (1985)
A&E	69		Quincy "Diplomatic Immunity		Law & Order "Animal Instinct		Biography: Tarzan-Burroughs		Columbo "Identity Crisis"			Law & Order
CNN	30	23	Worldview		Moneyline		Crossfire		Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		Sports Illust.	Moneyline
COM	62	36	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	Margaret Cho	Lounge Liz.	Comica Come Home (R)			Comedy Hall	Viva Variety	Dream On	Daily Show	Margaret Cho
DISC	63		Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "Future Combat Aircraft"		Wild Discovery: Rivers of Life		New Detectives "Double Helix"			Monsters & Mayhem (R)		Wild Discovery: Rivers of Life
ESPN	61		Up Close	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs: Conference Semifinal Game 3 — Teams to Be Announced.						Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	67		Supermarket	Dotti	Intimate Portrait "Bette Davis"		Moms of a Lifetime		"Dangerous Offender" (1996, Drama) Brooke Johnson				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	60		(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		Jenny M.	Singled Out	Unplugged (In Stereo)		Music Videos (In Stereo)		House of Style	World Tour (R)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	65		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Rugrats	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	66		Twilight Zone	Darkside	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest DSV (In Stereo)		★★ "Timemaster" (1995) Jesse Cameron-Glickenhaus				Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	68	28	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Medical Detect	Danger Zone	Connections II	Connections II	Connections III	(R)	Medical Detect	Danger Zone
TNT	59		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball Playoffs: Teams To Be Announced. (Live)					NBA Basketball Playoffs: Teams TBA
USA	64		Renegade "Payback"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote (In Stereo)		Boxing (Live)				Silk Stalking	"Freudian Slip"
HBO	70		(4:45)		★★ "The Night Before" (1988) Keanu Reeves		★★½ "Mission: Impossible" (1996, Adventure) Tom Cruise. 'PG-13'		Six Months to Live (In Stereo)					Comedy Hour
MAX	71		★★½ "Stuart Saves His Family" (1995) Al Franken. 'PG-13'				"Kiss of the Dragon" (1996) Jamie Foxx.		★½ "Night of the Running Man" (1994) 'R'				Erotic	"Little Odessa"
SHOW	73		★★ "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles III" (1993) Paige Turco. 'PG'				★★ "Dangerous Minds" (1995) Michelle Pfeiffer.		"Red Line" (1996, Drama) Carl Weathers. (In Stereo) 'R'					"Mad Men" 'R'

Daily Collegian

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN Tuesday, May 6, 1997 / Page 9

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

First Impressions By Kenneth W.P. Scott

Non Sequitor By Wiley

My Life Sucks By Movie Star Cesnek

University³ By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2020 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Mandarin Chicken
Hungarian Noodle Bake	Meatloaf
Native American Tacos	Ratatouille
Veggy Taco	Veal Parmesan

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Native American Tacos	Mandarin Chicken
Ziti/Italian Sauce	Lemon Pepper Cod
Clam Roll	Pastabilities
Veggy Pasta	Ravioli

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Mandarin Chicken
Grilled Chicken	Meatloaf
Native American Tacos	Make Your Own Waffels
Pizza	Pizza

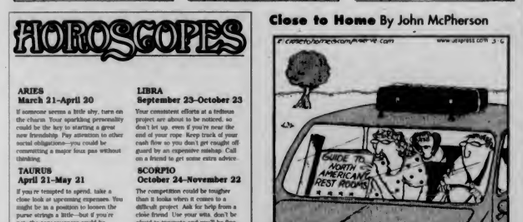
Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Tacos	Mandarin Chicken
Casserole	Meatloaf
Ziti with Sauce	Pastabilities
Veggy Taco	Ravioli Alfredo

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Salam Salloom ©1996

I asked my girlfriend if she would continue to lie to me. She said, " No." I think she's lying. She did admit that the truth makes her unhappy at times.



I asked her how long she would continue to treat me coldly. She said, " As long as you let me."

So, then I asked her, If things get tough again between the two of us would she leave me again? She said nothing.

I do feel a little tug around my neck...

Maybe a leather leash would be nice.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Bud's Garage is seven miles ahead. 'Two stars. Great soup dispensers, attractive tilework. But toilet paper supply is unreliable and flies can be horrible.'"

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
If someone seems a little shy, turn on the charm. Your sparkling personality could be the key to starting a great new friendship. Pay attention to other social obligations—you could be committing a major faux pas without thinking.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
If you're tempted to spend, take a close look at upcoming expenses. You might be in a position to loosen the purse strings a little—but if you're not, the consequences could be disastrous. To save even more money, find creative ways to recycle.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Feeling bored? Try planning a big social event. If that seems overwhelming, enlist a friend to help you with some of the details. Need ideas for what to do? Consider a picnic with a volleyball game or a group camping trip.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Don't skimp on preventive maintenance this week. You could avert an expensive breakdown. Brush up on your technical skills before making a major career decision, and you'll reap the benefits in the near future.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Take a close look at a bad habit you'd like to break. Now could be the right time to make that change. Once you've started, don't be discouraged if it's tougher than you first thought. This is a good time to make a change for the better.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
An unexpected brush with the past could send you off in a different direction. Consult with your family before doing anything drastic. It's a splendid time for traveling. You could make an interesting discovery in a new land.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Your consistent efforts at a tedious project are about to be noticed, so don't let up, even if you're near the end of your rope. Keep track of your cash flow so you don't get caught off guard by an expensive mishap. Call on a friend to get some extra advice.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
The competition could be tougher than it looks when it comes to a difficult project. Ask for help from a close friend. Use your wits, don't be afraid to intimidate and you'll be fine. Don't waste your breath arguing with a stubborn person.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
If you're looking for romance, try making the first move. Consider volunteering for something. You could acquire valuable new skills and enjoy life more, too. Chain or home sets your teeth on edge. You can straighten things out by delegating tasks.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Your sense of perspective lets you understand the big picture. Use this knowledge to your advantage. But don't be surprised if others don't share your insight. Instead, focus on individual problems and try to solve them efficiently.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Bring something that's bothering you out into the open. If you let it fester, it will only get worse. But do it tactfully—thoughtless words are an enemy to progress. A little extra good fortune smiles on you as the week comes to a close.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Take a close look at your "Things to Do" list. Although it seems overwhelming, if you start to assign priorities, it will start to grow more manageable. Make an investment in your future. Household chores lead to a change that's refreshing to you.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Quote of the Day

"An eye for an eye, leaves everybody blind."

–Malcolm X

AC

SPORTS

Tuesday, April 6, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Baseball takes two of three from Bonnies

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

UMass BASEBALL

After securing their three-game series against St. Bonaventure on Sunday by winning the first two games (10- 4 and 6-2), the Massachusetts baseball team (30-8, 14-4 Atlantic 10) stepped onto Earl E. Lorden Field in search of its fourth straight Atlantic 10 series sweep.

It was a game that came down to the wire. However, UMass wasn't able to pull out its fourth win in a row and dropped the final game of the series, 9-8.

"We just didn't execute," sophomore center fielder Doug Clark said. "We're usually the type of team that comes through, but today we didn't do that."

Mike Manning (4-2) took the win for the Bonnies, who improved to 19-23 (9-9 Atlantic 10). Manning went seven and 2/3 innings, giving up eight runs on 10 hits, striking out four and walking six.

UMass seniors Jason Bennett, Brad Gorrie, Steve Levy, David Giglio and Jason Kudrikow will play in their last home game today at 3 p.m. when they take on UNH.

The five seniors will be honored in pre-game Senior Day festivities. Over the four years they played together, the seniors went 139-51 (67-17 Atlantic 10), with three A-10 titles and two NCAA appearances.

St. Bonaventure came out of the gate early when leadoff man Mike LaPointe ripped a single up the middle to center field. Following his lead was Joseph Andreana who blooped a single to center. With two men on, Tom Thiebaud blasted a single past Brad Gorrie, driving in LaPointe and putting men on the corners. Chris Goyette drove in the final run of the inning while grounding out to the shortstop.

UMass answered in the bottom of the first. With Gorrie on second and Clark on first, Pete Gautreau hit an RBI single to center field. After one, the Bonnies led 2-1.

The Minutemen took control of the game from the second to the fourth as Scott Barnsby (4-1) struck out five of the 10 batters he faced during that stretch.

In the bottom of the third, UMass posted four runs. It was a long inning as the Minutemen sent nine men to the plate. Gorrie led off the inning with a line drive blast over the left field fence, tying the game at 2-2. Then, with two outs and Clark on third base, Gautreau stuck out his bat and sent the second home run of the inning over the left field fence. The final run of the inning was scored when Aaron Braunstein knocked an opposite field double to right, bringing in Brian Samela. UMass led 5-2.

In the top of the fifth, the Bonnies answered back. With two outs and the bases loaded, Greg Mamula took a full count pitch high over the left field fence for a grand slam, putting St. Bonaventure back on top 6-5.

In the second half of the fifth, UMass regained the lead. Braunstein ripped his second opposite field double of the game into right, scoring Gautreau. Then with two outs, Ryan Thistle dropped one in left center allowing Braunstein to score the go-ahead run.

The Bonnies would scatter three more runs over the next three innings, taking the lead 9-8. UMass came into the bottom of the ninth down a run. Vince Cozier was on the mound for St. Bonaventure after replacing Manning in the eighth. With Steve Asadoorian on second after pinch running for Thistle, and Gorrie on first from a walk, Adam Correa stepped up to the plate. With two on and two out Correa popped the first pitch high to right field. The right fielder, Joseph Andreana, made the catch and Cozier got the save.

"Things that you don't do correctly come back to haunt us," coach Mike Stone said. "We didn't get it done."

UMass won the series, but St. Bonaventure stole the final game.

"We've just got to put guys away," Clark said. "We can't let them hang around. We didn't step it up in situations when we usually do."

JONATHAN M. PLACE • COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen couldn't finish out a sweep of St. Bonaventure, falling 9-8 yesterday at home. The Minutemen finish up their home campaign today at 3 pm. against UNH.

UM Men's track team finishes 2nd at A-10's

By Matt Perrault
Collegian Staff

The post season is often called the second season in sports. The Massachusetts men's track and field team entered their second meet of the season this weekend, the A-10 Championships. Fresh off a strong showing at the Penn Relays, the Minutemen were gunning for a first-place finish to help propel them into further post-season meets.

Before the meet, UMass coach Ken O'Brien conceded that Virginia Tech would be very difficult to beat, but he was expecting UMass to be right behind the Hokies.

"Virginia Tech will be very tough, and LaSalle may have an advantage being at home, but we should be right there as well," O'Brien said.

UMass, despite a strong showing, finished 15 points behind the Hokies to take second place. The top three teams were Virginia Tech 176, Massachusetts 161 and host LaSalle 124.

The Minutemen performed well, but could not overcome five first place finishes by Virginia Tech.

On the track, UMass performed well, as would be expected. In the 100 meter dash, junior Scott Price took first (10.87) and senior Christian Abbott captured third (11.09). But the Minutemen lost outstanding sophomore Tom Toye to a groin pull suffered in his heat and had to withdraw from 200 meter dash. This would prove costly.

The 200, minus Toye, saw UMass not even place. The top finisher for the Minutemen was Abbott, who finished fifth (22.55). In the 110 meter hurdles, senior Ron Tauro took home a second place finish (15.34), and in the 400 hurdles junior Dave Cahill took third (54.83).

The Minutemen were not in bad shape, but the distance events would hurt UMass. During the 800m, 1500m and 5000m races, the only points earned were a second place finish by junior Ryan Carrara and a third from senior Matthew Behl in the 5000m.

In the field events, the Minutemen performed as expected. Sophomore Albie Vasquez continued his consistent-placing by capturing second place on the pole vault (14'3.5). The discus saw freshman power Victor Morency take home the A-10 title with a toss of 49.56 feet, and sophomore Sean McDole took a surprising third (47.74).

The jumping events were a success for the Minutemen as well. Sophomore Andre Roach won the A-10 title with his triple jump of 47'06 feet. In the high jump, sophomore Ryan Fortune captured second and freshman Jarod Kennefick took third.

UMass's 4x100 team of Toye, Abbott, sophomore Neil Concepcion and Price were back at it again, proving to everyone that they are for real. The team has broken the school record on two occasions this season, and although no record would be broken on this day, the team wrapped up their first A-10 Championship together (41.57). The other relay, the mile relay, finished in third place (3:16.85).

Finishing in second place is by no means a setback for the Minutemen. The team hopes to build off this momentum as they move onto the ECAC/IC4A's next weekend.

UM women's soccer team gets 3 verbal commitments

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

With a series of quality spring exhibitions and five top recruits signing letters of intent earlier this year, the reloading and rebuilding of the Massachusetts women's soccer team has continued at a steady pace. The gap left behind by six graduating senior starters is a considerable one, and coach Jim Rudy is looking to fill more spots in the lineup with speed and skill.

Three more recruits have given verbal commitments, but due to NCAA regulations, Rudy can only comment on players that sign letters of intent. However, verbal recruits can comment on their unsigned status, and one of those recruits expected to immediately fill a spot is Brooke Bartlett from Clifton Park, N.Y.

Going with recent alliterative recruiting tradition, Bartlett joins recent Minutewoman signee Molly Megan McGrew and current players like Tarah Tokarchik, as players who not only rhyme off the field, but hopefully will rhyme on the field. The Most Valuable Player of the State Tournament this past season, the central midfielder for Shenendehowa High School scored 12 goals and 10 assists in her senior season. A Suburban Council and Council District All-Star, Bartlett was also recruited by West Virginia, George Mason, St. John's and New Hampshire.

In the end, the choice of UMass came down to the closeness to her home, and the quality of the program.

"I like UMass because it's close to home, a real good team and the coach... everything was nice about it," Bartlett said. "I hope my speed, endurance and fitness level can help the team, and I'm pretty confident I can make the jump to Division I.

"I've played with collegiate players in club competition, and I think I'm familiar with the playing style," Bartlett said.

Another verbal commitment for the Minutewomen is Alicia King from Mount Anthony Union High School in Bennington, Vt. The defender has been a two-time All-State selection, and was also an All-New England selection this past season. Coupled with her two-year stint on the Vermont Olympic Development team, King will be walking into the UMass lineup with a wealth of soccer experience.

Her high school coach, Dave Holmgren, knows what King can bring to the pitch, and in his estimation, Rudy got a steal in his former central defender.

"Alicia has a lofty goal, and that's to replace Erin Lynch [two-time Atlantic 10 Player of the Year for UMass]," Holmgren said. "But, she can be that type of player for you. She can anchor your central defense, and create some offense for you, too.

"She's extremely tough and very skilled, and she's very demanding of her performance. Simply put, she's flat out mean... but with a smile," Holmgren said.

The last of the threesome is Jen Flaherty, who is originally from New Hampshire, but currently plays at the Brooks School, in North Andover, Ma. As of press time, Flaherty could not be reached for comment.

Minutewomen Notes: Going into their final exhibition match against the Quebec Provincial Champs, Omega du Montreal, this Saturday night at Northampton High School (7 pm), UMass' record is 7-1-1 this spring... a 4-3 win over the Connecticut Lady Wolves of the USISL, and former UConn standouts Kerry Connors and Anika Martinez, last Saturday afternoon culminated their rainy debut at Totman Field... senior midfielder Sandy Shimogaki has made the best of her last games in the maroon and white, scoring all three goals in the team's 3-2 win over Yale two weekends ago and scoring once in the win over the Lady Wolves... sophomore midfielder Robin Smith will undergo surgery on her left ankle this week, but no worries, Smith will be ready for the season opener.

Blackwell signs with NY

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

This past week, former cornerback of the UMass football team Kory Blackwell signed a free agent contract with the New York Giants. Blackwell was one of 12 free agent signings, all of whom participated in the three-day mini- camp last weekend in East Rutherford, N.J.

"It was an experience that I cherish, and I don't take it for granted," Blackwell said. "I was stunned, it was a dream come true, and a blessing. It was really an inspiration for me and the program coming from Division I-AA."

COURTESY MEDIA GUIDE
Kory Blackwell

For Blackwell, the signing epitomized the hard work and dedication that this young man had possessed in his past four years as a Minuteman. This past season, this senior co- captain was both the emotional and inspirational leader of the team. His work ethic set an example to every one of his teammates, and enthusiasm brought life to the program.

Blackwell, a 5'11" 185-pound cornerback led the Minutemen with 13 passes defensed this past year, the third best single season total in school history, along with 38 solo tackles, 11 kickoff returns for 221 yards and nine punt returns for 113 yards.

Head coach of the Minutemen Mike Hodges was very excited about Blackwell's signing, which was the second of a UMass player in the past year by a NFL team, as running back Rene Ingoglia was picked up by the Buffalo Bills in March.

"It's been a long time since anyone made it to the NFL, and it makes you feel good," Hodges said. "It's very difficult to predict what they're looking for, and Kory put some great times down, he ran really well, and tested well."

Blackwell ran the 40 yard dash in 4.4 seconds during tryouts, and was impressive to the scouts as he put forth an all around solid effort, according to Hodges.

"He proved to them that he does have the ability to play at that level," Hodges said. "He's an excellent young man, he's worked well, and the main thing about Kory is that what you see on the practice field is what you get everyday. He's enthusiastic, he helps others around him, and he has the versatility to do a lot of things."

Blackwell will be making his return to his home town in New York in exciting fashion, and fulling a dream that many can only hope for, to make it to the NFL.

However, what is most impressive about Blackwell, is his optimism, his unbelievable attitude about all situations, and the way he goes about everything in his life. He knows the hard work that it took to get to the top, and knows that it will take nothing less of that to stay there.

"I look at it as an opportunity to get better," Blackwell said. "This is not handed to me, so I look at it as I earned it by working hard, and I have to keep working hard, regardless of what kind of contract or what kind of money I'm presented with. It really doesn't matter unless I put the work forward because I believe you bear the fruits of your labor."

Blackwell ended up missing the team banquet because of tryouts but a prerecorded message from him before he left expressing his thanks was shown in his absence. He was also awarded the defensive player of the year award.

Blackwell will be facing a very hectic end of the month with graduation on May 25, his wedding on June 1 and training camp beginning on June 2. However, Blackwell is looking forward to it all, and is taking it one day at a time.

"I thank God for the blessings and I have no complaints, I just have to follow my heart," Blackwell said. "I just like to say to all the seniors, to keep practicing and preparing themselves cause they rarely know when opportunity is going to present itself to them."

Turn to CREW, page 7

Controversy hits crew; UMass beats Radcliffe

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

Adversity can either shred or improve the bond for any group, especially one as strong as the undefeated Massachusetts women's crew team.

This past Saturday was supposed to be an ordinary meet versus Boston University and possibly Radcliffe College. The only ordinary thing about it was that UMass posted another win.

The UMass varsity eight (6:29.0) beat Radcliffe (6:32.5), Rutgers (6:34.9) and BU (6:36.1). UMass' second varsity finished second (6:52.7) to Radcliffe (novice, 6:39.2). Radcliffe's freshmen boat won in a time of (6:54.4) over second place BU (6:56.6) and third place UMass (7:07.7).

In case you hadn't noticed, Rutgers University was not mentioned in the original race schedule issued to UMass. Rutgers is ranked second in the Mid-Atlantic Region, which would have forced coach Jim Dietz to taper off in preparation for the stiffer competition.

But the problem came in a story published in the Sunday's Boston Globe by staff writer John Vellante. In his article, Vellante said that two to three of UMass's women's rowers were ineligible.

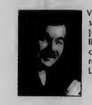
The misunderstanding is in the Emerging Sport Timetable, which was set up specifically for women's sports by the NCAA, especially for sports like crew. Athletes in high school who aren't introduced to the sport until college can receive an extra year of eligibility.

For most sports, as soon as an athlete steps foot in the classroom, their eligibility begins ticking. But with this timetable, a fifth year window is allowed, and eligibility is not counted until they begin to row. Two weeks ago, women's crew was revoked from this timetable by the NCAA, but those already indebted to the program could continue without any problem.

One of the rowers whose eligibility came into question is Wendy Wilbur, a fifth year rower. Wilbur participated in UMass' crew club team for two years before women's crew was introduced as a varsity sport. But she, along with others, had been "grandfathered" and granted eligibility for their optional fifth year.

According to Dietz, no one at UMass was ever contacted or questioned about the rumors. Even though information on the Internet

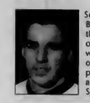
COURTESY MEDIA GUIDE



Former UMass cornerback Kory Blackwell (No. 4) signed a free-agent contract with the New York Giants recently.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 135 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, May 7, 1997

Hello in there!

Veteran singer-songwriter John Prine's new five album is a success. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Lax tourney kicks off

Senior co-captain Brendan Glass and the Minutemen are off to NCAA's next weekend. Check out the first round pairings before the action starts (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Swiss guard flees to U.S. after death threats

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — A Swiss bank guard who was fired for saving Holocaust-era documents from the shredder has fled to the United States to escape unemployment and death threats. In January, Christophe Meili rescued old records he found in the shredding room at Union Bank of Switzerland, earning praise from international groups campaigning to recover the bank assets of Holocaust victims.

But at home, Meili was fired by his security company and may face charges of violating bank secrecy laws.

"In my country, people do not understand me. They treat me like a criminal," Meili said in an interview from New York, published Monday in the daily Le Nouveau Quotidien of Lausanne.

Meili, 28, said he received threats against himself and his family in Switzerland.

He brought his wife and two children with him to New York on Wednesday at the invitation of a Jewish-American group, Boys Town Jerusalem.

NATION

Republic of Texas fugitive killed

FORT DAVIS, Texas (AP) — A fugitive member of the Republic of Texas was killed Monday in a gunbattle with police who had been tracking him since he fled the secessionist group's hideout. A second man remained at large in the rugged Davis Mountains, where the two had headed separately before the rest of the militant group laid down their arms over the weekend.

The group's leader and several other people were named Monday in a federal fraud indictment.

The gunfire took place at a bunker about a mile from the group's "embassy" headquarters in a sparse mountain development, state officials said.

The dead man had apparently been shooting at police tracking dogs and a helicopter that were searching for the pair, said Sherri Deatherage Green, a spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"Shots were fired from the helicopter and from the ground at the suspect," she said.

The dead man's name was not immediately known. The two men being sought were identified as Richard Keyes III, 21, and Mike Matson, 48.

Of the two, only Keyes was charged with a crime. He was accused of organized criminal activity and kidnapping related to an April 27 hostage-taking that started the group's seven-day standoff, which ended peacefully Saturday.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 41	HIGH: 59 LOW: 45	HIGH: 55 LOW: 42

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

Gary Aldrich speaks at UMass; says Clinton will be impeached

By Tomar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Gary Aldrich, New York Times best-selling author of Unlimited Access, predicted last night in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union that impeachment proceedings against President Bill Clinton will be underway within 18 months.

"You are watching history in the making," Aldrich said. "This [impeachment proceedings against Clinton] is inevitable."

LAUREN KOSKY • COLLEGIAN

Gary Aldrich best-selling author spoke last night in the Commonwealth room of the Student Union.

Aldrich, a former Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) agent stationed in the White House, spoke to an audience of forty last night about security breaches he alleges the Clinton administration has committed. Aldrich feels that these breaches, as well as the many scandals associated with the Clinton administration, will lead to impeachment proceedings against Clinton in the near future.

Aldrich's speech was part of the Conservative Lecture Series sponsored by The University of Massachusetts Republican Club and Young America's Foundation.

Paul Ferro, a sophomore political science major and member of the Republican Club, began the evening by introducing Aldrich.

Ferro said that Aldrich had over 30 years experience in the FBI and five years in White House duty, and that his book had been on the New York Times best-seller list for 20 weeks.

"It is with great pleasure that I introduce a great American and a great patriot," Ferro said.

Aldrich started his speech by saying that he was honored to be at UMass and to have the opportunity to share "what he knows" with the audience.

"I hope to give you information that you will find relevant," Aldrich said. "I want to give you an accurate picture of some of the serious problems that exist in Washington D.C. that will impact you very seriously in your lives."

Aldrich went on to discuss his duties at the White House, which consisted of running background security checks on all potential White House employees.

"The Secret Service and the FBI make sure a person is not a danger to the president or interested in selling state secrets," Aldrich said. "Basically, it is a determination that you are a loyal American."

Aldrich then began to describe the scandals and wrongdoings of the Clinton administration he claims to have witnessed while employed as an "apolitical" FBI agent in the White House.

Beginning with Whitewater, Aldrich commented on a number of the publicized scandals involving both Bill and Hillary Clinton, alleging that the Clinton administration views itself as above the law and stating that the only recourse the country can take is to begin impeachment processes against President Clinton.

"They [the Clintons] continue to do exactly what they want to do," Aldrich said. "There is only one thing left to do — move forward on impeachment proceedings."

Aldrich said that the many security checks normally in place at the White House have been eliminated by the Clinton administration, resulting in foreign spies, drug dealers and Russian Mafia leaders being invited into the White House and photographed with the Clintons.

"The security system is being dismantled in the White House," Aldrich said. "Serious abuse is being made of the White House working space. That is why I wrote the book."

Aldrich concluded his speech by saying that students have much more power than they are aware of, and urged the students to use this power to cause change.

"You have enormous power," Aldrich said. "You should exercise the power you have to make positive change."

The audience, which had a large number of Republican Club members, responded to Aldrich with a standing ovation and several questions.

"He was very honest and very fair and presents a view that just is not widely listened to," said Amy Pellegrino, a freshmen history and political science major and Membership Director of the Republican Club. "I read his book in a night — it was very good."

LAUREN KOSKY • COLLEGIAN

Take a trip to the island

The bridge running across the campus pond opens for student use.

UM to present 5 honorary degrees at commencement

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts will be presenting five honorary degrees to two alumni and three other public figures at this year's Commencement ceremonies, which will take place on May 25 at 10:30 a.m. in McGuirk Stadium.

Previously announced as an honorary degree recipient and keynote speaker was Mike Barnicle, a Boston Globe columnist and strong supporter of public education, who will be receiving a doctor of humane letters degree.

Barnicle has been writing columns on social and political issues of the region and nation for the Globe since 1973, and is well-known for his "witty" perspective. He graduated from Boston University and is a native of Fitchburg.

Also receiving an honorary doctor of humane letters degree will be Ruth J. Simmons, the president of Smith College.

"I am honored and delighted to be recognized by the University of Massachusetts," Simmons said. "I have long admired the tremendous opportunities the University provides its students, and those of us who live and work in the Valley have benefitted enormously from the talents of UMass faculty, staff and students.

"It will be my pleasure to share an extraordinary day with the Class of 1997."

Simmons, who was named President of Smith College in 1995, graduated from Dillard University and received masters and doctoral degrees from Harvard University. She has served on the Board of Trustees of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation and has been awarded a Danforth Fellowship and a Fulbright Scholarship.

Paul G. Marks will be given his degree based on a long track record of devotion to the UMass community and education in general.

Over the years, he has served as chancellor of higher education for Massachusetts, a UMass Trustee,

Turn to DEGREES, page 2

McVeigh's sister takes the stand

Sister says McVeigh 'in action stage' months before blast

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

DENVER — Timothy McVeigh's sister took the stand against him Monday and recalled his festering hatred for the government and his statement that he was "in the action stage" just months before the Oklahoma City bombing.

In calm, matter-of-fact testimony that came under immunity from prosecution, Jennifer McVeigh also spoke of her brother's fear of private eyes and wiretaps, his use disguises and an alias and his anecdote about transporting 1,000 pounds of explosives.

The testimony by the upstate New York student centered on her brother's fixation on his safety in early 1995, and his warning for her to use pay phones to talk to him because he suspected wiretaps.

"I won't be back — forever," he wrote her in a letter in early 1995, according to Ms. McVeigh. She said he also advised her to keep an eye out for private investigators.

"They will more likely be looking for me than cops."

She said in another letter sent earlier that McVeigh wrote of his shift in political attitude.

"He indicated that he was not in the propaganda stage, which was like passing out papers. He was now in the action stage," she said.

About four months after that letter, on April 19, 1995, a truck bomb went off outside the downtown Oklahoma City federal building, killing 168 people and injuring more than 500.

As Ms. McVeigh testified, she kept most of her attention focused on prosecutor Beth Wilkinson, but occasionally the 23-year-old with light brown hair stole a glance at her brother. At one point, the two appeared to share a brief smile.

McVeigh, sporting a new flat-top haircut, also smiled at her as she entered the courtroom.

Ms. McVeigh, who took the stand late in the afternoon, said she last saw her brother as a free man in November and December of 1994, when he came home to Lockport, N.Y., near Buffalo, for about a month.

She said he often spoke of his anger over the government's deadly siege on the Branch Davidian compound near Waco, Texas. And she recalled how he wrote a letter to the American Legion, calling federal agents "a bunch of fascist tyrants" who murdered women and children.

Prosecutors contend McVeigh bombed the federal building as revenge for Waco. The bomb exploded on the second anniversary of the siege.

During one conversation in a car, she said he spoke of how he once nearly got into an accident while transporting 1,000 pounds of explosives.

"Did you ask him why he was carrying these explosives?" Wilkinson asked.

"No," said Ms. McVeigh.

"Why not?"

"I don't think I wanted to know."

Ms. McVeigh began her testimony by identifying her brother's handwriting on anti-government literature, a note to buy more dynamite and a host of other documents that will be introduced into evidence later.

The court day ended before Ms. McVeigh could finish her direct testimony. She is expected to testify about receiving a letter from her brother three weeks before the blast saying, "Something big is about to happen."

LAUREN KOSKY • COLLEGIAN

HAPPY 50TH!

The three tier cake for the 50th anniversary of the University in Memorial Hall.

Page, former SUNY administrator appointed as new vice-chancellor

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

The new assistant vice chancellor for human resources was appointed recently by Paul Page, vice chancellor for Administration and Finance.

Juan A. Jarrett was chosen from a large pool of applicants and is currently assistant vice chancellor for personnel at the State University of New York (SUNY) System Administration Office.

Currently, his job entails supervising and implementing human resources policies for SUNY, and assisting the campus human resources professionals. His responsibilities included coordinating the procedures of the 64-campus system.

Once at UMass, Jarrett plans to conduct surveys and studies to become more responsive to the campus as a whole.

"I look forward to continuing the achievements he [Paul Page] is undertaking in making the campus more responsive to the needs of the campus constituency," Jarrett said.

"I think he is a very dynamic individual who will bring perspective to the operation. He is knowledgeable and has excellent communicative skills," Page said.

As assistant vice chancellor for human resources, Jarrett will oversee a staff of over 50 employees and will be responsible for the implementation of human resources policies and procedures of the Amherst campus.

"He will be responsible for human resources on campus, such as the payroll, labor relations, and fringe benefit administration," Page said.

Jarrett is expected to assume his new position June 2.

"I look forward to the unique challenges and opportunities that working in a campus setting provides," Jarrett said.

In a written release, Page relayed his confidence in Jarrett's appointment.

"I look forward to working with Juan as we continue to make our human resources area responsive to the needs of this institution," Page said.

"He has demonstrated outstanding abilities covering a wide range of human resources functions in his current position in his current position as well as during his experience with the city of New York. He will be a fine addition to this campus," he said.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor:
Seema Gangatirkar

Copy Editor:
Lisa Oliveri

Photo Technician:
Lauren Kosky

Production Supervisor:
Josh Sylvester

Production Staff:
Daniel Bodah
Mark McGrath

degree

continued from page 1

president of the UMass Foundation and the UMass Alumni Association and as a member of numerous educational boards.

Marks is a 1957 graduate of the University and received a masters in art education from the Massachusetts College of Art.

Doctor of laws degree recipients will be John J. Sweeny, president of the AFL-CIO and Chulsu Kim, deputy director- general of the World Trade Organization, who is an alumnus of the University.

Besides being the AFL-CIO president, Sweeny is also the chairman of the UMass Labor Relations and Research Center's advisory board for the distance learner's masters degree program in union leadership and administration.

"I'm thrilled that he was elected 18 months ago as part of a ticket that stands for a new direction in the labor movement, a refocusing on organization, activism and inclusion," Tom Juravich, director of the Labor Relations and Research Center said. "It's a great honor for the University to be conferring a degree on John Sweeny."

Sweeny is also the author of a recent book, America Needs a Raise, Fighting for Economic Security and Social Justice, and has been part of the labor movement since 1961.

Kim was appointed deputy-director general of the World Trade Organization in Geneva, Switzerland in 1995 after a long career as a public official in his native South Korea, where he specialized in international trade.

Among the other positions Kim has held are assistant minister for trade and industry, commissioner of the Korean Industrial Property Office and ambassador for international trade.

Kim received masters and doctoral degrees from the Political Science Department at the University of Massachusetts and his bachelor's degree from Tufts University.

Joining Barnicle at the podium as a speaker will be graduating communications major Perri-Lyn Cohen, who was selected as student speaker by a student and faculty committee earlier this semester.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

A watery reflection
Puddles in the reflecting pools near the the Fine Arts Center reflect Herter Hall.

SUB hosts Herbfest tomorrow to show off the roles of herbs

Celebrate the month of May tomorrow with the 1997 Herbfest in the University Student Union Ballroom. From 11 a.m. – 2 p.m. the Herbfest will demonstrate the supernatural role herbs have played in the evolution of medicine, art, and food.

As the Spring's plants and trees continue to saturate the air with sweet perfumes and air-borne seeds, students in the Plant and Soil Science class on Herbs, Spices and Medicinal Plants, have been busy preparing a large array of practical herbal products.

Historically herbs have been a large part of religious ceremonies and cultural rites fusing together communities to commemorate fruitful harvests, personal passages and other special occasions. These significant events have fostered the exchange of herbal merchandise and crafts as well as the sharing of plant knowledge among friends and neighbors.

Professor Lyle E. Cracker is the coordinator of the 1997 Herbfest and is well known for his extensive work with herbs and medicinal plants. Over 60 students from several different majors enrolled in his class on Herbs, Spices and Medicinal Plants plan to present their expertise on herbs and plant life in the Herbfest Program.

Herbal treats will be available for sampling and a garden of various herbs will be on display. The Herbfest is the final laboratory exercise in a semester program on learning about botany, horticulture, pharmacology and business associated with herbs, spices and medicinal plants.

Student projects will include the use of herbs in preparation of foods, candles, herbal vinegars, flower arrangements and numerous other activities.

— Liz Anderson

Attention All Collegian Staff Members:

Voting for the Editor-in-Chief for next semester will take place in the Collegian Business office today only, from 8:30 a.m.–4 p.m. The Collegian encourages all staff members to come down and vote.

WRITERS WANTED

The Collegian is currently recruiting writers for the upcoming semester. If you're interested in helping produce New England's largest college daily, come down to the Collegian offices in the Campus Canter and speak with one of the pleasant people there. You won't regret it.

Make Notes, Instead of Taking Notes
Avery Laser & Ink Jet Note Cards

in the Campus Center 545-2619 UNIVERSITY STORE
Hours: M-F 9am — 5pm Sat 11am — 4pm
AVERY How will you use us today? www.avery.com
©1997 Avery Dennison

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE
DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

WEEKLY UPDATE
University Career Center
Mather Building 545-2224

ALANA STUDENTS
Are you interested in discussing your career opportunities, your resume, or other services which the career center offers?
call Ruth Carey at 545-6265

BRAND NEW Summer and Fall Co-ops and they keep pouring in...

AVID TECHNOLOGY, Technical Writing	ENGL/COMM/JOURN
BEST WESTERN in Cambridge	HRTA
FLEET BANK in Boston, Framingham, Hartford, & Scranton, PA	MKTG, SOC, MATH PSYCH, CSE, FOMGT
FIDELITY INVESTMENTS	IE, ME, OPMGT
INNOVATIVE IMAGING SYSTEMS	CSE
IRON HORSE in Northampton	MGT, ADMIN, MKTG
LAND'S END in Provincetown	HRTA
NATIONAL PARK SERVICE Boston Historical Parks	ALL MAJORS
NEW SEABURY RESORT in Hyannis	SPTMGT/EXCSCI
PUTNAM INVESTMENTS 6 month coops located in Boston, Andover, & Franklin	PSYCH, COMM, SOM
US POST OFFICE in Boston	CSE

HAVE YOU ACCEPTED A JOB?
CONGRATULATIONS!!
Call the Employment Options Office! We want to hear all about it!
545-2224

ATTENTION SENIORS!
Are you still in the market for a job?
Let Dr. Pro, the Disc Resume Professional, assist you.
Even after you leave campus, Dr. Pro allows us to continue sending your resume to appropriate employers.
Are you already using Dr. Pro?
Stop by the Employment Options Office in the Mather Building to update your information and change your status to...
ALUMNI!!

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Art?
A lesser known art medium on the walls of a stairwell.

Women's infections often missed

New data tracks course of diseases in HIV-infected women

By Jane E. Allen
Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. — While AIDS deaths are increasing for women as they fall for men, women's infections are often missed as the disease follows a different course, according to new research presented Monday.

Women's HIV often is missed because doctors aren't recognizing that vaginal infections, yeast infections of the mouth and throat and cervical cancer are part of the disease.

A Chicago consortium found illness-causing cytomegalovirus active in blood and secretions well before women with HIV progress to AIDS. The research found cytomegalovirus was the root cause of vaginal infections in 41 percent of the women tested.

Also at the third National Conference on Women & HIV, a University of Southern California team announced that it had detected unusual types of breast cancer in young HIV-infected women, including rare metaplastic carcinoma.

Although breast cancer rates haven't yet increased in women with HIV, other AIDS-defining cancers are on the rise, such as melanoma, multiple myeloma and anal cancer, said Dr. Alexandra Levine, leader of USC's research team and director of the university's Norris Cancer Center.

And with antiviral AIDS drugs leaving the immune system of HIV-infected women "not quite normal, we may be seeing ever-increasing epidemics of cancer," Levine predicted.

While the rate of AIDS deaths in men declined 15 percent in the first six months of last year, the rate for women increased 3 percent, according to figures at the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

AIDS is the third-leading killer of American women ages 25-44 and the No. 1 killer of African-American women that age. Women constitute the fastest-growing segment of the U.S. population to become HIV-infected.

"AIDS-related cancers tend to be more aggressive than cancers in non-HIV positive women," Dr. Janet Blair of the Los Angeles County health department told reporters.

While men survive about 23 months with Kaposi's sarcoma — the first malignancy recognized with AIDS - women survive just nine months, she said.

Big Blue wins Game 2 against Kasparov

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Garry Kasparov's loss to an IBM computer had chess experts around the world asking each other Monday: Did the Russian champion give up too easily against the machine?

"I'd say there are hundreds of thousands of people now looking at that possibility," said grandmaster Gabriel Schwartzman, the reigning U.S. Open chess champion who runs Kasparov's official Web site.

"I would love to hear Deep Blue's opinion," Schwartzman said, glancing at the chess-playing computer.

Speculation centers on whether Kasparov was right to quit in the middle of what he considered a hopeless position against Deep Blue. The alternative was to go for a draw by using his queen to keep the computer's king in perpetual check and force a stalemate, Schwartzman said.

Chess grandmasters all over the world picked up on that possibility, many also using computers for analysis, Schwartzman said. As of Monday afternoon, no conclusion was reached, he said. After defeating the computer Saturday in the opening game of their closely watched six-game match, Kasparov lost Game 2 on Sunday. Game 3 is set for Tuesday.

On Saturday, the computer, playing black, resigned after Kasparov's 45th move. But on Sunday, it was Kasparov, playing black, who resigned after Deep Blue's 45th move.

Kasparov, who skipped a post-game news conference Sunday, rested and prepared Monday for the third game against "the creature," as he calls IBM's 1.4-ton chess whiz.

Kasparov's Web site has been hopping with e-mail from chess enthusiasts, Schwartzman said.

After Kasparov's resignation ended game two, one e-mail said, "Don't despair. The machine was created by humans — we can beat it! Don't let it get you down."

Another chess fan admonished Kasparov: "Don't be hard on the machine — it's only trying to defend the computer kingdom."

As he braces for another high-tech encounter, Kasparov takes daily strolls in Central Park while his mother, Klara, "takes care of him," Schwartzman said.

Kasparov's Web site: http://www.club-kasparov.com.

Sidewalk Sales.
Tables of shoes
Racks of clothes
Baskets of jewelry
Thurs. May 8 to Sun. May 11.
ZANNA downtown Amherst

STUDENT TRAVEL

London	$396
Paris	554
Frankfurt	554
Rome	652
Madrid	566
Athens	720
Prague	690

All fares are round trip from Boston. Tax not included. Some restrictions apply.
STA TRAVEL We've been there.
Check out the latest fares & deals at: www.sta-travel.com
(800) 777-0112

University Health Services
Summer
Health Coverage

1997 Basic Health Fee:
$208.00

1997 Student Family Plan:
$463.00

Coverage Period: June 1, 1997-August 31, 1997
(if enrolled by June 1)

(Only UMass students with Basic and SHBP are eligible for the Student Family Plan)

Visit the Member Services Department located in the main lobby for enrollment

577-5490

Eligibility: Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke, Smith, and UMass Students

LEARNING FOR THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE
• LEARNING FOR A LIFETIME •

UMASS SUMMER SESSION 1997

Now is the time to advance your career, explore other options, plan for a new future, get ahead in your studies, or enrich your life.
- Hundreds of Credit Courses
- Workshops for Personal and Professional Enrichment
- Part-time Specialized Degree Programs–Bachelor's and Master's
- Professional Development Courses for Teachers

Classes held days, evenings, and weekends
- Session I: June 3-July 11
- Session II: July 15-August 21
- Variable Sessions

Call 413-545-0107 for a free course catalog or e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Find it on our website: http://www.umass.edu/contined/

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION • UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Make the most of your summer by earning extra credit.

This year, use your summer vacation to earn more than tuition money. Sign up for courses at Bunker Hill Community College, and earn college credits that you can apply toward your degree.

Whether you want to accelerate your college education, or relieve the pressure of a heavy courseload, you'll find Bunker Hill affordable, and a great place to learn. We offer classes days and evenings, so it's easy to develop a schedule that lets you make the most of your summer.

For more information about the Summer Sessions at Bunker Hill Community College, call (617) 228-BHCC. (2422)

We'll make it enjoyable and affordable to earn extra college credits. Call us!

BUNKER HILL COMMUNITY COLLEGE
Learning for the Real World
BOSTON • CHELSEA

BHCC is an affirmative action/equal opportunity institution.

Administration • Computer Programming • Criminal Justice • Culinary Arts • Foreign Language • Graphic Arts/Photography • Hotel/Travel/Restaurant Management • Mathematics/Physics • Media Technology • Office Administration • Social Science • Surgical Technology • Theatre/Art/Music • Allied Health • Biotechnology • Business

Puffton Village . . .
Your First Choice
1, 2 and 3 bedroom apartments

Featuring

Newly renovated units that include:
New appliances New carpeting New kitchen cabinets & counter tops Central air conditioners
Rents starting at $615 per month

or

Traditional units that are:
Fully applianced Freshly painted Carpeted/Tiled Floors Central Air Conditioned
Rents starting at $545 per month

All rents include Heat, Hot Water & Cooking Gas and use of an olympic size pool, 5 tennis courts, basketball court, laundry rooms and on-site parking.
Now accepting rental applications for summer and fall. Call today 549-0145

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey Brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The truth behind Aberdeen

The mainstream media across the country is perpetrating a serious deception on the American people by refusing to provide all the known facts in the Aberdeen Proving Grounds "sex scandal."

Key among these facts are: All 12 drill sergeants scheduled for prosecution at Aberdeen are black. All but one of the female trainee accusers are white. Three of the original female accusers insisted the sex was consensual and told Congressional Black Caucus investigators that military investigators coerced them into accusing the drill sergeants of rape. Further, and most important, white drill instructors at Aberdeen accused of the same behavior as those black instructors being prosecuted, have been dealt with "administratively," i.e. disciplined by reprimand, reassignment, off-base transfer and/or dismissal from the Service. And finally, Member of Congress representing South-Central Los Angeles, The Hon. Maxine Waters, has asked for a Congressional Hearing on the matter.

> "White drill instructors at Aberdeen have been dealt with 'administratively'."
>
> David G. Du Bois

The Sunday Times Week in Review section (May 4) reports that the testimony and court documents reveal a world at Aberdeen of "multiple partners, trainees seducing superiors, sexually-transmitted diseases, sexual score cards [and] public sex in a game and television room..." But the lengthy Times report also fails to include or even allude to any of the above facts.

Despite the fact that Drill Sergeant Delmar G. Simpson has pleaded guilty to having consensual sex with trainees and of sexual harassment, thus confessing to violating the military code of relations between superiors and subordinates, he now has been found guilty of 18 counts of rape, any one of which could lead to a life sentence under the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Eight of the remaining 11 black drill sergeants face the same fate.

It has only been reported in some of the black media, notably Black Entertainment Television (BET), that efforts by Congressional Black Caucus lawyers to secure access to military evidence confirming the above double standard treatment of black and white drill sergeants at Aberdeen have been thwarted. However, the effort continues. BET also interviewed Secretary of the Army, Togo West, on the matter. Togo West is black.

The question remains, will the mainstream media continue to refuse to report these facts and the progress of these efforts? The public has a right to know if the Army is deliberately singling out black drill sergeants for prosecution and conviction.

There was a time when the cry "rape" by a white woman, sometimes coerced by white men, was used to justify lynching black men indiscriminately in this country. Are the Aberdeen Proving Ground cases going to be the modern day version of that infamy?

David G. Du Bois is a visiting professor in the Journalism/African American Department.

Letters to the Editor

GSS elections

To the Editor:

With the Graduate Student Senate (GSS) elections happening this week, I would like to point out a few issues which are of tremendous importance to graduate students on this campus. Although we are from diverse backgrounds and have different priorities, these are significant factors in our lives and we share many of them in common. I am a candidate for the position of treasurer in the election and I would like to address these issues and encourage graduate students to vote for me and the other members of my slate.

This university has become increasingly less accessible to students in recent years. As such, graduate student enrollment has declined and will likely continue to decline resulting in lower GSS revenue. The GSS is facing and will continue to face a fiscal burden as it attempts to offer the same benefits and services to graduate students with decreasing revenue.

Those benefits include support to many student organizations and services such as Legal Services, the Graduate Women's Network, the Student Union Art Gallery, the Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, etc.

There are many areas of student life that affect us all to some extent including issues of childcare, housing issues, financial aid issues, etc. Many of us are low income students or non-traditional students and have special needs. The week students spent in Goodell was a wake-up call to all students that our lives are not as they should be and we all have a responsibility to improve conditions for ourselves and our fellow students. The stalled GEO contract negotiations are another reminder that there is much more that we need. Furthermore, graduate students on this campus still do not have acceptable and affordable on-campus housing. In addition, there are many other needs graduate students have such as increased opportunities for networking and greater resources for research.

I am running for the position of treasurer because I can continue sound fiscal policies which are consistent with the needs of graduate students. The other members of my slate and I will advocate for the needs of the graduate student body. The combination of our different experiences and skills will ensure a powerful and effective leadership team. As such please vote for me as treasurer in the GSS elections and for the other members of my slate, Deepika Marya, Stefanie Ameres and Nana Mendoza.

Susan E. Shadwick
GSS Senator and Graduate Student

In defense of Dave

To the Editor:

I'm writing in response to the article written about the Dave Matthews Band article concerning bootlegs and the band "spitting in the face of both their fans and music everywhere." There are a few things you need to be aware of before you slander the band itself. First of all, if you go to the band's web page at www.dmband.com, you will find their policy about taping at the shows, as well as a statement concerning the ILLEGAL selling of these bootlegs. This has been posted for over a year now, and the band is taking action on it because they care about their fans, not the opposite.

I have my own collection of DMB shows, and I do the majority of my trading over the Internet, where trading is allowed. A handful of the shows I have I have seen in the stores on CD going for as much as $30 for a single disc, and even $75 for a double. There are other ways to get a copy of these shows besides spending all of your cash, just a few dollars for blank tapes. This is the way most people get copies, besides taping themselves. Only very greedy people record the shows then sell them to companies to be put on compact disc, otherwise, they are made to be traded. Like stamps or baseball cards, it's a hobby to collect shows, and the people who do the same for their favorite bands know exactly what I'm talking about.

As far as the band trying to get a piece of the action for others using their name and music, it's very inclusive to say that the decision may not even be their's [sic]. There was never this problem until they signed with a major record label, and it's quite possible that it's RCA's right to take legal action upon this, after all, it is illegal. DMB is a touring band who put out records in between tours, and Dave, Leroi, Boyd, Carter and Stefan just don't want their fans to get ripped off by buying something they can get for free. It's these people who create the CD's that made the band shut down soundboard feeds to tapers, and the only way now to get a show on tape is with gnics, which why the sound quality is so poor at times. That was done to discourage people to tape for their own personal financial gain, this has nothing to do with the band's need for more money.

Either the band's record label or management does not want people to rip other people off, including the stores. Bands like DMB, Phish, The Black Crowes and others of the same musical genre allow you to tape the shows for your own personal enjoyment, and the people taping to sell them aren't fans of the band, they're people looking to capitalize on a good thing. It's a difficult situation because the Dave Matthews Band attracts two different types of crowds, the radio-fans and the die-hard fans that have been around for years due to the band's heavy grass-roots following. If all of the radio-fans boycotted the band like you suggested, then there would still be enough fans around who understand how this whole bootleg thing goes to keep the band alive. They went from playing downstairs at Pearl Street to the Mullins Center because of jumping to a major record label that forced them to release singles and videos only for the company's financial benefits. This band started on their own label and they started their own company only to better benefit the people they care about, the fans at the shows. I know a lot of people who would pay a lot of money for a bootleg CD, but that is both not necessary and not going to happen anymore because they're putting an end to the illegal selling of these shows, and before you call someone a "greedy little turd," you best get your information straight.

Jeffrey Enchura
JENCHURA@oirvms.oit.umass.edu

Be heard!
Interested in writing for ed/op next semester? Come on down to the Collegian offices and speak with Dan Bodah about one of our upcoming workshops.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

To serve, protect and oppress

There was a picket fence at the far end of the alley. It looked small enough for Steve to jump, if he had enough momentum. That momentum was being adequately provided by the sound of approaching police officers and their dogs. He made the fence with seconds to spare. As he hit the ground, the fence shattered into a thousand splinters, torn asunder by police-issue .38 caliber bullets. Shoot first, ask questions later; the cops who patrol the ghetto don't follow the Geneva convention guidelines.

> "There was a problem in supply when their friend got arrested. They had agreed to buy from some gentlemen they met in a bar but it was a shaky deal."
>
> Sam McAfee

Shooting back was out of the question since Steve had never held a firearm in his life. It didn't seem necessary in his line of work. All he could do was get to his feet and wade through the weed-choked lot into which he had leaped.

At the far end there was an abandoned garage. The smell of mildew and motor oil filled his nostrils as he crawled to the far corner to hide. The night air rang with the cacophony of barking dogs and police sirens. He had to get a hold of himself. How had he gotten into this?

It had been three months since Roger, well versed in the drug industry, had asked Steve if he wanted to make a few bucks. The deal sounded sweet enough, since the market where he worked had burned to the ground. Jobs were scarce in Roxbury. The banks tend to shy away from approving loans in the area because of the lower rate of return. This in part keeps the property value down. It also makes employment a rare event.

Steve had heard that the market owner had lit the place to get the insurance money, after some of the workers had tried to form a union. He remembered the day that a white college student working for the AFL-CIO had come to talk to Steve and the other black workers in the store. He was a smooth talker, but he did not seem invested in the day to day struggle of Steve and his co-workers. After all, he probably still had a job after the fire.

Roger had not been able to get into college because his SAT scores had not been high enough. Affirmative action cuts had prevented him from being included in the admissions pool anyway. He felt that if his teachers had spent more time with him he may have done better, but the classrooms were so crowded there was little chance of that.

The school he had attended had hardly a budget to work with. As a public institution, it was dependent on real estate taxes which were barely adequate in Roxbury where the property value is so low. In addition, Steve had read in The Globe that the same banks that refuse to lend in the area had just received a tax break from the city to "spur investment." Instead they had merged into bigger banks, setting up business overseas.

Simultaneously, the city had approved a contract with a high tech security firm for the purchase of surveillance equipment, supposedly so the police could locate the prowlights used by marijuana suppliers. There was speculation that it could be used in other ways. Now wasn't that a kick in the ass? The city can't fund schools, and with absence of jobs the crime rate increases; they then spend more money hiring police to fight crime instead of improving the schools.

All of this had become clear to Steve when he had gone with his older brother to a meeting where a local community organization was trying to revitalize the area. They had offered Steve an internship, but it paid nothing near what he could make working for Roger. He and Roger pooled their money and bought a large quantity of the substance of their choice. The guys they bought from were usually old friends from high school. They would then divide it up and sell small quantities to their other friends at discount rates and still pull in a profit. Ironically, Steve had learned much from this experience about managing a business, but he would never be taken seriously if he put that on a resume.

There was a problem in supply when their friend got arrested. They had agreed to buy from some gentlemen they met in a bar but it was a shaky deal. These two older gents had turned out to be narcotics officers.

Roger had freaked out when this became clear, and ran for the safety of the alleys and tenement buildings. In the confusion, Steve decided to bolt as well, just seconds after seeing one of the officers drop Roger by burying two shells in his back.

All of this came flooding back to him as the floodlights took out his sights. He stood slowly with his hand in the air.

Sam McAfee is a Collegian columnist.

A Camp Story

On the surface, it seems like a pretty crappy deal.

The terms go like this. You work seven days a week, 14 hours a day. For this, they pay you $20 a day. You can't leave work until 9 p.m., and you have to be back by 11 a.m. You have to live in a wooden shack, and are given a 5x10 foot space to put all your stuff. Your bed is a piece of foam wrapped in plastic, and the main theme of the food is "How many ways can we dress up pasta?"

The people you work for will say things like, "Do you know who my mom is?" and "Girls are nasty." Their literary interests rarely drift beyond the realm of Encyclopedia Brown and Goosebumps.

And yet, I don't care. To me, this is how I choose to spend my summer.

Baby, I'm going to camp.

For the third year in a row, I will spend the months of July and August employed by Camp Greylock, the pride of the Berkshires. (And the main source of business for the infamous Dalton Depot, step-child to the world's greatest bar, the deceased Woody's Roadhouse).

Once again, I'll be teaching ball from sunrise to sundown. I'll be living in a bunk for eight weeks with five, 10 and 11- year-old kids. I'll have to get up every morning at 8:15 a.m., like it or not, and come home from any extracurricular activities by 1 a.m. (which isn't easy to do when Jaegermeister is a staple of your evening diet). I can't call in sick, or hide in the back to avoid the boss.

Considering how lazy I can be, (SportsCenter is best watched laying down, I say), it's amazing I ever got the job in the first place.

So let me explain why I do it.

I had a conversation with a girl I knew from way back when at the bus stop last week. We talked about what we were going to do for the summer. She spent 10 minutes raving about an internship in Boston (apparently it's like a great company and all that.) She told me she'd probably get a job from them when she left. A lot of other people I had talked to said similar things.

All I could say was, "Yeah, I'm working at camp again."

I started to think about it. Maybe it was stupid of me to waste another summer with a bunch of 10 year-olds and blow all my daily $20 wage out partying every night at hick bars out in towns you've never heard of, acting like someone from Meatballs.

Maybe I should get off my ass and start to lookat my future, so I might be able to have a career some day. (I can't write about teeth. Dennis Rodman and my housemates forever, you know.) Maybe camp was getting to be a little, well, childish.

And then I remembered the last night of camp last year.

I was exhausted from the summer. I wanted to come back to Amherst, so I could start writing again, and be free again. I was sick of kids, sick of pasta and eggsalck of being broke. I just wanted to go home.

We had our last campfire, and my lids were starting to cry, like most kids do. Some of the other counselors were welling up with tears, but I was fine. I had seen it before, and knew what to expect. Besides, I hadn't cried since 1990 (long story, once again involving chicks).

My plan was to talk to the kids for about 10 minutes before they went to bed, to thank them for the summer and exchange addresses. I'd be home tomorrow, and I was already thinking about school again.

But it didn't happen that way. I sat the kids down, and started to talk. But then I looked at their faces. I saw kids I had grown to really care about. I had yelled at them, coached them, cured their homesickness, joked with them, taught them about life, Bruce Springsteen and little about baseball. And now they were leaving me.

I couldn't do it. I got maybe two words out before I started to cry as much as they were. I couldn't help myself. I had poured all the energy I had into counseling these five kids, and in return I got the summer of my life.

In this life, every man does what they have to get by, and I think "live and let live" is the way to go. But all I know is that in that moment, my bed might have been foam and plastic, the food may have been bad, the space may have been tight and my wallet may have been empty.

But my soul was full.

Maybe it wasn't such a crappy deal after ill.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Luke Meredith

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Jewish Affairs

Wednesday, May 7, 1997

Web showcases numerous sites dedicated to remembering one of history's tragedies

The Holocaust was history's worst atrocity. People have tried to understand the Holocaust through writing. Authors have written thousands of books exploring the subject, so it is no wonder that the web is populated with hundreds of web sites.

The first place to start your on-line Holocaust search is The Holocaust/Shoah site at www.igc.org/ddickerson/holocaust.html. It is the best repository of links to other Holocaust sites. The site's catalog includes such sub categories as personal responses, survivors and rescuers, organizations and educational institutions and the history of the Third Reich. The site maintainer also publishes a site dedicated to anti-Semitism. Another place to look for links is Yahoo at www.yahoo.com/Arts/Humanities/History/20th_Century/Holocaust_The.

* * *

Museums also have interesting web sites dedicated to the Holocaust. The web site of The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington D.C. located at www.ushmm.org maintains special on-line exhibits. Here you can learn about Father Jacques, a French Carmelite monk who saved Jewish boys by hiding them in his school, or read about the 1936 Berlin Olympics. In addition to on-line exhibits, they also provide the public with access to their archive of photographs.

Yad Vashem, Israel's Holocaust memorial museum, has a more comprehensive site at www.yadvashem.org.il than its United States counterpart. Beyond on-line exhibitions, it also includes information and research areas. One area of the site provides an on-line form to help users search for victims of the Holocaust. The site also provides basic information like who is eligible for status as Righteous Among the Nations — rescuers like Father Jacques and Oskar Schindler.

Other museum and memorial sites include:

Anne Frank's House at www.channels.nl/annefran.html

The El Paso Holocaust Museum at www.huntel.com/%7Eht2/holocst.html.

In addition to museums maintaining sites, personal sites about the Holocaust abound on the Web. One site that stood out amongst others was An Auschwitz Alphabet at www.spectacle.org/695/ausch.html. The author, a New York City Jew, wrote the Alphabet when he was stunned to discover that people outside New York City often lack a strong Holocaust education. For each letter of the alphabet he provides factoids about Auschwitz. Some of the information is quite disturbing like the experiments in Block 10. He drew heavily from Primo Levi's writings.

Another interesting personal site is Auschwitz/Birkenau: Photographs by Alan Jacobs at remember.org/jacobs/. Jacobs visited the camps between 1979 and 1981. His site is basically a gallery of his photos from his visit.

David's Holocaust Awareness Project at members.aol.com/ dhs11/remember.html is maintained by a 11 year-old boy from New Jersey. I was fascinated with this page. Since I even have trouble trying to understand the evil of the Holocaust, I cannot imagine how this child was able to create this site. However, you must visit it.

Other personal sites include:

Holocaust Literature at edlab-www.cs.umass.edu/~loliver/

The Holocaust Album at www.hooked.net/users/rgreene/

* * *

Other sites related to the Holocaust and Jewish history include:

The Simon Wiesenthal Center at www.wiesenthal.com

The Center for Jewish History at www.cjh.org

The Anti-Defamation League at www.adl.org

Matt Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Israeli singer Noa will perform in honor of Yom Ha'atzmaut

Israeli singer Noa celebrates Yom Ha'atzmaut at Springfield synagogue.

COURTESY OF GAVEN RICHARDS

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

In Jerusalem, people can often be seen dancing in the streets on Israeli Independence Day, or Yom Ha'atzmaut. That day is May 12, and there will be a celebration on the Student Union Lawn from noon–3 p.m.

The event will feature a D.J playing Israeli music along with Israeli dancing, and volleyball. It is being sponsored by the Jewish Community of Amherst and UMass Hillel.

At 2:20 p.m. there will be a raffle drawing for a pair of round trip tickets to Israel. Tickets cost $1 each and can be purchased either in the Campus Center Concourse or at the event.

Proceeds from the drawing will benefit the United Jewish Appeal and the American Cancer Society. The tickets were donated by two Jewish Organizations, Hadassah and Hamaghimin. The rain date for the event is May 13.

Another way to celebrate Yom Ha'atzmaut will be Monday evening when popular Israeli singer Noa will perform in Springfield at the Beth El Synagogue at 7 p.m.

Born in Israel of Yeminite decent, Noa grew up in the Bronx, N.Y. before returning to Israel to launch her singing career and join the military. She credits American artists such as The Police, Paul Simon and Peter Gabriel as having an influence on her musical style.

"I am an Israeli artist with an American background, and I sing in English. So I consider myself an international artist," Noa said.

She also said that "Our music is not very easy to categorize or label."

Tickets are $5 for UMass students and are available at the Hillel House, 549-1710. Transportation will be provided and will depart at 5:30 p.m. from the Hillel house on Monday.

David Ben-Gurion, Israel's first prime minister declared Independence in 1948. In November of 1947, the United Nations proclaimed that the land west of the Jordan River would be divided into separate nations, one Jewish and one Arab. The months between the U.N. ruling and the Declaration of Independence was a time of fighting and civil unrest. The Declaration of Independence was immediately followed by Israel's war for independence.

This year the Jewish Living Community at Hillel was home to 24 UMass students. Spaces are now available to you for both summer and fall.

COURTESY OF HILLEL

Vigil remembers Holocaust victims

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

A visibly diverse crowd of about 75 gathered together Sunday evening to participate in a candle light vigil commemorating the victims of the Holocaust.

The vigil, which took place at the Campus Pond, placed as much emphasis on preventing present and future atrocities as it did with remembering past ones.

"Evil has to be fought everyday in every forum," said Director of the Office of Jewish Affairs Larry Goldbaum.

With the wind blowing heavily it was difficult to light the 12 candles which represented the 12 million people who were killed in Nazi death camps during World War II. In addition to Jews, gypsies, homosexuals, communists and socialists were also targeted during the Holocaust.

The event was organized by the residence hall staffs of the two upper Central Residence Hall clusters and is in conjunction with National Holocaust Memorial Week. The vigil featured several speakers such Goldbaum, outgoing Hillel President Jamie Resnick and Associate Director of Residence Life, Dawn Thomson.

Resnick said that the Holocaust is by no means only a Jewish concern because so many other people were affected by the Nazi Death camps, and that similar things could still happen to any people.

"What it comes down to is hate," said Resnick.

Resnick and fellow resident assistant Robin Carus, who was the master of ceremonies for the vigil were distressed when they discovered a symbol of hate close to home. Last week, a swastika was drawn on Carus' Holocaust Memorial bulletin board in Chadbourne Residence Hall.

Along with the swastika, a note was written to Carus telling her to "lighten up and not take things so seriously."

"Fun. I did not know that symbols of death were fun," Carus said.

Carus, who spoke about her experience at the vigil said she was unable to discover who vandalized the bulletin board, but she believes it was done by someone in the building. She said that even though she is a senior, she was surprised that something like this could be done by someone in her own residence hall.

Their were two musical performances during the vigil. The Jewish A Cappella group Kolot sang several songs in Hebrew and several in English. The local Ba'hai community, including one of the events organizer's, resident assistant Phillip Copeland, performed a song in Arabic which was dedicated to humanity.

Freshman member of Kolot Aaron Philmus said, "I know we have talked today about some of the destructive things that man has done, but music is one of the beautiful things that man has created."

Israel raffle and Hillel officers announced

Greek houses Delta Zeta and Alpha Epsilon Pi have joined University of Massachusetts Hillel in sponsoring a raffle that will sent one UMass student to Israel. The prize, one free round trip ticket to Israel, has been donated by Hadassah/Hamagshimim. Raffle tickets for this once in a lifetime chance are available on the Campus Center Concourse for $1 each. All proceeds will be donated to benifit the United Jewish Appeal (UJA) and the American Cancer Society.

The UJA is an organization which has, since 1939, rescued the imperilled, cared for the vulnerable and revitalized Jewish life in America, Israel and throughout the world. The American Cancer Society is working towards finding a cure for cancer, which affects many in our society.

The winning ticket will be drawn on May 12 at 2:20 p.m. on the Student Union Lawn in honor of Yom Ha'atzmaut, Israel's Independance Day. Yom Ha'atzmaut celebrates the founding of the state of Israel in 1948, and is celebrated in Israel the way the Fourth of July is celebrated in the United States. UMass Hillel invites all to honor this celebration on the student Union lawn between noon and 3 p.m. on Monday, May 12 with food, music and dancing.

For more information call Beth Seewald at 549-1710.

Hillel elects officers 1997–1998

President: Louisa Shein
Vice President/Culteral Affairs: Jacklyn Sobel
Vice President/Israel Related Affairs: Alisha Rynsky
Vice President/Administrative Affairs: Melissa Haas
Vice President/Outreach Affairs: Bethann Brandenburger
Cultural: Emily Casper
Religious: Neil Morris, Melissa Haas
Kesher: Bethann Brandenburger
Holocaust Commemorative: Alison Salk
Women's Issues: Sarah Danzig
Administration: Rachel Kristol
Public Affairs: Cheryl Alper
Fundraising: Jason Hill, Darren Green
Social Action: Alison Salk, Emily Casper
Social Committee: Rachel Kobey, Ivana Kurian, Jon Ungar
5 College: Aaron Philmus

Director: Rabbi Saul Perlmutter
Program Director: Kim Richman
Jewish Campus Service Corps. Fellow: Beth Seewald
Administrator: Majorie Ferris
Dev. Support/Bookkeeper: Glen Stegner
Resident Staff: Guy Chayoun
Kosher Dining Room Manager: Mike Moylan
Graphics/Publicity: Melinda Williams

It still haunts me

This poem was written shortly after my visit to Lublin– Majdanek with my grandmother and other family members. My grandmother, a Holocaust survivor, wanted me to see the places that she had been during the tragic war. After we left the crematorium we saw several Polish students, one of whom was very vocal about his anti–Semitism, taunting my grandmother. This was only one of many such incidents we encountered during our trip.

That cold May afternoon,
Bleak sky,
An unforgiving bitter wind
Biting rain
I and my grandmother
Walked from a wooden charnel house
An abattoir removed from history
The ovens still hot with screams
And cold gray ash
Of slaughter long ago

All day
All night
Stacks coughed out death
A thousand a day?
Someone's mother, son, neighbor
Snuffed out

One room
It was a throne of bone
Toothless jaws
they took the gold
Old and yellow femurs
Decayed and cracked skulls
Ribs that once protected weary hearts

Another cell
Open doors once sealed
With windows
so the shadows can watch
A hole in the ceiling
Where death slinked in
Tendrils clasping around frightened eyes,
Fevered minds
Still hopeful hearts

I could see
Feel and hear
Smell the fear
The utter terror
Of not knowing
why?!
Wispy aspirations of faces frozen with screams
Naked and stripped of everytning
Most of them anyway,
Some still had yet to die.

Still another room
A concrete slab
Still stained Dead or not they weren't done with you
Slice open innards
Ah! Here's a find
A diamond ring
Brilliant in the light
As blood rinsed away

Outside we saw
Up ahead a marble bowl
Colossal and solemn
The mass urn proclaimed
"Let our fate be your warning"
Tons of ash and bits of broken bone
On three pillars sat the dome

By the road were students
One turned to see beside me
My grandmother
He grinned an evil grin
the bastard
"Sprechen Sie Deutsch, meine Frau?"

She flew and spat
Venomous words
He smiled and jeered
I wanted to kill him
He stretched out his hand straight
"Seig heil!"
Ran off with his cronies

We clamored on the bus
Talking
Yelling
About what happened
In different languages
But with the same essence
Nothing's changed here
It can happen again
And it still haunts me.

-Joshua Paul Cano
UMass student

Arts & Living

Wednesday, May 7, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Live Prine is a good effort

Audiences add to folksinger's qualities

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

JOHN PRINE
Live On Tour
Oh Boy Records

From the fabulous, glamorous world of singer/songwriters comes veteran John Prine's latest album on his own record label, Oh Boy. Prine, 50 years old and hailing from near Chicago, first made himself known back in the early '70s on the coffee-house guitar-and-voice circuit until he was discovered by the man who wrote the classic train song, "The City Of New Orleans," Steve Goodman, who then introduced Prine to the man who wrote "Me and Bobby McGee," Kris Kristofferson. At a show during which Kristofferson brought Prine up to sing some of Prine's originals, he was approached by Jerry Wexler and offered a record contract with Atlantic Records — after only 24 hours in New York City.

With Live On Tour (recorded mostly at the infamous Ryman Auditorium in Nashville, but also from shows in Chicago, Boulder and Austin City Limits; also there are three new studio cuts), Prine is celebrating 25 years in the music business. It is amazing that he's been around so long, seeing as how most people shake their head in Homer Simpson-style cluelessness when they hear his name. Then again, great songwriting and competent musical ability were never known to make musical acts very popular.

Prine stated, in a press release, that he never was much for the ideas of arenas and stadiums anyway. "Anything from 1,000 to 3,000 seats" is more his speed. With that comfortable music hall intimacy comes a quality in Prine's music that makes you think you knew this guy from somewhere, like he was a friend of your parents. He's got the "regular joe with a guitar and some poetry" stint down pat.

Live On Tour finds Prine either solo or with The Lost Dogs Band (named after his last album, 1995's casually successful Lost Dogs & Mixed Blessings), whose backup in either a mid-tempo electric or in a mellow acoustic setting illustrate a fine mix of skills in the mediums of folk and rock. The songs "Picture Show," "Quit Hollerin' At Me" and the gold medal performance of the album, "Lake Marie" all show Prine and his bandmates in the electric setting, proving that even originally coffee-house folkies can rock out like the best of them.

Really, not enough can be said for "Lake Marie." The song's spoken verses about different events in one place over many generations, its uplifting, but simple chorus ("We were standing / Standing by peaceful waters") and Larry Crane's equally inspiring guitar solo all seep together to give the impression of the song being an energetic set closer or encore at the Chicago show at which it was recorded. This song alone is worth buying the CD.

Other startling live tunes include Prine's solo vocal-and- guitar tribute to a primate that the Russians sent up into space in the '50s and forgot about, "Space Monkey," the gentle "Storm Windows" and "Humidity Built The Snowman." Prine's humor that was illustrated in the '70s with "Dear Abby" (from his third album, 1974's Sweet Revenge), is in full swing especially on the semi-title track to 1993's The Missing Years, "Jesus: The Missing Years."

COURTESY OH BOY RECORDS

John Prine's productive, but not well-known, career of 25 years culminates in the new Live On Tour, released on his own record label, Oh Boy.

In this tune, Prine composes a narrative to fill in Jesus' life, because, as he says to the audience, "there is no account for what Jesus did between ages 12 and 28." In Prine's story, Jesus wanders around to Italy, gets married ("You see him and the wife weren't getting along / So he took out his guitar and wrote a song / Called 'The Dove Of Love Fell Off His Perch' / But he couldn't get divorced in the Catholic church"), does drugs and finally returns home to Israel, where the Bible takes up the rest of the story.

Most of the live songs are from The Missing Years and Lost Dogs & Mixed Blessings, but he does pull out one real oldie, inviting the crowd at the Ryman show to sing along on "Illegal Smile," from his 1971 self-titled debut album. It's great to hear many voices with Prine: a reassuring flipside to his rampant anonymity.

The album could easily end on "Lake Marie," the final live track, but Prine tacked on three recently recorded studio cuts that, for the most part, don't stand up to the live material. Tim Carroll's "If I Could" is only slightly catchy and Prine and Pat McLaughlin's "Stick A Needle In My Eye," in the context of the rest of the album, is a disappointment. Luckily, before the disc ends, Prine and Donnie Fritts' ballad "You Mean So Much To Me" (with Prine on vocals and Tom Petty's Heartbreakers' Benmont Tench on piano) redeems the studio cuts at least a little. Prine's songwriting craft has certainly gone too long unnoticed by society as a whole. B+

The Life a fave in Tonys

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In a season crowded with new musicals, The Life emerged Monday as the top contender for the 1997 Tony Awards, picking up 12 nominations in the race for Broadway's highest honor.

The Cy Coleman musical, a nostalgic look at the pimps, prostitutes and pushers of Times Square before Disney bought a theater and decided to clean up the area, received nominations in most of the performance and technical categories, as well as nods for best score, book, direction and choreography.

Steel Pier, a Kander and Ebb musical about a 1930s dance marathon in Atlantic City, received 11 nominations, while a revival of Chicago, the season's biggest hit, was nominated for eight Tonys.

The Life and Steel Pier will face Titanic, a lavish show about the 1912 ocean liner disaster, and Juan Darien, a South American carnival mass that closed in January, for the coveted best-musical prize.

Awards would boost The Young Man From Atlanta by Horton Foote and The Last Night of Ballyhoo, Alfred Uhry's look at Jewish life in Atlanta in 1939. Both are nominated for best play along with two British imports, David Hare's Skylight and Stanley by Pam Gems, which already have closed.

Foreign-born performers swept the best-actor nominations, the most competitive category this season. The contenders: Dublin-born Michael Gambon, for his portrayal of a prosperous London entrepreneur in Skylight, South African-born Antony Sher, who played English painter and Stanley Spencer in Stanley, and Brian Bedford, a native of Yorkshire, England, who plays a preening dandy in London Assurance. The likely winner though is Canadian Christopher Plummer, who portrays the title character in Barrymore, a look at the famous stage actor in his final days.

Among the American actors shut out of nominations were Charles Durning of The Gin Game, Rip Torn of The Young Man from Atlanta and Frank Langella of Present Laughter.

Two British actresses received major acting nominations — Janet McTeer, the favorite for her portrayal of Nora in a revival of 'A Doll's House, and Lia Williams, the unhappy mistress in Skylight. Also nominated for best actress were Shirley Knight from The Young Man From Atlanta and five-time Tony winner Julie Harris for her work in a revival of The Gin Game. Bebe Neuwirth, a hard-boiled murderess in Chicago, led the nominations for best actress in a musical. Her competition includes Pamela Isaacs, a reluctant prostitute in The Life, Karen Ziemba, a weary marathon dancer in Steel Pier and Tonya Pinkins, a Harlem song diva in Play On!

Neuwirth's co-star, James Naughton, the shady lawyer in Chicago, took a best-actor-musical nomination. Naughton will compete against Robert Cuccioli, who plays both title characters in Jekyll & Hyde, Jim Dale as the ever-optimistic Dr. Pangloss in Candide and Jason McHugh, a handsome fly boy in Steel Pier.

The Tony Awards will be broadcast Sunday, June 1, with the first hour shown by PBS and the second two, with Rosie O'Donnell as host, by CBS. Public television will broadcast the technical awards, while best play and musical awards, plus all the acting prizes, will be shown on CBS.

If there is one thing in life you must remember it's our web address:
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

UNDERGRADUATE TEACHING ASSISTANTSHIP AVAILABLE
DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS AND STATISTICS
$650.00 A SEMESTER
FOR APPROXIMATELY 10-12 HOURS A WEEK.
FURTHER INFORMATION AND APPLICATION FORMS SEE THE RECEPTIONIST
ROOM 1622 LEDERLE GTWR

OUTSIDE SALES
Ganz Inc., a rapidly expanding national leader in the gift and stationery industry, servicing a wide variety of retailers, has outstanding career opportunities on our sales team.
SALES REPRESENTATIVES
$30,000. - $40,000.00
first year potential earning
- Boston/Cape Cod
- Vermont/western MA
- Westchester, NY
- Albany, NY
- Maine
- Scranton, PA

In addition to excellent earning potential, Ganz Inc. provides a comprehensive benefits package including medical/dental, ongoing training and advancement opportunity. To apply, please send/fax resume to:
Ganz USA
Dottie Morelli, Regional Sales Manager
8 Barnard Lane, Eliot, ME 03903
Fax: 207-439-3440

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
London $199 $370
Rome or Milan $340 $635
San Jose, Costa Rica $246 $460
...Roundtrip
TOKYO $879
SYDNEY $898
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
- Part Time Evenings
Classes start June 3, 1997
Call UMASS, Continuing Education @ 545-0474
by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.

Concerned About the MCAT?
Listen to Your Friends.
9 out of 10 alumni recommend Kaplan MCAT preparation.
Classes filling fast. Call today!
MCAT
Free MCAT Seminar. Wednesday, May 21. Kaplan Amherst Center.
Call us at 549-5780 for details!
Springtime in the Valley rules!
expert teachers superior materials smart technology proven results
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

TONITE
LIVE MUSIC
FEATURING
TRICK KNEE
- The Music of Sex -
9:30 - 1:00
Drink Specials
Captain Morgan & Coke - 16 oz - 2.00
Sloe Gin Fizz - 16 oz - 2.00
Rolling Rock - 12 oz - 1.50
Red Dog - 16 ozDraft - 1.50
2.00 Cover
Smoking Section 10-1
Fenwood Sports THE PUB Amherst
15 East Pleasant Street

Gilreath Manor Condos
on Hobart Lane
Showings Start in April for June or September Occupancy!
- 3 Bedroom
- 1 1/2 Baths
- Heated Basement
- Gas Heat & Hot water
- Hardwood Floors
- 1/2 mile to campus
- On Bus Route
Lincoln Real Estate
LINCOLN REAL ESTATE · 35 N. PLEASANT ST. · 253-7879

Plymouth Rock Assurance Corporation
CUSTOMER SERVICE REPRESENTATIVE
We are looking for individuals interested in joining our fast-paced Underwriting Operations department in our downtown Boston office. In our service-based organization, the Customer Service Representative is responsible for providing the high level of service and support our agents and insureds expect and deserve. Strong verbal and written communication skills as well as good organizational skills are required. As the bridge of communication between our agents and insureds, the ideal Customer Service Representative will be personable, friendly, and have excellent problem-solving skills. Requires computer experience and a college degree.
Enjoy a pleasant work environment and full benefits package including life, dental, and health insurance, 401(k), and health club membership.
If you want the opportunity to build your career while working in a fun, friendly, and growth-oriented environment, please forward your resume and cover letter to Attn: Human Resources Specialist, Plymouth Rock Assurance Corporation, 695 Atlantic Avenue, Boston, MA 02111; fax to (617) 951-1643; or e-mail to: resume@prac.com Equal Opportunity Employer
Plymouth Rock Assurance Corporation is a personal lines property and casualty insurance company located in downtown Boston. We've built an unparalleled reputation for service, we've invested in technology, and we've launched enterprising new ventures. With careful, intelligent leadership and a committed team, we've made our mark on the Massachusetts insurance industry. Discover how we're marking history with our innovative business approach to personal lines property and casualty insurance.

■ Pitino

continued from page 10

Pitino, however, would not discuss details of his contract, which he said he did not sign until minutes before the news conference. He said he would hold another news conference in Boston on Thursday.

The Celtics seemed ready to welcome Pitino with a front-office shakeup, which might persuade special assistant Larry Bird to remain with the team.

Pitino said last month he would be interested in the Celtics only if Bird stayed, an uncertain prospect since the Indiana Pacers are willing to give Bird a lucrative contract to coach his home-state team.

Yet personnel moves could satisfy some of Bird's public complaints about the management setup. And the Boston Herald reported that team owner Paul Gaston was still trying to keep Bird. The Celtics vacancy developed when M.L. Carr quit last Wednesday after two nonplayoff seasons in which the team was 48-116. Carr, who stayed as director of basketball operations, began notifying his assistant coaches they should be prepared to move on, the Boston Globe reported Monday.

Director of travel and team services Wayne Lebeaux and director of publications and information Dave Zuccaro were fired, both Boston papers reported. Two marketing employees also reportedly lost their jobs, and general manager Jan Volk also might leave after 26 years with the Celtics, the Globe said.

It also said Pitino is expected to bring Kentucky associate coach Jim O'Brien with him to Boston. Pitino called himself a "small contributor" in building "this very strong house" at Kentucky, which has more wins than any team in college basketball. Last June, Pitino said he was almost certain he would accept a coaching offer from the New Jersey Nets, but turned it down after a golf excursion to Ireland with university boosters.

COURTESY KENTUCKY MEDIA RELATIONS

Former UMass hoopster and current University of Kentucky coach Rick Pitino was hired by the Celtics yesterday.

Royals blank BoSox 2–0, Appier wins 10th shutout

BOSTON — Kevin Appier continued his strong start and extended his success at Fenway Park.

Appier pitched his third complete game of the season and Jay Bell drove in both runs with a homer and sacrifice fly as the Kansas City Royals beat the Boston Red Sox 2-0 Monday night. Appier (4-1) allowed five hits, walked one and struck out seven for his 10th career shutout and sixth straight win at Fenway.

Appier is off to his best start since going 11-2 in 1995. "It's how you use your stuff," Appier said. "We talked about using the fastball more in spring training — just having more confidence in it and I think it's paid off."

The Red Sox threatened only once. Boston had runners on first and third with two outs in the third inning before Appier retired Bill Haselman on a bunt.

Mo Vaughn and Darren Bragg had leadoff singles for Boston in the fourth and sixth, but were both quickly erased on double plays. Chris Hammond (1-1), who pitched his third consecutive strong game since joining the rotation after Tim Wakefield's elbow injury, was the tough-luck loser. He allowed seven hits and two runs over eight innings.

Hammond, who entered the rotation April 24, has allowed just three runs in 19 innings as a starter.

"Well pitched and well played," Boston manager Jimy Williams said of the 2-hour, 38-minute contest. "Chris Hammond pitched an outstanding game, but he was up against Appier."

The Royals moved ahead 1-0 in the third. Tom Goodwin sliced a double down the left-field line and moved to third on Joe Offerman's bunt single. Bell followed with his sacrifice fly. Bell hit a leadoff homer in the eighth. It was his seventh homer of the season, three short of the Royals' record for shortstops.

Notes: American League president Gene Budig met with Red Sox management yesterday to discuss the future of Fenway Park. "I believe most responsible people today believe there is a need for a new facility," he said to the media before the game... Steve Avery's pulled groin will force him to miss his next scheduled start for Boston... Wakefield, on the 15-day disabled list with a sore right elbow, pitched a simulated game Monday... When Royals left-fielder Joe Vitiello crashed into the wall while making a catch in the first inning, he knocked out one of the light bulbs indicating "ball" in the count... The Royals picked up where they left off in Fenway last season. Kansas City won five of its last six games in Boston in 1996.

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Rained Out

Yesterday's baseball game against New Hampshire was rained out. The Minutemen are back in action today at Harvard.

■ NHL

continued from page 10

minutes on Eric Lindros, John LeClair and Rod Brind'Amour kept the final frum getting ugly

Some have tried to pin Buffalo's woes on the absence of injured/disgruntled goalie Dominik Hasek, but that is a poor man's excuse as Shields, a former Michigan standout, has proven himself to be an exemplary backup. No, the problem is that without a bona fide goal scorer, Nolan must either open up his system and risk massive counter attacks by the quicker Flyers, or continue methodically trudging along and pray the Legion of Doom misses the team bus.

The Devils have the ability to do either. Their clones (Buffalo, Florida, Washington, et. al.) have comparable defensive ability, but lack even the minimum scoring punch needed to win playoff games. They are mere monkeys in a world ruled by a more highly-developed chimpanzee.

Nolan, who can either play nobly like Pittsburgh (which also lost to Philly) or keep pounding away, faces the same question as the Insane Prince of Denmark. Nolan must now decide "whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, or to take up arms against a sea of troubles." To be gentle and fire up his offense, or to be rough and double-shift Rob Ray, that is the question.

Walk to Carolina; won't be long 'till I'll be there: It's official. The Hartford Whalers are now the Carolina Hurricanes and will play the next two years in Greensboro before taking permanent residence in Raleigh in 1999

Owner Peter Karmanos flirted like Madonna in her material girl phase with offers from several cities, obtained some leverage, and parlayed it into a new $120 million, 20,000 seat arena in the shadow of N.C. State's Carter- Finley Stadium. The move was brilliantly orchestrated, as it furthers the league's audience in NASCAR country in a great facility, without tampering at all with the front-running expansion markets of Atlanta, Houston or Nashville.

Now, if only Karmanos' team played the game of hockey as well as its owner played the relocation game it wouldn't have only three winning seasons in the past 18 years.

He kinda, shoulda, sorta, woulda loved her if he could've: (Bonus points if you can name that tune.) The Edmonton Oilers are Canada's last hope of winning the nation's single most coveted award, but are they really Canada's team right now? There's a lot to be excited about with a young maturing core that could pose a serious challenge in a few years, but one issue will have to be addressed in the provincial nation.

Just as those who wave the Maple Leaf gripe when talented players from Gordie Howe to Patrick Roy cash their pay checks in the land beneath the Star Spangled Banner, "Canada's last team" is led by a pack of former US collegiate All-Stars.

The brilliant goal that eliminated Dallas in overtime was scored by Todd Marchant out of Lake Superior State. The goalie that made the key save moments earlier to get them there was former Wisconsin Badger Curtis Joseph. Their attention-grabbing African-American forward is just that too, an American, Mike Grier a Holliston native and BU alum.

And in the air there was a hunger even a boy could recognize: The Pimp Daddy is no puckhead, but even he confessed that he's hooked by the burning intensity of an NHL playoff game, especially the plethora of overtimes like those 1997 run to the Cup has already seen. There's just nothing else like it in sports, but if you're still reading this you know that already and you're all better for it.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

■ lacrosse

continued from page 10

Carey, Stephanie Pavlick and Colleen Wales. Herker will miss the teamwork she set up with Walsh this year, but her fellow classmate sees the middle of the field as the tops.

"I think our midfield is going to be our strongest point next year," Leder said. "And Steph's a big loss, but we have a lot of people that can step in, and play up to her ability."

McClellan saw both Herker and Minaker as the keys in the step up concerning the midfield skill positions.

"Jen Herker really got her game together, and she has struggled coming back from a knee injury a few years ago," McClellan said. "There was one specific day in February, and I could see it, a lightbulb went off above her head. She played out of her mind, and she hasn't stopped."

Defense — The Ridley High trio, made up of Warrington and defenders Erica Bryan and Kristen Hocker will leave a gaping hole in the back line to fill for next year. Both Leder and McClellan consider it a tough task to face, and the team will have to learn to play together again. Yet, both have confidence in the defensive abilities of the underclassmen, such as freshman Lynne Young.

"Leder was one of our most consistent defenders," McClellan said. "Tough on the field, and ended up being one of our steadiest players, which is exciting because she's had her ups and downs. Our freshman this year, should step full on next season. I have all the confidence in the world that our defensive unit will be very good next year."

Talking of Leder, Herker is the first to vouch for the junior's ability to take the next step up.

"I think Amy is going to step up real well next year, because the seniors are not here, and she has it in her to do it," Herker said.

Freshman Megan Haggerty stepped in as a field player this season as the only roster player in the goal mouth; while doing the best a rookie can do, two top recruits will look to fill the position.

Recruits: Denise Brey, Shawnee H.S., N.Y. and Shalee Merkle, Haverford, H.S., Pa. ("two steady team players, not flashy, but solid"); GK Tara Durkin, Jenkintown H.S., Pa. ("very skilled and technically sound"); Jen Nardi, Nyack H.S., N.Y. ("a lot of pizazz and enthusiasm").

Security Positions
Bright Moments Festival
July 10, 17, 24
You must be, A UMass student returning to UMass in the Fall and available to work the nights of the concerts and attend one informational meeting.
Pay is $5 per hour and free admission to concert.
For information call New WORLD Theater at 545-1972 before May 30th.

Alfredo's
PHOTOGRAPHIC ART LOCAL AMHERST PHOTOS MAKE GREAT GRADUATION GIFTS
SPORTS PHOTOS + POSTERS
39 S. PLEASANT ST. 413 - 253 - 1707
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
- Cars • Mini Vans
- Trucks
- Cargo Vans
- 15 Passenger Vans
- Low Daily/Weekly/ Weekend Rates
- We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
- Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
*ONE MILE FROM THE BUS ROUTE.

A Branch Beyond
Silver Jewelry Specialists
Great Selection Low Prices
236 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 253-4997 Mon-Sat 11-6

SUMMER SESSION
College Students...
...while you're home for the summer, why not take a course or two at Fitchburg Stat College? In just a few weeks, you can earn credits in English, art, education, philosophy, psychology, sociology or computer science. Both graduate and undergraduate, our credits are transferrable to virtually any college in the country.
Summer Session I
May 27 - June 28
Registration ongoing through May 29
Late charge assessed beginning May 13th
Summer Session II
June 30 - August 2
Registration ongoing through July 1
Late charge assessed beginning June 17th
Register Today! Phone In, Fax In, Mail In or Walk In
(508) 665 3181, Fax 665 3658, E-mail: dgce@fsc.edu
PS...Call for information on exciting, amazingly affordable credit studies abroad in Rome, Italy and Hilo, Hawaii. Each program runs during the month of July.
Visit our Web Site at www.fsc.edu
Fitchburg State College
Division of Graduate and Continuing Education

For a Sporting Good Time
Athletic Department Year End Sale!
25% - 50% off all items
Large Selection of athletic merchandise
Monday May 5th
Tuesday May 6th
Wednesday May 7th
10:00 am - 4:00 pm
(each day)
Richard Garber Field
behind the Curry Hicks Cage
UMass Athletics

RESULTS resume
We know what employers want.
Resumes for the real world
- Written by a business executive
- Resumes, cover letters, too
- Employer lists & cover letters, too
253-9055
In your back yard at 150 Fearing Street

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Obtain valuable teaching experience and enhance your resume. Volunteer to teach Contraceptive Education Workshop at University Health Services. Call for more information about Fall 97 opportunities.

FOR RENT

2 bedroom Available 6/1. 1010 N. Pleasant #3 549-4142

Nice 2 bedroom apt. Available June 1. 10 min. walk to campus. On bus route. Call 549-7505

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option. 3 bedroom Puffton, renovated, A/C, heat included. Near pool. Available 6/1 Call 549-7123

3 bedroom apartment Available 6/1. $700. 253-5788

Take over my lease at The Boulders! $70 off first month's rent and FREE rent in July. Call Jeff at 253-7872

2 bedroom Brandywine. Pond view. $780/month. Reduced rent in June and July. Starting 6/1 Call 549-0023

Take over our lease- 2 bedroom apt. Brandywine. Gas, heat and snow included. Available from 5/1. $710. 549-3570

Center of town 1,2,3 bedrooms. Gas, heat, hardwood floors 253-7879

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550. 2 bedroom- $425. 20 minutes from campus--no bus. Available for Sept. 665-2203

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept. at Squire Village. 665-2203

AUTO FOR SALE

93 Velks Fox. Nothing but highway miles. Very clean. Very reliable. $2500 or B/O. 548-9271 Leave message.

65 Nissan Maxime Station Wagon Good shape. Includes insane music system. Call 546-2002. Ask for "Z." It's a luxury college car. Sunroof/CD/Power Everything.

92 Eagle Talon red/black, standard, power windows/locks, moon roof, 98K miles. $7000 or B/O. 549-6102 or 323-4888

EMPLOYMENT

Restaurant Help: Cooks, dishwashers, waitpersons. Part-time, year round preferred. Full service experience necessary. Applications only at Walker's Grill, 41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst. No calls please.

SUMMER HELP
EARN EXTRA MONEY!!!!!!!
FLEXIBLE HOURS!!!!!!
SPEND YOUR SUMMER IN BOSTON!!!!!
STARTING PAY $9.00 TO $11.00 PER HOUR PLUS TIPS!
IF YOU ARE ATHLETIC, MOTIVATED, A NONSMOKER, ENJOY HARD WORK AND A WORK OUT PLEASE GIVE US A CALL OR COME IN.
PLEASE CALL GENTLE GIANT MOVING AT 617-661-3333
RETAIL SALES
Sales Staff- $6/hr + Commission
Gnarstead Minimum $6/hr
Cashiers, Stock Clerks- $6/hr.
NAMCO, one of America's largest retailers of above ground pools, has immediate openings in the following locations:
Avon, MA- 508-535-0534
Billerica, MA- 508-663-8848
Enfield, CT- 860-741-0737
Framingham, MA- 508-875-4193
Hanover, MA- 617-826-7790
Springfield, MA- 413-736-0364
Swansea, MA- 508-675-8777
Worcester, MA- 508-756-3752
Candidates should possess a customer-focused "can-do" team spirit. We offer a very competitive pay plus commissions. For additional locations in Connecticut or Southern New Hampshire call 860-649-3666 ext. 216

Residential Summer Camp Counselors Wanted by Nature's Classroom. Live-in position. Available in Massachusetts to anyone who honestly likes being with kids. 1-800-433-6375

Part-Time Positions available for hard-working, dependable people starting May 21/Competitive wages If interested contact Justin 549-1128

Summer Childcare Two children, ages 11 and 14. $6/hour. Must have car. 256-1229

Painters Wanted Earn $3000-$5000 for summer. Westwood, Dedham area. Call Mike 549-5939.

Are you a computer guru? The Office of Information Technologies is now hiring qualified student consultants for the Summer and Fall Semesters. We are looking for both undergraduate and graduate students. Research assistantships are available for qualified graduate students. Visit our web page http://www.oit.umass.edu/oit/jobs to apply and for more information.

Virgin Records College Rep. Position Get music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position, 10-15 hrs/week. Resume fax resume and cover letter to Elizabeth Gruenewald at (310)288-2433 or call 1-800-242-7421 to apply. Sophomore or Junior with car preferred. Previous music industry experience is a plus!

Bar or Waitperson Apply in person The Paddock- 127 Elm St., Hatfield.

University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales, Marketing and PR experience. Call 1-800-743-5556 ext. 122

EMPLOYMENT

CAPE COD RESTAURANT Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train, housing available Eastham and Orleans. (508)255-9394

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call. (413)827-7555

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St - D40, NYC, NY 10014

FOR RENT

3 bedroom apt. Main St. $735. Heat and Hot Water included. Great location. Available 6/1. Call 253-0360

1 bedroom Take over lease. Colonial Village. Starting June 1. $430/month. 253-0313

3 bedroom house close to Uptown. Big back yard. Call 549-8510

3 bedroom apt. in house. NoHo Center. $725 + utilities. On bus line. 582-7030 Available 6/1

Take Over Our Lease Will sublet, starting June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine. Includes heat and hot water. Rent negotiable. Call 549-0530

Take over our lease! 1 bedroom On bus line. Available Aug. or Sept. Call 665-5191 or email aumer275@aol.com

1 bedroom apt.- On bus route. 5 minute walk to campus. Crestview Apts. Starting June 1st. Call 549-4943

Rent in Brandywine Call 549-0319

Take over our lease Available 6/1. 3 bedroom. Great location on bus line. Call 256-6034

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September. Lease $1300+ 253-7879

FOR SALE

Tag Sale- Great bargains, furniture, 3 piece sectional, sofa bed $150. Appliances, toaster oven $5, bookcases, clothes, etc. 950 N Pleasant. Rotary, Presidential Apt. 1-5pm, May 10 + 11. Alternate rain location- 83 Presidential St. 549-2884

AIWA Audio System $150. P-166 Full Package PC. $1200. Sharpe VCR $110 (4 headed). Digital Answering Machine $20 or B/O. 256-0767

3 Couches For Sale 2 Loveseats + 1 Huge Couch. Lawn Furniture. 2 Lounges + 2 Chairs w/Pads. Charcoal Grill. Come check it out and make me an offer! Craig 253-3336

Microwave $70 Phone and Answering Machine $40. Call Vickie @ 549-4940

Mac LCIII Monitor and printer, fax modem, and lots of software. $300 or B/O. Call Neal 548-9170

Full Size Futon with mattress cover included. Must sell. Excellent condition. $100. Call 549-7882

Bank Bed $150 Modern, excellent condition. Call 253-6449

Mens Cannondale Tonrieg Bike Excellent condition. $250 or B/O. Call Sharon 549-1773

Schwiee Mees 12 Speed Road Bike $100. Good condition. Call 253-7234

FOUND

Found- A Packaged T-shirt w/Bossy Boss table. Name on bag was Ola Ann. Call 6-7238

FOR RENT

House For Rent $1700 per month. 4 bedrooms, one-half miles from Mullins Center. Gas, heat. Call 253-7879

MISCELLANEOUS

Graduation Weekend- Beautifully furnished rooms available. Fifty dollars a night. Call 258-1938

PERSONALS

CONGRATS DAN!! You are a great president. I guess we are more alike than I thought. Love you- Hillary

ROOM FOR RENT

Beginning September Walk to UMass. Furnished, large, quiet, comfortable Male Grad/Professional $747/week continuously through May 1998. 549-1578

Female Non-Smoker to share apartment with two friendly females. Summer and Fall. Call Megan at 549-2626

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+ Call 253-4954 for more info.

1 large room in two bedroom apartment. Looking for two females. Available 8/1 and Fall and Spring Option. On bus route. Very spacious. Great location Call 549-2892

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+ Call 253-4954 for more info.

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for 1 female to share cheap 2 bedroom apt. for summer. Located on Sunset. Call 546-0407

Need a place for the summer? We have 1 room available in Puffton! Male or female. 1 or 2 people. Call 549-8513 Ask for Jessica for more information. Or Chris at 549-6102

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Rabbit Rescue can help! Don't abandon your bunny! Call us, we'll find him a new home. Ellen 367-0105

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free tasting and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

Three Bedroom Renovated Puffton Apartment. Available 6/1 w/ Fall Option. Rent negotiable. 549-9310

One room in 4 bedroom house in North Amherst with four males. $725/month. Rent and move-in negotiable. 548-9130

1 bedroom in a 4 bedroom spacious Hadley farm house. Must see. Starts June at $250. Call 549-1016

2 bedroom apartment with Fall Option. Call 549-4089

CHEAP 2 bedroom Balcony, A/C, Brandywine. $650. On bus route. 548-7080

Summer Sublet- 3 bedroom apt. Southeast St. Near bus. Rent negotiable. Call Molly/Leslie 546-5500

Cheap 2 bedrooms near Puffers. $175 per month per person plus utilities. Available 6/1. Call 548-7068

FREE RICE! Single rooms. Alpine Common. Utilities included. Best Offer! 259-1834

Large room in house on Main St. Great for 2. $400/month. Call 253-1690/ 546-9915

Uptown Apartment- Starting June 1! One bedroom, laundry facilities, parking. Very affordable! Call 253-7109

Sunny 2 bedroom 2 bath. Fall Option. Mill Valley. $825/negotiable 253-0551

Brandywine 2 bedrooms, A/C, pool. Rent negotiable. 549-6452

Room Available 5/15 Great location near Amherst Center. $350 includes all utilities. (201)670-8228 Leave message.

Phillips St. Apt. June 1- Sept. 1. 4 bedrooms. Excellent location. $1100/month negotiable. Call 549-6994

3 bedroom newly renovated apartment Puffton Village. Best Offer. Available 6/1. Call 549-5405

SUMMER SUBLET

Sublet or Take Over Lease 6/1. 2 bedroom Brandywine. Recently renovated. 549-5132

House with 2 bedrooms available On bus route in Hadley. 1 bath. $170 a month + utilities/bdr. Call Paul 587-0471

2 bedrooms available in condo right on campus. June to August. Joel 546-3142

2 bedroom available in 3 bedroom Mill Valley Apt. Looking for 4 people to share. $720/month. Females preferred. If interested call Jess @ 6-6477 or Michelle @ 665-8752

One room available 6/1 Near Puffers Pond. Female non-smoker. No pets. $720 + 1/4 utilities. On bus route. Call Darcy @ 546-5918

Summer Sublet Starting 6/1 $720/month. 1 mile from campus. 546-3357 female only.

Great one bedroom apt. for Summer Sublet w/Fall Option. Colonial Village. Available June 1st. $400/month. Call now at 256-0660

Downtown Amherst Apartment Fall Option. Two large sunny rooms in great house with housemates. Females preferred. Non-smokers. $275. Call 256-8330

Great 3 bedroom apartment In prime location. 5 min. to campus. 5 min. to town. Call Rachal for more info. 253-6449

2 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Available 6/1 w/Fall Option. 549-4493

2 bedroom apt.- Boulders Newly renovated. Hot water included. $760. Great place. One mile from campus. Call 253-6670 Ask for Alyson or Amy.

Summer Sublet- Fall Option One room- Brandywine— Sublet one room or whole apartment. Newly carpeted. Free gas and heat. Bus route. 549-6087 or 549-7886

Sublet- Sunderland PVTA stops at house. Considerate housemates. One bedroom. $284/month. 665-9066

1 bedroom available in furnished 4 bedroom house. Starting 5/31. Two miles from campus. Interested call Andrew 549-2896

3 bedroom apt. Puffton. Renovated. Heat/hot water included. Only $800/month! Available 6/1 call 546-1449

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apartment. Available 6/1. Cheap with Fall Option

Mill Valley- 2 bedrooms. Heat/Hot Water included. Available 6/1. With Fall Option. 253-6534

South Amherst 2 bedroom apartment. $585/month. Call 256-4788

SUMMER SUBLET

2 bedroom- Boulders Includes A/C and water. On bus line. Available 6/1. Call 256-0665 ASAP

2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom apt. in South Amherst. 2 bathrooms. Rent negotiable. Call 253-6606

Renovated 3 bedroom Puffton Apt. Heat/HW included. A/C, parking. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. Will pay $100/month for summer. Call 549-0883

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths, first floor. Available June 1st. One month free. Call 253-6467

1 bedroom in a 2 bedroom apartment. Available May 25-Dec. 31. Cliffside Apts- Sunderland. On bus route. Everything included. $315 a month. 665-7988, 665-8336

Sublet $200 a month in Amherst. On bus line. Call Andy 253-5482

2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. Bottom floor facing pool. Heat/hot water included. Bus route. Price Negotiable. 549-5086

One bedroom apartment on bus line. $550/month. Call Tricia @ 1(212)247-2388

3 bedroom apartment June-Aug. Pool/Courts. Sunderland. Call 665-0298

One female to share large, furnished room in 2 bedroom apartment on bus route. Close to campus. Available June 1-Aug. 31. Call 549-1479

2 bedroom 2 bathroom apartment. 207 Sunset opposite College Pizza. Very close to campus. Rent negotiable. Available 6/1-8/31. Call 549-5805

1 bedroom in a 3 bedroom apartment. Available June-August w/possibla Fall Option. $250/month. Call Ami at 584-1478

June-August $600 Room to sublet, fully furnished. Close to Puffers Pond. Near bus route. 549-4047

4 bedroom house Option of 1 to 4 bedrooms for rent. Call 549-9224

Puffton! One large room and one small room in 3 bedroom apartment. Call 549-8969

Single, double, triple rooms in big 3 floor house on edge of campus. 3 bath. 3 shower. Washer, cable, utilities. Only $500 all summer. Available May 23. Call Fabio at 548-7076 for info.

2 bedroom apt. Fall Option. 3 floor. On bus line. $575/neg. Partly furnished. 256-2052

Close 2 bedroom in Brandywine. A/C, pool. 6/1 with Fall Option. $800. On bus line. UMass, one mile. 549-0879

TO SUBLET

Need a place to sublet for summer? Not little cheap room. $230 + utilities. Call 549-9221 for more info.

Specious 2 bedroom in Sunderland. $630- H20 included. Available 6/1. On bus route. A must see! 665-8894

6 month sublet June 1 to January 1. Single bedroom apartment at Puffton Village. Rent is $535 per month. Includes heat and hot water. Call 549-0096

Two females looking to sublet. Fall Semester only. Call Katy and Rene 546-3114

Heat and Water included 2 bedroom. A/C. $640/month. Starts June 1st. Fall Option. Furnished. Call 549-4324. We can accommodate any needs.

TRAVEL

Europe $169 O/W
Mexico/Caribbean $189 R/T ONE WORLD TRAVEL It's your world, now you can afford to see it (413)587-0001

EUROPE $175.
Within USA $75 - $129
Caribb./Mexico $199 r/t
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!!!!
http://www.airhitch.org
AIRHITCH 1-800-326-2009

JOIN OUR 'GLOBAL VILLAGE'
1 yr. International MBA
3 Countries & Languages
Financial Aid &
Job Market
Call Texas Graduate
School of International
Management
(512) 888-5441
9 June Enrollment

WANTED TO RENT

Two female grad students with perfectly behaved and maintained dog need summer sublet, preferably near bus route. Willing to pay three months up front, plus deposit. 584-1947

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, MAY 7

Film — Jacob the Liar will be screened at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Auditorium as part of Yom Hashoah events.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series presents Ann Barlow, UMass Art Department, on "The Girl Next Door," in the Campus Center, room 162–175 from 12:15–1:30 p.m. Free and open to the public.

Lecture — "Repression in Massachusetts Prisons: The Inside Story" will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 905. Come hear the accounts of two former political prisoners with their struggles. The speakers will also provide a revolutionary analysis of the prison system and how it functions as a means of national oppression, increasingly directed at members of oppressed nations. A discussion will follow. Sponsored by RAIL, MIM, Boricuas Unidos and Commuter Area Government.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold its final meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 904. All are welcome. Call Tim at 546-0562 or Kaye at 546-1459 for more information.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold a meeting from 5:30–6:30 p.m. in room 304 of University Health Services. All are welcome to attend.

Meeting — Spectrum Magazine is having a general meeting at 8:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room to be announced. This meeting will include elections for positions opening up for the fall semester. New members are welcome.

Meeting — A University Center 2000 follow-up meeting will be held from 11 a.m.– noon in the Campus Center, room 902.

Meeting — A University Center 2000 office meeting will be held from noon–1 p.m. in the Campus Center Coffee Shop.

Workshop — A Text Taking Workshop will be offered by the Learning Support Services from the 1:30–2:45 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Free. Call 545- 5334 to register.

THURSDAY, MAY 8

Campaign — There will be a letter writing campaign in the Campus Center, room 804, from 7–9:30 p.m. in support of Special Education. All are invited to attend. The campaign is happening in efforts to rebuke recent negative propaganda around Special Education. We will be writing state and local legislature. If you are unable to attend or would like more information, please call Sue at 546–0228.

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe, Mission Improvable, will be holding their end of the year shows today, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174. A special guest comedy troupe will be performing with them each night. Free and open to the public.

Lecture — Bonnie Strickland, professor of psychology at UMass, will give a lecture entitled, "Lesbian Attraction: What's Sex Roles Got to Do With It?" The event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. Part of the GLBT Lecture Series.

Meeting — The UMass Habitat for Humanity will be holding a general membership meeting at 7 p.m. in the Bluewall.

Meeting — A University Center 2000 Town Meeting — Plenary Session of Findings will be held from 6–8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165. Logo awards to be announced.

FRIDAY, MAY 9

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe, Mission Improvable, will be holding their end of the year shows today, Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174. A special guest comedy troupe will be performing with them each night. Free and open to the public.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

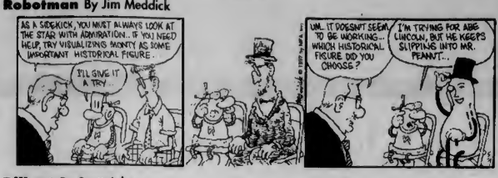
Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

TONIGHT AT 10
MENTOS & NEW HORIZON BAND

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Rum Punch

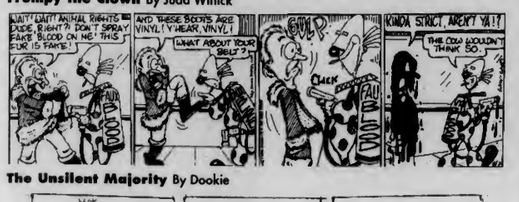


WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 7, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	In the Wild (In Stereo)		Jack Paar As I Was Saying... "An American Masters Special"					Rogan — The Untold Story (R)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Nanny	Dave's World	"Knots Landing: Back to the Cul-de-Sac" (1997) William Devane				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Dave's World	"Knots Landing: Back to the Cul-de-Sac" (1997) William Devane					News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Grace Under	Coach	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Sister, Sister	Smart Guy	Jamie Foxx	Wayans Bros.	News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Newsradio	Newsradio	Wings	Men-Body	Law & Order "Passion"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Sentinel "Survival" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "Displaced"		News	LAPD	N. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Newsradio	Newsradio	Wings	Men-Body	Law & Order "Passion"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Pacific Palisades (In Stereo)		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Newsradio	Newsradio	Wings	Men-Body	Law & Order "Passion"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	In the Wild (In Stereo)		Jack Paar As I Was Saying... "An American Masters Special"					Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Grace Under	Coach	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Sentinel "Survival" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "Displaced"		News		Red TV	Mad Abo. You
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	"Death Warrant" (1990, Drama) Jean-Claude Van Damme				"One Good Cop" (1991, Drama) Michael Keaton
A&E	69	Quincy "Rich"		Law & Order "Family Values"		Biography "Katharine Graham"		American Justice (R)				20th Century "Hippies/Cults"	Law & Order "Apocrypha"
CNN	53	World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
CON	29	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	John Henton	"National Lampoon's Vacation" (1983) Chevy Chase				1 Night Stand	Dream On	Daily Show	John Henton
DISC	63	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "Thunder From the Sea"		Wild Discovery "Gorilla" (R)		Discover Magazine "Poison"		Search for Dracula (R)		Wild Discovery "Gorilla" (R)
ESPN	61	Up Close	Sportscenter	Major League Baseball Teams to Be Announced. (Live)								Major League Baseball: Cubs at Padres
LIFE	62	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait "Carly Simon"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Escape From Terror: The Teresa Stamper Story" (1995, Drama)				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	59	(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		Jenny M.		Singled Out		Music Videos (In Stereo)			Real World	Jenny M.	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	64	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug		Rugrats		Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Test
SCIFI	60	Twilight Zone	Berkside	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest DSV "Higher Power"		"Time Runner" (1992, Science Fiction) Mark Hamill					Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	65	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Homefiling (R)	Wondr-Weathr Ultrascience		Connections II (Connections II				Connections III (R)	Wondr-Weathr Ultrascience
TNT	55	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball Playoffs. Teams to Be Announced. (Live)						Inside-NBA
USA	66	Renegade "The Talisman"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote (In Stereo)		"The Stepsister" (1997, Suspense) Linda Evans. (In Stereo)				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	51	(4:45) "Softly!"		"Conehead" (1993) Dan Aykroyd. PG				"Girl 6" (1996, Drama) Theresa Randle. (In Stereo)			Tracey Takes	Larry Sanders	Fifth Element "Skeletons" R
MAX	53	(5:15) "Ace Ventura Pet Detective"		"Calling the Ghosts" (1996) NR				"Necronomicon" (1993) Jeffrey Combs. R		"Deceptions II: Edge of Deception" (1994) Mariel Hemingway. R			"American"
SHOW	56	(4:30) "Sahara"		"City Limits" (1985) John Stockwell. PG-13		Outer Limits (In Stereo)							Poltergeist "Party Girl" R

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

The Unsilent Majority By Dookie

University® By Frank Cho

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
BLT's	Roast Pork
Hot Corned Beef on Rye	Turkey Divan
Ravioli / Tomatoe Sauce	Vegetarian Pocket
Vegan Ravioli	Quarter Pound Burgers

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Kielbasa / Sauerkraut	Roast Pork
Vegetable Lasagna	Cheese Spinach Strudel
Fettuccini/Tomato Sauce	Korean BBQ Tofu
Vegetarian Pocket	Tortellini

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburgers	Roast Pork
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich	Turkey Divan
Mac & Cheese

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Cutlet	Roast Pork
Jalapeno Shrimp&Rice	Turkey Divan
Fettuccini/Tomato Sauce	Penne w/tomatoes & Spinach
Ratatouille

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Something that you've been planning for a long time starts to come in fruition. Stay on top of a difficult situation at home--an unhappy person could be in need of a little extra TLC. Avoid the tendency to be headstrong in political situations.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Someone with a tendency to overspend wants to borrow your credit cards. Don't let them, or you could be left holding the bill. If you want to treat them to something, share an excursion and choose a low selected items- but don't give them free rein.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
A lively relationship offers a chance to exercise your wit as well as your intellect. Put it to the test by taking it to a more personal level. Wondering what the other person thinks of you? You'll know when the time is ripe.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
A busy time begins to look dangerously like an overload situation. Look for little ways to relieve your stress. A good laugh with a friend may be all that it takes. You might also want to delegate some of your responsibilities, if possible.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Count on the creative efforts of others to inspire you to greater heights. Be sure to give credit where credit is due. Although or it could come back to haunt you. Something you've been avoiding takes center stage; keep an open mind, and it could be more fun than you thought.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
You're definitely in a mood to be extravagant, but put the brakes on your impulses when they start to interfere with your responsibilities. A romantic urge could point you in the right direction to start a beautiful new relationship.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Trust the experts for advice when you start something new. Your common sense can only carry you so far, and in this case, it's no substitute for solid hard experience. A domestic problem could be the precursor of worse events to come. Plan ahead.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Trust old fashioned thrift to get you out of a financial tight spot. You might be living beyond your means, but now is a good time to change that habit for the better. Use your creativity to improvise on things that you've eliminated from your budget.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Dazzle someone with your insight and skill when it comes to fixing a basic household problem. Your wits are sharp, so use them to advantage. Later in the week, surprise a loved one with a special evening that you've planned.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
A hectic schedule and stressful projects take their toll. Treat yourself to some R&R. A difficult person gives you a clue that could lead to a deeper understanding. Try to open the channel of communication as you don't lose the ground you've gained.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Face-to-face contact may be what it takes to resolve a conflict. Make an effort to go the extra mile for a friend. They'll really appreciate it, and you'll enjoy yourself, too. Once it's time to get serious, don't shy away from the tough decisions.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Don't allow your attitude to be affected by a scorpion. Kill them with kindness, and you might even earn yourself a laugh or two. A change of scenery would do you some good. Be alert, and you could discover an opportunity.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

For an additional $100 per person, Disney World now offers Go-to-the-Head-of-the-Line cards.

Quote of the Day

"All I ask of myself is that I hold together."

–Ned's Atomic Dustbin

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Sports Notice
Hey sports fans!! There will be a mandatory Collegian sports staff meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center basement. Interested new writers should attend at 6:45 p.m. Call Luke Meredith at 545-1852 if you can't make it.

SPORTS

Men's lacrosse tournament kicks off next weekend

The NCAA men's lacrosse tournament begins this Saturday with opening round action at Towson, Md. and Westchester, N.Y. The selections and pairings were announced on Sunday evening. Here is a look at first round match-ups and the 12 teams vying for the championship.

The top four teams get a first round bye. In the North regional No. 1 Princeton meets the winner of the No. 8 Massachusetts — Hofstra game, and No. 4 Johns Hopkins takes on the winner between No. 5 Duke and Brown. In the South regional No. 2 Virginia meets the No. 7 Georgetown — Maryland winner, No. 3 Syracuse plays the winner of No. 6 Loyola and Notre Dame.

No. 7 Georgetown (9–4) vs. Maryland (8–4)

Georgetown showed early on this season that it would be a serious contender, shocking many in the lacrosse world with convincing wins over Syracuse (14–9) and Brown (12–10) in March. Since then the Hoyas have maintained one of the best goals for–goals against averages in the nation, at 13.5–8.85.

JEREMY ADAMS

Maryland has played one of the strongest schedules in the country, losing close games to Duke, Johns Hopkins and taking Virginia to double overtime in Charlottesville. The Terrapins have won two straight games going into the postseason, over Rutgers and Maryland–Baltimore County, unlike Georgetown, which fell to Loyola and Lehigh to end the regular season.

Maryland hosts the finals and semi–finals of the tournament for the sixth straight year (Rutgers next year), and for good reason. Maryland is the best public school representative of the most lacrosse–crazy state (sorry Towson St. fans). This season they went 1–3 in games against Atlantic Coast Conference opponents, but can hardly be faulted for losing games to some of the absolute best teams in the country.

The Hoyas are slumping, having been outscored 8–2 in the second half by Lehigh en route to the 11–10 loss. The Hoyas have shown that they have the ability to run with anyone in the country, and Maryland has shown that it can hang with the best in the close ones (Duke lost 10–11), but lose like the rest if it can't slow 'em down (Duke loss 10–17).

In the first ever meeting between the two D.C. area teams, it will come down to coaching and execution (Maryland extra–man unit went 0–7 against Rutgers), as the two are well matched. Maryland prevails in a nail–biter 14–13, the Terps are just too familiar with the national scene, and have to look forward to playing at home in the latter rounds.

No. 6 Loyola (9–3) vs. Notre Dame (9–2)

The Fighting Irish have lost just two games this season, to Loyola in March and to Massachusetts in April. In May it would be easy to give the edge to the Greyhounds because they beat the Minutemen at Richard F. Garber Field in Amherst, where the Irish was shut out in the first half.

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN
The No. 8 Minutemen will mix it up with Hofstra in the first round of NCAA action this weekend.

But there are many other reasons why Loyola is going to win this game. Both teams have above average defenses, and good EMO results, but Loyola's offense has been on fire year long, averaging 14.6 goals per game while playing the one of the five hardest schedules in the nation.

The Greyhounds enter the tournament having lost recently to cross town rival Johns Hopkins by two goals after being called off–sides on their two final possessions within the last :39 seconds. If that game, which is one of the fiercest rivalries in all of the sport, had gone the other way, Loyola would be entering the tournament with a six game winning streak.

Notre Dame will have to dig deep to muster enough firepower to equal Loyola's offensive production, and if it can it still has to beat a solid defense. The Irish will hang close for 45 minutes, but the Greyhounds will run away with it in the fourth quarter, 16–10.

No. 8 Massachusetts vs. Hofstra

Like seven other tournament participants this year, Hofstra has played UMass already this season. On March 22 the Flying Dutchmen beat the Minutemen in Hempstead, N.Y. 7–6 in overtime. Hofstra played a lot of strong teams this year, and lost to a lot of them too. It was wins over UMass, Rutgers, Hartford and Brown that earned the Mets' and Islanders' neighbor a chance to play the maroon and white in the first round.

The Dutchmen allowed just 7 goals per game, while scoring just 9.79, a peculiarly low tab considering their fast artificial turf field. They enter the tournament having lost 10–4 to ACC dormat (still, that's not necessarily a bad thing) North Carolina.

Massachusetts similarly kept many opponents to their lowest offensive outputs of the season, with a 7.3 goals against average. Only Virginia, Army and Loyola notched double figures on the Minutemen, while teams like Syracuse, Notre Dame, Duke and Hartford scored season lows against the maroon and white.

The Minutemen will also benefit from a resurging offense. Senior attacker Brendan Glass (25 goals, 9 assists) notched his fifth hat–trick in 13 games against Brown in the season finale, midfielder Chris Grande (25 goals, 1 assist) has had a streak in the final score in all but one game this season and others have stepped up from outside of the spotlight to contribute greatly in recent games.

The Minutemen had some weak second halves this season, but have proven that when they need a win against a strong team they come through big. To beat Hofstra they'll need a full 60 minutes from all field players, and the sharp goaltending from John Kasselakis that they got in the second half against Brown.

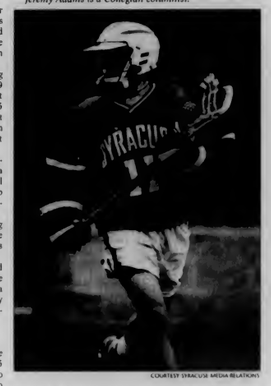
Hofstra will hope that they can beat UMass at being slow. Both teams like to possess the ball and keep the pace at a minimum. The winner will be the team that capitalizes on the few offensive chances it gets.

Hofstra showed that it is a good team, going undefeated in six games in the America East Conference. The one problem with that statistic is just that it was the America East Conference. UMass, not burdened by mandatory games against weaker teams, is aided by its big game experience.

No. 5 Duke (10–3) vs. Brown (8–6)

The Blue Devils spent some time ranked No. 3 in the country, the program's highest ranking ever. Now at No. 5 with a chance to avenge the early season upset loss to Brown, they could not be happier. Duke is in position to make a run to a possible final four meeting against undefeated Princeton, with a match–up against fickle (read: beatable) No. 5 Hopkins in the second round.

One problem: beating Brown.



Brown's steal of a win over Duke early on was huge for the Bears. It would have been just as big in a disappointing way for the Blue Devils if they had not managed to do the same thing to everyone else that Brown did to them.

As for the Bears, after beating Duke and Syracuse early this season, they did not do much against a very difficult schedule. What Brown did was keep many powerful teams under 10 goals, including Duke.

The problem that the Blue Devils present to Brown is just that they are the complete package. They do not have the strongest offense in the country, but they have averaged 11.67 goals per game, and have a knack for scoring just one more than their opponent (which is, after all, the whole idea behind winning).

Duke gains revenge, beating back the slumping Bears. Should be a low scoring affair, with the Blue Devils sneaking away at the end, 12–8.

Jeremy Adams is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY SYRACUSE MEDIA RELATIONS
Senior attackman Doug Jackson and No. 3 Syracuse earned a first round NCAA bye.

Trio leads UM lax into fall season

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Looking back on the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team's most successful season since 1988, there are three sides to the story. The junior class of tri–captain attacker Jen Bowen, midfielder Jennifer Herker and defender Amy Leder have added equal parts offense and defense to the competitive concoction, evolving into the figurative glue which holds the Minutewomen together.

The effort to not only beat the best of what's around, but the best, was the main goal for UMass (6–7) this year, and the team took major strides in that direction. Two losses to top regional teams in Harvard and Rutgers, by a total margin of six goals, would have set the team up at a 8–5 mark, and for NCAA Tournament consideration.

Yet, that is the past, and the Minutewomen's junior class are the future — the upperclassmen for a team heavy with freshmen and sophomores next season. For coach Francesca McClellan, her senior class–to–be were a big part of that progress.

"The junior class really stepped it up this year," McClellan said. "They're sort of a unsung hero class. Three kids who aren't the flashiest kids on the field, but if they had a bad day, we noticed it, and it hurt the team."

The juniors are a bridge from the old to the new, and while they will help usher in a new recruiting class, they still feel the effects of what used to be their recruiting class. Out of a highly touted group of All–Americans three years ago, this threesome are all that remain, and they will be learning the fine art of senior leadership firsthand.

"I think we stepped up this year, and everyone's attitude and spirit were much higher," Leder said. "We definitely had the best season that we've had so far, and everyone was so supportive. We came in with these All–Americans,

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN
Junior Jennifer Herker came back from a knee injury her freshman year to become one of the team's top five scorers.

and I was probably the last person [the coach] thought she'd keep. But each year, we've got stronger."

"I think [our progress] had a lot to do with the seniors graduating," Herker said. "If we were going to step up, this was the year to do it. But, we're determined, and the people who wanted to play stayed, like me, Amy and Jen.

"It has nothing to do with playing ability sometimes, but maybe it has to do with determination, and who really wants to play."

Coupled with the progress this year is a quality recruiting class that could push the Minutewomen around the next corner, and over the .500 mark. Here is a wrap up of this season, with a preview of the incoming freshmen class:

Attack — Losing a player like Stephanie Walsh on attack, who ranks fifth in all–time goals (103) and seventh in points (115), will be tough, but the emergence of sophomore Laura Korutz (41 points) this season will more than ease the blow. Leder sees the leaders of the set offense as being the key next season: Korutz, Bowen and freshman Rebecca Minaker.

"On low attack, we still have all of our players coming back, plus the recruits coming in," Leder said. "We're not really losing anyone down low, since Steph was more in the middle."

Along with Korutz, Bowen is the player that sets the plays behind the net, but unlike Korutz, does not always get the immediate spotlight. After a fast start, Bowen was slowed down by a heel injury, but the coach still sees her as key part of this season's offense.

"Jen Bowen really struggled with a foot injury, and I think it impacted her in the second half of the season," McClellan said. "Not necessarily flashy, but she consistently does damage by setting her teammates up. Our attack grew stronger as a team, and we see it as a team offense.

"That showed in the second half of our games when we were scoring off of our set offense and in transition, on beautiful passes, and that was exciting to see."

Recruits (McClellan quote in parentheses): Fay Naber from Suffern, N.Y. ("can finish, draw, and is very, very talented"); Rachel Ingraffea, Ithaca, N.Y. ("the quickest kid I've ever seen come out of high school, and does everything"); Danielle McKeon, Westchester East, Pa. ("a bigger Laura Korutz, and a lefty").

Midfield — Minaker and Herker teamed up to not only make their presence felt in transitional play, but in scoring. The team will lose the two–way play of Michele Warrington to graduation, but this still looks to be the strong point of next season's team, returning sophomore Melissa Anderson, and freshmen Katie

Turn to LACROSSE, page7

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN
Junior Amy Leder is a tough defender who will anchor the UMass defensive line next year.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN
Junior Jennifer Bowen is a consistent player who has acted as one of UMass' top assist makers.

Sabres have and lack punch NHL invades Carolina and it's rocking like a Hurricane

In a time of chimpanzees I was a monkey: The Buffalo Sabres have the most punch of any team in the NHL.

The Buffalo Sabres have the least punch of any team in the NHL, and it will be their downfall.

Confused? In other terms, while no team in the league packs a harder physical punch, the team's offensive punch scores at a rate only slightly higher than Beavis, Butthead and Steve Urkel combined. At least Steve gets an innocent peck on the cheek from Laura every now and then.

LEIGH TORBIN ON THE NHL

Think about the scene in Spaceballs where President Screw is beamed into the command center and they put his ass on backwards. Stick with me here. In the process of assembling the best clone of the New Jersey Devils to date, the Sabres brass have been almost perfect. Only instead of Screw's butt, for a minor detail they just forgot to sign anyone who can flat–out beat an NHL goalie one–on–one.

The team's offense, which revolves around set passing plays and one–timers, is dreadfully predictable. The end result has the Philadelphia Flyers riding an uncharacteristic neutral zone trap to a pair of spirited road wins and a 2–0 series lead before ever seeing Broad Street.

The first two games have been classic playoff hockey, bloody with elbows up at all times. Between the perpetual mucking, high sticks and a massive brawl where Buffalo goaltender Steve Shields ripped Flyer netminder Garth Snow's sweater off, this series has had it all.

The only problem has been Buffalo's utter inability to muster an attack, something evidenced in its seven–game series win over Ottawa, and amplified by the Flyers cutting off their passing lanes. Up by a 2–0 score 17 minutes into game two, Philly sat back and encouraged the Sabres to hit them with their best shot for the remaining 43 minutes.

While the hitting was fierce as ever, not enough rubber was hitting Snow's pads, and only once did Buffalo hit the back of the net. So, the consensus Collegian pick for Coach of the Year, Ted Nolan, opened things up at the end to see what would happen.

The Flyers came out of their shell and used the open ice to pepper Shields for the final five minutes. Tremendous saves in the final waning

Turn to NHL, page7

Bluegrass to Beantown; Pitino leaves UK for C's

By Mike Embry
Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Rick Pitino is leaving one of college basketball's most successful programs to coach the NBA's most storied team — the Boston Celtics. His reported $70 million, 10–year contract is believed to be the richest for any coach in any sport.

Pitino, who had called the Celtics' job "the greatest opportunity ever afforded a coach," announced his decision at a news conference today at the school he led to the Final Four three times in his eight years there, winning the national title in 1996. He now returns to the NBA and the city where he began his head coaching career in 1978, at Boston University. Pitino, who coached the New York Knicks from 1987-89, faces the daunting task of rebuilding the Celtics, who have more wins and titles than any team in NBA history but finished last year with a franchise-worst 15-67 record.

"I look forward to the challenge," said Pitino, adding that he did not make a decision until Monday night.

He accepted a reported 10-year contract worth more than $70 million, exceeding the $25 million, five-year contract the Philadelphia 76ers gave Larry Brown this week.

Turn to PITINO, page7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 136 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, May 8, 1997

What does this have to do with my job?

What would you do if a prospective employer asked you a question you weren't prepared for? Check out how some of our Staffers answered (See Arts & Living, page 5).

By George, an NCAA play–in Becky George and the UMass softball team will host Canisius in an NCAA play–in game this afternoon (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Security tightens after clash in Jamaica

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Jamaican soldiers and police patrolled an opposition stronghold in the capital yesterday after a 4–year–old boy was killed and several people were wounded in sporadic clashes.

Fighting broke out Tuesday night between police and residents in the Tivoli Gardens area of West Kingston, an enclave loyal to the opposition Jamaica Labor Party. One child was killed when gunfire ripped through his high–rise apartment, witnesses said.

Another child suffered a head wound early yesterday after being hit by a stray bullet as he lay in bed in nearby Denham Town, witnesses there said. At least four other people suffered gunshot wounds, said opposition leader Edward Seaga.

Seaga blamed the governing People's National Party for encouraging the soldiers and police, whom he said were "out of control." He claimed the violence was intended to intimidate opposition supporters as the country prepares for elections, expected by the end of the year.

NATION

Georgia's moment of silence passes appeal

(AP) — A Georgia law that requires schools to open each day with a moment of "silent reflection" is the first in the nation to survive a review by a federal appeals court because it doesn't mention the word prayer.

Similar laws in Alabama and New Jersey were struck down because they specifically refer to prayer.

In a unanimous decision Tuesday, the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected a challenge claiming the law was an illegal attempt to return prayer to the schools.

The court said the 1994 Georgia law mandating 60 seconds of "silent reflection on the anticipated activities of the day" meets a three–pronged standard set by the Supreme Court: it has a secular purpose, doesn't promote religion and doesn't excessively entangle government with religion.

The law was challenged by lawyers for a former teacher who was fired for refusing to conduct the silent moment in his suburban Atlanta classroom. Brian Bown, who now lives in Illinois, objected because he felt he would have to police religious words or actions by students during the moment of reflection.

Bown wouldn't comment yesterday. But his lawyer, Steven Leibel, said he will appeal the decision to the nation's high court. Leibel argued that the Georgia law unconstitutionally entangles teachers — as government workers — with religious matters. He said Georgia lawmakers clearly sent a signal that they wanted prayer in public schools when they passed the law.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 45	HIGH: 55 LOW: 45	HIGH: 50 LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 12

Robinson to fund card readers after businesses voice concerns

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

All–campus card readers needed by University of Massachusetts student–run businesses for the upcoming semester will be financed by Tom Robinson, vice chancellor for student affairs.

The decision came after student–run businesses voiced their concern over not being involved in the all–campus card planning process. Most student businesses are also non– profit, and did not have time to build the cost of the readers into their budget.

"We didn't feel like we were given an opportunity to plan for machines... we're not–for–profit and can't afford a $3,000 machine," said Maydad Cohen, member of the Board of Student Businesses and employee of Campus Design and Copy.

Robinson said he decided to supply the money needed for the readers after meetings with the Board of Student Businesses and discussions with Paul Page, vice chancellor of administration and finance, and Chancellor David K. Scott.

"The card has been in development for a long time. I had been concerned all along with student businesses, there had been questions all along about how involved they would be," Robinson said.

The all–campus cards, which will be issued to all students, faculty and staff in September, will serve as both I.D. cards and debit cards which can be used to make purchases from on–campus vendors. Though student–run businesses are not required to use readers for their sales, the systems will provide distinct business advantages as well as convenience for customers.

"It was clear to me that most student businesses would have a hard time paying for the readers... I would rather just pay for the readers and begin to plan instead of allowing the issue to fester," Robinson said.

According to Robinson, the 11 readers that will be purchased for student business will total approximately $18,300. A basic reader will cost $600, but businesses like Tix Unlimited will be requiring extra equipment.

Peter Kilbourne, associate speaker of the Student Government Association, was also involved in the development of the all–campus card, and said he was hoping that the money would be coming from Page, out of the administration and finance budget.

"We really wanted administration and finance to cover this. It really is [Page's] responsibility," Kilbourne said. "We tried to convince him that we are a valuable asset and [that we] needed support, we weren't able to convince him.

"A group of students feel the administration should pay for this because we didn't have the luxury of budgeting," he said.

Robinson expressed his desire to simply take the money out of his budget and move on with the process.

"I don't even want to get into it. We need to move on. Hopefully we can move forward in constructive ways so the program works," Robinson said.

Individual reported peeping into SW residential area shower stall

An unidentified man was observed peeping into a women's shower stall in a residence hall in Southwest Residential Area earlier this week, according to a University of Massachusetts Police report yesterday.

Police received a report that the individual in question, described as a white male, in his early twenties, with a slender build and short, blonde hair, was seen looking into a shower stall in Cance Residence Hall at 7:30 a.m. on Monday.

When the individual was confronted, he left the area, according to police.

Chief John Luippold said that police do not have the name of the suspect, only the description of the individual.

Luippold also stressed that while the peeping tom was seen in Cance Residence Hall, all students living in Southwest Residential Area should be alert to anyone hanging around the floors or lounges of their dormitories.

"This specific incident occurred in Cance, but we want to make sure all students pay attention, because such an incident could occur elsewhere in Southwest," Luippold said.

University police ask students to call 545–2121 if anyone is observed to be acting suspicious in the residence halls.

— Laura Stock

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN
Shopaholic
Grad student Carter Gray contemplated buying a dress in the Campus Center yesterday afternoon.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN
Afternoon entertainment
Children's rights activist Billy Cherrytree sang and played his guitar near the Student Union yesterday.

Mobuto heads to Gabon

Zairian uncertain if their president will return

By Tina Susman
Associated Press

KINSHASA, Zaire — With some of the war's heaviest fighting reported in the rebel push toward Kinshasa, President Mobutu Sese Seko jetted off yesterday to neighboring Gabon — and left his countrymen wondering if he would return as promised.

The rebels, who have pressed thousands of miles through Zairian jungle, claimed Rwandan and Angolan mercenaries were aiding Mobutu's forces in fighting near Kenge, 120 miles east of the capital. They also said French mercenaries were guarding Kinshasa's airport, a claim the government denied.

Mobutu flew to the capital of Gabon, Libreville, for a two–day meeting with regional leaders, receiving a red–carpet welcome by President Omar Bongo and driving off in a burgundy Rolls Royce. The 66–year–old Zairian dictator, ill with prostate cancer, ignored journalists who asked if he would return home and was absent from an appearance before photographers Tuesday evening.

Mobutu met Bongo and the presidents of Congo, Chad and the Central African Republic for about two hours. A statement issued afterward called for the government and rebels to meet within 10 days "to find a political and negotiated resolution to the Zairian crisis."

The leaders were to meet again today, after the arrival of the president of Equatorial Guinea.

While Mobutu's government says the trip was planned long ago and was not prompted by rebel leader Laurent Kabila's latest military threat, the timing of Mobutu's departure has raised questions of whether he planned to return — or even would be able to.

His arrival in Gabon followed the failure of a Kabila–Mobutu summit on Sunday to reach a peaceful end to their seven–month war and Kabila's vow to capture Kinshasa within days.

"There is no cease–fire, so I don't see why we should mark time," the rebel chief told Radio France Internationale yesterday. "The troops have to advance. Taking Kinshasa is a matter of course."

The rebels say they're fighting for control of Kenge, a claim backed by Western military and diplomatic sources and at least one aid agency. Doctors Without Borders said yesterday that church officials in Kenge had reported 300 deaths — including 100 civilians — and were appealing for medical supplies to treat the wounded.

If they seized Kenge and its airport, the rebels could be in position to fly troops into Kinshasa and secure the international airport, which Kabila has said would be his first target.

Western diplomats in the capital, speaking on condition of anonymity, say the rebels would be far more likely to attempt such a bold move with Mobutu out of the country.

But rebels admitted yesterday they were facing heavy resistance from loyalist forces around Kenge, and they accused Mobutu of bringing in foreign mercenaries to help fight his battles. Mwenze Kongolo, the justice minister in Kabila's movement, said 5,000 men from Angola's former rebel army were blocking the road to Kinshasa to assist Mobutu, who supported the guerrillas in their 20–year civil war against the Angolan government. In addition, 80 French mercenaries were deployed to defend Kinshasa's airport, he said.

Zairian government spokesman Leon Kalima denied the claims and said he had no information about the situation in Kenge.

Israel, Palestinians hope U.S. envoy will break impasse in the stalled peace talks

By Dina Kraft
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — A U.S. envoy flew to Israel yesterday for talks with Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Yasser Arafat, looking for a way to break their two–month impasse in peace talks.

Israeli news media said Dennis Ross would ask Israel to freeze settlement construction and ask the Palestinians to once again share intelligence information, which they stopped doing in March.

Ross made no comment as he went into Netanyahu's office. He heads next to the Gaza Strip for talks today with Arafat.

"There are efforts to create mutual trust," Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy said of Ross' shuttle diplomacy. "We are encouraging and supporting this."

Palestinian Cabinet minister Saeb Erekat said: "We hope he is coming to save the process."

Peace talks broke down this winter when Israel started work on a 6,500–home Jewish neighborhood in a disputed sector of Jerusalem, where Palestinians want to one day establish a capital of a Palestinian state.

Palestinians said the construction violated peace accords because the city's final status has yet to be settled in negotiations. Weeks of violence followed; eight Palestinians died in clashes with Israeli troops and a suicide bombing killed three Israelis in Tel Aviv.

Arafat demands Israel stop the new construction before talks can resume. Israel insists that the Palestinian Authority crack down on Islamic militants blamed for the Tel Aviv bombing and two failed attacks in the Gaza Strip, as well as re–establish full security cooperation.

Ross' visit comes a day after Israeli president Ezer Weizman met with Arafat in the highest–level meeting between the two sides since the crisis began. Weizman, whose position is mostly symbolic, essentially acted as an envoy for Netanyahu.

Turn to TALKS, page 2

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN
Hiding out
For this squirrel a trash can was the perfect shelter from the strong wind yesterday afternoon.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor: Raghuram Vadarevu
Photo Technician: Jennifer Jutras
Production Supervisor: Josh Sylvester
Production Staff: Sam Smullin, Leon Latino

■ talks

continued from page 1

After that meeting, Arafat agreed to resume contacts between senior security officials on condition U.S. officials were present at all meetings.

"It is not bilateral coordination, it is trilateral, with coordination of the United States," Arafat said yesterday. Israel radio said the first such meeting was supposed to be held last night, with CIA officials attending.

A Netanyahu aide, Yitzhak Molcho, told Arafat that political pressures on Netanyahu ruled out Israel halting construction at the Har Homa housing project, the Israeli daily Yediot Ahronot reported.

"If so, we are stuck," Arafat said, according to the newspaper.

In a step seen by right-wingers as a concession to Palestinians, Netanyahu on Tuesday approved the demolition of three illegally built settler homes on a hill outside the West Bank Jewish settlement of Yitzhar, about 35 miles north of Jerusalem.

Netanyahu defended the demolition yesterday, saying his policy of strengthening the Jewish settlements had not changed, Israel radio reported. Jewish settlers erected four tents on the hill yesterday.

Also yesterday, an Israeli army spokesman confirmed reports from Lebanon that Israeli jets had raided suspected guerrilla sites in Lebanon and said the pilots "reported hitting all the targets."

High–speed train is on track

By Jonathon D. Salant
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The $2 billion program to run high-speed trains between New York and Boston is on track and should be completed in 1999, the federal government's top railroad official told lawmakers yesterday.

Federal Railroad Administrator Jolene M. Molitoris delivered a progress report on the Northeast Corridor project to a House Transportation subcommittee.

New signals are being installed along the New York-to-Boston route, the tracks are being electrified north of New Haven, and the new trains — capable of speeds of 150 miles per hour — are being built, Molitoris told the panel.

"They are actually bending steel right now," Molitoris said. Congress is preparing to renew the two major pieces of legislation that govern how federal funds will be spent on high-speed rail. Both expire this year.

The high-speed rail program is crucial to the financial future of Amtrak as Congress looks for ways to cut the passenger railroad's operating subsidies. Molitoris said the Metroliner trains between Washington and New York — which can travel 125 miles per hour — now are profitable.

"It's on time. It's clean. It's attractive. It's very roomy," Molitoris said. "You can work. You can sleep. You can visit. And you can arrive in midtown."

Molitoris said Amtrak could turn a $150 million a year profit if it could run Metroliners at 125 mph between New York and Boston, as it now does between Washington and New York. When the new trains, which tilt on curves, are running, they will cut the running time between Boston and New York to three hours, 75 minutes faster than now.

Correction

Yesterday's story on the appointment of the new University of Massachusetts Assistant Vice Chancellor for Human Resources contained an incorrect headline. Juan A. Jarrett was appointed to the position; Paul Page is the current Vice Chancellor of Administration and Finance.
The Collegian regrets the error.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
May 2
There was a two vehicle accident on Massachusetts Avenue.

Alarm — Fire
May 5
There was a faulty fire alarm in Moore Residence Hall.
Burnt toast set off an alarm in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
A fire alarm was accidentally set off in Van Meter Residence Hall.
There were defective alarms in both Kennedy and Van Meter Residence Halls.

Annoying Behavior
May 2
A Toga Party with a DJ was shut down by officers in John Adams Residence Hall.
May 3
An individual was reported being threatened by two other individuals in JQA Residence Hall.
Adam Wasserman, 19, of 6 Acorn Circle, Medfield, was arrested for possession of a Class D drug and transport of liquor.
Benjamin Hannessey, 18, of 80 Sandra Ln., North Andover, was arrested for possession of a Class D substance and transport of liquor.
May 4
An individual was reportedly harassing a receptionist in Cance Residence Hall.
Individuals were kicking over trash containers around the Southwest Residential Area.
May 6
Two individuals reported problems with a resident in their building. The issue was referred to Housing Staff.
May 7
An individual was reported tampering with the card access machine in Washington Residence Hall.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
May 2
Two vehicles were broken into in parking lot 13 on Authority Way.
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.

Disturbance
May 5
Matthew Cater, 21, of 349 Pleasant St., Malden, was arrested for assault with a dangerous weapon.

Health/Safety Hazard
May 2
Officers checked on an offensive odor in a ventilation system in Dickinson Hall.
There was an odor of gas in Brown Residence Hall.

Larceny
May 2
Windshield wipers were stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 13.
May 5
Some literature was removed from bulletin boards in Thompson Hall.
A purse was stolen from the Fine Arts Center.
May 6
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 13 on Authority Way.
License plates were stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 12 on Forestry Way.

Lost/Found Property
May 5
There was a report of lost keys in Lederle Research Center.

Suspicious Person/Activity
May 5
Robert Poplawski, 27, of 41 Strong Ave., Northampton, was arrested on a warrant.

Traffic Stop
May 3
Patrick Kelly, 20, of 4221 51 NE, Seattle, was arrested for equipment violation and the unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.
May 6
Juan Peguero, 23, of 382 N. Pleasant St., was arrested for having a suspended license while operating a motor vehicle.

Vandalism
May 2
There was damage to a vehicle in Parking Lot 13.
A vehicle was "keyed" in Parking Lot 44.
May 3
Six windows were smashed in a bathroom of Mackimmie Residence Hall.
May 4
A large window was smashed in Cance Residence Hall.
There was damage to a vehicle on Pierport Road.
A window was smashed in Pierport Residence Hall.
A vehicle was "keyed" in parking lot 50.
May 5
Graffiti was found on the east side of Hampshire House.
May 6
There was a report of graffiti on Middlesex Building.
There was damage to a vending machine in Mackimmie Residence Hall.

Happy Mother's Day
•Holland Bouquets
•Blooming Plants
•Spring Arrangements
Always in Bloom
253-5545
220 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst
We Deliver Anywhere
MasterCard VISA

RESULTS resume
We know what employers want.
Resumes for the real world
▶ Written by a business executive
▶ Student rates, credit cards & checks
▶ Employer fees & cover letters, too
253-9055
In your back yard at 150 Fearing Street

To the Wednesday Night Crew
Thanks for a great semester. It wasn't always easy or early, but it was usually fun.
Hope the rest of your nights are as good as these ones were.
– Jacob

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Genuine Draft & Light" 30-pk $10.49
Glenlivet Single Malt $19.99 750 ml
12-pk Bottle Special
Super Buys!
Honey Brow Lager & Light
Michael Shea Irish Amber
Michael Shea Black & Tan
$6.99
"Fantastic Pricing!"
Smirnoff 80 $14.99 1.75 Liter
Jim Beam $14.99 1.75 Liter
Kobel Champagne Extra Dry & Brut $8.99 750 ml
"MICRO MADNESS" CONTINUES!
Pete's Brewery Hill ALL FLAVORS! Oregon Smuttynose
Mix & Match "TWO" 6-pks... $9.95
Wow!
Check Out Russell's Indoor Specials!
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

We have your reasons for living off-campus!
Come by and see our model
Monday - Friday 8 am - 4 pm
or
Saturday & Sunday 10 am - 4 pm
Brandywine at Amherst
Spacious 1 and 2 Bedrooms •Beautiful Grounds • On the Bus Line • Swimming Pool • Private Balconies • On-site Laundry Facilities • Close to UMass • Heat, Hot Water, Gas Included • Central Air Conditioning • Private Parking • Sorry, No Pets
Brandywine Apartments 549-0600
16G Brandywine Dr., Amherst, MA 01002

The TOP of the CAMPUS RESTAURANT presents
A GRADUATION BUFFET
Le Menu
Caesar Salad
Mesclun Mix Salad
Chilled Cucumber Soup
New England Clam Chowder
Standing Steamship Round au Jus
Grilled Tarragon Chicken Breast
Key West Fillets
Risotto Primavera
White & Wild Rice
Rosemary Roasted Red Bliss Potatoes
Fresh Julienne Vegetable Medley
Assorted Breads
Champagne Schnyder with Fresh Berries
Chocolate Mousse
Assorted Cakes & Pies
Sunday May 25th
11th Floor Campus Center
$14.95 per person
Seatings at 12:15pm and 2:00pm
Reservations Recommended
Call 545-3216

Israel, Palestinians hope U.S. envoy will break the impasse in stalled talks

By Dina Kraft
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — A U.S. envoy flew to Israel yesterday for talks with Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Yasser Arafat, looking for a way to break their two-month impasse in peace talks.

Israeli news media said Dennis Ross would ask Israel to freeze settlement construction and ask the Palestinians to once again share intelligence information, which they stopped doing in March.

Ross made no comment as he went into Netanyahu's office. He heads next to the Gaza Strip for talks today with Arafat.

"There are efforts to create mutual trust," Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy said of Ross' shuttle diplomacy. "We are encouraging and supporting this."

Palestinian Cabinet minister Saeb Erekat said: "We hope he is coming to save the process."

Peace talks broke down this winter when Israel started work on a 6,500-home Jewish neighborhood in a disputed sector of Jerusalem, where Palestinians want to one day establish a capital of a Palestinian state.

Palestinians said the construction violated peace accords because the city's final status has yet to be settled in negotiations. Weeks of violence followed; eight Palestinians died in clashes with Israeli troops and a suicide bombing killed three Israelis in Tel Aviv.

Arafat demands Israel stop the new construction before talks can resume. Israel insists that the Palestinian Authority crack down on Islamic militants blamed for the Tel Aviv bombing and two failed attacks in the Gaza Strip, as well as re-establish full security cooperation.

Ross' visit comes a day after Israeli president Ezer Weizman met with Arafat in the highest-level meeting between the two sides since the crisis began. Weizman, whose position is mostly symbolic, essentially acted as an envoy for Netanyahu.

After that meeting, Arafat agreed to resume contacts between senior security officials on condition U.S. officials were present at all meetings.

"It is not bilateral coordination, it is trilateral, with coordination of the United States," Arafat said yesterday. Israel radio said the first such meeting was supposed to be held last night, with CIA officials attending.

A Netanyahu aide, Yitzhak Molcho, told Arafat that political pressures on Netanyahu ruled out Israel halting construction at the Har Homa housing project, the Israeli daily Yediot Ahronot reported.

"If so, we are stuck," Arafat said, according to the newspaper.

In a step seen by right-wingers as a concession to Palestinians, Netanyahu on Tuesday approved the demolition of three illegally built settler homes on a hill outside the West Bank Jewish settlement of Yitzhar, about 35 miles north of Jerusalem.

Netanyahu defended the demolition yesterday, saying his policy of strengthening the Jewish settlements had not changed, Israel radio reported. Jewish settlers erected four tents on the hill yesterday.

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

Rocky Mountain High
Joe Disanto, a senior, and Melanie Russo, a freshman, went hiking on the Pemigwasset Trail in the White Mountains.

JENNIFER ATRAS / COLLEGIAN

A time to study
Sophomore natural resource major Todd Soucy reading on the stairs near the Campus Center.

Tedium presides in McVeigh trial

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

DENVER — A prosecutor in the Oklahoma City bombing trial cried yesterday as he questioned a blast survivor about a 3-year-old girl who was killed as she visited her father's office when the bomb went off.

"I'm sorry, your honor," Oklahoma U.S. Attorney Pat Ryan said as tears flowed down his reddened face after asking the final question to retired Army Capt. Lawrence Martin.

As jurors watched, Ryan walked back to the counsel table and buried his head in his hands.

The emotional moment came during an otherwise tedious day of testimony about hundreds of pages of phone card records that prosecutors say link Timothy McVeigh to explosives and the rental truck that carried them.

Ryan first became emotional when Martin pointed to a posterboard with the pictures of the seven Army recruiting office employees killed in the explosion. Martin was blown through a wall into another office and suffered severe cuts and wrist injuries that forced him to retire from the service.

Ryan concluded his questioning by asking about the fate of 3-year-old Kayla Marie Titsworth. Kayla and her 4-year-old sister, Katie, had accompanied their father, Army Sgt. William Titsworth, and mother, Gloria, to Titsworth's office that morning.

"In addition to those seven men and woman, Sgt. Titsworth's daughter died that morning on the floor?" asked Ryan, his voice breaking.

"Yes," said Martin.

Ryan, who has three children of his own, then broke down and went back to the prosecution table.

Kayla was the only member of her family to die. Her sister, mother and father all were injured.

Aside from the tears, the day was dominated by 27 telecommunications employees who were flown in from around the country to authenticate hundreds of pages of records from a prepaid phone card. They each testified only a few minutes, and one witness was on the stand just 50 seconds.

Prosecutors contend the records trace the movements of McVeigh as he traveled across the country in the months before the April 19, 1995, bombing and called auto racing tracks, chemical companies, motels, storage facilities and rental truck outlets. The most important of the witnesses was Trisha Sain of Sprint United Telephone Co. of Overland Park, Kan., who described phone calls placed in Junction City, Kan., five days before the bombing. That's the town where McVeigh allegedly rented the Ryder truck that was filled with explosives and blew up the downtown Oklahoma City federal building, killing 168 people. The phone records track calls to the truck rental agency that prosecutors say McVeigh made from a bus station pay phone.

Under cross-examination, Sain — as did the other witnesses — said the records merely show telephone numbers and locations of phones and don't actually show who placed the calls or what was said in the conversations.

These records, according to prosecutors, mesh with the paper trail left by a prepaid calling card McVeigh allegedly obtained through an ad in the right-wing newspaper, the Spotlight.

That card, in the name of Daryl Bridges — which prosecutors say is an alias for McVeigh — was found in the home of co-defendant Terry Nichols just days after the bombing.

Sources confirmed a CBS News report that McVeigh's fingerprints were found on money orders used to purchase additional time on the calling card. Sources also said handwriting analysis determined that McVeigh filled out the money orders.

LEARNING FOR THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE
• LEARNING FOR A LIFETIME •
UMASS SUMMER SESSION 1997
Now is the time to advance your career, explore other options, plan for a new future, get ahead in your studies, or enrich your life.
• Hundreds of Credit Courses
• Workshops for Personal and Professional Enrichment
• Part-time Specialized Degree Programs–Bachelor's and Master's
• Professional Development Courses for Teachers
Classes held days, evenings, and weekends
• Session I: June 3-July 11
• Session II: July 15-August 21
• Variable Sessions
Call 413-545-0107 for a free course catalog or e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Find it on our website: http://www.umass.edu/contined/
DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION • UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

JOIN OUR GLOBAL VILLAGE
1 yr. International MBA
3 Countries & Languages
Financial Aid & Job Market
Call Texas Graduate School of International Management
(512) 888-5441
9 June Enrollment

SUMMER SESSION
College Students...
...while you're home for the summer, why not take a course or two at Fitchburg Stat College? In just a few weeks, you can earn credits in English, art, education, philosophy, psychology, sociology or computer science. Both graduate and undergraduate, our credits are transferrable to virtually any college in the country.
Summer Session I: May 27 - June 28. Registration ongoing through May 29. Late charge assessed beginning May 14th.
Summer Session II: June 30 - August 2. Registration ongoing through July 1. Late charge assessed beginning June 17th.
Register Today! Phone In, Fax In, Mail In or Walk In
(508) 665 3181, Fax 665 3658, E-mail dgce@fsc.edu
PS...Call for information on exciting, amazingly affordable credit studies abroad in Rome, Italy and Hilo, Hawaii. Each program runs during the month of July.
Fitchburg State College
Division of Graduate and Continuing Education
Visit our Web Site at www.fsc.edu

Language • Graphic Arts/Photography • Hotel/Travel/Restaurant Management • Mathematics/Physics • Media Technology • Office Administration • Social Science
Administration • Computer Programming • Criminal Justice • Culinary Arts • Foreign Surgical Technology • Theatre/Art/Music • Allied Health • Biotechnology • Business
Make the most of your summer by earning extra credit.
This year, use your summer vacation to earn more than tuition money. Sign up for courses at Bunker Hill Community College, and earn college credits that you can apply toward your degree.
Whether you want to accelerate your college education, or relieve the pressure of a heavy courseload, you'll find Bunker Hill affordable, and a great place to learn. We offer classes days and evenings, so it's easy to develop a schedule that lets you make the most of your summer.
For more information about the Summer Sessions at Bunker Hill Community College, call (617) 228-BHCC (2422).
We'll make it enjoyable and affordable to earn extra college credits. Call us!
BUNKER HILL COMMUNITY COLLEGE
Learning for the Real World
BOSTON • CHELSEA
BHCC is an affirmative action/equal opportunity institution.

25th Anniversary come in to Register for Many great prizes
Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
SPECIALS
Harpoon I.P.A. & Ale 12-Pack Bottles $8.99
New Amsterdam (I.P.A., Blonde, Black & Tan, Ale, Amber) $4.99/six Middlesex (Brown Ale, Pale Ale, Rasberry Wheat, Oatmeal Stout) $4.99/six Long Trail (I.P.A., Brown Ale, Ale) $4.99/six Ipswich (Ale, Dark Ale) $5.99/six
BEER SPECIALS
Bud Dry 30-pack $10.99
Icehouse & Red Dog 12-pack bottles $6.99
Bud & Bud Light 12-pack bottles $6.99
Bass Ale 12-pack bottles $10.99
1/2 Keg Special
Rolling Rock $35.00
LIQUOR SPECIALS
Yukon Jack Snakebite 750 ml $13.99
Bombay Sapphire Gin 750ml $14.99
Smirnoff Citrus Twist 1 Liter $9.99
Bicardi Spice 750ml $8.99
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers - Ice - Mixers - Mini Kegs - Beer Glasses
253-5384
Rt. 9 East College Street
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Preston Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The last word

Christen Taylor
Conner

I wonder if Michael Jordan really knows it.

Sure, he's on top of the world now, but can he just walk away when the knees aren't there anymore?

When those young whippersnappers start blowing his doors off on a regular basis?

When playing 30 to 40 minutes per night seems like 300 to 400 minutes to his mind and body?

You have to know when to walk away, and it's a tough proposition for those people who are used to winning just about all of the time. I should know — I'm one of them.

For the record, I'm not in any way trying to compare the impact I have on anything I do to be as profound as that of His Airness. He poos bigger than me. But on a small scale, I've made my strides quite comfortably and successfully with few obstacles in my path as long as I had confidence in my abilities. You might say it's luck — I know I do.

What Jordan has that many strong-willed people identify with is that deep sense of trust in the self that extends beyond the shallow base of the ego. Each time he suffers a setback, Jordan says in a new Nike spot, he internalizes the gaffe, later drawing from the experience to make him better. It's the basic principle of learning from your mistakes in order to improve as an individual.

Where it gets confusing is when the little slip-ups emerge with greater frequency. Does this mean you can't get back on that proverbial horse? Do you even want to hop back in that old saddle? Is it the end of your time?

Sometimes, yes. Sometimes, no. Sometimes, perhaps.

For me personally, this issue has been a particularly tough one — especially in my track career. It's taken me three years and six seasons to reconcile with the realization that I will never be a superstar within my sport. That's acceptable.

By the same token, this mode of thought does not dissuade me from trying to set and follow a series of goals to be (and please stomach my atypical corniness) the best athlete I can be given my level of talent. Larry Bird could do a hell of a lot with a frame that clearly was intended to bale hay and little else. Not every person is intended to have such skill, however.

So, sometimes it is a good idea to stay in the f—

There is a former classmate and teammate of mine who attends a college across the state. In high school, he was an above-average distance runner, and upon entering college was planning to continue his career. This did not happen.

An early-season injury in his freshman cross-country campaign changed all that. He found that he much rather savored life as a smoking, drinking, Phish-obsessed frat boy. All the power to him.

While his present lifestyle may disappoint those who believed he might enjoy the fruits of college athletics, this kid is a happier camper than many who knew him for years have ever seen him.

Sometimes it's the wise move to exit the game.

Then there's the case of another buddy who starred as a prolific goal-scorer in high school soccer, matriculated to a small Connecticut college to play ball, and left after ohe semester — even though he was the school's leading scorer on the season.

Said he was tired of it. Had played it since the age of five. Threw away his gear. Wanted to concentrate on his music. In the following fall, he enrolled at a conservatory in Boston, but lasted there only two semesters.

It seemed as though the old master beckoned, curling a finger toward soccer once again. With a year's rust to shake off, he left the conservatory and transferred to a nearby university, where he has since completed his rediscovery of his passion. For now, that is.

Sometimes, you just have to let your big, dumb heart be your guide, no matter how fleeting the impulse.

Accordingly, I'm about to let my big, dumb heart lead me into unchartered territory. Yesterday, I lost the Editor-in-Chief election for the Collegian, and I knew I had to make some choices.

Should I remain as a Night Editor and columnist? Take on some odd graphics and newsroom jobs to still have a presence and make some odds-and-ends cash? Coming up on the short end of an election shouldn't force me out of an operation in which I've grown for three years, should it?

The answer is perhaps. At this juncture, I'm not quite sure what there is left for me to do for the Collegian, or vice versa. Maybe I could finally devote more time to my music or screenwriting endeavors, take some of the eggs out the basket.

My initial gut feeling, like Michael Jordan and my soccer- playing chum did, is to take a stroll into another area of concentration in order to give myself the chance to fall in love with the game again. Perhaps it'll happen, perhaps it won't.

For now, though, it's been a brisk, cool run. Thanks for reading my incessant babbling. Especially the ass stuff.

Christen Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

Shaft-'em Real Estate

Once again, summer's coming, and with it comes the promise of rest, relaxation and, of course, the continuation of one of mankind's great quests: The search for shelter.

Shelter, being one of the three essentials for survival, has usually come pretty easily to me (the other two, food and sex, much less so). I've usually been able to luck into a rooming situation with very little hassle, almost no complications and, most importantly no excruciating leasing process.

Until now.

Now, I find myself waist-deep in the excruciating process known publicly as "apartment shopping," known privately as "a bunch of f--king horses—t", and I am not enjoying it.

I thought I was being smart by trying to call realtors in the area starting around mid-April, looking for a place available June first. I've spent the better part of my college career kicking myself for putting things off until the last minute. Far too many times. I've found myself staring at a computer screen at four in the morning trying to articulate a thesis statement and completely regretting the lack of sleep and the sub-par paper or exam that would usually result.

The laws of realty, though, appear to work inversely to the rules of reality and procrastination is not only rewarded, but actually required.

"Hello, Shaft--em Real Estate."

"Yeah, hi. I was looking for a one-bedroom apartment that would be available for June first."

"I'm sorry, this is April"

"Well, yeah, but I've got to give a 30 day notice to my current landlord, so I'd like to be assured that I'll actually have a place to live before I make arrangements to move out."

"Sorry, I'm sure if you look hard enough you can find a room in a small apartment that's meant for three people, but is currently holding five, none of whom you know. One of them is a smack addict, and plans on taking off with the phone bill money that the house gave him. There's plenty of those."

"Well, frankly I'm sick of renting a room, I'm looking for a place of my own."

"Sorry, we don't handle that, we specialize in overcrowded, sub-standard, overpriced student housing with tiny bathrooms and no privacy. We'd like to con you into signing a ridiculously long lease, while we're at it. We also like to rush people into them so if you call back two weeks before you're about to get thrown out of your current apartment, we'll see what we can do. Bye!"

So, having given up on renting, I figured I'd sublet — that would be much easier

Yeah, right.

Now, I find myself trying to sublet from another subletter, who doesn't know where the lease holder is or how to get in touch with them. The rental office doesn't know where the lease holder is either, and has spent the last week determining whether or not I'm worthy of living under one of their roofs for three months, despite the fact that the subletter isn't showing the apartment to anyone else and I've told the office that they'll have a cashier's check for the entire summer's rent on June first. Apparently, that's not good enough, they'd rather rent to an absentee tenant than someone who's willing to fork over $1,600 for the privilege of spending the summer in Sunderland.

So, while I plow through more paperwork than I had to fill out to actually come to college, the rental community is deciding to drag their feet while it makes up its collective mind and decide if they want me showing up to tenant meetings and using the swimming pool.

So, if anyone knows of a rental agency with a really lax subletting/lease policy or if you're willing to co-sign me into a place for the summer, drop a line. I'd really appreciate it.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

"The laws of realty, though, appear to work inversely to the rules of reality and procrastination is not only rewarded, but actually required."

Bob Dunn

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Letters to the Editor

Stop picking the flowers

To the Editor:

After every last purple tulip was picked, and having stopped several people from taking flowers in the gardens surround French Hall, I am frustrated and disgusted enough to write this letter. Many of us on this campus are working diligently to beautify its outdoor spaces. The past plantings of daffodils, fall chrysanthemums, the Stockbridge Hall and Durfee gardens, the tulips at the gateway entrances and around the dormitories have contributed to the visual color in our campus landscape. And, of equal importance, the gardens surround French Hall are used as teaching gardens and the removal of plant material impacts on the students in plant identification courses.

However, there are a select few among us who have decided the flowers on campus have been planted for their private use to decorate their office or dorm room. I view this as a selfish act, depriving the rest of us of the beauty of the flowers. Whether you pick one flower or a bouquet... STOP!

I doubt that the campus community would wish to see the elimination of flowering trees, shrugs, annuals and herbaceous perennials from the landscape. I urge each of you to speak up when you see these "flower thieves" selfishly picking from our campus gardens.

Nancy L. Garrabrants
Plant & Soil Sciences

Increasing rape awareness

To the Editor:

The Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, better known as Pike, was recently the subject of a number of flyers posted around campus and had its house vandalized on the same day. Neither the flyers or the graffiti spray painted on the house had good things to say about the fraternity, a fraternity with a less than positive reputation around UMass.

Both the flyers and graffiti were concerning two alleged rapes that occurred at the Pike house last March. Once these alleged rapes became known to the public, there was a protest on Haigis Mall followed by a march down fraternity row. This show of solidarity by the UMass community was both encouraging and effective — Pike promised to implement rape awareness programs.

But, a little over a year later, all seems to be forgotten, time heals all wounds, except for the wounds of the victims of this horrendous crime. But it was apparently not forgotten by some and they reminded the UMass community about it last week. This is why the graffiti and the flyers regarding the Pike fraternity were a useful and effective tool in combating a terrible crime that occurs far too frequently, especially in fraternities.

Although I do not advocate threatening to "slice" anyone, or threats in general (which these flyers did) I believe that the people who did this, most likely some group of radical feminists, got their point across. Coincidentally, this incident occurred toward the end of April, which is sexual assault awareness month.

A staggering number of rapes occur in the United States every year, approximately 600,000. In fact, the United States has the highest rape rate of all the countries in the world that publish such statistics. The rape rate in the U.S. is four times higher than in Germany, 14 times higher than in England, and an astounding 20 times higher than Japan. This says that American society has a very large problem when it comes to dealing with sexual violence.

College is a reflection of the society in which it is located. This is why problems that exist in American society, such as violence and racial tension, also exist here on the UMass campus. This is also why rape is such a large problem at UMass and other colleges and universities across the nation.

But rape seems especially rampant in Greek life. According to the Department of Justice Statistics Office, 93 percent of all reported university-related rapes that occurred between 1984-93, the aggressor was a male fraternity member. Even more alarming is the fact that more rapes occur on fraternity and sorority property than any other place in the United States, excluding military bases and prisons (not good company to be part of). Finally a woman is more likely to report being raped at, or after, a fraternity or sorority organized event where alcohol is present than outside, by a stranger in any urban area of the United States.

I am not suggesting that Greek life encourages rape, because I am sure it does not. But there are an amazing amount of rapes that occur on Greek property. Moreover, the fact that the crime is so heinous and frequent, it reflects upon the whole fraternal system... Perhaps, it is this solidarity and common bonds which also perpetuate the rape problem in fraternities.

Nor am I saying that the Greek system should be abolished, although I am not completely against the idea. But this would be punishing a vast number of students for the crimes of a few. Furthermore, eradicating the Greek system would only be [an] easy solution to a problem that has no easy solutions. Fraternities are attempting to remedy this problem by enacting rape awareness programs, but there is little evidence that these programs have any effect on the amount of rapes that occur.

I do not necessarily agree with the actions taken by the people who vandalized the Pike house and posted flyers around about the fraternity. But these acts are signs of people's growing frustration and anger about a crime that does not receive enough attention on campus, or in society. Actions such as these make the participants feel empowered against a system that does not seem to hear or care about their complaints. If remedies are not sought, these types of acts are only going to increase on campus and in society.

The fact of this matter is that this country has [an] enormous problem when dealing with violence toward women. This violence is projected in the media, movies and television and is [eventually] acted out in real life. Until we, as a country, can better realize what it is we are doing wrong, nothing will change and violent crimes such as rape will only continue. The only way that the university community and American society as a whole will overcome this problem is through increased discussion, awareness and responsibility.

Ken Tatro
Central

Big Daddy and bad business practices?

To the Editor:

I, like many other people on campus, signed up for a Boston Globe subscription this semester. I paid in advance for the whole semester under the notion that the paper would be delivered to my door every morning.

It's now been almost two months since I've seen a Globe delivered to my door. In past semesters, the paper wouldn't come for a day or two. Upon calling Big Daddy's News, the local vendor, I'd get a lame excuse such "the delivery guy quit." At first I figured this was one of those times, but it wasn't. Days turned into weeks and I had no phone number to call as Big Daddy's had changed its number. One of my friends who has a Globe and Times subscription located the new number, but was only greeted by an answering machine again and again.

After about a month's time, I went downstairs to check the mail and noticed a pile of newspapers. One that was scattered across the floor had my name on it. I've come to discover that throughout campus "at your doorstep" delivery has become "at your mailbox" delivery. Which is quite a different thing from what I paid for at the beginning of the semester.

Today I called the Boston Globe circulation desk and they sympathized. They said that their agreement with Big Daddy's was for at your door delivery and said they would look into the problem. I would encourage everyone who has received continuously bad service to call the Globe at (800) 858-4275.

I hope this will help anyone looking to have their grievances heard. I would also encourage people to call the Times and the Better Business Bureau.

Matt De Remer
Northeast

A constructive way to deal with anger?

To the Editor:

Coolidge Tower has one of the worst reputations of all the dorms on campus. Just when I thought I had seen everything, I was once again shocked. In the past I have seen bathroom stalls ripped out of the floor, bulletin boards torn off walls and profanity written on every available surface. But on April 28, I [saw] an entire floor destroyed in a matter of minutes.

In the amount of time that it took an RA to move his car from the horseshoes to the purple lot in Southwest, members of the 18th floor smeared the walls of the hall with Hershey's syrup, spread human feces and urine through the lounge and hallway, broke a lounge table, covered walls with signs voicing support of a floor member and [caused] mass hysteria within the floor. Why were these residents angry? They were upset at the fact that a member of their floor was removed from campus housing because he was disruptive and destructive. This is how they protested the dismissal of their "friend," by creating havoc.

Who was the person who began this crusade? Why the disruptive, destructive himself. Does this person realize the kind of situation he has put his "friends" and neighbors in? Not only will the doers of this mess face repercussions, but also the people who were innocently sleeping, studying and hanging out. The whole floor must live in [crap], and does this person really care? Probably not!

I am personally appalled by the fact that a 20-year old feels the need to express his anger by destruction and contamination. I know seven-year-olds who behave in a much more responsible manner. It makes me realize why college students are not regarded as adults by the rest of society. I cannot imagine why anyone would feel the need to rebel in this way.

So, when this person is turned down for a job, how will he react? Will he [crap] on the desk of the person who turned him down? Will [he] buy a jar of Hershey's syrup and douse the office in the sticky chocolate substance? Maybe he'll find a more appropriate choice to be writing on the bathroom stalls or ripping them out of the floor? How he reacts in the future will prove to be interesting. If this person, at the age of 20, is unable to show his anger in a more appropriate manner than destroying the living area of his "friends," what will this person do at the age of 40, when he has a family who is not listening to him — [crap] in the hallway of his own house?

Olivia Winchenbach
orw@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Opposition to the Honors College

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to the recent barrage of letters to the editor in favor of an Honors College at UMass. The latest one I read, written by Aaron Morse, attacked SGA president Lia Wong's vocal opposition to the Honors College. I, too, am opposed to the proposal for an Honors College for several reasons — not the least of which being that, despite this proposal having been in the works since at least February, student opinion of the matter was neither sought nor heard until very recently, due to Chancellor Scott and his colleagues feeling "pressed for time." As a former member of the Honors Program and a Dean's List student, I can tell you that the overwhelming "aristocracy of intelligence" (as Morse puts it) at this school are not only gleaming white, but often ignorant of much of what goes on [at] UMass outside of their classes.

Not long ago, my housemate — an honors student who is so smart and studious that the she is graduating a year early — was complaining that all of her applications for grad school asked about extra-curricular activities, of which she had participated in exactly zero.

I have yet to be convinced of how a physically segregated school for the "intelligent student community" would benefit UMass as a whole and not foster resentment towards the more fortunate students. What is wrong with the Honors Program we have now? Our future employers are unlikely to distinguish between "Honors Program" and "Honors College" when reviewing resumes. As far as I can discern, this proposal is another example of how the administration is more concerned with lining their pockets than with seeking input from the student body about issues which gravely concern us.

I'd like to thank Lia Wong for doing a wonderful job representing my interests; I'm glad that I (and the rest of the 5 percent of undergraduate students who cared enough about UMass politics to vote) voted to elect her.

In conclusion, I would love to someday counter derisive comments about "zoo-mass," not with "Yeah, but we have a super-Honors College that caters to a small percentage of the student body," but with "Yeah, but University child care is accessible to all students, staff and faculty, the demographic make-up of our student body and faculty accurately reflect that of Massachusetts as a whole, every building on campus is wheelchair-accessible and our cultural support programs are the best in the country." Too much to ask for? Tell me why, Chancellor Scott?

Mary Mendonca
Amherst

Letters to the Editor must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style. They can be submitted to Mike Burke, Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass, Amherst, MA, 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
20 Center St Northampton
ALL AGES
ALL THE TIME
thursday, may 8, 7&10 pm
BELA FLECK & TONY TRISCHKA
BANJO IMPROV SUMMIT • $17.50 adv.
tuesday, may 13, 8:30 pm SA adv.
SLEATER-KINNEY and PIRATE JENNY riot grrrls from Olympia, WA
thursday, may 15, 7 pm • $10 adv.
PATTY GRIFFIN
CONTEMPORARY SINGER/SONGWRITER
JUST ADDED!
thursday, may 15, 10 pm • $10 adv.
PORK TORNADO
Jon Fishman's band • Up close and personal!!! friday, may 16, 7 pm • $21 adv.
LEON RUSSELL
powerhouse piano with clapton, dylan, & stones
friday, may 16, 10 pm, $5 adv.
FAT BAG
FUNCTIONAL LOONACY
TRIP HOP FUNK
saturday, may 17, 10 pm, $6 adv.
big GERANIUMS
JUMP LITTLE CHILDREN
Irish rock & acoustic funk from SC.
Graduation Party!!
STARS OF
The COMMITMENTS
Saturday, May 24
TWO SHOWS AT 7&10 pm
Special dinner menu served at both shows
MAY 26- TUATARA MARK ERTZEL MINUS 5
TICKETS: For the Record, at the Northampton Box Office or call 586-8686.
24-HOUR CONCERT INFO: 413.584.0610

Summer camping tips...

Be prepared to face the elements

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

As the semester is slowly coming to an end, it is time for summer planning to begin. This summer enjoy the mornings' celestial rays of sun, the melodies of robins and loons, and the rhythmic hum of evening crickets camping in the deep backcountry woodlands along rugged mountain trails and pristine waterways.

However, before you pack your back-pack and map out a camping destination there are some important guidelines that must be followed in order to enjoy nature without destroying its delicate eco-systems.

All creatures big and small have a tremendous impact on the earth's diverse environment and the only way for us to ensure the survival of the wilderness is to consciously minimize our impact on the land and its creatures. By no means am I suggesting for outdoor enthusiasts to limit their intake of outdoor recreation. I am, however, asking for people to realize that accidents, diseases, and other hazards will not only impact those who seek outdoor adventure, but Mother Nature — especially if people venture into the great outdoors unprepared.

Erosion, compaction, littering, and fire are four of the most common problems caused by recreational use of the wilderness. To eliminate detrimental impact on the landscape hikers and campers must stay on established trails and avoid shortcuts on slopes where erosion begins. Footwear with the minimum amount of tread necessary must be worn instead of shoes with lugged soles which only contribute to soil erosion.

Campers are encouraged to pitch their tents only on established campsites where available because these areas can be easily monitored by State Forest Departments. If no established camp sites are available then choose a site where camping will do minimum damage to soil and plant life at a distance from water and hiking trails. Build camp fires only in areas established by state Forest Departments when the forest floor is damp and the environment is full of moisture. Camping stoves are highly recommended by conservationalists because they are more efficient to cook food with and do not afflict woodlands with fire scars.

Fire wood must be gathered far away from the campsite. Living trees must never be cut for fuel and campers must only collect deadwood to burn. Before building a fire there needs to be enough water to thoroughly put it out. Camp fires must be completely drowned in water and all articles of trash must be collected before leaving a campsite.

Water is a basic requirement for all life and it is up to humans to keep all watersheds free from harmful pollutants. However, no matter how crystal clean wild streams, lakes, or rivers may appear, water must be treated before it is used for drinking or cooking. Some water-borne diseases such as Giardia can be carried by animals as well as humans.

Giardia is a bacterial disease which can cause severe diarrhea and vomiting. However, symptoms may not appear for days or weeks after exposure to waterways or wild animals. It is very important for campers and hikers to consider their water needs before entering the wilderness for an extended period of time.

There are numerous methods of water treatment available to minimize the chances of contracting water-borne diseases in the wild. Two common water filtration systems are chemical and filtration devices. A majority of adventure sports stores carry water sanitation systems, while water filtration units are often very expensive and are not always reliable.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

COURTESY DAVID LUCINGER

He looks excited. Boy, does he look excited. Luther Allison has something going on...

New releases from Verve and more...

Jazz/Blues Weekly

BY JOSHUA BOYD

Well, readers, all good things must come to an end. Here we have the final J/B Weekly for the '96-'97 school year. The sounds that have filled my ears and these pages over the year has spanned the medium from innovative fusion of jazz and modern urban and rock (i.e., Buckshot LeFonque's Music Evolution and Ron Miles' Woman's Day) to mindless re-bop of the '90s (Frank Foster's Leo Rising). There was also classic re-issue series like Chess/MCA's "Original Chess Masters," Blue Note's "Rare Groove" Series, BMG's "Bluebird Blues & Heritage" Series, and, as you will read in this final Installment for the year, Fantasy, Inc.'s "Original Jazz Classics." I hope my recommendations have served you all with some fine hours of chilling and listening.

Let's get right into it with Mr. Luther Allison. His blues ain't about "chilling and listening." This is full-on steam. Allison's not mining any new elements of the often over- produced contemporary blues stream with his new album (his third for Chicago's Alligator Records), Reckless but his performance makes up for lack of overall leading of the blues into new dimensions.

Allison's beginnings on the 1960s Chicago scene show through in his flashy, searing guitar with lots of sustained blue notes and lightning-fast runs. The album can be taken in two halves, as it is all electric for the first eight songs (including his son Bernard's rocking "Low Down & Dirty" and the bar room shouts of "You Can, You Can") and then takes the acoustic vein for song number nine, "Playin' A Losin' Game." This song is an acoustic duet between Luther & Bernard, and it's got an addictive hook. Nice harmonica on that tune also by Marla Glenn. The last five songs get back into high-testosterone blues performing. The energy sometimes clutters things up, but for the most part, Reckless is a good album overall.

Half of Allison's age of 57, the 28-year-old Corey Harris lets his senior Alligator labelmate mess with the electric rock-blues vein while Harris has just so much fun and comfort with an old-time acoustic blues sound, as is evidenced on Harris' second album, Fish Ain't Bitin'.

A native of Denver and a resident now of New Orleans, Harris has certainly experienced many different cultures just between those two cities, never mind his 1991 fellowship in Cameroon, Africa. Despite his love for the sounds of pre- WWII Delta blues his lyrics often meddle in modern times, such as "Fish Ain't Bitin'" which can easily be explained as an analogy for modern urban problems of poverty and racism, and "5-0 Blues" about police corruption.

Two other originals, "High Fever Blues" and the closer "Clean Rag," as well as the previous two mentioned in the above paragraph feature Harris with a terrific brass band backing him up, providing a real woodsy, juke joint sound. Harris' covers of songs like the Big Maceo blues standard "Worried Life Blues," Memphis Minnie's "Bumble Bee Blues" and the traditional "Jack O' Diamonds" all present a man whose love of his roots are not his undoing as a man wishing he was stuck in the '20s, but instead as a man concerned with bringing these songs and their authors into the next century.

Verve Records are most often known for their sophisticated jazz discs, but occasionally give a home to such classic bluesmen as Charles Brown, Clarence "Gatemouth"

Turn to JAZZ, page 7

■ jazz

continued from page 6

Brown (no relation) and Joe Louis Walker. Walker's new album, Great Guitars, hangs in the mainstream contemporary blues idiom, and is not as mercilessly rocking as Allison's Reckless, but it has some performances which do keep the mind attentive.

His guest list on Great Guitars consists of people like Bonnie Raitt (who puts in some of her usual soulful vocals on the opening track "Low Down and Dirty Blues" — yes, it is weird that Allison and Walker's discs start with almost the same name song, especially when they aren't the same song, but instead a generic blues song title). He's also brought in the help of his producer Steve Cropper (of Booker T. & The MG's fame). Otis Rush (who employs a nice, low tone to the otherwise bright blues ballad, "Fix Our Love"), and the amazing lap steel guitar of Otis Grand on the boogie of "Hop On It." Yes, there are others, but I'll let you be surprised when you check out the back cover of the CD for the rest of the names, in the sake of moving on in this column.

Jazz lovers, I could never leave you hanging. We've got some local talent in bassist Avery Sharpe (based in Amherst), whose album, Epic Ebony Journey (JKNM Records) with violinist John Blake in a fascinating duo setup is not sleepy as one might think from that two-string combo. Sharpe's plucking of his bass strings all over the album keep varying rhythms over Blake's funky (stay with me here) violin bowing. The original compositions on this album are all quite soulful, focusing on a mood like the submerged joy in "Prayer Meetin'" or the lyrical hooks in "Maiden Dance." A fine effort from two local alumni of jazz piano master McCoy Tyner's groups in the '80s that's well worth checking out.

And once again, to end this last installment, we'll journey back in time with the help of Berkeley, Calif.'s music amalgamate corporation Fantasy, Inc.'s "Original Jazz Classics" re-issue series. In the last two J/B Weeklies, I've talked about the Down Home Piano of Mose Allison, and the aptly titled Bluesy (Kenny) Burrell, and now we have the Sultry Serenades of flutist Herbie Mann and his 1957 band, which included, among others, bass master Oscar Pettiford.

Sultry Serenade has a quite grand feel about it, with the daunting bass clarinet often employed by Jack Nimitz, providing a complement to Mann's light alto flute playing. Melody is the big thing on this album, moreso than flashy jazz soloing. Johnny Mercer and Hoagy Carmichael's "Lazy Bones" is a perfect illustration of this, with its melancholy theme. All the songs have solos, but they are not very amazing, but more lending to the wispy, subtle moods of the songs as a whole. Nevertheless, Urbie Green's trombone solos are quite a spectacle as well as guitarist Joe Puma and Mann's also. A definite chill-out album right here.

And that about brings us to the end of the semester. I must once again thank you, my readers for... reading, I guess. I also thank the record companies for their support as well as Amherst's For The Record for their info on new releases. Congratulations, graduating seniors — I should be there with you, but ah well. I get to do J/B Weekly one more semester. So there!

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian Columnist who'd better graduate this December.

"Oh Dad..." an impressive show

By Alex Iglesias
Collegian Staff

OH DAD, POOR DAD, MAMMA'S HUNG YOU IN THE CLOSET, AND I'M FEELIN' SO SAD
Rond Theater, 8 p.m.
May 1-10, 1997

If there was a genre for weird plays, the bizarre story of Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mamma's Hung you in the Closet and I'm Feeling So Sad would definitely be a number one candidate for it after a captivating performance by the University of Massachusetts Theater Department on May 6.

Oh Dad presented a bizarre twist of jealousy and revenge as a spoof of the typical socially elite American family of the 1950s, as well as entertaining the audience with a comical mockery of an everyday life scenario between mother and son.

With a quick commanding snap of the fingers and wave of the hand by Robert Ripley — the lieutenant bell hop — the show commenced with the refreshing sounds of a Caribbean jungle beat as the glamorous Madam Rosepettle elegantly strolled in through the doors of the resort Port Royale, as her goofy looking, "mamma's boy" Jonathan Rosepettle — played by Jamie Arsenault — frantically hopped in right behind his yet-to-be-revealed overbearing mother.

Though the first act was a tad slow because of the confusion to the real reason why the wealthy Madam Rosepettle spend her leisure time at one of the wealthiest hotels in the world, the superb acting by the entire cast easily lured the audience away from checking the time every five minutes.

Julie Dixon was sensational in the role of Madam Rosepettle. Dixon's provocative performance was as one audience member said in astonishment at intermission, "I had completely forgotten that I was watching a show..."

Dixon left the audience in complete awe after her amazing 15-minute monologue about the death of her hated husband — who, ironically, was also her most prized possession. She refers to him as "a trophy" in her sarcastic demeanor while sexually taunting the Commodore Roseabove (James Clark). Her overly revealing dress presented her extensive wealth — a red ruby necklace dangled in between her breasts.

This was not a one woman show entirely though, especially with the excellent supporting cast with which director Julian Olf had to work with. Clark gave us a refreshing taste of reality within the story, as his elegant British accent tickled us with his dry humor as a desperate honest man.

It is a shame the role was only a small portion of the show, but the cavalry were the hilarious antics of Arsenault who played the innocent, yet drooling inarticulate son of Madam Rosepettle. Arsenault dazzled the audience with his creepiness, as his insanity exploded — leading him to the murder of his mother's man-eating plants and precious pet piranha.

Arsenault showed an excellent display of stage control through his slow motion raucous, his anger was felt through his eerie scream. The screams continued when the innocent, pretty-in-pink and pig-tailed Rosalie (Pamela Bloom) showed her true colors as she yelled and moaned, while sexually enticing Jonathan, commanding him to "come now Jonathan..." No pun intended.

With the mysterious robot-like bell hops who were under the Madam's every command, the precise synchronization of light and sound suggesting a jungle and the brilliant touch of stage scenery, Oh Dad was like something out of a creepy, heart pounding nightmare — one of the best!

Hey you!
Yeah, you!
You looking for a job next semester? Want to work for New England's largest daily? The Arts & Living desk is hiring associate editors for the fall.
So, if you're interested in covering movies, books, art, theater, television and more, talk to Seema Gangatirkar at the Collegian in the basement of the Campus Center or call 545-1491.

Pearl Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
WEDNESDAY • APRIL 30
BENEFIT FOR THE BOSTON-NEW YORK AIDS RIDE 3
UPSTAIRS DANCE PARTY 18+
DOWNSTAIRS LIVE MUSIC FEATURING "HANK" 18+
EVERY THURSDAY
THE AREA'S BIGGEST
HIGH ENERGY Dance Party
A FULL HOUSE EVERY WEEK
EVERY FRIDAY 9-2am 18+
RETRO NIGHT
FREE BEFORE 10:00pm
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
SATURDAY
TEEN NIGHT
AGES 15-19 • 7:30 - 11:30 PM
PROPER ID AND DRESS REQUIRED
SATURDAY • MAY 3
GAY PRIDE TEA DANCE 3-7pm 18+ DANCE 10pm-2am 18+
SATURDAY • MAY 17
INTERNATIONAL NIGHT
LIVE MUSIC
Wed. Apr. 30 • 7:00 pm 18+
8-BALL INC
EMPTY TOP/BILLIE/HINO FLOW
Thu. May 1 @ 9:00 pm 18+
SHAKEDOWN
(60's era of Dead tribute)
Fri. May 2 @ 9:00 pm 18+
THE FLIRTATIONS
Wed. May 7 @ 8:00 pm 18+
DINOSAUR JR.
SWEET 75/QUITCH CRANKER
Fri. May 9 • 8:30 pm 18+
STASH
(NY TRIBUTE TO PHISH)
Sun. May 10 @ 7:00 pm 18+
MEPHISKAPHEELES
ROYAL CROWNS/BIG LICK/JUKER
Sun. May 11 • 7:30 pm 18+
ERIC JOHNSON
CARVIN MELON
RESERVED SEATING • ADVANCE TIX AVAILABLE
Fri. May 16 @ 8:30 pm 18+
JAMES COTTON
UPCOMING
FRI. MAY 23 LETICIA
SUN. MAY 25 SNAPCASE ALL AGES
WED. MAY 28 KOKO TAYLOR 21+
SAT. MAY 30 SLIPKNOT 18+
SPECIAL CLUB APPEARANCE
SAT. JUNE 7 THE ROBERT CRAY BAND
FEATURING THE MEMPHIS HORNS
SAT. JUNE 14 ROOMFUL OF BLUES 21+
WED. JUNE 25 CHARLIE MUSSELWHITE 21+
FRI. JUNE 27 ITCHY FISH 18+
FRI. AUG. 15 SON SEALS 21+
RESERVED SEATING • ADVANCE TIX AVAILABLE
Tickets: Pearl Street, Northampton Box Office, 586-5600 • 800-THE-TICK, Strawberries, Record Store, Ace The Record in Amherst, Music Mart in Greenfield, Ex-Libris and all Music Records in Westfield, Music Outlet in Enfield & 8 Sale Records in Northampton 536-9555
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
413-584-7771

AT THE CLASSIC OF SMITH
Fri.-Thur. May 9-15 / Separate Tickets
7:15 for 7 Days only NOW 9:10 Daily-4th week
Four AWARD WINNING SHORT FILMS spanning gay adolescence to manhood
Boys Life 2
TREVOR
Academy Award Winner
MUST BE THE MUSIC
Sundance-Sundance Film Festival
MUNZIG'S SECOND COUSIN
Grand Prize-Aspen Film Festival
ALKALI, IOWA
Best Short-Berlin Film Festival
A BITTERSWEET COMEDY ABOUT LOVE, SEXUAL IDENTITY, FRIENDSHIP AND THE PRECARIOUS BOUNDARIES THAT SEPARATE THEM
"THE FUNNIEST, MOST HONEST SEX-COMEDY I'VE EVER SEEN!"
CHASING AMY
Sex is easy. Love is hard.
R
ACADEMY MUSIC Opera House 584-8435 NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The UMass Department of Theater presents
OH DAD, POOR DAD, MAMMA'S HUNG YOU IN THE CLOSET AND I'M FEELIN' SO SAD
A COMEDY
BY ARTHUR KOPIT
$3 Rand Theater, UMass $6.5
May 1-3 & 6-10, 8 p.m.
+ a 2 p.m. matinee on Sat., May 3
Tickets: (413) 545-2511
sponsored by DAILY COLLEGIAN

Kaplan students get into Law School.
Case closed.
9 out of 10 Kaplan LSAT students go to one of their top 3 school choices.
LSAT
Summer classes in both Amherst and Springfield!
It's not like we'll give you the answers...
Well, yes it is!
Call us in Amherst at 549-5780.
expert teachers superior materials smart technology proven results
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
Call UMASS, Continuing Education @ 545-0474
by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.

R&P Liquors
• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
• Largest Selection of Micro Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals

Classe Cafe
eat heavy, eat light, eat sweet, eat smart
eat natural, eat veggie, eat meat, eat soup
EAT GOOD IT'S HERE
morningOnoonOnight
wine & beer
welcome OCMP
M-Sat. 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
166 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

Lincoln Real Estate
Gilreath Manor Condos
on Hobart Lane
Showings Start in April for June or September Occupancy!
• 3 Bedroom
• 1½ Baths
• Heated Basement
• Gas Heat & Hot water
• Hardwood Floors
• 1/2 mile to campus
• On Bus Route
LINCOLN REAL ESTATE • 25 N. PLEASANT ST. • 253-7879

flight check
LONDON $395
PARIS $587
AMSTERDAM $539
ROME $653
MADRID $629
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street Amherst
Tel : 413-256-1261

IT'S BACK!
1/2 PRICE APPETIZERS
4-8 p.m.
7 Days A Week
Choose from Our Special Menu
No other offers apply • Eat-In Only
Also Available
Chef Specials - 6 to choose
Kai Chi
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall • Rte. 9
Hadley • 586-2774

MARS AND FLAVA BOYS Bringin' you...
A Trip to Wonderland
at Club Metro
tonight 9pm - 2am
Gonzo
Resident DJ at Vinyl NYC
Hush and Chip
Greenhouse Effect
ENK SCORTY
Action 413
in da Lava Lounge DJs:
NV ✪ DELVI
Chris Carter
Mike Collins
$1 DRAFTS!!!
$5 21+
$8 18+
Proceeds To Benefit the Boston→New York AIDS RIDE
Sponsored by Collegian and the Greek Council
BUSES AVAILABLE FROM S.W. Horseshoe
For info call da'flava hotline 253-6623

NEED A GIFT FOR MOM? LIQUORS 44 CAN HELP!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
Coors / Coors Light 30 PACK CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $14.99 + DEP
MILLER GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $9.49 + DEP
ROLLING ROCK REGULAR & LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $13.49 + DEP
HARPOON I.P.A. & MIX-PACK 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.99 + DEP
SARONNO ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.29 + DEP
PAPER CITY BREWERY & BERKSHIRE BREWING ALL FLAVORS 1/2 GALLON $3.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, MICH, MICH LT, MICH AMBER BOCK $39.99 + DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
G.K. Mondavi CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $5.49
Almaden Vineyards 5.0 LITER BAG-IN-A-BOX CHABLIS, BURGUNDY, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE, BLUSH CHABLIS, GOLDEN CHABLIS SALE $7.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $5.49
3 BOTTLES FOR $12.00 CITRA, VENDANGE, RENE BARBIER, WALNUT CREST, CONCHA Y TORO BLENDS & MORE 750ML
RENE JUNOT RED & WHITE FRENCH TABLE WINE 1.5 L $5.99
CORBETT CANYON WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML 3 BOTTLES FOR $9.99
Seagrams COOLERS 4 PK. BOTTLES ALL FLAVORS SALE $2.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -1.00 FINAL COST $1.99 + DEP.
GORDONS VODKA 1.75 L $11.49
CLAN MACGREGOR SCOTCH 1.75L SALE $13.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $10.49
SEAGRAM'S GIN 1.75L SALE $11.49 MAIL-IN-REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
RON ROBERTO RUM WHITE & GOLD 1.75 L $9.99
AMARETTO DI SARONNO LIQUEUR 750 ML $14.49
ABSOLUT CITRON 750 ML $13.99
We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 5/8/97 THRU WEDS. 5/14/97
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Security Positions
Bright Moments Festival
July 10, 17, 24
You must be: A UMass student returning to UMass in the Fall and available to work the nights of the concerts and attend one informational meeting.
Pay is $5 per hour and free admission to concert.
For information call New WORLD Theater at 545-1972 before May 30th.

UNDERGRADUATE TEACHING ASSISTANTSHIP AVAILABLE
DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS AND STATISTICS
$650.00 A SEMESTER
FOR APPROXIMATELY 10-12 HOURS A WEEK.
FURTHER INFORMATION AND APPLICATION FORMS SEE THE RECEPTIONIST
ROOM 1622 LEDERLE GTWR

dine

continued from page 5

me, only not ticked off that Jeremy Brothers made me write this at the last minute. Damned Arts jerk."

John Hendrickson — Arts & Living Associate — "Elvis Presley — Dining in the court of the King would be my ultimate dream dinner. Just to see what and how much he could eat. Keith Richards — We'd skip the meal and dive straight into the Jack Daniels. John Lydon/Rotten — He'd just spit his food back at me in between showering me with insults. R.E.M.'s Peter Buck — We'd talk about how much we love bootlegs. Ann-Margret (circa 1963) — So I could hit on her."

Casey Kane — Co–Sports Editor — If I could have dinner with any five people, living or dead, I would have to pick... my favorite basketball player, Bobby Hurley (hey, he was great in college!); one of my favorite college baseball players, Ryan Jette, who played left field and was the lead– off batter for UMass last year; sports writer John Feinstein, despite the fact that he is, honestly, a slob; former UMass lacrosse player Eric Bailey, who is one of the nicest and funniest guys I have ever met; and my grandmother, because I'd love to have dinner with her again. Besides, she loves sports and she'd probably want to meet all these guys, too.

Adam Levine — Arts & Living Associate — "Jean-Luc Godard — The pioneer of the French New Wave and perhaps the most provocative film director in cinema history. His debut feature Breathless broke new bounds in narrative filmmaking as well as proving what a powerful voice movies can have. I'd love to hear him just complain about how bad American movies suck. Johnny Depp — The greatest living actor of my generation. From his brilliant debut in Nightmare on Elm St. to his most recent film The Brave, Depp has remained the epitome of cool. Dinner would be at his Viper Room in LA where I'd continue to embarrass him with flattering comments. James Dean — The coolest man to have ever walked this earth. I would love to hear about his tragic life while we sit and smoke butts and then drive around in his Porsche Spider. Joe Strummer — The frontman for my favorite band The Clash, Strummer's intense musical style ranges from the political to the just plain fun, and everything in between. I would ask Strummer about his feelings concerning today's ridiculous punk scene and about why he doesn't act in more movies. Jack Kerouac — My favorite writer (with the exception of Kurt Vonnegut Jr., who I would also like to meet). While we got smashed on cheap wine, I would listen to his stories about travelling across America."

Luke Meredith — Sports Associate, Ed\Op Columnist — "If I could eat dinner with five people, they'd be Jon Bon Jovi, film star Shannon Tweed, because she's the most talented actress of our generation, (if you disagree, you haven't seen Indecent Behavior #), former Met first baseman Keith Hernandez, and legendary adult film star Brett True. The reason? Because I'd like Beastie Boy Mike D., the fifth member of our little gathering, to ask the most random dinner party in history one question. "If you knew it was going to be this kind of party, would you have (bleep bleep bleep) in the mashed potatoes?"

Jacob W. Michaels — Editor–in–Chief —"I'd start the lobster dinner by talking with the greatest president of the 20th century, Franklin Delano Roosevelt (sorry Republican club, but it's true), and asking how he maintained his attitude during the depression and what he thinks about the current memorial controversy. Martin Luther King, Jr., would join us to talk about his struggles in the 1960s and how he thinks the nation has progressed since then. As the chocolate mousse is served for dessert, we'll switch to some lighter discussion with Patriots special teams ace No. 25 Larry "The Franchise" Whigham discussing sports and one of the greatest comics editors of all time, Mark Gruenwald, discussing his works. I guess the last person would be Joseph Stalin, simply because Richard Fein said no one would invite him."

Mike Nam — Sports Writer — "I'd like to have dinner with the renowned author Toni Morrison, athlete and activist Jackie Robinson (it is the 50th anniversary of his historic breakthrough), comedian George Carlin, scientist Albert Einstein, and the first female astronaut, Sally Ride. Dessert and coffee would follow."

Christina Poletto — News Associate — "My meal would be made exceptional if I had the chance to rub elbows with Ms. Ani Difranco, singer, songwriter, and an overall kickass woman. I'd have coffee with her at the diner anytime. I wouldn't mind as well hearing the recitations from the mouth of the Prophet Muhammed. I'd ask Tom Robbins to pass the salt, only because I know that this author, who has flamed the passion of the imagination, would somehow make the simple act of passing a condiment wildly interesting. Napoleon, I think, would make for engaging dinner conversation too. Lastly, I'd want to slurp spaghetti with Matthew McConaughey, the suave and deliriously beautiful star of Dazed and Confused, among other things. If he knew what was good for him, he'd dispel those rumors about him and Sandra Bullock and come find me. Matthew, if you're reading, I love Fussball too..."

Chris Stamm — Sports Editor — "If I could eat dinner with any five people living or dead, I'd come up with a rather interesting mix. William Shakespeare, the source. Enough said. Gandhi, today's leaders could learn a lot. Jackie Robinson, what's it like to move mountains? Sentimentally, the maternal grandfather I never knew. And finally, to Jesus Christ I'd ask two questions: 'Were you really?', and then, simply, 'Why?'"

Laura Stock — News Editor — "My fantasy dinner would commence with cocktails mixed by Tom Cruise. Then, appetizers with John F. Kennedy, who could perhaps elaborate on where that shot came from. I'd have Sigmund Freud analyze me over the main course. Jane Austen and I could gossip over dessert; and, to cap off the night, William Shakespeare and I would wax poetic over tea and crumpets — perhaps he could help me think of a topic for my senior thesis.

Raghuram Vadarevu — Multicultural Affairs Co–editor — "Uuuuugh, I guess, well... I don't know. It seems as though I can't give you an answer. Listen, I just want the job. I'll eat dinner with anyone. I would eat with your pet dog Ernie, the president of Guam, wait is there a president of Guam? I don't know. I'd eat with the crew from Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom even though I hate snakes. I'll eat with anyone, just please give me this job. I am going to starve because my $65,000 UMass degree is worth absolutely nothing in the real world. I just want a job, I'll even make your damn dinner!"

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
8 Bigger Is Better
Best! ★ 1997 ★
• 14-9 ft. Tables
• All Sporting Events
• Every Thursday Night
Pizza Specials

Summer
Freshman English I & II $261.00*
Introduction to Sociology $261.00*
Introduction to Psychology $261.00*
Calculus I & II $348.00*
College Chemistry I & II $468.00*
Statistics $348.00*
Add to your course credits for 1/2 the cost.
Take courses while you're home for the summer at Massachusetts Bay Community College
Massachusetts Bay Community College
50 Oakland Street • Wellesley Hills, MA 02181
19 Flagg Drive • Framingham • MA • 01702
Info: (617) 239-2500
E-mail: mbcclinfo@mbcc.mass.edu
*rates listed are valid for Massachusetts residents for Summer Sessions 1997. Call for more information on non-resident rates.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385
• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

Bucci
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256.0733
145 main st. northampton 586.0155

Unfortunately, our competitor is struggling with this simple test:
True
False
Now we're not saying anyone's lying, you understand.
It's just The Princeton Review can't seem to figure out exactly what's true. Their advertised average LSAT score improvement dropped from "10+ points" in 1993 to 7.5 last year. Now an arbitration panel has ruled that their "study" really only supported an average improvement of 6.9 points. That same arbitration panel ruled similarly for their MCAT, GRE and GMAT studies.
In fact, Princeton Review has been forced to abandon or lower every score claim that has ever been legally challenged and resolved.
It's no wonder more than twice as many students take Kaplan, the acknowledged leader in LSAT, MCAT, GMAT and GRE preparation. Our expert instructors know the tests inside out, so they can help you get your highest possible score. And our score improvements are backed by rock-solid Price Waterhouse studies.
Honest.
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
Before you take your test, call for our free brochure The Truth About Test Preparation Companies.
"LSAT, GMAT, GRE and MCAT are registered trademarks of their respective owners

OUTSIDE SALES
Ganz Inc., a rapidly expanding national leader in the gift and stationery industry, servicing a wide variety of retailers, has outstanding career opportunities on our sales team.
SALES REPRESENTATIVES
$30,000. – $40,000.00
first year potential earning
• Boston/Cape Cod
• Vermont/western MA
• Westchester, NY
• Albany, NY
• Maine
• Scranton, PA
In addition to excellent earning potential, Ganz Inc. provides a comprehensive benefits package including medical/dental, ongoing training and advancement opportunity. To apply, please send/fax resume to:
Ganz USA
Dottie Moratti, Regional Sales Manager
8 Barnard Lane, Eliot, ME 03903
Fax: 207-439-3440

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
London $199 $370
Rome or Milan $340 $635
San Jose, Costa Rica $246 $460
Roundtrip
TOKYO $879
SYDNEY $898
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420
800-272-9676
In NYC

MODELS WANTED
FREE HAIRCUTS Color Highlights Designs
Men are Welcome!
Join us at our Model Orientation!
HOTEL NORTHAMPTON
36 KING STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
Call 1-800-922-2310 for more info
PAUL MITCHELL DESIGN TEAM

when classes STOP GO to buyback
Textbook Buyback
Campus Center
May 14 - 15 - 16 9:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
May 17 11:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
May 19 - 20 9:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
May 21 - 22 -23 9:00 A.M. - 6:00 P.M.
Textbook Annex
May 14 - 15 - 16 9:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
May 19 - 23 9:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
May 27 - 28 9:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
Hampden D.C.
May 21 - 22 10:00 A.M. - 6:00 P.M.
May 23 10:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

Minutemen

continued from page 12

In a game that may not be considered vital, since the regular season is drawing to a close, Stone jumbled the lineup around a little bit. Brad Gorrie got the day off and Pete Gautreau stepped in to lead off for UMass. He started the game off by striking out, but the Minutemen did record a run in the first.

While Adam Correa was on with a right field double, Bryan Mazzaferro sent another double the same way and drove in the first run of the game.

UMass would score two more runs in the next two innings, but Harvard answered back with three runs of its own and after three the two teams were deadlocked at 3–3.

In the fourth, Harvard opened the game up. With a runner on second, the Crimson's Aaron Kessler singled to right center to score the go ahead run. Kessler would eventually come around to score off of a double to left center.

Down 7–3, the Minutemen came up to bat in the eighth looking to get in striking distance. With Ryan Thistle on second and David Giglio on first with two outs, Mazzaferro drove in his second RBI of the game on a single to right field. That would be all the Crimson would allow.

Harvard would go on to score three more runs in the bottom of the eighth to finish UMass off.

The Minutemen look to end their two–game losing streak against Connecticut today in a make–up from earlier in the season. The game will be held in Storrs, Conn. at 3 p.m.

honors

continued from page 12

Colucci, a sophomore gymnast, was one of 12 athletes who attained a 4.0 last semester. The resource economics major said she feels it is important that the school recognizes academic achievement.

"It feels good [to be honored]," Colucci said. "I think it's really good they recognize athletes for their academic achievements because we are student athletes."

Gutzman, a junior on the field hockey team, also said it is important to stress academics as well as athletics.

"This is great because so many times the focus is on the athletic aspect rather than the academic aspect," she said. "That's what makes this really great."

For many UMass students, having a full course load can be pressure enough, let alone maintaining a solid GPA. But these stellar athletes have managed to combine hours of practice along with their studies.

Most of the gymnasts have been competing in their sport since a young age, so they have had to balance gymnastics and school all along in their academic career. Colucci said combining the two is something she has become accustomed to.

"It Is [hard], but we've been doing it since we started school, so it's something you get used to," Colucci said. "I don't know how to do it any other way."

Drumm, a junior lacrosse team member who also received a 4.0, said it's easier during the season because of a more regimented schedule.

"I like it better during the season because we're more on a schedule, you just have to balance lacrosse and academics," he said. "You hurt a little bit when you have to travel a lot, it's hard to get your work done, but during fall ball it's harder because there's so much unscheduled time."

Guzzman, who is studying biology in hopes of becoming a teacher, agreed.

"It's easier in season because there is a distinct schedule," Gutzman said. "There is no time to screw around, so there is a clear focus on schoolwork."

It seemed to be the overwhelming response that the athletes find it easier during the season to manage both sports and school. Perhaps it's the schedule, or perhaps its their self–induced discipline. Either way, studies do not suffer when the players are on the field.

Waxer, a senior lacrosse player also agreed that academics are stronger while he is practicing.

"I like it more during season also," Waxer said. "You do not have as much free time just to hang around."

"When you don't have practice you get back from classes and you say, 'I'll do my homework later,'" Drumm said. "Then five o'clock rolls around, then it's six, and then it might never get done."

Mosby, a freshman sociology major was the other gymnast who received a 4.0. She agreed with the sentiments of Drumm and her teammate in the respect that traveling to away meets can sometimes damage an athlete's studies.

However, Mosby also said it is important for athletics to not overshadow academics.

"It's pretty much why we are here... for an education," Mosby said.

Colucci, who since freshman year has carried a high GPA, shares a similar sentiment to Mosby.

"It's a trade off because gymnastics is something we can only do now, but school is what's going to carry over into the rest of life," Colucci said. "It's got to take priority."

Also honored at the event was Pam Hixon, who has retired her position as field hockey coach at UMass in order to devote more time to heading the national field hockey team.

Collegian staff member Casey Kane contributed to this article.

baseball

continued from page 12

AL East.

• I refuse to admit that Roger Clemens still has it. If he is pitching this well, why on earth wasn't he doing this for the Red Sox during the last three years? True, the bullpen blew quite a few of the leads he left games with, but come on, he's 5–0. He struck out 10 Tigers in his latest outing and failed to walk a batter. On top of that, his 1.58 ERA is the best in the American League. He hasn't pitched this well in six years, since starting the 1991 season 6–0.

If he is truly the Rocket of old, then I know nothing about sports (Don't say it).

• Mo Vaughn is crying... again.

Now don't get me wrong, I'm as big a Hitdog fan as the rest of you, but I'm tired of all these players thinking they run the team. Just play the game and let the coaches do the coaching.

In case you didn't know, Vaughn is mad because Jimy Williams sat him out on Sunday against Texas. It was the second game in a row he missed because of an aggravated hamstring. Williams thought it wise to sit Mo out one more game, instead of maybe losing him for more time down the road.

I know Mo wants to play, but didn't his extensive Seton Hall education tell him that this was a bright move. In the grand scheme of things, these games don't mean all too much. In the first half of the season, your primary goal is stay in striking distance. Vaughn should just settle down, take a breath and prepare for the rest of the season. He's the best player on the team, he should start acting like it.

• Those poor Mets. New York's worse half posted 20 hits against the Rockies of Colorado, yet still fell in a 12–11 loss. It's not enough that the Mets suck, but when they actually have a good day, they still lose. Isn't someone out their looking out for them (I agree that taking the pinstripes off their jerseys doesn't hide the fact that they are a horrible ballclub).

• The Red Sox lost to the Royals Tuesday night.

I have no excuse.

Jonathan M. Place is a Collegian columnist.

Student Day Save 15%
EXPRESS, Bath & Body Works, & STRUCTURE, on Saturday May 10th
Show student or faculty I.d.
Dresses for graduation at Express!!!
Great gift ideas at Bath and Body Works and the Home Store
Shop Structure for graduation and Father's Day!!
Valid at the Hollyoke Mall location only. Not valid on previously purchased merchandise. This discount may not be combined with any coupons or offers. Not valid toward the purchase of gift certificates. May not be redeemed for cash.

SpRing Whitewater!
Whitewater Rafting is one of the best ways to break out of the mid-semester blues! Our great Spring Rates make the most exciting season a real bargain.
From April 15-May 15 rafting rates as low as $54 on the Zoar Gap section of the Deerfield River.
ZOAR OUTDOOR
Charlemont, Massachusetts
CALL NOW TO BOOK YOUR SPRING RAFTING ADVENTURE!
800 532-7483

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
(413) 545-3217
Karaoke for the last time!!!
Friday May 9th @ TOC
Hours: M - F 4:00 PM - 12:30 AM
Sat 5:00 PM - 12:30 AM

Goten in Sunderland
Tuesday - Sunday
Tues., Weds., Thurs., Fri., and Sat. 5 til close
Sunday 2 til close
Excellence in Japanese Cuisine
OF JAPAN
COOKING AT YOUR TABLE
MOTHER'S DAY SPECIALS
2 FOR $25
STEAK, CHICKEN, SHRIMP, SCALLOPS
YOUR CHOICE OF ANY 2 FOR $25 opening mother's day at noon
TWO DINNERS FOR $18 SHRIMP AND STEAK COMBINATION
TWO DINNERS FOR $18 SHRIMP AND SCALLOP COMBINATION
TWO DINNERS FOR $15 STEAK AND CHICKEN COMBINATION
All Dinners include salad, vegetable noodle, soup, rice tea & ice cream
Function room available for your party
Please call for reservations today! (413) 665-3628 Rt. 116 Sunderland
Casual Dress • Full Bar • Exotic Specials • Take the Sunderland Bus from campus: get dropped off at our front door

Greenfield Community College Office of Student Life Presents
SPRING WEEKEND '97
Saturday, May 10 • GCC Athletic Field
Outdoor Movies on the Big Screen at 8:00pm
Double Feature:
Jackie Chan's "Rumble In The Bronx"
Quentin Tarantino's "Reservoir Dogs"
Note: These movies are rated "R" and are recommended for mature audiences!
• Sponsored by Student Life • Alcohol and Drugs Prohibited
ALSO
Live Music at 5:30 - 7:30 pm
Featuring
70's Funk with a 90's twist!!
Free Admission!!! Food for Sale!!!

Sidewalk Sales.
Tables of shoes
Racks of clothes
Baskets of jewelry
Thurs. May 8 to Sun. May 11
ZAMA downtown Amherst

MAY PLAY DAYS!
GEAR UP TO PLAY!
KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
Footwear Windrunner $59.99 Air Instinct $59.99 Gel 2020 $74.99 New Balance 502 $49.99
In-line Skates GET ROLLIN'! OXYGEN XE 3.1 $119 Tarmac $199 Microblade $69
Tennis HIT THE COURTS! Wilson Pro Staff 5.9 $89 PRO KENNEX Power Destiny Reach $29
Golf SPALDING TOE-FLITE 18 PK. GOLF BALLS $14.99 DUNLOP TD PLUS GOLF SET $159.99 MENS Wilson Pro Technique Golf Set $199.99 Allied Tour Model Package Set $149.99
Exercise 45 Resistor PROFORM $29.99
Baseball All Baseball Gloves, Bats, Accessories & Cleats 20% OFF
Apparel Reebok Windwear 20% OFF
adidas T-Shirts $9.99
Hampshire Mall Rt.9 Hadley

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Obtain valuable teaching experience and enhance your resume. Volunteer to teach Contraceptive Education Workshop at University Health Services. Call for more information about Fall/ 97 opportunities.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom Available 6/1. 1010 N. Pleasant #3 549-4142

Nice 2 bedroom apt. Available June 1- 10 min walk to campus. On bus route. Call 549-7580.

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option. 3 bedroom Puffton, renovated A/C, heat included. Near pool. Available 6/1. Call 549-7123

3 bedroom apartment Available 6/1. $700/ 253-9766

Take over my lease at The Boulders! $20 off rent month's rent and FREE rent in July. Call Jeff at 253-7872

2 bedroom Brandywine Pond view $780/month. Reduced rent in June and July. Starting 6/1. Call 549-0023

Take over our lease 2 bedroom apt. Brandywine. Gas heat and stove included. Available from 5/1. $710. 549-3176

Center of town 1,2,3 bedrooms. Gas heat hardwood floors. 253-7879.

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550. 2 bedroom- $425. 25 minutes from campus. No bus. Available for Sept. 665-2303

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept. at Squire Village. 665-2302

AUTO FOR SALE

83 Volks Fox Nothing but highway Miles. Very clean. Very reliable. $2500 or B/O. 549-9221 Leave message

85 Nissan Maxima Station Wagon Good shape. Includes insane music system. Call 546-2082. Ask for Z. It's a luxury college car. Sunroof. CD Power Everything.

92 Eagle Talon red/black standard power with 4mm/tints moon roof. 88k miles. $7000 or B/O 549-6102 or 323-4888

EMPLOYMENT

Restaurant Help: Cooks, dishwashers, waitperson. Part time, year round preferred. Full service experience necessary. Applications only at Worker's Grill. 41 Bolfwood Walk, Amherst. No calls please.

SUMMER HELP
EARN EXTRA MONEY!!!!!!!!
FLEXIBLE HOURS!!!!!!!!
SPEND YOUR SUMMER IN BOSTON!!!!!
STARTING PAY $9.00 TO $11.00 PER HOUR PLUS TIPS!
YOU ARE ATHLETIC MOTIVATED A NON-SMOKER
ENJOY HARD WORK AND A WORK OUT PLEASE GIVE US
A CALL OR COME IN
PLEASE CALL GENTLE GIANT MOVING AT 617-227-2033

Virgin Records College Rep. Position Get music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position, 10-15 hrs/week. Please fax resume and cover letter to Elizabeth Gruenwald at (310)289-2433 or call 1-800-242-7421 to apply. Sophomores or Juniors with gpa preferred. Previous music industry experience is a plus!

Bar or Waitperson Apply in person. The Pastoria. 177 Elm St. Hatfield.

University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales, Marketing and PR experience. Call 1-800-743-5656 ext. 122

CAPE COD RESTAURANT Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train. Housing available. Eastham and Orleans. (508)255-5384

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is now expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call (413)827-7565.

Residential Summer Camp Counselors Wanted by Nature's Classroom. Live in position. Available in Massachusetts to anyone who honors Lives being with kids. 1-800-423-8575.

Part-Time Positions available for hard-working, dependable people starting May 21./Competitive wages. If interested contact Justin 548-1128

Summer Childcare Two children, ages 11 and 14. 8/hour. Must have car. 256-1229.

Painters Wanted Earn $3000-$5000 for summer. Westfield, Dedham area. Call Mike 569-3758

Are you a computer guru? The Office at Information Technologies is now hiring qualified student consultants for the Summer and Fall Semesters. We are looking for both undergraduate and graduate students. Research assistantships are available for qualified graduate students. Visit our web page http://www.ist.umass.edu/ist/jobs to apply and for more information.

Bar or Waitperson Apply in person. The Pastoria. 177 Elm St. Hatfield.

University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales, Marketing and PR experience. Call 1-800-743-5656 ext. 122

CAPE COD RESTAURANT Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train. Housing available. Eastham and Orleans. (508)255-5384

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is now expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call (413)827-7565.

Mens Cannondale Touring Bike Excellent condition- $250 or B/O. Call Shane 549-1773

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our easy-to-sign "Slogan" sweatshirt! Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St - D40, NYC, NY 10014

FOR RENT

3 bedroom apt. Main St. $735. Heat and Hot Water included. Great location. Available 6/1 Call 253-0060

1 bedroom Take over lease. Colonial Village. Starting June 1. $430/month. 253-0313.

3 bedroom house close to Uptown. Big back yard. Call 549-8510

3 bedroom apt. in house. Nohic Center. $725 + utilities. On bus line. 582-7030 Available 6/1

Take Over Our Lease Well sublet, starting June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine. Includes heat and hot water. Rent negotiable. Call 549-0530

Take over our lease! 1 bedroom. On bus line. Available Aug or Sept. Call 665-5181 or email summer27@aol.com

1 bedroom apt. On bus route. 5 minute walk to campus. Cornhaven Apts. Starting June 1st. Call 549-4943

Rent in Brandywine Call 549-0318.

Take over our lease Available 6/1. 3 bedroom. Great location on bus line. Call 256-6034.

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September. Lease $1300+ 253-7879.

FOR SALE

Tag Sale- Great bargains, furniture, 3 piece sectional- sofa bed $150. Appliances- toaster oven- $5, bookcases, clothes etc. 950 N. Pleasant. Rotary- Presidential Apt. 1-5pm. May 10 + 11. Alternate rain location- 83 Presidential St. 549-2984

AIWA Audio System $150. P-100 Full Package PC $1,200. Sharps VCR $110.14 headers, Digital Answering Machine $20 or B/O. 256-0767

3 Coaches For Sale 2 Loveseats + 1 Huge Couch. Lawn Furniture. 2 Lounges + 2 Chairs w/Pads. Charcoal Grill. Come check it out and make me an offer! Craig 253-3336.

Microwave $70 Photo and Answering Machine $40. Call Vickie @ 549-4940

Mac LCIII Monitor and printer- fax modem and tons of software- $300 or B/O. Carl Neun 546-9170

Fall Size Futon with mattress cover included. Must sell. Excellent condition. $100. Call 549-7992

Bunk Bed $150 Modern- excellent condition Call 253-6495

Mens Cannondale Touring Bike Excellent condition- $250 or B/O. Call Shane 549-1773

FOR SALE

Schwinn Moss 21 Steel Road Bike. $100. Good condition. Call 253-7234

FOUND

Found- A Packaged T-shirt w/Bossy Boss tastic Name on bag was Ole Ann. Call 6-7238

HOUSE FOR RENT

House For Rent $1700 per month. 4 bedrooms, one half miles from Mullins Center. Gas heat. Call 253-7879

MISCELLANEOUS

Graduates Weekend: Beautifully furnished rooms available. Fifty dollars a night. Call 259-1038

JOIN OUR 'GLOBAL VILLAGE'
1 yr. International MBA
3 Countries & Languages
Financial Aid &
Job Market
Call Texas Graduate
School of International
Management
(512) 888-5441
9 June Enrollment

PERSONALS

Jeremy
I still think about you all the time at Statistics. Where are you? Please call me.

CONGRATS DAN!! You are a great president. I guess we are more alike than I thought. Love you- Hillary

Adam
I'm sorry that we never got to get together before the end of the semester. I'll be thinking of you next semester.

ROOM FOR RENT

Beginning September Walk to UMass Furnished, large quiet, comfortable. Male Grad/Professional. $74/week continuously through May 1998. 549-1578

Female Non-Smoker to share apartment with two friendly females. Summer and Fall. Call Megan at 549-2828

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffton's Pond 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean quiet sunny. $300+. Call 253-4994 for more info.

1 large room in two bedroom apartment. Looking for two females. Available 6/1 and Fall and Spring Option. On bus route. Very spacious. Great location. Call 549-3992

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffton's Pond 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean quiet sunny. $300+. Call 253-4994 for more info.

WANTED

Looking for 1 female to share cheap 2 bedroom apt. for summer. Located on Sunset. Call 549-0407

Need a place for the summer? We have 1 room available in Puffton! Male or female. 1 or 2 people. Call 549-8513 Ask for Jessica for more information. Or Chris at 549-8102

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

Robbin Reecan can help! Don't abandon your bunny! Call us- we'll find him a new home. Ellen- 367-0105.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

One room in 4 bedroom house in North Amherst with four males. $225/month. Rent and move-in negotiable. 549-9130

1 bedroom in a 4 bedroom spacious Hadley farm house. Must see. Starts June or $250. Call 549-1018

2 bedroom apartment with Fall Option. Call 549-4089

CHEAP 2 bedroom Balcony, A/C, Brandywine. $850. On bus route. 548-7080

Summer Sublet 3 bedroom apt. Southeast St. Near bus. Rent negotiable. Call Molly/Louise 549-5005

Cheap 2 bedrooms near Puffton's. $175 per month per person plus utilities. Available 6/1. Call 549-7088

FREE RICE! Single rooms- Alpine Commons. Utilities included. Best Offer! 256-1834

Large room in house on Main St. Great for 2. $400/month. Call 253-1880/ 548-8615

Uptown Apartment Starting June 1! One bedroom laundry facilities, parking. Very affordable! Call 253-7108.

Essex 2 bedroom 2 bath Fall Option. Mill Valley. $975/negotiable. 253-0997

Brandywine 2 bedrooms, A/C, pool. Rent negotiable. 548-6452

Boon Available 5/15 Great location near Amherst Center. $250 includes all utilities (301)670-9229 Leave message

Phillips St. Apt. June 1- Sept 1. 4 bedrooms. Excellent location. $110/month negotiable. Call 549-8994

2 bedroom newly renovated apartment in Puffton Village. Best Offer. Available 6/1. Call 549-5405

Sublet or Take Over Lease 6/1. 2 bedroom Brandywine. Recently renovated. 546-5132

SUMMER SUBLET

1 bedroom available in 4 bedroom house in North Amherst with four males. $225/month. Rent and move-in negotiable. 549-9130

1 bedroom in a 4 bedroom spacious Hadley farm house. Must see. Starts June or $250. Call 549-1018

2 bedroom apartment with Fall Option. Call 549-4089

CHEAP 2 bedroom Balcony, A/C, Brandywine. $850. On bus route. 548-7080

Summer Sublet 3 bedroom apt. Southeast St. Near bus. Rent negotiable. Call Molly/Louise 549-5005

Cheap 2 bedrooms near Puffton's. $175 per month per person plus utilities. Available 6/1. Call 549-7088

FREE RICE! Single rooms- Alpine Commons. Utilities included. Best Offer! 256-1834

Large room in house on Main St. Great for 2. $400/month. Call 253-1880/ 548-8615

Uptown Apartment Starting June 1! One bedroom laundry facilities, parking. Very affordable! Call 253-7108.

Essex 2 bedroom 2 bath Fall Option. Mill Valley. $975/negotiable. 253-0997

Brandywine 2 bedrooms, A/C, pool. Rent negotiable. 548-6452

Boon Available 5/15 Great location near Amherst Center. $250 includes all utilities (301)670-9229 Leave message

Phillips St. Apt. June 1- Sept 1. 4 bedrooms. Excellent location. $110/month negotiable. Call 549-8994

2 bedroom newly renovated apartment in Puffton Village. Best Offer. Available 6/1. Call 549-5405

Sublet or Take Over Lease 6/1. 2 bedroom Brandywine. Recently renovated. 546-5132

SUMMER SUBLET

House with 2 bedrooms available On bus route in Hadley. 1 bath. $170 a month + utilities/bill. Call Paul 587-0471

2 bedrooms available in condo right on campus. June to August. Joel 540-3142

2 bedroom available in 3 bedroom Mill Valley Apt. Looking for 4 people to share. $220/month. Females preferred. If interested call Jenn @ 6-6477 or Michelle @ 665-8752

One room available 6/1 Near Puffton's Pond. Female non-smoker. No pets. $220 + 1/4 utilities. On bus route. Call Darcy @ 546-5818

Summer Sublet/ Starting 6/1 $220/month. 1 miles from campus. 546-3392 Female only

Great one bedroom apt. for Summer Sublet w/Fall Option. Colonial Village. Available June 1st. $400/month. Call now at 258-0660

Downtown Amherst Apartment Fall Option. Two large sunny rooms in great house with housemates. Females preferred. Non-smokers. $275. Call 256-8330.

Great 3 bedroom apartment in prime location. 5 min. to campus. 5 min. to town. Call Rachel for more info. 253-6449

2 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Available 6/1 w/Fall Option. 549-4493

2 bedroom apt.- Boulders Newly renovated. Hot water included. $780. Great place. One mile from campus. Call 253-6670 Ask for Alyson or Amy

Summer Sublet- Fall Option One room Brandywine—Sublet one room or whole apartment. Newly carpeted. Free gas and heat- Bus route 549-8087 or 549-7886

Sublet- Sooderland PVTA stops at house. Considerate housemates. One bedroom $284/month. 665-9368

1 bedroom available in furnished 4 bedroom house. Starting 5/1. Two miles from campus. Interested call Andrew 549-2996

2 bedroom apt. Puffton Renovated. Heat/hot water included. Only $900/month! Available 6/1 call 546-1445

2 bedroom renovated Puffton Apartment Available 6/1. Cheap with Fall Option.

Mill Valley: 2 bedrooms. Heat/Hot Water included. Available 6/1. With Fall Option. 253-0534.

South Amherst 1 bedroom apartment. Bath/month. Call 256-4788

2 bedroom- Boulders Includes A/C and water. On bus line. Available 6/1. Call 256-0865 ASAP.

2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom apt. in South Amherst. 2 bathrooms. Rent negotiable. Call 253-9606

Renovated 3 bedroom Puffton Apt. Heat/HW included. A/C, parking. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. Will pay $100/month for dumping. Call 549-0863

SUMMER SUBLET

Sunny Spacious House Two bedrooms available. Great summer location with heiing and bike paths. deck and backyard. 5 miles from UMass 256-6330.

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths, first floor. Available June 1st. One month free. Call 253-6467

1 bedroom in a 2 bedroom apartment. Available May 25-Dec. 31. Cliffside Apts. Sunderland. On bus route. Everything included. $315 a month. 665-7888, 665-8338.

Sublet $280 a month in Amherst. On bus line. Call Andy 253-5482

2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. Bottom floor facing pond. Heat/hot water included. Bus route. Price Negotiable. 549-5066

One bedroom apartment on bus line. $550/month. Call Trish @ 772-247 2388

3 bedroom apartment June Aug. Pool/Courts Sunderland. Call 665-5298

One female to share large furnished room in 2 bedroom apartment on bus route. Close to campus. Available June 1/ Aug 31. Call 549-1478

2 bedroom 2 bathroom apartment. 207 Sunset opposite College Pizza. Very close to campus. Rent negotiable. Available 6/1-8/31. Call 549-1608

1 bedroom in a 3 bedroom apartment. Available June/August w/possible Fall Option. $750/month. Call Ami at 584-1478

June- August $600 Room to sublet. fully furnished. Close to Puffers Pond. Near bus route. 549-4047.

4 bedroom house Option of 1 to 4 bedrooms for rent. Call 549-8224

Puffton! One large room and one small room in 3 bedroom apartment. Call 549-8969

Single, double, triple rooms in big 3 floor house on edge of campus. 3 bath. 2 shared kitchen- cable, utilities. Only $500 all summer. Available May 23. Call Fabio at 548-7079 for info.

2 bedroom apt. Fall Option. 3 floor. On bus line. $575/mo. Partly furnished. 256-3952

Class 2 bedroom in Brandywine A/C, pool. 6/1 with Fall Option. $600. On bus line. UMass one mile. 549-0873.

2 bedroom in Brandywine $650/month. Available 6/1 Call 549-9131

2 bedrooms in a 4 bedroom apt. Huge size of light. $332 each person per month. Southpoint Apts. 256-8968.

TO SUBLET

Need a place to sublet for summer? Nice little cheap room- $230 + utilities. Call 549-8221 for more info.

TO SUBLET

Spacious 2 bedroom in Sunderland. $630/ HUG included Available 6/1. On bus route. A must see! 665-8894

5 month sublet June 1 to January 1. Single bedroom apartment at Puffton Village. Rent is $535/ per month. Includes heat and hot water. Call 549-0356

Two females looking to sublet. Fall Semester only. Call Katy and Rene 546-3114

Heat and Water Included 2 bedroom. A/C. $600/month. Starts June 1st. Fall Option. Furnished. Call 549-4324. We can accommodate any needs

TRAVEL

Europe $180 O/W Mexico/Caribbean $189 R/T ONE WORLD TRAVEL. It's your world, now you can afford to see it. (413)587-0201

EUROPE $175
Within USA $79 - $125
Canada /Mexico $198 o/t
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!!!!
http://www.airhitch.org
AIRHITCH 1-800-326-2009

China Classic Tours, Inc.
270 Sylvan Avenue
Englewood Cliffs, NJ 07632
1-888-733-2742
Fax 1(201) 871-3920
CHINA
Great Experience
Student Tours
Beijing HSKH $235+air
Beijing/Shanghai Hangzhou
WOTN $451+air
Beijing/Xian
WOTN $425+air
Departures May-August
For details, please call or visit our web site
http://www.chinaclassic.com

TO SUBLET

Two lonely grad students with perfectly behaved and maintenance dog need summer sublet preferably near bus route. Willing to pay three months up front, plus deposit! 584-1847

Collegian Classifieds They Work

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, MAY 8

Campaign — There will be a letter writing campaign in the Campus Center, room 804, from 7-9:30 p.m. In support of Special Education. All are invited to attend. The campaign is happening in efforts to rebuke recent negative propaganda around Special Education. We will be writing state and local legislature. If you are unable to attend or would like more information, please call Sue at 546-0228.

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe, Mission Improvable, will be holding their end of the year shows today, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174. A special guest comedy troupe will be performing with them each night. Free and open to the public.

Lecture — Bonnie Strickland, professor of psychology at UMass, will give a lecture entitled, "Lesbian Attraction: What's Sex Roles Got to Do With It?" The event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. Part of the GLBT Lecture Series.

Meeting — The UMass Habitat for Humanity will be holding a general membership meeting at 7 p.m. in the Bluewall.

Meeting — A University Center 2000 Town Meeting — Plenary Session of Findings will be held from 6-8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165. Logo awards to be announced.

FRIDAY, MAY 9

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe, Mission Improvable, will be holding their end of the year shows today, Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174. A special guest comedy troupe will be performing with them each night. Free and open to the public.

SATURDAY, MAY 10

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe, Mission Improvable, will be holding their final end of the year show tonight at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174. A special guest comedy troupe will be performing with them each night. Free and open to the public.

SUNDAY, MAY 11

Concert — A University Chorale Concert, under the direction of Dr. Richard Du Bois with Dr. Fred Tillis, will be held in Bowker Auditorium at 7 p.m. Free for UMass students.

Film — The UMass Science Fiction Society presents a free Movie Marathon in the Campus Center Auditorium starting at noon (and again at 5 p.m.) with Hareway to the Stars: A Princess Bride at 12:30 p.m. (and again at 8 p.m.); Day the Earth Stood Still at 2:30 p.m.; Enemy Mine at 5:30 p.m.; and Army of Darkness at 10 p.m. Open to the public.

Student I.D. Cards — Students, faculty and staff who have not had their picture taken for the new all-campus I.D. card to be issued over the summer for the fall semester, must do so before the end of this semester. Temporary photo locations will be held until May 14 on the Campus Center Concourse from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday-Friday, and the University Library from 3-8 p.m. Monday-Thursday and 3-5 p.m. Friday. The Franklin Dining Hall I.D. office, open from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday, will take pictures until the week of finals.

Musicians — Mission Improvable, the UMass Comedy Troupe, is looking for someone who can play the keyboard in a variety of music styles, with their own equipment. Call Aaron at 546-5225 for more info.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, meets every Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees.

Community — "Rendezvous with the Soul," meditation, music and prayer meetings, will be held from 4-5 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805-809 weekly on Tuesdays until the end of the semester. Sponsored by the UMass Baha'i Club. For more information, call Chris at 549-4982.

Discussion — Come experience the cultural diversity of the Prince/Crampton Graduate Residence Hall From April 8 - May 10, residents from many countries around the world will be participating in discussions and presentations about their experiences in their home countries. Scheduled topics: Latin America/Caribbean, May 4-10. The program is free and open to the public.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon-2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6-7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

Support group — RFFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them, and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577- 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day- Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at Mass-Pirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

NOTICES

Darkness at 10 p.m. Open to the public.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
TONIGHT AT 10
MENTOS & NEW HORIZON BAND

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24 CNN/Headline News
4	CBS/4	Boston	25 BET
6	ABC/5	Boston	26 BET on Jazz
8	PBS/57	Springfield	27 UCTV
7	HSCN	Movie Channel	28 The Learning Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29 TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30 Comedy Central
10	NBC/30	New Britain	32 Much Music
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink:
Rum Punch

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 8, 1997

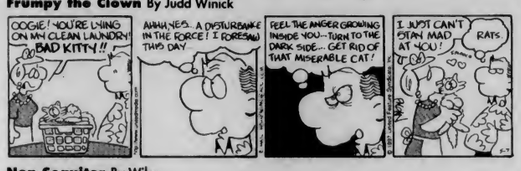
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scenic Rail Journeys		Mystery!: Memoirs of Holmes		Wait for God	Keeping Up	T. Old House	Bostworks
WFSB	3	(3) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	(4) News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	(5) News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	High Incident "Shootout"		★★★ "Lethal Weapon 3" (1992, Drama) (PA) Mel Gibson, (In Stereo)				News	News
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★★★ "Arachnophobia" (1990, Horror) Jeff Daniels				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld	Fired Up	ER "Make a Wish" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		(6) Fresh Prince	Martin	News		Judge Judy	TV 6	Cops "Mr Mr Oh Well"	Baywatch Nights "The Vortex"		LAPD	Ft. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT		(9) News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld	Fired Up	ER "Make a Wish" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	(11) Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Living Single	Living Single	New York Undercover		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	9	(22) News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld	Fired Up	ER "Make a Wish" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	(6) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		T. Old House	Dra. on Call	Mystery!: Memoirs of Holmes		Dangerfield		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	(28) News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	High Incident "Shootout"		★★★ "Lethal Weapon 3" (1992, Drama) (PA) Mel Gibson, (In Stereo)				News	News
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad About You	★★★ "Beverly Hills Cop" (1984, Drama) Eddie Murphy.				News		Red TV	Mad About You
WTBS	29	Family Matters	Family Matters	Major League Baseball		Atlanta Braves at Florida Marlins. (Live)						★ "Invasion U.S.A." (1985, Adventure) Chuck Norris.
A&E	69	Quincy "Cover Up"		Law & Order "Securitas"		Biography: Patsy Cline		Ancient Mysteries		Unexplained "Hauntings"		Law & Order "Cradle to Grave"
CNN	65	23 WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Rus.	Moneyline
COM	66	28 Dick	Dream On	Daily Show (N)	T. Davidson	★ "Difford's Guide" (1991, Comedy) Martin Short, Charles Grodin.				Stuck in '80s	Dream On	Daily Show	T. Davidson
DISC	67	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings at the Red Star (R)		Wild Discovery "Gorilla" (R)		Mystery Univ.	Movie Magic	Wings "First Strike" (R)		Wild Discovery "Gorilla" (R)
ESPN	61	Up Close	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 4 – Teams to Be Announced.					Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★ "With Hostile Intent" (1993, Drama) Mel Harris, Melissa Gilbert.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	63	(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		Jenny M.	Singled Out	Music Videos	Yo! (In Stereo)		Softball: Rock N Jock VIII. (R) (In Stereo)			Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	64	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret-of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	68	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Sequoia DSV "Oggers"		★★★ "The Navigator" (1988, Fantasy) Bruce Lyons.				Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	72	28 Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Real America: 48 Hours		Connections II	Connections II	After the Warming		Real America: 48 Hours
TNT	60	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball Playoffs: Teams to be Announced. (Live)						NBA Basketball Playoffs: Teams TBA
USA	59	Renegade "Mother Courage"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote (In Stereo)		★★ "An Innocent Man" (1989, Drama) Tom Selleck, F. Murray Abraham. (In Stereo)				(5:45) Stalking
HBO	70	(5:30) ★★½ "Grumpier Old Men"		★★½ "Look Who's Talking" (1989) John Travolta. "PG-13"				"The Last Days of Frankie the Fly" (1997) "R"				Father's Day	Murder 9 to 5 (R) (In Stereo)
MAX	76	★★½ "Sidekicks" (1993, Drama) Chuck Norris. (In Stereo) "PG"				★★½ "Something to Talk About" (1995) Julia Roberts. "R"				★ "Cyberzone" (1995) Marc Singer. (In Stereo) "R"		"Double Tr."
SHOW	71	★★ "Old Explorers" (1990, Drama) Joss Ferrer. (In Stereo) "PG"				"Riot" (1997, Drama) Luke Perry. (In Stereo)			Riot-Aftermath	★★ "Grind: Food of the Gods II" (1989) "R"			Red Shoe

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Social Norm By Mr. K

Non Sequitor By Wiley

HMM. THIS LOOKS LIKE A GOOD BOOK.
AH, MY POOR NAIVE FRIEND... HAVEN'T YOU HEARD THE EXPRESSION "YOU CAN'T JUDGE A BOOK BY ITS COVER"?..
YOU HANG TO LOOK AT THE INSIDE FLAP COPY...HMM. "ENERGETIC, INVENTIVE AND SCRAPPY..." SCARROUS?" WHEN I THEY USE WORDS I DON'

Minutewomen host Canisius in NCAA play–in

NCAA softball Play-in series

NCAA CHAMPIONSHIPS
Totman Field 3 p.m.

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

The long and winding road to the College World Series begins today at 3 p.m. for the Massachusetts softball team. This is when the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference champion Canisius Golden Griffins come to Totman Field to battle the Minutewomen in a best of three series play–in, for an automatic invitation to the NCAA tournament.

UMass (31–20–1) heads into the post–season after completing an emotional roller coaster regular season. The Minutewomen climbed from the depths of an early season losing streak, then reeled off 24 wins in their last 30 games, culminating in their third consecutive Atlantic 10 title, and tenth in 12 tries.

The resurgence of UMass can be best explained in three words: Henderson and Wagner.

After a subpar start to their season — granted it was against some of the nation's more elite lineups — UMass' two hurlers came together to form the most dominating pitching staff in the Northeast. An example of this, and possibly the team's most memorable highlight of the season, would be the pair of no–hitters the two threw against Central Connecticut State on April 9.

Following her 1996 A–10 Pitcher of the Year award, Liz Wagner finished the 1997 campaign strong with 12 wins and a 2.26 runs against average.

Danielle Henderson has enjoyed a simply remarkable run. She is currently one win from an impressive 20–win season, and with her performance this weekend at the A–10 Championships, her ERA has dipped to 0.90, good enough for No. 17 in the nation. On her stat sheet this season is a perfect game against CCSU, a no–hitter against Temple, and a series of one, two, and three–hit gems.

Henderson has also shattered several UMass and A–10 strikeout records along the way and is ranked fifth in the country with an average of nine strikeouts per game. After the A–10 regular season, Henderson accepted the Championships' Most Outstanding Performer and the coveted Pitcher of the Year awards.

Though the numbers have gone down offensively for the Minutewomen this season, timely hits, execution and hustle has been their strongest attribute.

The career of Sam Cardenas has been the most talked about story of the season. Her reign ends with her name atop 14 UMass records, becoming the leading record–holder in school history.

The play of sophomore Mandy Galas has been a pleasant surprise for the Minutewomen this season. Galas leads UMass with a .359 batting average and 29 runs scored.

Meanwhile the Golden Griffins (31–12) come in boasting the fourth best pitching staff in the country (0.89 ERA), and are also 11th best in batting (.351).

Highly responsible for Canisius' success on the mound is the play of MAAC Tournament MVP Kristina Chavez. Chavez posted 16 wins this year with a 0.94 ERA, and is coming off a no–hitter against Fairfield in the opening round of the MAAC Tournament.

At the plate for the Golden Griffins is MAAC Player of the Year Jen Silata.

The junior is ranked 24th in the nation in RBIs (0.98 per game), driving in nearly a run a game. She's also ranked 28th in batting, with an inflated .412 average. In addition to her national recognition, Silata also leads the Golden Griffins with six long balls, 42 runs batted in, 13 two– baggers, and a whopping 90 total bases.

For the Minutewomen to advance to the NCAA tournament they will have to avoid a possible letdown after a hard–played A–10 Championship series last weekend. But with Henderson on the mound, the Minutewomen have a leg up on the competition.

Canisius and UMass met last at the 1995 play–in on Totman Field, and the Minutewomen swept the Golden Griffins 3–0, 3–0.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Kim Gutridge will play in her third NCAA play–in series tomorrow at Totman Field, when the Minutewomen host Canisius at 3 p.m.

UM men's crew rows four boats to nationals

The UMass men's crew team captured three medals this past weekend at the New England Rowing Championships in Worcester.

The novice lightweight eight was the first to draw blood in a final 200m slugfest that squeaked through the finish line less than a second in front of silver medalist Rhode Island. The race continued the crew's undefeated season and earned it the gold medal.

The novice heavyweights finished with the bronze in their event, beating out Trinity College and missing second place Boston College by just three seconds.

SPORTS BRIEFS

The varsity lightweight eight had to settle for silver behind defending national champion Boston College, as the Eagles over–stroked and out–powered UMass in the first 1,000m and held on for a three second margin.

In the closest race of the day, UMass' varsity heavyweight eight had a barn–burner of a finish to beat out Wesleyan by two–tenths of a second for fourth place. The finish qualified UMass for nationals.

UMass placed third behind New Hampshire and Boston College in the men's points trophy awards, a ranking determined by the entire squad's overall performance.

Volleyball down to four in intramurals

Tournament action is heating up for UMass' intramurals. Men's softball is down to the Sweet 16, soccer is also in the round of 16, while volleyball is down to just four.

• Softball action starts at 5 p.m. on the Boyden fields, with finals scheduled for Tues., May 13. Co–rec softball playoffs are still in the waiting stages, pending weather and field conditions.

• In women's softball action, Softgirls will take on The Devils, with the winner advancing to face Ball Busters in the finals.

• In volleyball matchups, four teams remain. Jut for Fun will face RIH, while defending champ Sideout will square off against Black Knights. Games start at 6 p.m. in Boyden gym.

• World Cup Soccer, which began April 25 as a weekend tournament, has carried along, eliminating teams each week. The finals, featuring The Bohemians FC against Femi's Grasshoppers, is scheduled for May 10 at 11 a.m. on the Boyden fields.

Sports Briefs was compiled by Collegian staff member Casey Kane.

Top student–athletes honored at sports luncheon

By Jeremy R. Adams and Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts student–athletes were honored for outstanding academic achievement yesterday by the UMass Sports Luncheon Committee at the Campus Center Auditorium. Twenty–nine athletes representing 25 varsity teams were lauded for achieving the highest grade point averages on their respective teams for the fall 1996 semester.

Pat Vittum, co–chair of the Faculty Senate Athletic Council spoke about the opportunities and difficulties of being a successful student athlete and Assistant Athletic Director of Student–Athlete Services Mike Jenkins presented the plaques to the students at the final luncheon of the year.

Twelve of the athletes earned perfect 4.0 grade point averages. They were: crew's Angie Price; field hockey's Jen Gutzman; Mike Wynne of football; Lloyd Ahlquist of men's gymnastics, Betsy Colucci and Mandy Mosby of women's gymnastics; men's lacrosse's Harold Drumm and Adam Waxer; Thomas Holden of men's skiing; women's soccer player Tarah Tokarchik; Katie Kenderski of softball; and Pam Perog of women's swimming.

Turn to HONORS, page 9

Baseball drops another as Harvard exacts revenge

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

For any other baseball team, going 3–3 this past week might be considered average, but for the Massachusetts baseball team (30–9, 14–4 Atlantic 10), which recently came off of an 18–game winning streak, losing three out of its last six should bring concern to coach Mike Stone.

After losing the final game of a three–game series to St. Bonaventure and being rained out on Tuesday, UMass traveled out to play Harvard (28–12) yesterday, in a rematch of the baseball Beanpot tournament final. Unfortunately, like Northeastern before it, the Crimson got its revenge and defeated the Minutemen 10–4.

Harvard took the lead in the fourth inning and never looked back. Sending two runs across the plate in the fourth and two in the sixth, the Crimson took a four–run lead. UMass would only score one more run in the eighth and Harvard cruised to an easy victory.

Travis Veracka (4–2) took his second loss of the season, starting the game on the mound for the Minutemen. In six innings, he gave up seven runs on 11 hits with three strikeouts and no walks. Rich Hartman came in to relieve Veracka in the seventh inning.

Turn to BASEBALL, page 9

L.A., ChiSox faltering despite expectations

It's times like this that I wonder why I watch baseball. The Red Sox are hovering around .500, with no sign of improvement on the horizon. On top of that, no station in the dorms pick up the games so I can't see them anyway. So with the help of ESPN's Sportscenter and the Boston Globe I keep in touch with what is going on.

Right?

Wrong. Because whenever I go down to the Bluewall to watch Sportscenter, someone is watching Rosie O'Donnell sing as badly as me. And every morning my Globe is mysteriously not among the pile of newspapers delivered to Baker. It's a conspiracy I tell you.

But anyway, the feel of the game is gone. I've lost what it feels like to come into my house, back in Maynard, after mowing the lawn, grab a glass of ice–cold iced tea and sit down to watch a mid–afternoon Red Sox game.

So why do I keep on hoping to watch another game? Because there is something in all of us that is attracted to baseball. It's a sport that means cook outs, hot weather, and summer fun. It still is America's sport.

Sorry, I didn't mean to preach.

Now to the business at hand.

• OK, you forced me to do it, I'll admit it. I'm not Peter Gammons. I can't predict who is going to win the World Series. I thought Los Angeles and the Chicago White Sox would be contenders, but those two teams have combined records of 27–30, and like the Red Sox are now playing just .500 ball.

But the problem is solved. After intense analysis, the White Sox front office decided that painting the wall in the outfield black instead of the evil blue, will fix Chicago's suckiness. Well, it must have worked, the ballclub has won two in a row. Watch out world!

• What a surprise. Seattle and Atlanta are sitting pretty on top of their respective divisions. The Braves have the best record in baseball, while Seattle's Junior Griffey leads the league with 14 homeruns.

• My question is, "What the hell happened to the Al. Central?" Milwaukee is leading the division with a 14–13 record. What kind of teams are these? The Red Sox are just two games behind the Brewers and they are fourth in the

UM's fall athletes distinguished themselves

Editor's note: Over the course of the next week, the Collegian sports page will look back at the year that was in UMass sports. Here are a few athletes that were faces in the UMass fall sports crowd.

Frank Alessio - football
senior • tailback
Second on the team in rushing ... finished career third on the UMass all–time rushing list ... captured the Yankee Conference all–time rushing title as a junior

Ron Brockington - football senior • fullback
Led the football team in rushing with 776 yards ... led the team with six rushing touchdowns ... had 138 yards and two TDs in come–from–behind win over UConn.

Paul Engin - water polo
senior • goalie
Led the Minutemen to a 22–9 mark and the water polo final four ... four–year letterwinner ranks in the top three in all four UMass goalkeeping statistical categories.

Erin Lynch - soccer
senior • defender
One of the nation's top defenders, was named third team All–American ... the catalyst of the Minutewoman offense, ranks second on UMass' all–time single season list for assists (12).

Rebecca Myers • soccer
senior • midfielder
Set UMass career records for goals and points ... become the first–ever UMass soccer player (male or female) to break the 100–point plateau.

Dionne Nash • volleyball
senior • outside hitter
Atlantic 10 Player of the Year with 4.31 kills per game and 3.18 digs per game ... first player in school history to record 1,000 kills, also notched 1,000 digs.

Justin Riemer • football
senior • linebacker
Defensive leader made 144 tackles, including 102 solo tackles ... ranks third at UMass all–time in solo tackles in a career

Hilary Rose • field hockey
senior • goalie
Atlantic 10 Player of the Year, led the nation in save percentage (.899) ... took a year off from college to play on the British national team goalie in the Olympics ... was a first team All–American.

Kyle Rothenberger • field hockey
senior • midfielder
One of the most consistent offensive players for UMass, finished her career at No. 7 on the all–time scoring chart (81 points) ... second team All–American

Dave Siljanovski • soccer senior • forward/midfielder
Holds school record for career assists ... led team in goals, assists and points as a junior.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 137 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, May 9, 1997

Tengo on Fuego

Yo La Tengo, Silkworm, Elliot Smith and Sweetbelly Freakdown have all put out new albums. Check out our reviews (see Arts & Living page 5).

Can't touch this

Pitcher Danielle Henderson struck out 17 and gave up six hits blanking Canisius in two games and earning a berth into the NCAA Tourney (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

North Korea confirms U.S. serviceman alive

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American reported to have deserted his Army post in South Korea in 1965 is alive and well in the communist North, North Korean officials have told his sister.

"I have to believe them. Yes, I believe them," said Pat Harrell, of Roanoke Rapids, N.C. Her brother, Charles Robert Jenkins, is among four U.S. soldiers reported to have defected to North Korea in the 1960s and thought still to be alive.

The Pentagon disclosed in January 1996 that it believed the four were living in North Korea, but the Korean government had not confirmed it until now.

Ms. Harrell said she and an American television reporter met Wednesday with North Korean government officials in New York, and they assured her that her brother is in good health.

She was told he has a North Korean wife and is a citizen of that country. "They said he has children at the university there," she said in a telephone interview yesterday.

There has been no word from Jenkins since he was reported absent without leave from his Army unit in South Korea on Jan. 5, 1965, Ms. Harrell said.

NATION

House passes bill to try violent teens as adults

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alarmed by the "brutality and viciousness" of juvenile crime, the House overwhelmingly passed a get–tough bill yesterday ordering adult trials for violent Americans barely into their teens.

The bill, if enacted, would bring about a sweeping change in federal handling of juvenile crime, ending the notion that violent offenders of 15, 14 or even 13 should be treated as youngsters and their offenses considered childhood misdeeds.

The vote was 286–132, with 77 Democrats joining 209 Republicans in supporting the crackdown. Voting against it were 122 Democrats, nine Republicans and one independent.

Americans are "shocked by the brutality and viciousness of crimes that are being committed by 13 and 14 and 15–year–olds, and they're equally shocked when they see a system that treats these juveniles as something less than the predators they seem to be," said Rep. George Gekas, (R–Pa.).

Both the Clinton administration and the Republican–led Congress wanted to impose severe treatment on some juvenile offenders. But the administration did not support this measure, largely because it did not include money for crime prevention and did not require that child safety locks be provided with firearm purchases.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 40	HIGH: 55 LOW: 50	HIGH: 65 LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword.....page 8
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 10

UMass wiped off record books as NCAA hands down ruling

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team's 1996 NCAA tournament appearance will be wiped from the record books and the school will have to return approximately $151,000 in tournament revenue, the NCAA ruled yesterday..

In accordance with NCAA Bylaws 31.2.2.4 (regarding games) and 31.2.2.5 (regarding finances), UMass' tournament record will be deleted from NCAA books.

The Minutemen finished the 1995–96 season with a 35–2 record that will now be marked with an asterisk to signal the NCAA's decision. Only UMass' tournament games are effected.

The ruling, which ends weeks of speculation regarding possible sanctions against the Minutemen, comes only days after The Boston Globe reported that former player Marcus Camby secretly repaid an agent $28,000 to save the agent's life from loan sharks.

Approximately three months after UMass reached the Final Four, where it lost to eventual champion Kentucky, Camby, a 6–foot–11 center, set off a wave of controversy with an interview with The Hartford Courant. In the article, Camby recounted his dealings with agents, and was quoted saying he took expensive jewelry, among other gifts, from Hartford sports agent Wesley Spears.

According to the Associated Press, Camby said "Spears first provided him with money, sex and other favors and then threatened to blow the whistle if Camby refused his services as agent."

Spears was later charged with extortion and promoting prostitution.

Camby, who was the second overall pick in the 1996 NBA Draft, made the

Turn to NCAA, page 2

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

A scandal involving former UMass center Marcus Camby resulted in NCAA sanctions yesterday.

SGA approves budget; several RSO's angered by lack of funds for '98

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

The annual budget for fiscal year 1998 was passed by the Student Government Association (SGA) at last night's meeting in the Student Union Ballroom.

Registered Student Organizations (RSOs) were present at the meeting and were allowed to debate against the passage of the budget, and request more money.

In a presentation before those in the senate, the Ways and Means committee, who are responsible for the allocation of the budget money, explained how they decided on the various budgets.

"Every RSO that wants to receive money from us has to fill out an application ... [the criteria used] are amount of students on campus affected, and if the money from last year went towards what they said it would," said Jenn Corbett, chair of the committee.

Other factors taken into account included how well they work with other RSOs and student businesses. It is equally important that groups don't rely on the SGA for their sole source of funding.

The Ways and Means Committee also would not support any RSO receiving student payroll. For this reason The Index yearbook received no money.

"The Index was asking for $14,000 for student payroll. We do not support any RSOs getting paid," Corbett said.

R.J. Lemar, senator and member of the Ways and Means Committee, cautioned against comparing one group's allocation against another, because every application and request was looked at separately.

"It's impossible to hold everyone to the same criteria. We can't just base [the allocations] on membership, for example," Lemar said.

The committee presentation lasted approximately 45 minutes, and was followed by debate from student group representatives who felt that they were not allocated enough money.

Amnesty International, a group concerned with human rights violations, was the first RSO to voice their disappointment with their budget.

"We have been in existence for two years on campus. At our meetings we write letters and talk about students rights... the work we do incurs quite a cost, we'd like to send more letters but because of budget restrictions we can't," student coordinator Daniel Ryan said.

Ryan also cited the group's growth in the past semester as another reason for more money.

Arik Colbath, outgoing president of the Ski Club, spoke on behalf of all RSOs who he felt were ignorant about the budget process.

"A lot of RSOs are unhappy about this budget. It's not fair for RSOs to see other groups getting huge amounts of money, we're pleading ignorance here... we can't give to the few and forget the many," Colbath said.

Commuter Area Government was the next to appeal their budget, David Hammer, governor of the Commuter Area argued against the $4,000 cut to their budget.

"A $4,000 cut means we don't do half the things we do," Hammer said.

The committee based their decision on what they claimed to be inactivity during the fall semester, despite Hammer's argument that commuter students need this money to be fully

Turn to SGA, page 2

Redman & G–Love play Spring Concert tomorrow

Hip–hop maestro Redman headlines Spring Concert tomorrow.

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow morning at 11:30 a.m. the gates will open for Spring Concert '97 hosted by University Productions and Concerts (UPC).

Performers scheduled include Redman, G–Love and Special Sauce, The Jazz Mandolin Project, 702 and Trick Knee; guest DJ's include Cool Regg, JA, Scorty, Harrison and Darb.

Headlining the six–hour concert is the critically acclaimed hip–hop maestro Redman (a.k.a. The Funk Docta). Redman continues UPC's streak of attracting the finest names in hip– hop to the UMass campus. Past Spring Concert rap acts include KRS O.N.E. and the Beastie Boys.

Known for his hilarious lyrics, innovative samples and collaborations with Method Man, Redman represents the cutting edge of the hip–hop scene.

While Redman is helping reshape the rap world, G–Love and Special find themselves mix matching blues and rap for a unique twist.

The College Music Journal described their music as "floppy drums, simply plucked bass and almost lounge–y guitar — echoes G–Love's lax rap style, at times recalling Anthony Kiedis or Michael Ivey (Basehead), an at others sounding like a drunk guy singing in the subway."

Best known for the hits "Cold Beverage" and "Baby's Got Sauce," G–Love and Special Sauce should serve up some fun on the lawn by the Campus Pond tomorrow afternoon.

Fans of jam bands along the lines of Phish and Blues Traveller should catch the Vermont outfit, The Jazz Mandolin Project.

As the name suggests, band leader Jamie Masefield attempts to perform jazz on a mandolin with Stacy Starkwater on bass and Gabe Jarrett on drums.

On the heels of the hit R&B single "Steelo," 702 will take the stage of Spring Concert '97 in the early afternoon. The pet project of Michael Bivens (of Bell Biv DeVoe), 702, featuring three young R&B divas, may be the "next big thing" in the R&B world.

Local band Trick Knee opens up Spring Concert, taking the stage at noon. Winners of the UPC Battle of the Bands, Trick Knee has developed a core audience in the Pioneer Valley.

Doors open for Spring Concert '97 at 11:30 a.m. The music begins at noon and lasts until 6 p.m. The show is co– sponsored by the UMass Arts Council, Newbury Comics, WHMP, the Daily Collegian and Student Government Association. Tickets are $2 for UMass undergrads with a valid I.D. and $15 for the general public.

Faculty Senate reaffirms vote in support of Honors College

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The debate over the Honors College proposal made its way back to the floor of the University of Massachusetts Faculty Senate yesterday, as the Senate unanimously approved reaffirming its earlier vote in favor of transforming the current Honors Program into an Honors College.

Kandula Sastry, a professor in the physics department and chair of the Academic Matters Council (AMC), said that the Honors College Idea was supported by the Faculty Senate in its vote earlier this semester, but since then, students have expressed concern that the Honors College would be elitist and unfair.

"Since that time, there have been concerns addressed by some members of the student body," Sastry said. "In light of these concerns, the Academic Matters Council requests that the Faculty Senate reaffirm its earlier position."

Sastry went on to discuss the reasons he believes an Honors College would be beneficial to UMass.

"This Honors College works for the benefit of all students; make no mistake about it," Sastry said. "This is a great opportunity for the University. It is a challenge for the University to enhance its academic quality. We feel that the Faculty Senate should reaffirm the transformation to the Honors College."

John Bracey, a professor in the African American studies department and secretary of the Faculty Senate, criticized complaints against the Honors College as offensive to him and voiced support for the Honors College Proposal.

"I was insulted by the idea that one could not be both a minority and intelligent. As a black American, I found that offensive," Bracey said. "This College will attract intelligent, poor and middle class people."

Bracey then attacked the idea that the Honors College would be discriminatory.

"If a University can not reward people for being intelligent, what are we doing?", Bracey asked. "That's why we give grades. Of course that discriminates against people that get F's."

Saliwah Shamapande, Student Government Association Secretary of University Policy, said that the reason some students oppose the creation of an Honors College is

Turn to HONORS, page 2

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNIK\ COLLEGIAN

Not the library!

Joseph "Stalin" Mach a sophomore, enjoys a brief reading break in the book section of the University Store.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor:
Mike Burke

Copy Editor:
Lisa Chiu

Photo Technician:
Chris Cesnek

Production Supervisor:
Mark McGrath

Production Staff:
Sandi Kraüss
Elizabeth Brown

UM hosts 10th annual Herbfest

Festival celebrates and describes the many uses of herbs

By Liz Anderson
Collegian Staff

Essential massage oils, favorable food, soothing therapeutic teas and beautiful potpourri arrangements filled the University of Massachusetts Student Union Ballroom yesterday in celebration of the 10th annual Herbfest.

From 11 a.m. – 2 p.m., students from the Plants and Soil Science class — "Herbs, Spices, and Medicinal Plants" — shared their knowledge in plant life with the entire campus community in an array of exhibits on herbal foods, medicines and beauty products.

Stimulating bath vinegars, and hair rinses made from chamomile, rosemary, sage, thyme and lavender, were on display with free samples, and informational pamphlets.

"Everyone should be informed about the therapeutic qualities of herbs and cancel the myth that herbs are bad," sophomore Dawn Centracchio said from behind her herbal hair rinse exhibit.

According to the students, the herbal infusions can cure more ailments than the local CVS which they demonstrated to the passerbys. They also displayed an array of herbal medicines. Singer tummy soothers, tension headache teas, insect bite ointments, acne lotion, and sore throat gargle were just a few herbal remedies that were on display.

Herbal therapy for men and women was also presented in the form of various hot and ice teas specializing in the maintenance of high energy levels and spirits for each gender. The festival's "Garden of Herbs" not only showcased oils and medicinal plants for beauty products and medicines, but also supplied a wide spectrum of spices for sweet baked goods and zesty snacks.

Coriander salsa, cinnamon sugar cookies, original mint chocolate chip cookies and basil pizzas as well as other treats were free to eat and served with detailed recipes. The Herbfest also provided extensive information on how to grow herb gardens and directions to specialty grocery stores that serve as excellent resources for herbal products.

"Herbs have been used intimately by societies for centuries in ceremonial and medicinal traditions," said Professor Lyle E. Craker, the instructor of the class Herbs, Spices, and Medicinal Plants. "Herbs stimulate all of the human's five senses with their smells, flavors, colors and textures."

Each of Craker's students had the freedom to select and research an area of herbs in which he or she has a special interest. Henna, was perhaps the most unique exhibit at this year's Herbfest Program. Henna is the art of painting intricate designs on hands that resemble lace gloves. Sophomore Meenakshi Verma introduced this ancient Indian tradition to the Herbfest and was surrounded by a crowd eager to get their hands painted during the festival.

Craker created the Herbfest 10 years ago in order to highlight the traditional roles herbs have played in the evolution of society's modern day conveniences. This year's Herbfest not only conveyed Cracker's original purpose for the festival, but also proved that modern medicine can be grown by anyone right outside their back door.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK/ COLLEGIAN

Marlowe Knipes an Anthro plant and soil major presents his project.

■ honors

continued from page 1

because they feel there are more pressing needs on campus.

"What the students are saying is that we have needs now," Shamapande said. "We are saying we need classrooms and they are saying their going to build an Honors College. It is a needs issue."

Chancellor David K. Scott responded to Shamapande's comments by stating that the University will not be able to get additional funding from the state legislature for current expenses, but does have an opportunity to receive a special appropriation for an Honors College.

"If I had a free hand [to distribute moneys] I am not sure that I would say the Honors College is the first priority," Scott said. "However, I believe that there will be an Honors College somewhere in the UMass system and funds will be requested from the legislature for it. It [funding] will not be made available for something else."

Scott also said that he feels that the Honors College will, in the future, bring increased funding to the entire campus.

"I can say this," Scott said. "In the long haul, an Honors College will bring a change about in how people will view UMass. It will translate into much better funding."

Bracey spoke in agreement with Scott, saying the reason the Faculty Senate considered the proposal in the first place was to bring more funding to the campus.

"The only way to get more money is to ask for something new," Bracey said.

The Senate then voted unanimously to reaffirm its previous vote in favor of the Honors College proposal.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

represented.

"[The cut] leaves out the most under-represented group on this campus," Hammer said.

The Radical Student Union in conjunction with Undergraduate Employment Organization (UEO) also asked for a $2,400 budget, instead of the $1,000 allocated.

"We're a new group [organized] around labor rights. We need to learn how to lead students... we were counting on more money to make this happen," said UEO member Amy Howland.

The budget passed by the two thirds vote required despite the discontent of these RSO's.

"I encourage you not to do anything to this budget. It's not perfect, but it's not going to get any better," Lemar said before the final vote was taken.

Speaker Brian Tirrell announced after the budget vote that any agencies or student organizations that still feel they need more money in their budget to operate can petition for money in the finance reserve which currently contains $32,000.

Area Governments debate ALANA allocations

Sen. Neil Collins (Commuter Area) voiced his concern over the discrepancies between the amount of money area governments received as opposed to the Office of ALANA Affairs (OAA).

"There's a large lack of interest by the student population in what the senate does. One reason is a lot of the senate's money goes into special interest groups instead of what would benefit students as a whole," Collins said.

With the passage of this budget, area governments will get a total of $66,215 while the OAA will be receiving $120,677.

According to the OAA, the ALANA population on this campus is between 17-18 percent. Area governments represent all students attending the University of Massachusetts.

"Money that is being earmarked for student groups is being divided up in a disproportional amount. Where you have the area governments making [$54,000] less than Office of ALANA Affairs, a lot of the student population interest is being left out," Collins said.

Corbett explained that $80,000 of the OAA's budget will be going towards paying professional staff members.

"In [the OAA] budget, over $80,000 is for the staff. The actual operating budget is much closer [to area governments]. Even so, you still can't compare two different budgets. We still look at them individually," Corbett said.

■ NCAA

continued from page 1

All-Rookie team as a member of the Toronto Raptors this season.

The Executive Committee of the NCAA, which decided UMass' fate in Pebble Beach, Calif. earlier yesterday, agreed with UMass and the earlier decision of the NCAA's enforcement staff, which determined the University had no knowledge of any wrongdoing.

The committee's decision brought about disappointment on campus. Chancellor David K. Scott said that although the sanctions hurt the school and its fans, it can not take away from the basketball team's accomplishments and the endeavors of current student-athletes.

"Nothing can take away the University's pride in the hard work and achievement," Scott said of the basketball team. He said that there is "a great sense of loss for the University and its supporters," but that the school "will put this behind us and go forward."

Athletic Director Bob Marcum was disappointed, but not surprised by the announcement as well.

"It's shame so many people who were not involved in any wrongdoing have to share in the lost," he said. "We thought it would be somewhere between 40-45 percent of the [revenue] units that we earned and that's about where it fell."

The 45 percent of the five units UMass received totals $151,617.

Minuteman coach James "Bruiser" Flint could not be reached for comment.

Atlantic 10 Commissioner Linda Bruno said in a statement that the conference will seek no further action against UMass.

"The member institutions of the Atlantic 10 conference are fully supportive of the University of Massachusetts, its administration, coaches and student-athletes. Upon review, the NCAA found no lack of institutional control on the part of the University.

"Due to its cooperation in this matter and its history of compliance with the NCAA and the Atlantic 10 regulations, the Atlantic 10 has no plans to take any further action against the University of Massachusetts."

Material from the Associated Press was used in this article.

LEARNING FOR THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE
• LEARNING FOR A LIFETIME •

UMASS SUMMER SESSION 1997

Now is the time to advance your career, explore other options, plan for a new future, get ahead in your studies, or enrich your life.
• Hundreds of Credit Courses
• Workshops for Personal and Professional Enrichment
• Part-time Specialized Degree Programs–Bachelor's and Master's
• Professional Development Courses for Teachers

Classes held days, evenings, and weekends
• Session I: June 3-July 11
• Session II: July 15-August 21
• Variable Sessions

Call 413-545-0107 for a free course catalog or e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Find it on our website: http://www.umass.edu/contined/

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION • UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

SUMMER SESSION

College Students...
...while you're home for the summer, why not take a course or two at Fitchburg Stat College? In just a few weeks, you can earn credits in English, art, education, philosophy, psychology, sociology or computer science. Both graduate and undergraduate, our credits are transferrable to virtually any college in the country.

Summer Session I
May 27 - June 28
Registration: ongoing through May 29
Late charge assessed beginning May 13th

Summer Session II
June 30 - August 2
Registration: ongoing through July 1
Late charge assessed beginning June 17th

Register Today! Phone In • Fax In • Mail In or Walk In
(508) 665-3181 Fax 665-3658, E-mail: dgce@fsc.edu

PS...Call for information on exciting, amazingly affordable credit studies abroad in Rome, Italy and Hilo, Hawaii. Each program runs during the month of July.

Fitchburg State College
Division of Graduate and Continuing Education

Visit our Web Site at www.fsc.edu

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily

UNIVERSITY STORE

Present a Special
Graduation Section

Look for it... Tuesday, May 13, 1997 • Only in the Collegian

The Mill Hill Club
Route 28 West Yarmouth
Cape Cod, MA. 508-775-2580

Pub Menu
Pool Tables
Darts
Satelite TV
22 TVs

Open Daily at 3 pm Sat and Sun Noon

The Summer of 97
"night life on the cape"
the lineup includes:
The Slush Puppies
Lulus in Crisis
Alstonians
Mark Morris and the Cattunes
the cast of Beatlemania
the Marcels
Tyson Vs Holyfield
Coors Light Bikini Contest
Miller Lite Men's Hot Body Contest
Plus more great events!

College Week May 10th thru May17th
Must be 18 with proper ID
"Hurricane" Sat
"All College DJ Dance Party" Sun
"Blonde on Blonde" Mon
"Sheep Dip" Tues
"Cape Fear" Thurs
"Men From Heaven" Fri
all male dance revue show 9pm
Plus 96.3 the Rose DJ Steve McVie's Hot Dance Party at 11pm
"Frank Santos" the "R" Rated Hypnotist Sat

THE MADNESS CONTINUES WITH THE WORLD FAMOUS GORDIE MILNE HAPPY HOUR SATURDAYS 3 TO 8

Summer Jobs Available
• bartenders
• waitress
• cashiers
• keno operators
• floor staff
• door persons
• cooks
• immediate openings
Apply in person. No phone calls please

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Laura Forster • Photos by Ken W.P. Scott

Should the NCAA force the Minutemen to give up their spot in the 1996 Final Four?

"If that's how they have to punish the Minutemen, it's unfair but it's not unjust. I guess they have to, just like any administration which has to enforce."

Michael Ruusaa
senior, sport management
Searsport, Maine

"I don't think the team should be penalized, I think Marcus Camby should be. If the coach and team knew about it, then yes, they should lose their title."

Bruce Masters
junior, chemistry
Dallas

"No, they definitely shouldn't. I can see the fines, but having the title taken away would be a little too severe. I still show team spirit — it's UMass."

Courtney Simmons
freshman, School of Management
North Reading

"I think the rules should be changed. I do believe the athletes should get stipends and have a close watch on them. I don't think UMass should be penalized for Marcus Camby. Marcus Camby created the problem of taking the money, he knew he was breaking the rules, he should have to pay for it."

Drew Kenneally
senior, communications & economics
Boston

Why should everyone suffer for something that Marcus Camby did? I honestly don't think they should take away the spot for the team as a whole because Marcus couldn't do that alone. The chain is only as strong as its weakest link but we're entitled to make mistakes. I'm mad he did it though because now he's gone and they [Minutemen] have to suffer."

Jasmine Francis
junior, chemical engineering
Bronx, N.Y.

"I agree the NCAA should take away the Final Four spot, they should fine any team in violation. It's selfish, he [Marcus Camby] affects the whole school's program when he takes a gift."

Wilson Lee
junior, environmental science
Holmdel, N.J.

"I think if it's a serious violation of the rules they should take it away but they should take into consideration the player's hard work and the coach's and staff's hard work. Don't punish the whole school for something an agent was responsible for. What Marcus did, didn't affect their season."

Phil Farquharson
junior, sociology
Worcester

Breast cancer march in Noho

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

One in eight woman in the United States will develop breast cancer within their lifetime. This Saturday a March for Breast Cancer Awareness in Northampton, to raise awareness within the community, will be held, according to the Pioneer Valley Breast Cancer Network.

The march will begin at 1 p.m. on Bridge Street, followed by a rally with speakers who will share stories about their own or their close one's experience with breast cancer. The speakers will be at the Northampton Center for the Arts from 2–4 p.m.

Some of the speakers include: Betsy Scheibel, a Northampton District Attorney with breast cancer; Jeanne Eichler, who will speak about genetic testing; Kathy Tobin, a Channel 40 moderator; and Ellen Story, State Representative.

An exhibit will be set up for those in attendance to contribute photos, as well as tables displaying breast cancer/health information.

Deb Orgera, a founding member of the Pioneer Valley Breast Cancer Network, said the rally was aimed at "raising awareness, not money."

Orgera explained the "need to raise a lot of money to make it viable to researchers," as to why the Network was focusing on awareness instead.

However, petitions will be available for signing in support of those presently in Washington D.C. lobbying for about $720 million in appropriations to go towards breast cancer research.

Orgera pointed out that since 1960, more women have died of breast cancer than two times the amount of American's who have died in wars this century. Of these women, 48 percent have died within the last two years.

The Pioneer Valley Breast Cancer Network has been in existence for one year and was previously part of the Massachusetts Breast Cancer Coalition. This past year the Network published poetry about breast cancer, written by a member of the Network and which will be for sale at the march.

The Network has also sponsored plays and programs about breast cancer at Smith College. The Network's last event was a fundraiser/booksigning for the autobiography of Rebecca Lobo and her mother's book entitled, The Home Team, which deals with her mother's breast cancer.

The Network welcomes all to attend, rain or shine, to learn more about breast cancer "because one in eight women is too many."

UM prof. receives conservationist award

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts faculty member has been named 1997 Conservationist of the Year by the Massachusetts Wildlife Federation.

Professor Joseph Larson of the Wildlife Conservation Department, who is also director of the Wildlife Institute of UMass received the award at the organization's dinner in mid-April.

In being bestowed the award, Larson was recognized for his career in conservation and education. Over the years, he has served publicly, nationally and internationally. He has been active politically and has even helped draft legislation on conservationist issues.

In last November's elections, Larson opposed a controversial ballot question which would ban the use of leg hold traps for animals. The question passed despite Larson's objections, but he said that the issue is not over.

"The ballot question was a problem. It was a stand being taken without reference to the scientific research on trapping," Larson said. "There are going to have to be revisions to the law. This is something that's going to take time."

One of the issues involved with the question was the overpopulation of animals wreaking havoc on their environments.

"My students worked for 10 years on beaver behavior. We know something about beavers," Larson said.

Overpopulation of beavers can cause a number of problems in their areas, including plugging culverts under roads and flooding septic systems. A similar problem involves muskrats burrowing into dams of cranberry bogs. According to Larson the laws that have passed make it impossible to keep the populations down. He says the traps that the law allows are too big, expensive and dangerous for practical use.

Larson has also worked with the legislature to define the term "wetlands" in Massachusetts. He has worked internationally, defining what constitutes a wetland of international importance.

On receiving the award, Larson said that he was "totally surprised." He said that he was asked to attend a banquet in honor of a colleague, and only when he got there did he find out that the festivities were really for him.

"It's nice to receive recognition from people on the home front," Larson said.

Larson's current work involves bringing funding for environmental projects to the University by identifying new sources of funds.

READ the Collegian..
(on the web)

The line up in order of appearance:

• TRICK KNEE • • 702 •
JAZZ MANDOLIN PROJECT •
G. LOVE & SPECIAL SAUCE • • REDMAN

UPC Presents
Spring Concert

THIS Saturday
from noon 'till 6pm
CAMPUS POND LAWN

Gates open at 11:30

'97

$2 UMass undergraduate students available at Tix Unlimited in the Student Union. Students, please remember to bring your STUDENT ID with you to be admitted at the gate for the student price. Please buy your tickets in ADVANCE to avoid long lines at the ticket booth.

tickets are $15, available at: Tix Unlimited at UMass, For The Record in Amherst, the Northampton Box Office, and Strawberries Stores

the following items are NOT ALLOWED in the spring concert venue:
bottles, frisbees, projectiles, alcohol, weapons.
We will also not admit any cameras, or food into the venue, and please remember that the pond is NOT a swimming pool. Thank You.

in part by the UMass Arts Council, Newbury Comics, The Daily Collegian and WMUA.

provided by Scorpio Sound System, and staging by CSS

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig I. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareyu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prentes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Editor's Note: Today's Editorial/ Opinion focuses on the proposed formation of Honors College here at the University of Massachusetts. For complete coverage on the Honors College, check out the Collegian's website at www.umass.edu/rso/colegian.

A message from the President

Access to a quality education here at the University has become increasingly difficult to attain. Undergraduate students have little access to academic advising, work in poor classroom conditions and often have little interaction with their professors. The lack of investment that has been made by the state of Massachusetts into public higher education is offensive.

Due to these problems, I feel that the Student Government best serves the students it represents by focusing on the task of increasing access for all UMass students to a quality education. I believe that there is a desperate need to address the problems that we face with our university education.

Lia Wong

The Commonwealth College (or Honors College) that has been proposed by the Board of Higher Education is an attempt by the board to address the problems facing public higher education. The proposal calls for instituting a Commonwealth College to serve the academic needs of our most talented students.

The UMass administration has proposed that the college be located on the UMass Amherst campus and that a new building be built to house the college between Orchard Hill and Sylvan residential areas. The proposal would locate all honors students in Orchard Hill and Sylvan and calls for a major renovation of the dorms. The College would also offer more advising for honors students and increase the access to faculty for honors students.

I give credit to the board for identifying some of our problems and attempting to address them through a written proposal. However, I have concerns over the probable effectiveness such a college will have in addressing our needs as a campus.

I believe that the University of Massachusetts should not be a second rate institution. However, our problems as a campus will not be addressed by investing in only the students among us found newly gifted with 1300 SATs or high G.P.A.s. The problems we face are campus wide and therefore require a financial investment and commitment beyond that of a Commonwealth College for the entire campus.

In my opinion, the proposal threatens to divide the campus into two classes; those who have achieved the designation of "Commonwealth Scholar" and the rest of us. Does our campus really need an elitist college on the hill while the rest of our facilities fall apart?

Historically, the roll of the University of Massachusetts Amherst has been to serve the educational needs of the working class of the Commonwealth. Those of us that can't afford a private education depend on the public sector for our higher education. However, does this suggest that some students that attend the university deserve a better education than the rest of the campus? I believe that these students should be challenged, but I also believe that the entire campus deserves quality facilities, advising and access to our best faculty.

As your student representative I must take a stand on this issue. I believe that the Honors College proposal was written in good faith but is misguided. However, I am interested in receiving your input as students and members of the UMass community.

I invite you to forward all your concerns to the Student Government Office at 420 Student Union Building.

Lia Wong is the SGA President.

Chancellor Scott thinks you're an idiot!

Grades are in early this year folks and It Looks like UMass failed. We did so poorly that the Chancellor and the Board of Higher Education have decided to start over from scratch. Yep, new buildings, small classes, fabulous faculty, "challenging, exciting" curriculum, great advising, all the latest technology and access to every research opportunity under the sun. It's going to be called the "Honors College" and guess what, you won't have access to any of it. But never fear, it will change the world's perception of UMass and it will enhance your marketability after graduation.

Kristy King

According to the Chancellor, we shouldn't worry that we have to sit on the floor in some of our classes, that the professors don't know who we are, that we can't get decent advising and that UMass buildings are about to fall down around us. "Trickle down education" will take care of it all. The Honors College will bring in more research dollars. The Honors College will make a UMass degree look better. The Honors College will make the state legislature pay attention to UMass again.

Unfortunately, none of this addresses the quality of education as it currently stands. After the many meetings students have held with Chancellor Scott, Deputy Provost Norm Aitken, Honors Program Director Linda Nolan and the Board of Higher Ed's preeminent expert on higher education, Aaron Spencer, President of Pizzeria Uno, we have yet to discover how the Honors College will directly increase the quality of education at UMass. That's because it won't.

The Honors College will create an "Ivy League" atmosphere at this land grant institution. The classes will be smaller, more attention will be paid to individual student needs and the curriculum will be "challenging" and "exciting." Sounds good. But you can only go there if you are "academically talented," if you scored a 1300 on your SAT's and you're accepted into the program. Shouldn't the University want this "atmosphere" for everyone? Apparently not. According to Linda Nolan, many honors students find regular classes at UMass to be "remedial," and as such, unlike the current honors program which permits any student to take honors classes, classes at the Honors College will only be accessible to students who meet the standards set out by the Pizza King himself, Aaron Spencer. I guess Chancellor Scott's idiots can go on sitting on the floor somewhere in Thompson...

Not only will the Honors College pump out Rhodes Scholars by the dozen, but it will also attract "distinguished faculty" from all over the country. Luckily, Chancellor Scott thinks we do have a couple of decent professors at UMass already. You can kiss them goodbye though. In his budget proposal, the Chancellor writes that "faculty... will need to be reassigned from teaching and other duties on the main campus in order to teach in the College." They are actually going to take our professors away and replace them with teaching assistants. Norm Aitken assures us, however, that the only classes to be taught by TA's will be those where we actually get to have communication with the instructor; 500 person lectures will stay the same.

If all goes according to plan, Chancellor Scott will renovate the dorms at Orchard Hill to make them fitting living spaces for his "academically talented students," and build a shiny new building next door where they may take their classes. Proponents of the Honors College argue that the legislature will take an interest in this project and hand over $10 million for the creation of the new building and all the stuff the Chancellor wants to nurture his elite flock with. However, Aaron Spencer was uncomfortable speculating whether the legislature, once it approves the initial ten million, will continue to fund the Honors College. He attempted to persuade the students meeting with him that the only significant cost incurred by the College would be the renovations and the new building. Yet wiser heads prevail. Chancellor Scott has estimated the yearly operations cost of the College at well over $3.5 million and, when combined with the $200 million UMass already has in deferred maintenance, it seems to me that we ought to be worrying about who's going to pay for it all now.

It doesn't seem to make much sense to me to build a special new building for the "academically talented" when all the other buildings are falling down. It doesn't make much sense to me to give fabulous advising to a few Honors College students when the non-"academically talented students" probably need it more. It doesn't make sense to me to put forth an idea for the future of public education and only offer it to a few.

Let's not talk any longer in vague terms about raising standards and "selling" UMass. Let's talk about what an Honors College means. It means further division on an already divisive campus, it means classes taught by TA's, it means decreased access to education for "average" students, it means continuation of the status quo for the 14,000 "average" students milling about on campus, it means inequity, it means elitism and it means an acceptance of the superiority of appearances over education itself. The problems at UMass can be summed up by the reluctance of the State Legislature to offer its flagship institution sufficient funding and the failure of the administration to affect long term institutional change.

The Honors College will achieve one thing: it will improve UMass' "image" while the actual campus continues to fall apart. Unless students get angry and tell the Chancellor how they feel about his insulting proposal, the Honors College will come to UMass. If it does, I just hope that in between classes I will be able sneak past the guard dogs at the bottom of the hill and see the UMass that everyone is so proud of.

Kristy King is a UMass student

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Academics vs. elitists

It has come to my attention that members of the University are criticizing the proposal or an Honors College at UMass Amherst. Their complaints have covered everything from the proposed new building's site being too far from campus, to claims that the Honors College will classist, elitist, and racist.

Adam Nee

I can not believe that these accusations have been voiced, let alone entertained. First of all, the purpose of the Honors College is to create a program that would allow academically minded, hard-working students the opportunity to graduate from the University with a highly respected degree. The college will raise the standards of the University and the UMass system as a whole by attracting the brightest minds of Massachusetts, the country and the world to UMass and offer them an inexpensive way to get an education comparable to the renowned private schools in the state.

As for fears that this would draw support and funding away from the bottom margin of students at UMass, I counter that the new program will simply raise the performance level of the margin through better faculty, greater resources, and more diverse group of advisors and support staff, all drawn to the new opportunities available at this new prestigious University. In the preliminary proposal it states that graduating high school students would be admitted to the Honors College with a GPA of 3.5, a ranking of the top 10 percent of their class, and a 1300 or above on their SATs. I agree with the claims that the SATs are class biased and prejudice to students in urban inner city schools, but students would be able to enter the Honors College — and currently the Honors Program — as early as second semester freshman year with a 3.2 GPA. That puts all students on an equal playing field and shifts the focus from disadvantaged high school experiences to individual accountability in college.

There is a charge that the proposed Honors College is racist; that it gears its standards and requirements to non-minority students. The fact is the current Honors Program and proposed college do not — as expressly stated — discriminate based on gender, race ethnic origin, or anything except for academic performance and ambition. EVERY student has the opportunity to take full advantage of the benefits provided by Honors.

Students in opposition to the Honors College have also expressed concern about where the funding for the multi-million dollar building and its new advisors will be coming from. They seem worried about money being diverted from other sectors of the University to pay for the proposed college. First of all, this initial funding for the College is being awarded by the State Legislature and is not coming from another part of UMass. Also, if the funding is not there at beginning for the building, the Honors College will not be implemented. In terms of future financing, if the State Legislature stops funding after the building is paid for, what is wrong with diverting funds from other parts of UMass to help cover the cost of the new advisors and increased student membership?

The main focus of the University of Massachusetts and every other institution of higher learning is to provide a good education. Nowhere in the school charter is there mention of the establishment of arcades and barber shops, pool halls and school funded intramural teams, or residential area festivals and spring concerts. As nice as these things are, and I am a supporter of extracurricular activities, we need to remember the reason we are here: To be able to expand our area of learning overseas, to gain work experience through internships, to have unlimited access to library research materials, to be able to work with state of the art technology in all fields, and of course, to ensure a high level of success both personally and economically after graduation. All of these goals and more are expressly stated in the Honors College Proposal. Nowhere is there a mention or a sign of exclusion of exclusiveness based on anything but academicet.

As this final decision draws closer, please remember: If you want to improve your social life, join a country club. If you want to improve the rest of your life, support your University.

Adam Nee is a UMass student.

An honorable idea

I am writing today not only on my own behalf, but on that of other students at UMass-Amherst who are in favor of the proposal for a Commonwealth College on our campus. I have read the article in the Daily Collegian detailing the recent meeting between Aaron Spencer of the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education, and members of our Student Government Association. I am, therefore, aware of the tremendous opposition that this proposal has already encountered. However, I wonder whether the views of those of us in favor of the proposal have been fairly represented.

Lindsay A. Wagner

I am a Junior here at UMass, and over the last three years, the Honors Program has been extremely important, and extremely beneficial to me. According to what I have read, there are students on this campus that would think that because of this, I am pampered, and have had everything handed to me. I am here to tell those students just how false that is. I work extremely hard for every benefit afforded to me. I do not come from a particularly wealthy family, and so the Honors Program has offered me the individualized attention, as well as the intensive types of courses that I have sought at some of the more expensive private schools that I considered attending. I believe that the quality of the education that I have received here has been remarkable, and that it is largely due to the Honors Program. At any rate, my education has done well by the name of Massachusetts public higher education, which is why I am so vehemently in favor of the proposal of an Honors College.

The Commonwealth College would improve the reputation of the UMass system as a whole. Students graduating from UMass would find themselves attaining previously inaccessible goals, and I do not simply mean Honors students, but all students. A UMass degree would mean more.

As for claims that the Honors College would be racist, classist, and elitist, I can only say that I do not see this at all. Certainly, an Honors College would be academically elite, but is that not the point of such a program? Since the requirements of the college would be the same as the existing requirements, a 3.2 GPA, I fail to see the racism or classism.

I feel that it is unfair and unproductive that representative of the Honors Program have thus far been excluded form the decision making process. Perhaps if representatives of the program and representatives of the SGA could meet together, then we could see one another's views more clearly, rather than locking horns. Certainly I would be willing to have a discussion with members of the SGA, as I am interested in learning exactly why they are so opposed to this idea. This may be the only way to a true understanding.

Lindsay A. Wagner is a UMass student.

Help wanted - not honors

It is 11:15 a.m. and class has just started in Thompson 106. As you manage to maneuver your way down the aisle, you trip over another student sitting on the floor. Once again, there are not enough seats left to sit in, and the ones that are free are broken. As you take your designated spot on the floor, you feel your body temperature begin to rise. There is no air conditioning to help cool off the mass of people on a warm, spring day, and the room escalates to tropic temperatures. Finally, a woman, tired of straining to hear the aging professor's lecture, stands to leave. Quickly, you snatch her seat, anxious for the comfort of what a chair could bring. In your haste, you fail to notice the spring protruding from the cushion, and as you land with a thud, a sharp pain alerts you to the condition of your seat. So much for comfort!

Jodi Bailey

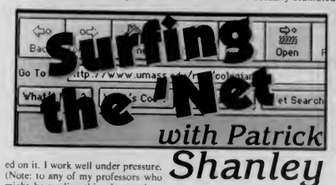
Throughout the remainder of the class, you observe the artistic patterns that a leaky ceiling has created with the water from the previous storm. You admire the way in which the paint on the walls slowly falls into graceful arches, and the Renaissance approach a fellow classmate has taken in order to provide the catchy "Save Ferris" phrase on the desktop. The class is winding to a close and the mass herd of students slowly emerges from the classroom. As you step outside to breath a sigh of relief in the warm air, a thought interrupts your moment of tranquillity, you have a class in Mahar that is going to be the same exact way that this one was. Slowly, you walk to class wondering why you have to put up with conditions such as he ones just faced.

Does this sound like a typical day at UMass to you? Well, you are not the only student feeling discouraged. The shape that our classrooms are in is atrocious. Did you know that the University has over $200 million dollars in differed maintenance on this campus? We as students have been expected to accept that the rooms are falling apart, and that because we attend a state school, there is little funding to help remedy the situation.

However, what if you found out that the state is willing to construct form the ground up, an entirely new, state of the art building and it will not cost toy a cent. Sounds like a great idea right? Well, there is a catch. You will only be allowed to utilize this building if you participate In the Honors Program here at school. As for the rest of us, we will still continue to learn in the out dated, over crowded and less than adequate facilities that have been here for decades. This seems fair right? After all, you are paying the same exact fees to go to school here as the Honors students are, and you get the privilege of having to deal with advisors and professor who only care about their grants, instead of the lives they touch every day. Why should the Honors students have to deal with these kinds of pressures? These select 3,000 students are supposedly going to be making a better name for all of us here at UMass, therefore they should have new professors and advisors who cater only to their students needs.

The Honors College proposal sounds wonderful for those students who will be able to utilize it to the maximum potential, but what happens to the rest of us? We too deserve the chance to succeed and show our academic prowess, yet how can we when we are not given the same opportunities? If the state wanted to truly create a better name for the students at UMass, then it should put the money back into the whole school where all students will be able to use the services instead of those elite 3,000.

Jodi Bailey is a UMass student.



Arts & Living

Friday, May 9, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Spring on the Web

This week on the Web

Spring is here, everyone is still tan from spring break, and finals are upon us. This time of year is probably the most busy time for students here at the University. So how do I find the time to venture to the Old Amherst Ale House, or play Sega for an hour, or surf the web to find new and exciting frontiers for you to explore? Simple. I wait until the day before something is due to get started on it. I work well under pressure. (Note: to any of my professors who might be reading this, the previous statement was not true. It was purely a coy remark used to make my column sound good.)

So, to all my fellow procrastinators, here are the bountiful sites that I have plucked from the Web this week.

Cybercinema
128.174.194.59/cybercinema

Have you ever wanted to know how computers and artificial intelligence have evolved and been portrayed in the media since around the turn of the century? This site contains just that. Every movie that you can think of, from 2001 to films like The Net, Johnny Mnemonic, Blade Runner etc. There are lots of nifty things that you can click on. Plenty of things here to look at and listen to.

The Simpsons (Official Site)
www.foxworld.com/simpindx.htm

Being a huge fan of "The Simpsons," I was really excited to find this site. I actually stumbled across the address in an article that I was reading. I forget, what the article was about and where it was, but I did write it down as soon as I saw it. Definitely check this page out if you are a fan of "The Simpsons."

Pee-Wee's Playhouse
www.peewee.com

Yes, I did watch "Pee Wee's Playhouse" on Saturday mornings. I will wager that a lot of you out there did too. There is a lot of silly animation, cute graphics and a chance to buy episodes of "Pee Wee's Playhouse" contained here.

War on the Web: War as a Game
aylic.com/War/wargame.html

This site is for those of you who have a little bit of General Patton in you. Contained within are links and descriptions of the most popular war games around such as Allied General, Civilization II and Command & Conquer II.

Fruitpunch Records
www.fruitpunch.com

This site is the home of self owned record label of the band Sway. The Fruitpunch page is a decently put together site. It gives history and information about the label and give links to various places including the Sway's page. Nothing really outstanding here, just another mediocre page from one of the numerous bands in the Amherst music scene.

Shock It To Me...Baby
www.spe.sony.com/Pictures/Sony Movies/shockit

I have to hand it to Sony Pictures

Turn to WEB, page 6

amc
There is a Difference!
$2.50 Pre-Live Show Day
• Special Engagement, No Passes or Coupons
Balances to Golden - No child under 6 as any PG-13 or R-rated film after 6pm.
MT. FARMS 4 • 584-9153
MT. FARMS MALL
Grosse Pointe Blank (R)
Warriors of Virtue (PG)
Father's Day (PG-13)
Austin Powers (PG-13)
Anaconda (PG-13)
HAMPSHIRE 6 • 584-7550
HAMPSHIRE MALL
Volcano (PG-13)
Liar Liar (PG-13)
Breakdown (R)
Romy and Michelle's High School Reunion (R)
Murder at 1600 (R)
Fifth Element (PG-13)

AT THE BIG E • SPRINGFIELD
Fri.-Thur. May 9-15 / Separate Tickets
7:15 for 7 Days only / NOW 9:10 Daily-4th week
Your AWARD WINNING SHORT FILMS spanning gay adolescence to manhood
Boys Life 2
TREVOR
Academy Award Winner
MUST BE THE MUSIC
Sundance-Sundance Film Festival
MUNDO'S SECOND COUSIN
Cinequest-San Jose Film Festival
ALKALI, IOWA
Best Short Film-Seattle Film Festival
A BITTERSWEET COMEDY ABOUT LOVE, SEXUAL IDENTITY, FRIENDSHIP AND THE PRECARIOUS BOUNDARIES THAT SEPARATE THEM
THE FUNNIEST, MOST HONEST SEX-COMEDY I'VE EVER SEEN
CHASING AMY
Sex is easy. Love is hard.
ACADEMY MUSIC Opera House 584-8435 NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

Silkworm doesn't match past expectations with their new release.
COURTESY MIKE HOFFMAN

Yo La Tengo & Elliot Smith: signs of a good summer

By Martin J. Keane
Collegian Staff

YO LA TENGO
I Can Hear The Heart Beating As One
"Autumn Sweater" EP
Matador Records

Yo La Tengo have never feared the unknown and what it might bring. They are the rare group that can experiment with different musical styles without sounding desperate, trendy or clueless. Bono and his mates could stand to learn a thing or two about artistic sincerity from this well-educated Hoboken, N.J. threesome. Unlike U2's latest piece of "pop" trash, I Can Hear The Heart Beating As One is a magical concoction of stylistically dissimilar songs that effortlessly flow together in a surprisingly coherent manner; although with 16 songs clocking in at almost 70 minutes, it is a bit long.

If there's one Tengo understand executes very wel musical atmosph Each song br mood, dynamics and points of ten sion and release. "Moby Octopad," has an eerie vib to it, as does t hypnotizing "Da An inspired cover of the Beach Boys' surf hit "Little Honda," and some silly Neil Young impersonations illustrate the band is also capable of playing it straight when the situation calls for it.

Yo La Tengo has contributed to movie soundtracks in the past--wit- portrayal of The nderground in last Shot Andy Warhol e instrumentals, n of the Hot ken," "The Lie and w We Told It" and pec Bebop," are orthy of such cine- tic use.

e first single, n Sweater," also ppears on a four song EP featuring three outstanding remixes done by some of the finest sonic masterminds in the business. It is an essential accessory to I Can Hear The Heart Beating As One. The choice of remixers — from members of the indie darling Tortoise, to techno wizard U-Zig and My Bloody Valentine's frontman Kevin Shields — are in and of themself representative of the eclectic style favored by Yo La Tengo. Instead of the usual monotonous remix concept, a repetitive and monotonous manipulation of the basic song structure, the new "Autumn Sweater" mixes fundamentally alter the album version to such an extent that a new song seemingly appears out of nowhere.

If good thing come to those who wait, then Yo La Tengo should finally break through to a much wider audience with these fine efforts. It's about time. A- / A

ELLIOT SMITH Either/Or Kill Rock Stars

Music today is filled with derivative clones who churn out hummable songs about nothing and become millionaires in the process. Seldom is music relevant, usually it's merely a reflection of the latest marketing

Turn to SILKWORM, page 6

Freakdown all over

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

SWEETBELLY FREAKDOWN
SVT
Jade Tree Records

Swiz is band only they're called Sweetbelly Freakdown. The Freakdown features Shawn Brown on vocals, Jason Farrell on guitar, Dave Eight on bass, and Alex Daniels on drums, which is the same line up as Swiz with Dave — which means that most hardcore aficionados have already stopped reading and have ran out the door to pick up this album.

Okay, enough about nostalgia, how about the music. It rocks plain and simple. Swiz was an innovative band who incorporated the heaviness and intensity of hardcore with a rock & roll sensibility that helped push them to the forefront of the hardcore scene. Sweetbelly is no different in their approach. In fact if Swiz never broke up and were still together today this is the type of albums they'd be releasing.

Sweetbelly play hardcore with a heavy DC influence. There are some songs on here that bear a striking resemblance to Fugazi, especially the Thirteen Songs album. However Sweetbelly loses some of Fugazi's intimacies for a more straightforward approach. This is particularly evident on the opening track "Pleas To The Action Figure." The song opens the CD with an intense sonic attack reminiscent of Black Flag or Deadguy at their more hardcore moments. The song also boasts some of the best lyrics

Turn to FREAKDOWN, page 6

Trax On Trax Off

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
Part Time Evening
Classes start June 9, 1997
Call UMASS, Continuing Education @ 545-0474
by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.

RESULTS resume
We know what employers want.
Resumes for the real world
► Written by a business executive
► Student rates, credit cards & checks
► Employer lists & cover letters, too
253-9055
In your back yard at 150 Fearing Street

Second Hand • Vintage • All Styles, Makes & Models
USED and RECONDITIONED
BICYCLES
Buy • Sell • Trade • Consign
Hampshire Bicycle Exchange (413) 586-4761
EVERY SUNDAY 9am-4pm at Jackson's Flea Market Mountain Farms Mall Route 9 Hadley, MA
open 9am-5pm • 18th year YEAR-ROUND • INDOORS
CURRENTLY ACCEPTING SPRING and SUMMER CONSIGNMENTS of GOOD QUALITY BICYCLES

Security Positions
Bright Moments Festival
July 10, 17, 24
You must be: A UMass student returning to UMass in the Fall and available to work the nights of the concerts and attend one informational meeting.
Pay is $5 per hour and free admission to concert.
For information call New WORLD Theater at 545-1972 before May 30th.

MODELS WANTED

PAUL MITCHELL DESIGN TEAM
FREE HAIRCUTS Color Products Long Hair Designs
Men are Welcome!
Join us at our Model Orientation!
at 6:00PM
HOTEL NORTHAMPTON
36 KING STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
Call 1-800-922-2310 for more info

UNDERGRADUATE TEACHING ASSISTANTSHIP AVAILABLE
DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS AND STATISTICS
$650.00 A SEMESTER
FOR APPROXIMATELY 10-12 HOURS A WEEK.
FURTHER INFORMATION AND APPLICATION FORMS SEE THE RECEPTIONIST
ROOM 1622 LEDERLE GTWR

APOLOGY

To begin my parents raised me right. They told me there are consequences to the actions I do. They taught me that playing with knives, guns and firecrackers are dangerous to me and others. They taught me to respect others property also. I thought I learned all these things from my experiences from growing up. From watching my friends get caught vandalizing mailboxes with firecrackers. To seeing a classmate's house burn down from an electrical outlet. To another classmate who crashes his motorcycle into a parked car and was parralized. Then myself, smashing my mother's car into a lightpost in a rainstorm.

So when me and some friends were sitting in John Quincy Adams dormitory bored of the football game we were watching. We decided to light off firecrackers in the room. Then we decided to light them in the trashroom. After lighting the firecracker we left the trashroom. A little later we heard the fire alarm go off then the sprinkler system came on and my friends and I left the building. As I was leaving I saw water coming out of the trash room. That is when I realized a fire had started where we were lighting firecrackers.

The fire started from me and my friends it damaged the elevator, the trashroom, and endangered hundreds of lives. There is nothing I can do to take that back. So what I will do is apologize for my foolishness and say sorry to the residents of John Quincy Adams. My actions put you in serious danger and caused destruction of your property which ended up getting me in legal trouble. Which got me to pay resolution of over five hundred dollars, and banned me J.Q.A. residence hall. These actions of my friends and I were wrong and I am sorry.

To the people lighting off fire crackers on the seventh floor bathroom of J.Q.A. STOP because it endangers many lives, destroys the property of others, and it could cost you a lot of money. The trouble you get in, the money it costs you, and the inflation housing cost. Making it more expensive for us to live on campus.

Truely Sorry,
Derek R. Lloyd

Summer goodbye for hardcore

Okay here it is — the year end column, I know some of you have been drooling waiting for this to happen. Doing this column this year has been a lot of fun for me, and I hope that it has been helpful, informative and interesting to all of you. Before I go into favorite moments, albums and shout-outs I want to share with you a couple of moments that I've experienced this year that have really helped show me what this hardcore thing is all about.

Above all, I've realized through this column what hardcore is not about. Hardcore is about being open minded, not only in the sense that you have to like everything, but you have to give things a chance. Although I don't like every album I get to review I've been opened up to a lot of different kinds of music. I've also met a lot of great kids through my column and am glad that it has helped open up a forum of communication between me and people I never would have had the opportunity to speak with.

While this column has come under some criticism, it's not something I shun. In fact it's nice to see that when hardcore kids see something they don't like they can bond together and try to voice their opinion on it.

Above and beyond all I learned that the hardcore scene is made up of a thousand different people, all with different personalities and different musical tastes. To me that is the essence of hardcore, we have to learn to except every band even if we don't like them (I do too) — if we want the scene to continue to flourish.

The other thing we have to do is learn to relax a little bit. Just because you read a negative review of a band you like doesn't mean you have to get all worked up, it's just someone else's opinion. If we truly want unity we have to learn to cfitill even if someone disagrees with us. I don't like metal but a lot of my friends do and it hasn't affected our relationships one bit.

To me hardcore is the greatest scene in the world, but we have a long way to go before it reaches it's potential. We have to realize that hardcore is an aspect of life that can really be helpful if we use it correctly. The virtues of hardcore like honesty, loyalty, and acceptance have to apply to all parts of the scene. That means no backstabbing, no talking behind people's backs, no tough guy stances, and above and beyond all no thinking that you're better than anyone else. Remember, "We're a minority and each one of us counts," (Agnostic Front). We must learn through communication with each other and open mindness, it's not a fashion show.

- Top Ten Hardcore releases of the semester (my picks)

1) KISS IT GOODBYE — She Loves Me, She Loves Me Not
2) TRIPFACE — Some Part Sorrow
3) HALLRAKER — Sessions 7" and Upcoming Cd
4) SICK OT IT ALL — Built To Last
5) SWEETBELLY FREAKDOWN — SNT
6) V/A — New York Underground Compilation
7) INDECISION — Unorthodox
8) STILLSUIT — At The Speed Of Light
9) FARENHEIT 451 — EP
10) KARATE — In Place Of Real Insight

Some of my favorite moments this year:

- Anytime I've ever seen Hallraker and doing back-up vocals on the new Hallraker CD.
- When H2O and Farenheit 451 showed up at my minuscule apartment in Northampton at 3 a.m. needing a place to stay. We had people sleeping on the kitchen floor and my two other roommates and I had to squeeze into one bed. It was one of the best nights of my life.
- When Madball and Merauder showed up at my next door neighbor's party. Krynn's face was priceless and Jenn definitely had the best time.
- Seeing the Afflictions live.
- Seeing the Descendents three times and actually getting to interview them.
- Ensign and Shutdown at Pearl Street. Not only was the crowd awesome, I have a lot of respect for the kid who — although I had never met him before — offered to drive me to the hospital when I dislocated my shoulder.
- Interviewing the guys from Barryt.

Thanks to: The Col. Matt Wang, Hallraker, The Afflictions, Karen Marsh (even if she never reads this paper) and Feen, The Rock, The Eastern Ave. Crew, Scott Lee, Mellissa, all my friends, anyone whose taken the time to read one of my articles and the entire hardcore scene.

- The last show of the year in Greenough is this Friday night. Hallraker, Flywheel, Just About Done and the Ambsace Engine will be playing. The show starts at 8 p.m. and is two dollars.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist

■ Silkworm

continued from page 5

craze that panders to the public's craving for mindless filth. Fortunately for those of us who yearn for music that means something, Elliot Smith exists.

Without the burdens of corporate rock weighing down upon him, Smith attempts, with great success, to pick up the pieces of a lost artform on his latest, Either/Or.

Destined to toil in obscurity, this Portland singer/ songwriter crafts pretty tales of despair and anger with acoustic guitar tunings, voice, and poetry all of his own. A modern day punk troubadour, Smith whispers in shrill falsetto lines like, "Grabbing onto whatever's around, for the soaring high or the crushing down."

On Either/Or, with songs like "Ballad of Big Nothing" and "Pictures of Me," one can sense, at least musically, a shift towards the positive in his material; a quality lacking on 1994's Roman Candle. The album even ends with a song entitled "Say Yes," to which Smith feels a change in himself and a newfound sense of maturity. "Now I feel changed around and instead of falling down/I'm standing up the morning after," and who can argue with that. A–

SILKWORM
Developer
Matador Records

The roots of Silkworm extend to the town of Missoula, Mont., a place not known for much of anything, much less rock n' roll. Over the course of five albums, they have conveyed their frustrations through oblique, often depressing songs that channel depravity in a way that leaves the listener in a state of metal debilitation.

They temper their tight, energetic guitar-bass-drums interplay with a bent for melancholy lyrics and hushed vocals. At their best, they blend the adrenaline rush of hard rock with the insight of coffeehouse insight.

Last year's excellent Firewater was essentially a concept album about the perils of alcohol but still managed enough self-assertion to keep the pace moving over the course of 16 songs.

Silkworm's latest Developer, while containing a breadth of tempestuous songwriting and rollicking riffs, falls flat. Songs like "The City Glows" and "Waiting On a Train" are worthy songs, but put up against earlier material, they lack any biting poignancy; a fundamental aspect of any band wallowing in this much anguish and self-doubt. C

■ Freakdown

continued from page 5

ever. Help me Obi Wan Kenobi. Jesus doesn't seem to be listening. You're the only hope I got left.

There is a certain desperation in Shawn Browns vocals that flow throughout this entire album. Shawn, who sounds a little bit like Ian MacKaye in his Embrace days, has never sounded better. His vocal presence and lyrics reflect the sound of a man drowning but manages to stay afloat. Especially on "Sugar High," I love you 'cause your legal. .not seen as a crutch. You're touch is killing me not so softly and I don't want to let go.

The band attacks gossipers on "Mudmouth" and do it in fine fashion. It's nice to see hardcore bands taking that lyrical angle without resorting to the rhetoric Youth of Today, Sick of It All, and all those bands made trite.

Throughout this album the band is constantly questioning the world we live in and our places in it. If the lyrics sound uncertain at times it is because the band also acknowledges that no can really know the answers to those questions.

While this is a great album there are some faults. This album only has nine songs and is 23 minutes long. That's fine for a hardcore album but one of the songs is a wasted instrumental and a lot of this sounds rushed. Furthermore while part of the beauty of this album is that the band sounds like they are about to fall apart at any minute but somehow manage to keep it together. While that works for the most part there are parts of this album that sound sloppy and nothing more. B+

■ web

continued from page 5

Entertainment. They have developed a site that is a la Beavis and Butthead antics. There are a bunch of stupid and sadistic games that you can play. If you have ever played Beavis and Butthead's Virtual Stupidity you'll know what I am talking about. For example, there is a game in which you can shoot spit balls at a teacher who is played by Jon Lovitz.

Virtual Vineyards
www.virtualvin.com

How many times have you been in the store trying to decide what kind of wine you should have with dinner? At the Virtual Vineyards all of your questions and shopping needs are fulfilled. From all the little gadgets to recipes and specialty foods. The only draw back about going to this site is that there is no sampling like at a real vineyard.

The Doctor Is In!
copper.usc.indiana.edu/~jbmorris

I was so pleased to find this page. I remember when I used to stay up with my older brothers and listen to Dr. Demento, the original king of loony humor music. This guy is the real deal, way before Weird Al Yankovic was ever singing "Like a Surgeon." There is a lot of stuff to look at here such as album covers, artist bios, and 25 years of playlists. You can find out which local radio station he is carried on and even send him requests.

Party of Five
www.cat.nyu.edu/tkball/salinger s

OH MA GOD! Like no way! Hey all you "Party of Five" fans, indulge yourself! You can download a screensaver, read about the cast's real life and movie projects and yet again send your letters of support to save the show.

Well that's it for this week. I hope that you have enjoyed surfing these sites as much as I did. Not! Next week I will be taking a look at something cool — what I don't know. On that note, I will leave you hanging.

Patrick Shanley is a Collegian columnist.

Sponsor spat means rain-out for kids' baseball team

By Garry Mitchell
Associated Press

LILLIAN, Ala. — The idea seems innocuous enough, even wholesome: young boys racing around a small-town baseball diamond, their dirt-smudged uniforms bearing the name of the local business that sponsors their team.

When the sponsor is a video store that rents X-rated tapes, however, it causes more controversy than a myopic umpire — and in this case meant the end of the Lillian Barracudas.

"Standing up for what you believe is pretty hard, but sometimes it's worth it," said 11-year-old pitcher Nathaniel Bartl.

The team, for boys under 12, was dissolved Wednesday to settle a legal fight between the Lillian Sports Association and parents who didn't want their sons acting as "human billboards" for C & J Video.

"A 10-year-old can't buy an X-rated video. Why should a 10-year-old advertise an X-rated video?" says Calvin Bartl, who is Nathaniel's uncle, the Barracudas' manager and youth pastor at the evangelical Alliance Church in nearby Elberta.

The sponsor, David Bryan, who like Bartl, has a son on the Dixie Youth Baseball team and has sponsored it for four years, says his rights to free enterprise have been trampled.

The dispute began when the parents of four players, including Bartl, filed a civil rights lawsuit defending their "Sincerely held religious beliefs." They said those rights included refusing to let their sons wear jerseys identifying C & J Video or its owner.

The store has been operating for about four years on a busy corner of U.S. 98, the main route through this unincorporated community near Pensacola, Fla. It's the only video rental store in Lillian.

COURTESY JOHN CLARK

Keep up with the Kinney

Sleater Kinney bring their pop punk sounds to the Iron Horse next Tuesday night. Look for these girls to rock your world and put a smile on your face — a perfect show to welcome in the spring.

Sidewalk Sales.
Tables of shoes
Racks of clothes
Baskets of jewelry
Thurs. May 8 to Sun. May 11
ZAVA downtown Amherst

WRITE FOR ARTS!
BOOKS MOVIES MUSIC THEATER MORE!

•Holland Bouquets
•Blooming Plants
•Spring Arrangements
253-5545
220 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst
We Deliver Anywhere
Always in Bloom

Language • Graphic Arts/Photography • Hotel/Travel/Restaurant Management • Mathematics/Physics • Media Technology • Office Administration • Social Science
Make the most of your summer by earning extra credit.
This year, use your summer vacation to earn more than tuition money. Sign up for courses at Bunker Hill Community College, and earn college credits that you can apply toward your degree.
Whether you want to accelerate your college education, or relieve the pressure of a heavy courseload, you'll find Bunker Hill affordable, and a great place to learn. We offer classes days and evenings, so it's easy to develop a schedule that lets you make the most of your summer.
For more information about the Summer Sessions at Bunker Hill Community College, call (617) 228-BHCC (2422)
We'll make it enjoyable and affordable to earn extra college credits. Call us!
BUNKER HILL COMMUNITY COLLEGE
Learning for the Real World
BOSTON • CHELSEA
BHCC is an affirmative action/equal opportunity institution.
Administration • Computer Programming • Criminal Justice • Culinary Arts • Foreign Language • Graphic Arts/Photography • Hotel/Travel/Restaurant Management • Math
Surgical Technology • Theatre/Art/Music • Allied Health • Biotechnology • Business

■ women's polo

continued from page 10

to Western New England to practice playing in a big pool.

"We don't have a whole lot of time, we are really only talking about eight workouts between now and next week," Newcomb said. "It's difficult for any athlete that gets this close to finals and has a major competition because your mind is in two different places."

The Minutewomen have had an extremely successful season, previously beating teams like USC. The last few tournaments have seen the women break and set new school records, including those for most wins in a season and most goals scored in a single game.

Earlier in the season, Newcomb stated that he had three goals for the team. So far, the Minutewomen have accomplished two of those goals: Winning New Englands and finishing in the top three at Easterns. The last goal on Newcomb's agenda: finishing in the top five at Nationals.

"That's one of those goals that is out there, but is attainable if all the pieces come together," Newcomb said.

UMass will be counting on some of its top players this weekend, notably Katie Grogan, a freshman from Costa Mesa, Calif. She has been a key to UMass' success this year, as both a strong offensive and defensive player.

"Katie is a solid, solid player, both offensive and defense," Newcomb said. "In the water she is a big time player."

JORMA KANGANEN / COLLEGIAN

Sweepin' into NCAA's

Octavia Brown and UMass now wait for Sunday's NCAA selection to find out where they will travel to in first round competition.

Red Auerbach gets promoted, patriarch now vice chairman

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — Red Auerbach still covets titles — the ones that you hang from the rafters, not the ones that you put before your name.

So the 79-year-old Boston Celtics patriarch didn't really mind when he was bumped to vice chairman yesterday to allow new coach Rick Pitino to take over as president.

"From a coach's point of view, every job you take is just a matter of when you're going to get fired or when you're going to leave," Auerbach said after a news conference to introduce the new coach.

"I'll do what I've always done: Just be available. At my age, to get a promotion, that's pretty good."

Auerbach was the Celtics coach from 1950-66, leading the team to nine of its record 16 NBA titles and then guiding them as general manager before he stepped into the president's job in 1984. Since then, he has taken a limited role in the day-to-day operations of the team and has moved to Washington D.C.

"He's finally taking that promotion we've been begging him to accept," owner Paul Gaston said of the cantankerous Boston institution. "He is not retiring. He is going to continue to be a pain in the ass for years."

Pitino sat alongside Gaston on the dais while Auerbach, smoking his trademark cigar, sat on the side next to the new assistant coaches and Pitino's wife and son. But Pitino, who replaced M.L. Carr, said there will always be room for Auerbach's advice.

"There's only one man who's responsible for all these banners, and that is coach Auerbach," he said. "I have my weaknesses, but striving for power isn't one of them. I'm a coach."

Pitino said he became a basketball fan when he was 6 years old. One of the reasons was a Celtics mystique dominated by Auerbach and Bill Russell, and later Larry Bird.

Bird, a Celtics' special assistant since he retired as a player in 1992, was offered the general manager's job but he instead accepted an offer to coach the Indiana Pacers.

Auerbach commended Gaston for landing Pitino, predicting that the Celtics' years of struggles would soon come to an end. That's good news for the lifetime Celtics who probably took the losing harder than most.

"It's never easy to lose," he said. "That's who I have such admiration for M.L. He coached every game to the hilt."

■ Pitino

continued from page 10

thing."

Understandably, Pitino will have to make some personnel changes, however, he sees promise in some of his current players.

"I fully expect Dino Radja to be a great player. Dana Barros, who can flat-out shoot, will have a lot of fun in this system," Pitino said. "Antoine Walker, I feel, will be a future All-Star [under this system]. I don't want to leave anybody out, they will all play a part. They will understand what it means to put that jersey on."

The biggest personnel question concerned basketball legend Larry Bird who currently works with the Boston management. With a coaching vacancy in the Indiana Pacers organization, speculation emerged as to whether Bird will remain in the Celtics' front office or move to the Pacers' bench.

"We would love Larry Bird to be with the Boston Celtics, but that's a career move for him," Pitino said.

Last night any hope of Pitino landing Bird was dashed when the former Celtic accepted the Pacers coaching position.

■ men's lax

continued from page 10

Langtry (15 goals, 11 assists, 26 points). Silent in the March 22 tilt against UMass, Langtry scored five goals and had three assists in the final three games of the regular season.

More seasoned players senior Paul Judge (21g, 13a, 34 pts) and junior Jarred Testa (21g, 3a, 24pts) will also be expected to shoulder the Dutchman offensive burden.

In net, senior goalie Mark Spruyt will get the call. After injuries kept him out of the 1996 season, Spruyt has returned to post a 6.82 goals-against average and a .668 save percentage.

Regardless of who is one the field for their opponent, the UMass players recognize the job at hand.

"The game's going to come down to heart and desire and who wants it more," junior defenseman Harold Drumm said. "I know we do."

Legend Larry returns to Indianna to coach Pacers

By Hank Lowenkron
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Larry Bird, who did just about everything a player can do on a basketball court, will try his hand at something new in his own back yard: coaching.

Bird, who led the Boston Celtics to three NBA championships and had been an adviser for the team since retiring in 1992, has agreed to coach the Indiana Pacers.

"I'm very excited about this opportunity to go back home and coach the Indiana Pacers," Bird said yesterday in a statement. "Indiana is the only team I wanted to coach, and I am excited about this new challenge and new career."

Terms of the deal were not released, although earlier reports said it was worth at least $4 million a year for the native of French Lick, the southern Indiana town about two hours from Indianapolis.

It will be the first coaching job on any level for the 40-year-old Bird, who led Indiana State to the NCAA championship game in 1979. The Pacers will formally introduce him as the coach at a news conference Monday at Market Square Arena.

Pacers president Donnie Walsh, who contacted Bird about the position even before Larry Brown resigned as coach of the Pacers, isn't worried about Bird's lack of experience.

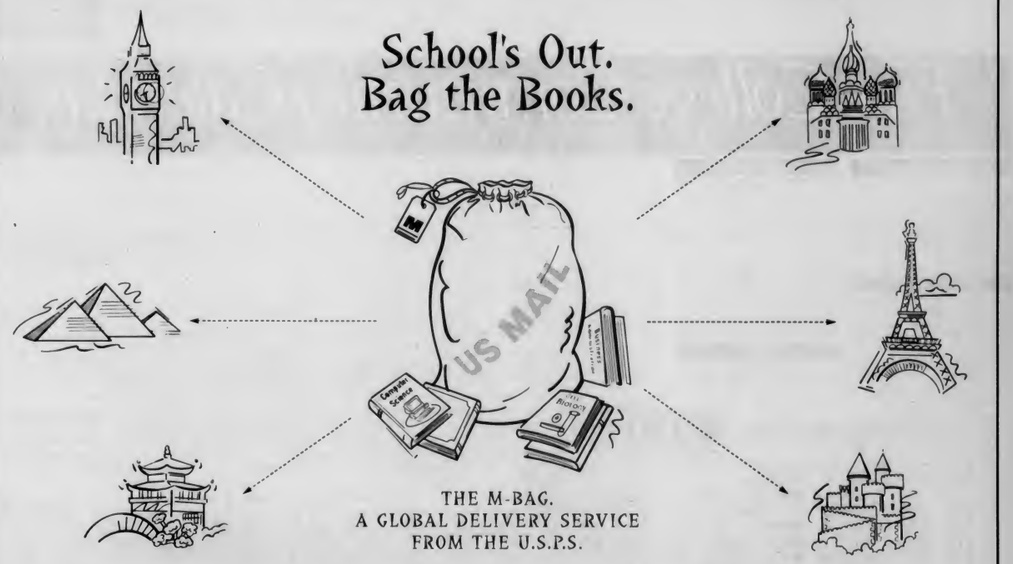
"He looks at the game from more of a coach's mind than a player's mind," Walsh said. "He's a very bright guy and a very honest guy, as well as a very tough guy. All those qualities add up. He'd be very successful anywhere he went.

"In the case of a Larry Bird, simplicity may be the best form of an announcement: He's back home again in Indiana," Walsh said. Pacers co-owner Herb Simon also wasn't concerned about Bird's lack of coaching experience.

"I'm not a basketball man and I depended very heavily on club president Donnie Walsh on the hiring of Larry," Simon said. "Walsh is very impressed with Larry's potential. Bird was motivational as a player, his basketball intelligence is unquestioned.

"It's always a risk when you hire a new coach, but I'm very comfortable with the decision to hire Larry."

Bird's major responsibility for the Celtics had been scouting, but he was the one who first talked to Rick Pitino about leaving Kentucky to become Boston's new coach.



At a news conference in Boston on Thursday, Pitino said he wanted Bird to stay with the Celtics and act as a general manager who would also scout and help out in practice.

"We'd love Larry Bird to be a part of the Celtics," Pitino said before the Pacers made their announcement. "Larry Bird epitomizes Celtics pride. Whatever title he wants, he can have." But the lure of being a coach was apparently too strong for Bird, who earned the nickname "Larry Legend" in Boston.

"It's a career decision for him of whether he wants to be in the front office or whether he wants to be out there coaching calling timeouts," Pitino said. "If he wants to coach, then that is something we'll wish him well on."

Red Auerbach, who announced his resignation as president of the Celtics on Thursday, agreed.

"He'll do well at anything because he's bright and he's very motivated. When he has a purpose to do something, he does it," said Auerbach, whose decision to select Bird as an undergraduate when he intended to stay in college for his senior year proved to be one of the best of his career.

School's Out. Bag the Books.

THE M-BAG.
A GLOBAL DELIVERY SERVICE
FROM THE U.S.P.S.
Here's a cool way to send your books overseas or across the border. Bag the books in our nifty M-Bag, once you have wrapped and addressed them, we'll speed them to virtually any destination on the planet. That's everything from the unabridged history of the world to alternative comics, 11 to 66 lbs.* worth, starting at only 64 cents a lb. And with the cash you'll be saving, you might be able to send yourself home, too.
GLOBAL DELIVERY SERVICES
UNITED STATES POSTAL SERVICE™
To pick up your bag, drop by the local Post Office at:
Amherst Financial Station 141 North Pleasant St., Amherst, MA • Amherst Post Office 145 University Dr., Amherst, MA
*Bags weighing less than 11 lbs. shipped at the 11 lb. rate.
© 1997 USPS

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Discuss valuable teaching experience and enhance your resume. Volunteer to teach Contraceptive Education Workshop at University Health Services. Call for more information about Feb 97 opportunities.

APPARTMENT FOR RENT

3 bedroom renovated- Pelham Fall Option. $640. Heat Incl. Washer included. Furniture available. FREE CABLE FOR SUMMER. 549-5079.

North Amherst basement apartment 3 miles, UMass/Town. 10 or 20 hours work in exchange for rent. 253-4113.

Summer Sublet with Fall Option 2 bedroom, spacious Brandywine apartment. Free rent for August! Call 549-5758

Spacious 1 bedroom $430/month incl. heat, hot water. Available June 1st. Call 256-0283.

Uptown Apartment- Starting June 1! One bedroom, laundry facilities, parking. Very affordable! Call 253-7139.

1 bedroom available 6/1 On bus route. 5 minute walk from campus 549-3562

Three bedroom- Northampton On bus route $750. Available 6/1. 585-7515

APARTMENT IN TOWN! 1 bedroom. Take over our lease with Fall Option. Call 253-6694

3 bedroom Available 6/1. 1010 N Pleasant #3 549-4142

Nice 2 bedroom apt. Available June 1- 10 min walk to campus. On bus route. Call 548-7535.

2 bedroom apartment Available 6/1 $700 253-5799

Take over my lease at The Boulders! $20 off first month's rent and FREE rent in July. Call Jeff at 253-7872.

Cooler of town 1, 2 bedrooms. Gas, heat, hardwood floors. 253-7879.

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550 2 bedroom- $425. 20 minutes from campus- no bus. Available for Sept. 665- 2203

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept. at Sayers Village. 665-2203

AUTO FOR SALE

Honda Prelude SI 87, white, standard, excellent condition. $1200 negotiable. 549-5762. Donnie I save message.

1979 VW Bus Runs good. $800 or B/O. 586-3074

89 BMW 325is Coupe black, auto, looks/runs awesome. $5000. Josh Fox (days) 617-742-8080 (eve). 428- steering@17-489-3002

1986 Subaru Station Wagon Great shape, low miles, new tires, alignment, and tune-up. $1500 or best offer. (413)498-5856

Toyota Corolla GSI '96 Manual, 4 door, loaded. Less than 6000 miles. Dark green silver. Leaving country. Must sell. 549-2984

Mazda RX7 1984. 5 speed. SP. Extra Red. 1986 power sunroof/steering. A/C, electric windows. AM/FM cassette. Equalizer. Sport Rack and Bar. $5400. Call 549-800-3245

AUTO FOR SALE

'85 Volks Fox Nothing but highway miles. Very clean. Very rel-able. $2500 or B/O. 549-8221 Leave message

'85 Nissan Maxima Station Wagon Good shape. Includes insane music system. Call 546-2007. Ask for "J." It's a luxury college car. Sunroof/CD/Power Everything

92 Eagle Talon red/black, standard, power windows/locks, moon roof, 98K miles. $7000 or B/O. 549-8102 or 323-4888

EMPLOYMENT

SNIPER/RECEIVER
Summer Position
Millitech Corporation of South Deerfield has a summer position available for a person who can work 30-40 hours per week for June, July, and August. You must be able to pack electronics for shipping and prepare all the paperwork necessary for both shipping and receiving products, equipment, and supplies.
To apply for this position fax or e-mail resume by May 16th to Director of Human Resources: Fax# 413-665-0985 e-mail hr@millitech.com

Mullins Center seeks students for '97-'98 season to work part-time: late nights, weekends, and holidays for changeover and post-event clean-up. Stop by Mullins 2nd floor to fill out application.

Cape Cod Restaurant Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train. Housing available. P.O. Box 1226, Eastham, MA 02642 Fax (508)255-1374 Call (508)255-5304

Assistant Manager- Cape Cod Restaurants Good opportunity. Will train. Housing available. P.O. Box 1226, Eastham, MA 02642 Fax (508)255-1374 Call (508)255-5304

Earn up to $3000 part-time in just 4 to 8 weeks. Momentum needs one highly motivated individual to direct summer sales/marketing project at UMass Amherst. Contact David (800)563-8854

Earn $2k+ Per Hour P/T: Currently hiring college students to process business envelopes for mail-order company. Earn $1 per piece processed. Work from home with no experience required. For FREE info send #10 SASE with phone/ school and e-mail address to: The National Mailhouse. Dept. 2441, POB 13488, Atlanta, GA 30324 or e-mail to gomonet@aol.com . Allentown Dept. 2441 is open!

Tutors
Bilingual Tutors/Translators needed for part time paid assistance to students speaking Japanese
Contact
Debbie Zocarski or Corinne Cappelli at 413-549-3690
Amherst Public Schools
170 Chestnut St.
Amherst, MA 01002
An Equal Opportunity
Affirmative Action Employer

Summer Jobs For The Environment! $2500-$4000/summer. Work with MASSPIRG to stop pollution. Ideal job for college students and others. Career Opportunities. Make a difference this summer. Call Tom 256-6434

Painters experienced in all phases with at least 2 seasons experience with rollerbrass $8.25/hour. Call 256-0851.

Engineering/Technical Graduate Students wanted to sell instrumentation to campus labs. Commissions/ lucrative. Alric at Scientific Toll-Free (888)780-8080

EMPLOYMENT

Restaurant Help: Cooks, dishwashers, waitpersons. Part-time year round preferred. Full service experience necessary. Applications only at Walker's Grill, 41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst. No calls please.

SUMMER HELP
EARN EXTRA MONEY!!!!!!!!
FLEXIBLE HOURS!!!!!!!!
SPEND YOUR SUMMER IN BOSTON!!!!!
STARTING PAY $9.00 TO $11.00 PER HOUR
PLUS TIPS!
IF YOU ARE ATHLETIC, MOTIVATED, A NON-SMOKER,
ENJOY HARD WORK AND A WORK OUT PLEASE GIVE US
A CALL OR COME IN.
PLEASE CALL GENTLE GIANT MOVING AT 617-661-3333

RETAIL SALES

Sales Staff- BA/hr + Commission
Guaranteed Minimum BA/hr
Cashiers, Stock Clerks- BA/hr
NAMCO, one of America's largest retailers of store ground pools, has immediate openings in the following locations:
Avon, MA- 508-588-4534
Billerica, MA- 508-663-0848
Enfield, CT- 860-741-0727
Framingham, MA- 508-875-0193
Hanover, MA- 617-826-7799
Springfield, MA- 413-736-4994
Swansea, MA- 508-675-0777
Worcester, MA- 508-798-3753
Candidates should possess a customer-focused "can-do" team spirit. We offer a very competitive pay plus commissions. For additional locations in Connecticut or Southern New Hampshire call 800-548-3660 ext. 216

Residential Summer Camp Counselors Wanted by Nature's Classroom. Live-in position. Available in Massachusetts to anyone who has early bus being with kids. 1-800-423-8375

Part-Time Positions available for hard-working, dependable people starting May 21/Competitive wages. If interested contact Justin 549-1128

Summer Childcare Two children, ages 11 and 14. $5/hour. Must have car. 256-1229

Painters Wanted Earn $3000-$5000 for summer. Westwood, Dedham area. Call Mike 549-3758

Bar or Waitperson Apply in person The Pantech- 127 Elm St., Northfield.

University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales Marketing and PR experience. Call 1-800-743-5066 ext. 122

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with star copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money too. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 202 Bleecker St.- 040 NYC NY 10014

Environmental Sales, Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call. (413)527-7560.

FOR RENT

Renovated, Fully Furnished 2 bedroom apartment at Pelham. Available 6/1. Call Rafael 549-4529

Wanted: 2 or 4 people to sublet or take over our 3 bedroom apt. starting June 1st. Call 549-5362

Large 2 bedroom Pelham Apt. Available 6/1 Call Maria 549-0287

West Yarmouth Large house. 4 bedroom. 253-7438 or (508)775-4776

Spacious 3 bedroom apt. on bus route, 2 full baths. Heat/HW included. 1st Floor/Patio. Fills it easy. Starts 6/1 to 7/31. 253-7297

2 bedroom apt. Main St. $735. Heat and Hot Water included. Great location. Available 6/1 Call 253-0360

1 bedroom Take over lease. Colonial Village. Starting June 1. $430/month. 253-0313

3 bedroom house close to Uptown. Big back yard. Call 549-6510

Take over our lease! 1 bedroom On bus line Available Aug or Sept. Call 665-5181 or email summer275@aol.com

Rent in Brandywine Call 549-0319

2 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September. Lease $700+. 253-7879

FOR SALE

'88 Tiokan- May 31 Giants Stadium, NJ. Call Jon 253-0028

Large computer desk for sale $50. Call Dave at 253-7020

Senior Graduating Selling bed, desk, and more. Call Sales 546-7017

Apple Powerbook 150 with Dare 2 1 $450 or B/O. Call 549-2907

Tag Sale- Great bargains, furniture, 3 piece sectional- sofa bed $150. Appliances, toaster oven $5, toaster,oven, clothes, etc. 950 N. Pleasant, Rotary, Presidential- Apt. 1-5pm. May 10 + 11. Alternate rain location- 83 Presidential St. 548-2084

APBA Audio System $750 P-188 Full Package PC $1200. Sharpe VCR $110 (4 heads), Digital Answering Machine $20 or B/O. 256-0787

3 Coaches For Sale 2 Lovaseats + 1 Huge Couch. Lawn Furniture, 2 Lounges + 2 Chairs w/Park, Charcoal Grill. Come check it out and make me an offer! Craig 253-3338

FOUND

Found- A Packaged T shirt w/Boozy Boss table. Name on bag was Ole Ann. Call 8-7238

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Birthday Jon Wall Love, Mom and Dad

HOUSE FOR RENT

House For Rent $1700 per month. 4 bedrooms, one-half miles from Mullins Center. Gas heat. Call 253-7819

LOST

Have you found a change-purse? Lost somewhere in Machmer or around Student Union. Small, turquoise and grey stitched. Please call Amy at 253-5408 if found. Reward!!!

MISCELLANEOUS

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call 1-800-472-3575 ext. PS0018.

Graduation Weekend- Beautifully furnished room available. Fifty dollars a night. Call 256-1938

PERSONALS

Jon, The more I get to know you, the more I want to know you. Can we talk? The Girl Next Door

Jon, I'm thinking of you, too. - Love, Julia

Mon, RT, Sis 4 years! Where have they gone? Bleeding lips, many men, DC, ATR, uptown, Pigdog, Ghetz Boss. Too much alcohol, so much fun. With laughter and some tears we are out of here. I love you kiki family. Thank you for the best years of my life. Love the Crankbaby

ROOM FOR RENT

Beginning September Walk to UMass. Furnished, large quiet, comfortable. Male Grad/Professional. $74/week continuously through May 1998. 549-1578

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Putters Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+. Call 253-4654 for more info

1 large room in two bedroom apartment. Looking for two females. Available 9/1 and Fall and Spring Option. On bus route. Very spacious. Great location. Call 548-3992

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Putters Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+. Call 253-4654 for more info.

ROOMMATE WANTED

I need a roommate to share a two bedroom apt. in Sunderland for Fall (undergrad, grad, or foreign student). Must be responsible. No drugs. Call Anson 548-5812.

Free room and board in exchange for babysitting. Must have experience and car. Available Summer with Fall and Spring Option. In Holyoke (30 min. ride) 538-5118.

Need third person Rent app. Two family house. All utilities included. Call 253-5985.

Looking for 1 female to share cheap 2 bedroom apt. for summer. Located on Sunset. Call 546-9407.

Need a place for the summer? We have 1 room available in Puffton/ Male or female. 1 or 2 people. Call 549-8513 Ask for Jessica for more information. Or Drive at 549-8102

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office- 822 Campus Center. 545-1995.

SERVICES

Rabbit Rescue can help! Don't abandon your bunny! Call us, we'll find him a new home. Ellen 367-0105

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths. Available June 1st. ONE MONTH FREE! Call 253-6467

3 bedroom, fully furnished house on Sunset Ave. 1-5 people. Great location. Less than 1 minute walk from campus. Call anytime 549-2898

Renovated 3 bedroom apt. in Sunderland. Furnishings negotiable. Washer/Dryer, carpeting, pool, waterbed! On bus route. Great deal! Call 695-5060

Mill Valley- 2 bedroom, 2 bathroom, 2 air conditioners. Fully furnished! With Fall Option. Call 253-6660

3 bedroom Pelham Apt. Great price. Available 6/1. Call 8-6605 or 8-5681

Phillips St. House June 1-Sept. 1. Price negotiable. Option of 1 to 4 bedrooms. Call 549-9224

Summer Sublet available 6/1 to 8/31. 1 bedroom in townhouse one block from bus, laundry, and downtown. Nonic. Great house, big room. A steal @ $300 per month. Option to renew lease. Older, for grad student preferred. Smoking OK. If interested, call John, Ken, or Chris @ 584-8680.

Sublet 6/1 to 8/31 on Nonic near Pearl St. and Morris. 2 bedroom. $650+/month. Call 586-4388

Nice room in 4 bedroom apt. Great house. Great location. $280/month. Call Yvonne 549-1827.

3 bedroom apt. Brandywine. A/C. $750 Partly furnished. Available 6/1.

2 bedroom apt. Starting June 1st with Fall Option. Heat/Hot Water included. $710/month. Call 549-5272

2 bedroom apt. Starting June 1st with Fall Option. Newly carpeted. $775 a month. Two minute walk to bus. Call 549-5329 Ask for Jess or Mandy.

1 room available in 2 bedroom apt. On-site laundry. With Fall Option. On bus route. Rent $395. Last month's rent negotiable. Call 256-0217.

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. Rent negotiable. 549-1310

10th Century House in Belchertown. 3 bedrooms, furnished. Close to lake and trails. Great price! 323-9572

Summer Sublet with Option Uptown 1 bedroom. 5 min. walk to campus. $515. Call 256-0251.

Large bedroom in 5 bedroom house. On Route 9. $267 a month. Call 256-8243.

Spacious 3 bedroom Available 6/1. Heat/Hot Water/Gas included. Minutes from UMass. On bus route. $960/month. Call 549-4182/ Fall Option.

Share 2 bedroom apt. at Colonial Village for the summer with female. 253-7241.

1 bedroom in 3 bedroom apartment. Laundry and Gym on site. Quiet female non-smoker. No pets. $375, includes heat and hot water. 253-6426.

One room in 4 bedroom house in North Amherst with four males. $225/month. Rent and move-in negotiable. 548-9130.

SUMMER SUBLET

1 bedroom in a 4 bedroom spacious Hadley farm house. Must see. Starts June or $250. Call 549-1018.

3 bedroom apartment with Fall Option. Call 549-4091.

CHEAP 2 bedroom Balcony, A/C, Brandywine. $950. On bus route. 548-7080.

Cheap 3 bedrooms near Putters. $175 per month per person plus utilities. Available 6/1. Call 546-7068.

FREE RICE! Single rooms. Alpine Common. Utilities included. Best Offer! 256-1834.

Large room in house on Main St. Great for 2. $400/month. Call 253-1680/ 548-8915.

Sunny 3 bedroom 2 bath. Fall Option. Mill Valley. 549-1227.

TRAVEL

Valley $925/negotiable 253-0551.

Room Available 5/15 Great location near Amherst Center. $350 includes all utilities. (201) 670-8228 Leave message.

3 bedroom newly renovated apartment Puffton Village. Best Offer. Available 6/1. Call 549-5405.

Sublet or Take Over Lease 6/1. 2 bedroom Brandywine. Recently renovated. 549-5132.

House with 3 bedrooms available On bus route in Hadley. 1 bath. $170 a month + utilities/ea. Call Paul 587-0471.

Summer Sublet Starting 6/1 $325/month. 1 mile from campus. 546-3352 Female only.

Great one bedroom apt. for Summer Sublet w/Fall Option. Colonial Village. Available June 1st. $400/month. Call now at 256-0680.

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Available 6/1 w/Fall Option. 549-4493.

3 bedroom apt. - Boulders Newly renovated. Hot water included. $780. Great place. One mile from campus. Call 253-6870. Ask for Alyssa or Amy.

Summer Sublet- Fall Option One room Brandywine— Sublet one room or whole apartment. Newly carpeted. Free gas and heat. Bus route. 549-8087 or 549-7898.

Sublet- Sunderland PVTA stops at house. Considerate housemates. One bedroom $284/month. 665-9388.

1 bedroom available in furnished 4 bedroom house. Starting 5/31. Two miles from campus. Interested call Andrew 549-2896.

3 bedroom apt. Puffton. Renovated. Heat/Hot water included. Only $860/month. Available 6/1 call 548- 1449.

Mill Valley 2 bedrooms. Heat/Hot Water included. Available 6/1. With Fall Option. 253-8534.

3 bedroom- Boulders Includes A/C and water. On-site pool. Available 6/1. Call 256-0986 ASAP.

2 bedroom in 3 bedroom apt. in South Amherst. 2 bathrooms. Rent negotiable. Call 253-8806.

Sunny Spacious House Two bedrooms, even attic. Great summer location with hiking and bike paths- deck and backyard. 5 miles from UMass. 256-6338.

SUMMER SUBLET

Sublet $280 a month in Amherst. On bus line. Call Andy 253-5462.

One bedroom apartment on bus line. $650/month. Call Trave (617)247-2388.

1 bedroom in a 3 bedroom apartment. Available June-August w/possible Fall Option. $250/month. Call Ann at 584-1479.

Puffton! One large room and one small room in 3 bedroom apartment. Call 549-8999.

Single, double, triple rooms in big 3 floor house on edge of campus. 3 bath, 3 shower, kitchen, cable, utilities. Only $500 all summer. Available May 23. Call Fabio at 548-7078 for info.

TO SUBLET

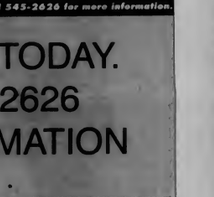
Close 3 bedroom in Brandywine A/C, pool. 6/1 with Fall Option. $900. On bus line, UMass, one mile. 548-0879.

CHEAP! 2 or 3 bedrooms apt. Main St., Amherst. HUGE backyard! Call Sam or Joe at 546-3798.

Apt. For Cool!! June 1st. $405/month Utilities! Not far from campus (ES)! Will go quickly! Veronica @ 256-0805.

Need a place to sublet for summer? Nice little cheap room- $230 + utilities. Call 548-8221 for more info.

5 month sublet June 1 to January 1. Single bedroom apartment at Puffton Village. Rent is $535 per month. Includes heat and hot water. Call 549-0096.



Two females looking to sublet. Fall Semester only. Call Katy and Rene 548-3114.

Heat and Water included 2 bedroom. A/C. $650/month. Starts June 1st. Fall Option. Furnished. Call 549-4324. We can accommodate any needs.

WANTED

Jazz Band needed Sat. May 17. Call 253-4520.

JOIN OUR 'GLOBAL VILLAGE'
1 yr. International MBA
3 Countries & Languages
Financial Aid &
Job Market
Call Texas Graduate School of International Management
(512) 888-5441
9 June Enrollment

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, MAY 9

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe, Mission Improvable, will be holding their end of the year shows today, Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174. A special guest comedy troupe will be performing with them each night. Free and open to the public.

SATURDAY, MAY 10

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe, Mission Improvable, will be holding their final end of the year show tonight at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174. A special guest comedy troupe will be performing with them each night. Free and open to the public.

SUNDAY, MAY 11

Concert — A University Chorale Concert, under the direction of Dr. Richard Du Bois with Dr. Fred Tillis, will be held in Bowker Auditorium at 7 p.m. Free for UMass students.

Film — The UMass Science Fiction Society presents a free Movie Marathon in the Campus Center Auditorium starting at noon (and again at 5 p.m.) with Hareway to the Stars; A Princess Bride at 12:30 p.m (and again at 8 p.m.); Day the Earth Stood Still at 2:30 p.m.; Enemy Mine at 5:30 p.m.; and Army of Darkness at 10 p.m. Open to the public.

NOTICES

Theater — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently accepting applications for Artistic Team positions for their fall 1997 productions of The Who's Tommy and The Passion of Dracula. For more information, call Jen at 549- 1587 or Ari at 546-4629.

Student I.D. Cards — Students, faculty and staff who have not had their picture taken for the new all-campus I.D. card to be issued over the summer for the fall semester, must do so before the end of this semester. Temporary photo locations will be held until May 14 on the Campus Center Concourse from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday-Friday; and the University Library from 3-8 p.m Monday-Thursday and 3-5 p.m. Friday. The Franklin Dining Hall I.D. office, open from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday, will take pictures until the week of finals.

Musicians — Mission Improvable, the UMass Comedy Troupe, is looking for someone who can play the keyboard in a variety of music styles, with their own equipment. Call Aaron at 546-5225 for more info.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, meets every Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees.

Community — "Rendezvous with the Soul," meditation, music and prayer meetings, will be held from 4-5 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805-809 weekly on Tuesdays until the end of the semester. Sponsored by the UMass Baha'i Club. For more information, call Chris at 549-4982.

Discussion — Come experience the cultural diversity of the Prince/Crampton Graduate Residence Hall. From April 8 – May 10, residents from many countries around the world will be participating in discussions and presentations about their experiences in their home countries. Scheduled topics: Latin America/Caribbean, May 4-10. The program is free and open to the public.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

VEGETABLE SONORA ✪ SCAMPI ✪ T-BONE STEAK ✪ CHICKEN BBQ ✪ PASTA ROJA PORTEBELLO MUSHROOMS ✪ CHICKEN QUESADILLA ✪ MUSHROOM ONION CHEESEBURGER BLACKENED CATFISH ✪ SPANISH ORZO ✪ STUFFED PORK CHOPS ✪ NACHOS BERKSHIRE BREWING COMPANY ✪ MARGARITAS ✪ BLACK FOREST CHEESECAKE SCREAMING COWBOYS ✪ AND MUCH MORE...

WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS!

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
28 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Rum Punch

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 9, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	16 Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	McLaughlin	Connecticut	Fourth Estate	First Rights	World at War "Convoy"
WFSB	3	3 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	All Star Moms (In Stereo)		"Knots Landing: Back to the Cul-de-Sac" (1997) William Devane.		News		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4 News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	All Star Moms (In Stereo)		"Knots Landing: Back to the Cul-de-Sac" (1997) William Devane.		News		News	Late Show
WGVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Family Matters [Step by Step		Sabrina-Witch	Home Videos	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★★★ "Edward Scissorhands" (1990, Fantasy) Johnny Depp				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	4 Fresh Prince	Martin	Ent. Tonight		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		News		Real TV	Real TV
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	61 Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Sliders "Stroker" (In Stereo)		Millennium "Maranatha"		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	10	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	11	4 Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	LongShort	State of the Union (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	29 News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Family Matters [Step by Step		Sabrina-Witch	Home Videos	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 "Flying"		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	★★★ "Dirty Dancing" (1987, Drama) Jennifer Grey.				News	Real TV	Mad Abo. You	M*A*S*H
WTBS	49	Family Matters [Family Matters		Major League Baseball: Atlanta Braves at Pittsburgh Pirates. (Live)						★★½ "Air America" (1990, Adventure) Mel Gibson.
A&E	51	Quincy "Unhappy Hour"		Law & Order "Precious"		Biography: Tyrone Power		★★½ "Murphy's Romance" (1985, Comedy) Sally Field.				Law & Order "Rage"
CNN	53	22 World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	52	26 Tick (In Stereo)	Dream On	Absolutely Fabulous "The Last Show" (R)				Absolutely	Absolutely Fabulous "Fat" (R)			Absolutely Fabulous "Death"
DISC	48	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "Tornado" (R)		Wild Discovery: Wild Heart		News	World-Wond.	Fangs! "Lions of Elosha" (R)		Wild Discovery: Wild Heart
ESPN	50	Up Close	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs: Conference Semifinal Game 4 – Teams to Be Announced.						Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	47	Supermarket	Debt	Wire	Wire	Dish	3 Blind Dates	Lifetime (1997, Drama) Jolly Feiner, Brian Wimmer.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	45	Headbanger	Week In Rock	Jenny M.	Singled Out	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.
NICK	46	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam! (R)	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	44	Twilight Zone	Fifth Element	She-Wolf of London		★★ "Body Parts" (1991, Horror) Jeff Fahey, Lindsay Duncan.				Friday the 13th: The Series		She-Wolf of London
TLC	42	28 Furniture	Renovation	Homewins (R)	Hometime (R)	Myth America	Legends-tales	Connections II	Connections II	After the Warmth		Myth America	Legends-tales
TNT	54	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball Playoffs: Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					NBA Basketball	Playoffs: Teams TBA
USA	55	Renegade (R) (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		★½ "Tomer & Hooch" (1989, Comedy) Tom Hanks.				La Femme Nikita "Simone"		"Conan the Destroyer" (1984)
HBO	56	★★★ "Roxanne" (1987, Comedy) Steve Martin. (In Stereo) 'PG'				★½ "Diabolique" (1996, Suspense) Sharon Stone.				"Asylum" (1997, Suspense) Robert Patrick.		Dennis Miller
MAX	57	(4:45)	★½ "Witness to the Execution" (1994) 'PG-13'			★★★ "Open Season" (1996, Comedy) Robert Wuhl.				★★★ "Executive Decision" (1996, Suspense) Kurt Russell.
SHOW	58	★★½ "Chances Are" (1989, Comedy) Cybill Shepherd. 'PG'				★★ "Mary Reilly" (1996, Horror) Julia Roberts. (In Stereo) 'R'				Outer Limits		Poltergeist: The Legacy (R)	"BestNest2"

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University¹ By Frank Cho

Loodoo By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Stay on task this week. Diversions will be tempting, but you need to stay focused. Later, there will be time for an adventure with the whole family. Open your heart to something (or someone) unusual. You could gain a richer outlook on life.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Although you might feel caught in a rut, you're able to accomplish some things by force of habit. Use this strength to free yourself in dream of other things. The more you look for, the more you'll find. Plan a romantic getaway for the weekend.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Although your stress level is high, now is not the time to make demands. You could come across the wrong way. Catch up on small tasks to free yourself to enjoy a relaxing weekend. An outdoor excursion is just the thing to recharge your batteries.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
This is a good week to refurbish your exercise program. Focus on your health and you'll enjoy the results for years to come. It may be time to set down with a partner and discuss your plans for the future.

LEO
July 23-August 23
A desk full of busy work will keep you occupied for most of the week. Be ready for an interesting weekend. Some fun in the sun might be in order. Take a special friend along and be ready for anything- you never know what could be just around the corner! Enjoy!

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
You're a super shopper this week with bargains coming from every direction. Check out your obligations for the next week or so before you splurge- you need to keep the budget balanced. Cover all your bases before accepting another responsibility.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Working together with another person brings out the best in you for this week. You might almost be able to anticipate each other's ideas. That's good. Nothing there come true, however, is another matter. Be practical, as well as creative.

S

SPORTS

Friday, May 9, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Minutewomen blank Griffins to earn NCAA berth

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts softball team is going to the big dance. After sweeping the Canisius Golden Griffins in yesterday's NCAA Play-In Series, two games to none, the Minutewomen earned themselves an automatic bid to the NCAA Regionals. UMass took the first game 1–0, and then proceeded to thrash the Golden Griffins in the second game to win 10–0.

Sophomore Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year Danielle Henderson pitched both games for UMass. Although she has had more superior performances this season, Henderson still held her own against Canisius, putting in two shutouts and upping her record to 21–12. Henderson struck out 11 batters in the first game, six in the second, and gave up four hits and two hits, respectively.

"Today was a good test for her," coach Elaine Sortino said. "They were a good hitting team, when she threw a good pitch, they were all over it, and the next place we go, good pitches are not going to go by. If she makes a mistake, she's going to pay for it."

MASSACHUSETTS	1
CANISIUS	0

The first game saw a lot of tight defense by both teams and very little scoring. UMass broke through in the bottom of the third with the only run of the game. Sophomore Octavia Brown singled to the pitcher with a bunt, and then advanced to second on a hit from sophomore Mandy Galas. Brown then made it to third on an error by the Canisius pitcher, and came home on an RBI from senior Stephanie Mareina.

MASSACHUSETTS	10
CANISIUS	0

Mandy Galas played some great defense for the Minutewomen in the first game. In the fourth inning she made a beautiful diving catch off of a hit from Canisius freshman Raquel Alvarez. She then made the game–winning play in the seventh inning. With two outs and one on base Galas ran and caught a pop fly from Jesse Rosenhahn to get the third out and end the game.

The second game of the doubleheader was nothing less than spectacular for UMass. They got off 13 hits to Canisius' two, and scored ten runs, invoking the mercy rule after the sixth inning. Canisius coach Mike Rappl sent in three different pitchers in the game, to try and cool the UMass bats, but it was to no avail.

The Minutewomen reeled off a record seven triples in the game, setting both a new school and NCAA record, thus breaking the previous record set in 1986 against Miami of Ohio.

UMass got off to a quick start, scoring two runs in the top of the first inning. Junior Kim Gutridge was credited for a triple off a hit she sent down the right field line. As she was rounding first Gutridge was tripped up by Canisius first baseman Joy Judski, and the umpire sent her to third. The call sent senior Sam Cardenas home, giving Gutridge an RBI. Junior Kelly Buckley then had an RBI single to bring in Gutridge.

Galas had a triple down the left field line in the second inning, earning an RBI and bringing in junior Tracey Osier for another run. UMass scored again in the third inning, with an RBI single from Buckley, and Cardenas scoring.

By the time the fifth inning rolled around the Golden Griffin's dugout began to grow quiet, while the Minutewomen's grew louder an! louder as they began to smell victory. UMass had two more runs in the fifth, with RBI's from Cardenas and senior Chris Martens.

The sixth inning saw the Minutewomen tear the game open, with four runs off of four hits. In an inning that must have seemed endless for the Golden Griffins, the UMass put in four triples, and upped the score to 10–0. The game was mercy–ruled after Canisius could produce nothing in the bottom of the sixth.

What is next for the Minutewomen remains to be seen. The NCAA selection show will be held on Sunday night at 9 p.m., when UMass will find out who their first round opponent will be, as well as where they will play.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Danielle Henderson strikes out MAAC Player of the Year Jen Silata in the first inning of yesterday's 1–0 win over Canisius.

Men's lax faces Hofstra in NCAAs

JASON T. BAILEY / COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen travel to West Point where they will face Hofstra in the first round of the NCAA tournament tomorrow.

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team, it is a whole new season.

Recipients of the No. 8 seed in the NCAA tournament, the Minutemen will begin the second part of their season with a first–round matchup against Hofstra tomorrow at 2:45 p.m. at Army's Miche Stadium.

UMass and Hofstra are not unfamiliar opponents. The then No. 7 Flying Dutchmen edged the Minutemen, then ranked No. 15, earlier in the year in Hempstead, N.Y. with a 7–6 win in double overtime.

But the teams are at a different point now. UMass (8–5) finished its season with wins over three ranked teams in the last four regular season games, including a significant 9–4 victory at Brown.

In fact, it may have been that win which pushed UMass into the No. 8 seed.

"I was told all week that the winner of our game [against Brown] would be the No. 8 seed," UMass coach Greg Cannella said.

"To be a seeded team is a real honor. Anytime you are considered, especially by a selection committee, to be one of the top teams — one of the top eight teams in the country — it's great for our program."

Hofstra, however, struggled at the tail end of its season. Its 9–5 record belies the fact that the Dutchmen dropped three contests to ranked opponents as the regular season wound down.

"They started out real hot, they were ranked fourth in the country and 5–0," Cannella said. "They lost a couple of games against some real tough opponents. But I don't think that will play into it at all. This is a whole new season."

The two teams that will battle in the afternoon's second game (No. 5 Duke faces Brown in the early game) are different squads than the ones that did battle in March.

"Personnel–wise we're a little bit different, with Mike McKeefrey playing in there and Eric Sporacasa and Jamie Doherty playing more" Cannella said. "I think the major difference is right now we believe in ourselves. We believe in each other and our ability and we have faith in each other."

The changes in Hofstra's squad have been minimal.

"I think they're a very similar team. I think they've changed their personnel just a little bit," Cannella said.

One of the personnel changes Hofstra has relied on lately is Brian

Turn to MEN'S LAX, page 7

Huskies defeat UM, 8–6

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Despite jumping out to a 6–0 in the early going, the Massachusetts baseball team couldn't pull away from Connecticut, as UConn pulled away to a 8–6 win yesterday in Storrs, Conn.

The Huskies jumped on Adam Robinson for three runs in the third inning and three more in the fifth to beat UMass. The loss is third in a row for the Minutemen, who fall to 30–10 on the season.

MASSACHUSETTS	6
CONNETICUT	8

After winning 18 in a row, UMass has dropped four of it's last six heading into it's final conference series this weekend at St. Joseph's.

After spotting the Minutemen a 6–0 lead, UConn started it's rally in the third, courtesy of centerfielder Matt Zawalich, who tagged Robinson for a three–run blast, cutting the lead to 6–3.

The Huskies added another run in the fourth, and then took the lead for good with three runs in the fifth.

Huskies catcher Jason Grabowski tied the game with a two–run homer, and Connecticut took a 7–6 lead when third baseman Brian Packin scored on a double–play ball.

After taking a 3–0 lead in the second, second baseman Ryan Thistle upped the UMass lead to 6–0 with a bases–loaded triple in the third.

Zawalich drove in four RBIs to lead the Huskies. Reliever Scott Berney pitched two innings of scoreless ball to pick up his fourth win of the year for UConn, which ends its season at 27–19.

Thistle went 1–for–3 with three RBIs to pace the Minutemen. Ryan Cameron came on in relief of Robinson and pitched four innings of one–hit ball. Shortstop Brad Gorrie, third baseman Adam Correa and first baseman David Giglio each knocked in runs for UMass.

Yesterday's game was marred by eight errors, four by both UMass and UConn.

Next up for UMass is a three–game series with St. Joseph's in Philadelphia. This will wrap up the Atlantic 10 regular season for the Minutemen, who have already secured the top spot in the four–team A–10 Championships. The A–10s kick off on May 15th in Boyertown, Pa.

The Minutemen have won the last two A–10 tournament titles, and last season made it to the NCAA Fast Regional finals, where they fell to the University of Florida.

UM water polo No. 10 seed at Nationals

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's water polo team is doing something this weekend it has worked for all season — going to the United States Water Polo Collegiate 1 National Championships.

Finishing up their incredible season in Ann Arbor, MI, where they will play against the best in the nation, the Minutewomen are ready to prove just how good they really are.

Massachusetts is seeded No. 10 out of the twelve teams that are competing this weekend. They are coming off of a third place finish two weeks ago at the Eastern Championships with a 24–5 overall record this season.

The National Championships will include three teams from the East (Massachusetts, No. 5 Maryland, No. 8 Slippery Rock), two from the Midwest and seven from the West Coast (No. 1 UCLA, No. 2 California, No. 3 Stanford, No. 4 San Diego State, No. 6 University of Southern California, No. 7 UC Santa Barbara, No. 9 UC San Diego).

"I's going to be an extremely competitive tournament," UMass coach Bob Newcomb said.

The Minutewomen have used these last two weeks to prepare themselves for what will be one of their hardest tournaments. They have focused on conditioning, said Newcomb, and last Thursday, the Minutewomen travelled

Turn to WOMEN'S POLO, page 7

UM's winter athletes distinguish themselves

Editor's note: Over the course of the next week, the Collegian sports page will look back at the year that was in UMass athletics. Here are a few athletes who were faces in the UMass winter sports crowd.

Carmelo Travieso - basketball
senior, guard
This past season, Travieso became the 30th player in UMass history to break the 1,000 point plateau at home against Xavier.

Edgar Padilla - basketball
senior, guard
Averaged 31.5 minutes during the regular season as point guard. Shot for an average of 8.3 ppg while dishing out 158 assists and 64 regular season steals.

Crystal Carroll - basketball
senior, forward
The 6–foot–2 senior led the Minutewomen in both scoring (16.3 ppg) and rebounds (6.0) this season. Backbone of a team that went 18–10, good for second in the A–10's East Division. First–team All A–10.

Kelly Van Huisen - basketball freshman, guard
The freshman from Haverhill made the transition to college basketball smoothly, becoming one of the Minutewomen's offensive catalysts. Van Huisen averaged 10.4 points per game.

Brian Winnicwski - swimming sophomore, back/free
Held team's fastest times in 100 free, 200 free, 200 back and 200 IM.

Rob Bonneau - hockey
senior, forward
Signed with AHL's Portland Pirates. Was one half of one of the highest scoring tandems in Hockey East. Tallied 16 goals and 31 assists on the season.

Warren Norris - hockey
senior, center
Signed with AHL's St. John's Maple Leafs. Teamed up with Bonneau on the first line tallying 20 goals and 26 assists on the season.

Brad Norton - hockey
junior, defense
Projected to be UMass defensive captain next season. Raised his game to the level of top Hockey East defensemen this past season. Led defensemen with 18 assists.

Lianne Laing - gymnastics
senior
Laing took first place in floor as the Minutewomen defended their Atlantic 10 title. In Regionals, she took second overall in floor with a 9.825.

Tara Swartz - gymnastics
senior
The A–10 leader in uneven bars tallied a 9.75 in the Minutewomen's 4th place showing in regionals.

Turn to PITINO, page 7

C's Rick Pitino announces plans for Boston team

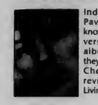
By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Yesterday, former University of Kentucky basketball coach and Massachusetts alumnus Rick Pitino opened his FleetCenter press conference with an anecdote.

"I can remember walking down Comm Ave. to my old job at BU and thinking how great it was to be on a list of coaches and players to get into Celtics games for free," Pitino said. "Now, here I am coaching the team. It is a dream for me to be head coach of an incredible institution."

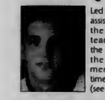
For many Celtics faithful, Pitino's being named President and head coach of the organization was a dream come true for them as well. With the past season going into the record books as a substantial stain on the storied franchise's illustrious record books, Pitino will hope to use his collegiate experience coaching such teams as Boston University, Providence and Kentucky.

Will the pressure of turning around this once–great program be too much for the man who coached the Wildcats to last year's NCAA Championship?



"Pressure, to me, is the greatest friend you have in life," Pitino said. "There's a reason why they won 15 games [last season]: a lot of injuries, lack of talent. This is a player's league and talent reigns supreme... I don't care how much money you make, when you cross the lines [of the court], you should have fun. That's the biggest

Turn to PITINO, page 7



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 138 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, May 12, 1997

Slanted & Disenchanted

Indie–rock gods Pavement are known for their universally acclaimed albums. But can they cut it on stage? Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6.)

History in the making

Led by a goal and an assist from Ken Sussi, the men's lacrosse team advanced to the second round of the NCAA tournament for the third time in school history (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

IRA offshoot admits to murder of policeman

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A Irish nationalist splinter group admitted Saturday having planned and carried out the murder of an off–duty policeman in a Belfast nightspot.

The Irish National Liberation Army said the two gunmen who shot and killed officer Darren Bradshaw in the crowded Parliament Bar on Friday night were members of the group.

The INLA is a maverick offshoot of the much larger Irish Republican Army, which denied involvement in the shooting minutes before the INLA made its claim. Both groups draw support from militant Catholics in their shared aim of ending British rule of Northern Ireland.

"This was a well thought–out and planned operation," Police Detective Superintendent John Middlemiss, who is heading the investigation, said Saturday.

Later Saturday, police charged five men with the murder of 25–year–old Robert Hamill, a Roman Catholic badly beaten by a Protestant mob two weeks ago in Portadown, 30 miles southwest of Belfast.

A spokesman for the Royal Ulster Constabulary said the five suspects, all from Portadown, would appear at a special court yesterday.

NATION

Computer prevails in decisive chess match

NEW YORK — In a dazzling, hour–long game yesterday, the Deep Blue IBM computer demolished an overwhelmed Garry Kasparov and won the six–game chess match between man and machine.

The final score was 3 1/2 points for the computer and 2 1/2 points for Kasparov. Kasparov won the first game, Deep Blue won the second and the last three games were played to a draw.

Grandmaster Ilya Gurevich said Game 6 was "a stunner. Kasparov got wiped off the board."

Kasparov, who was playing black, resigned after the game's 19th move.

"Everybody was surprised that he [Kasparov] resigned because it didn't seem lost," grandmaster John Fedorowicz said.

But Gurevich said that in the opening move, Kasparov was "trying to create a quiet positional game. But he mixed up his move order and allowed the computer to make a knight sacrifice." The computer gave up a knight for a pawn at its eighth move. Gurevich said that after the knight sacrifice, "this is not a position [Kasparov] wanted to get into. It's a pure calculating position where the computer has a big advantage. The computer's strength is tactics."

International master David Levy said Kasparov "should never have played a main line" in his opening. "It makes it easy for the computer to get a good position out of the opening."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tue	Wed
HIGH: 65	HIGH: 60	HIGH: 70
LOW: 45	LOW: 40	LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds.....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword.....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 10

Humanities & Arts dispute 1998 budget

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Editors Note: This is the first of a two–part series on the 1998 University budget requests. Part one focuses on the request for the College of Humanities and Fine Arts. Part two will focus on Academic Affairs' share of the budget and faculty losses on campus.

Faculty in the College of Humanities and Fine Arts (CHFA) are angry with their share of Interim Provost Patricia Crosson's budget recommendations for next year.

In a letter to Chancellor David K. Scott, signed by all of the department chairs in CHFA, the chairs protested what they see as an unfairly low recommendation for the CHFA.

"We find it unacceptable that this document [Crosson's budget request of February 24, 1997] continues a pattern of disregard for the pressing needs of the College of Humanities and Fine Arts," the letter reads. "The same neglect that has created, and continues to create, problems of crisis proportions in CHFA seems likely to continue over into the next century."

Frank Hugus, head of Germanic languages and literature, argued that the CHFA is not receiving its fair share of the budget.

"We are not getting as much of an increase as we deserve," Hugus said. "The proposed budget does not take into account the needs that every department has faced."

Crosson, on the other hand, says that she recommended the CHFA as large a budget as she could justify, taking into account the needs of other colleges and schools.

"I had to make tough choices."
— Interim Provost Patricia Crosson

"I would like to be able to support all of their requests," Crosson said. "I just had to balance the needs and do my best to recommend all of the needs that are there."

Professors retire, departments can't re–hire

The CHFA contends that the University of Massachusetts has not been supporting its largest College at levels sufficient to meet its teaching demands, and that it must have an increased budget in order to hire badly needed new faculty.

"I believe that this deanery does not have an adequate budget to perform its mission," CHFA Dean Lee Edwards said. "When resources are allocated, we do not get anywhere near adequate amounts to do what we have to do."

According to data compiled by Associate Dean Harlan Sturm, CHFA, the College has 70 less base faculty members than in did in 1985, while student enrollments have decreased only slightly over the same time period. This downsizing of the faculty has occurred because as faculty members have retired or left UMass, their positions have not been filled.

Norman Sims, chair of the journalism department, illustrated this downsizing of faculty within his own department.

"At one point we had 10 faculty members and in December, when two of our faculty members retire, we will have five," Sims said. "Not only have we lost full time faculty, but part time as well."

Without new faculty, the chairs argue, CHFA will be unable to offer the variety and small size of classes students deserve.

"Students are unable to get a predictable range of courses in areas that justify those courses, such as Native American, Irish, German and various expressions of pre–modern history," said Bruce Laurie, chair of the history department. "Students really want these courses."

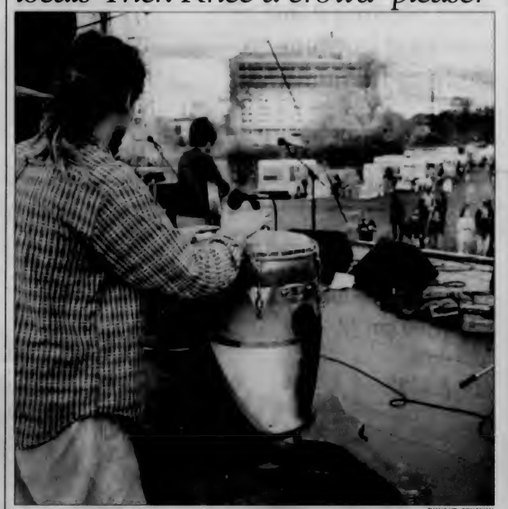
"I am worried that the faculty is going to be downsized passed the critical point."
— Steven Clingman

The CHFA chairs maintain that all students at UMass, not just majors in CHFA, are affected by a smaller faculty in the College because of the resulting reduction in General Education enrollment.

Hugus said that if he does not receive funding for teaching assistants in the General Education classes his department teaches, he will have to dramatically cap enrollments.

Turn to BUDGET, page 2

"Only half as many students will be able to take the courses," Hugus said. "It will affect the whole campus."



With a large number of faculty in the CHFA approaching retirement age — 40 in the departments of English and history alone — the chairs are concerned that without a larger budget, this trend of faculty downsizing will continue.

"I am worried that the faculty is going to be downsized passed the critical point," said Steven Clingman, chair of the English department. "The long term problem, I think, is that you can destroy the life of a department."

The CHFA chairs also feel that they have suffered more faculty losses than other colleges, and that the 1998 budget requests were unfairly harsh on CHFA.

"The budget that the provost requested does less for us than for others," Clingman said. "We do the major amount of teaching on this campus. Whey we should be taking an especial hit is not clear to me."

Spring Concert sees low turn–out; locals Trick Knee a crowd–pleaser

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Trick Knee, a local band, was the opening act for the Spring Concert.

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

Another Mother's Day weekend has come and gone, and with it went another Spring Concert.

The University of Massachusetts' annual festival by the pond has always presented a wide variety of musical styles, and Spring Concert '97 was no exception.

The day began at high noon with local favorites Trick Knee. Having won the opening slot of the show at last month's Union Program Council (UPC) Battle of the Bands, their brand of jazz–tinged folk rock recalled Phish, the Grateful Dead and other bands of that genre. Suffice it to say, Trick Knee was a crowd–pleaning kick–off for the afternoon.

R&B divas 702 followed with a slick set which seemed a bit out of place in the blustery outdoors, but their professionalism and determination overcame the venue's lack of atmosphere. Already tagged as the "next big thing" on the R&B scene, 702 lived up to the hype with style and class.

The most bizarre act of the day was The Jazz Mandolin Project. Don't let the name fool you, though. The Vermont trio's surprisingly heavy sound went far beyond the traditional definitions and connotations of both jazz and– mandolins. Touching on everything from folk to funk to classical, The

Turn to CONCERT, page 3

News Analysis

Math contest winners honored

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

A dinner and awards ceremony were held Thursday night in the mathematics lounge for the winners and runners–up in the 12th annual Mathematics Competition, which was supported by corporate sponsors Eletrinic Data Systems (EDS) and Computer Science Corporation (CSC).

Professors from the biology department, engineering department and the mathematics department attended the ceremony, along with the winners, corporate representatives and the parents of some winners.

The competition, which was a two–hour, 10–question test containing problems from high school math, precalculus and the first semester and a half of calculus, was open to all first and second–year students enrolled at the University.

According to retired professor Henry Jacob, the problems the students encountered on the test were more difficult than the ones that they find within the coursework.

Jacob, formerly of the mathematics department, was one of three retired professors who make up and judge the test. He said that the purpose of the test is two–fold, designed "to make the mathematical community aware of mathematics, and to recruit potential math majors."

While no one answered all of the questions correctly, Jacob said that "the winners once again showed exceptional mathematical aptitude and originality."

Kin Pong Lo, who was the winner of the competition, said that he had taken part in similar contests in his native Hong Kong, but had never won.

Lo said he was surprised to be the winner. "I just wanted to go there and see what was going on," Lo said.

The second prize winner, Josephine Zhuang, a sophomore computer science and mathematics major, won $1000. Sudheer Gaddam, a sophomore biology major, took home the third prize and $400.

Jacob said that this year's competition was unusual in that the second and third place winners also won second and third place last year.

"That has never happened before," Jacob said.

Sophomores Brian Riley and Frederick Squires received honorable mentions and prizes of $75.

UMass student volunteers educate on child health care in H.O.P.E. project

By Christina J. Poletto
Collegian Staff

The Upside Down Club, a Christian student organization at the University of Massachusetts, went into Springfield last month to execute an informational project called H.O.P.E. (Helping Other People Everywhere) for Healthy Kids, a civic program that focuses on health care for children for the world organization H.O.P.E.

"H.O.P.E. for Healthy Kids is the biggest project for the organization H.O.P.E.," said Bethany Jones, a junior journalism major who currently serves as the treasurer and leader of the campus ministry for the UMass chapter.

This non–denominational Christian organization, which encourages the biblical values of helping others, raised approximately $10,000 for the corporation.

"We as a church volunteered for this world–wide organization, one chapter of which is in New England," Jones said. "Once a year we participate in H.O.P.E. for Healthy Kids, a program implemented in several cities throughout the United States."

According to Jones, the club has been preparing for the H.O.P.E for Healthy Kids Day approximately one month in advance by soliciting donations in the Amherst and Hadley area.

"We went door knocking in Amherst and Hadley, and also received donations at Stop and Shop for H.O.P.E.," Jones said.

In a display of support, roughly 50 students — 30 of whom were from UMass — from the Five College area participated in the local project.

Jones said that each member raised approximately $200, the desired goal for each participant of the program.

It was on April 19 that students traveled to Springfield to provide information to the public about the importance of immunization for children.

"The project consists of collecting donations and also educating parents in the inner cities on the importance of immunization and awareness about other diseases," Jones said.

In addition to the Springfield area program, H.O.P.E for Healthy Kids Day is also implemented in Boston and in many other locations across the United States.

Indian–Pakistani relations at core of S. Asian summit

By Ranjan Roy
Associated Press

MALE, The Maldives — The key event of a South Asian summit promises to be a meeting on the sidelines: rare talks between the prime ministers of rival India and Pakistan.

India's and Pakistan's leaders are attempting build relations between their two nations, hoping to end a 50–year conflict they say is blocking economic development of the Indian subcontinent. Indian Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral and his Pakistani counterpart, Nawaz Sharif, will talk today on the Maldives, before the seven–nation South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC) summit opens on the islands.

Pakistan's foreign minister sought yesterday to lower expectations for today's meeting, the first talks between the prime ministers in four years.

Gohar Ayub Khan told reporters in Male not to expect any breakthroughs on the key dispute between India and Pakistan — the border region of Jammu–Kashmir, the only largely Muslim region of predominantly Hindu India.

"Kashmir will take a long time," Khan said, but added that Pakistan was willing to try to work around the dispute.

Pakistan's prime minister sounded more optimistic, saying yesterday he hoped the meeting "will enable us to identify ways and means to address meaningfully all outstanding issues."

India and Pakistan have fought two wars over the Himalayan region.

The hostility between the two nations, the most powerful members in the South Asian bloc, has been the main obstacle to the bloc's success.

For 12 years, the seven nations have tried to put their mutual suspicions aside and fashion themselves into a significant trading and political group.

Each of the previous summits produced reams of documents, but their achievements would barely fill one page.

Now, with new heads of government in Nepal and Bangladesh as well as India and Pakistan, leaders of the bloc hope to enter a new phase.

All the countries desperately need to move forward. The seven countries are home to one–fifth of mankind, but they account for half the world's illiteracy and 40 percent of its poor.

The India–Pakistan talks are part of India's new doctrine of regional cooperation — based on the idea that India can afford to be generous with its smaller neighbors.

Earlier this year, India granted major concessions to resolve a long–standing water dispute with Bangladesh and allowed Nepal more trade through its territory.

"The Indian SAARC bully is suddenly becoming a congenial animal," said H.C. Graf von Sponeck, chief of U.N. missions in India.

The three–day summit in Male, the capital of the Indian Ocean archipelago, also will be attended by Sri Lankan President Chandrika Kumaratunga, Bangladesh Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina, Bhutan's King Jigme Singye Wanchuk, Nepal's Prime Minister Lokendra Bahadur Chand and President Maumoon Abdul Gayoom of the Maldives. Increased economic cooperation is at the top of the agenda, with discussion expected on a proposal to create a free trade zone by 2005, said Kamlesh Sharma, a senior Indian diplomat.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Chris Conner
Copy Editor: Laura Stock
Photo Technician: Rachelle Joseph
Production Supervisor: Lorraine Urbanski
Production Staff: Chris Lavin, Lauren Goldfarb
READ THE COLLEGIAN!
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

budget

continued from page 1

Ernest May, chair of the department of music and dance, said that his department, like others in CHFA, has been diminished because recent budgets have not allowed for retiring faculty to be replaced. May feels that the budget request is unfair because CHFA is in more need of new faculty than other colleges on campus are.

"We really will take a hit," May said. "Other people are currently doing much better than this."

Crosson says others need funding, too

Interim Provost Crosson disagrees with the CHFA chairs that their College is the most needy on campus. In fact, Crosson said that she had not been able to meet much of the CHFA request because she saw areas of greater need.

"It is true that it was considerably less that they had hoped I would recommend," Crosson said. "I do believe CHFA has genuine needs, but I do not think there is any college on the campus that would say I have given them full support. I have to balance those things."

Crosson named the library, faculty for the Social and Behavioral Sciences, the School of Management, Life Sciences and the new advising center as other areas that needed immediate funding. She said that in her judgment funding for those areas was more critical than increased funding for CHFA.

"That is the nature of the business. You reallocate your resources when you can if you think you need to," Crosson said. "I had to make tough choices."

Crosson also noted that by sending the College's request, along with her own recommendation, to the Chancellor, she is making their argument, in addition to her own opinion, available to him.

"I wish I could do more and I feel that the way in which I presented it does allow the College's case to go before the Chancellor," Crosson said.

Scott refuses to meet until budget is set

Chancellor Scott, who will make the final budget decisions, said that he will not meet with the CHFA chairs until he has made his budget.

"At the moment, I am so far away from determining a final budget that I can not start meeting with small groups," Scott said. "I am not meeting with any other school or college, either. I need to come out with my budget first."

Scott said that after the state legislature finalizes its budget, sometime at the end of June, he will hold a meeting for all of the department chairs to explain his budget to them and at that point the CHFA chairs can discuss their points with him.

Ex-con talks on prison reform

By Juliette Doro
Collegian Staff

During a forum on Massachusetts prisons last Wednesday, a former political prisoner told his story of 20 years of beatings and torture in state and federal prisons.

Richard Picariello, a political activist convicted of several charges including conspiracy and transportation of explosives, talked of the abuses in the prison system, using his own experiences as an example.

Picariello said that most people in the prisons are victims of their socio-economic situations. In his 20 years as a prisoner, he said, almost every person he met was poor. He called prisons an oppressive system used for slave labor and to punish dissidents.

"There is a double-standard of justice. They are concentration camps for troubled youth," Picariello said.

Picariello told the audience that he and other prisoners were beaten by guards with a pick-ax handle. Prisoners were stripped and strapped to chairs.

"I'm not telling you everything I've experienced. I can't even talk about it," Picariello said. "It was horrible."

He told the forum about the sensory deprivation isolation units, called control units, in which he was contained for most of his incarceration and was released only for an hour every day.

Picariello focused on Weld's prison policies, saying that he has cut education for prisoners and worsened prison conditions overall. According to Picariello, prisoners are compelled to commit crimes again after being released because they have no skills and no support system. He said that he has been unable to find a job since his release.

"There was no support system, just comrades and friends," he said.

"The system wants people to come back," said Chris Johnson, a member of the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League and the Maoist International Movement. "It represses segments of the population."

Damon Thomas, a Massachusetts attorney who has represented Picariello since 1991, also spoke at the forum. Thomas told the audience that in 1992 there were 1.2 million people incarcerated in the United States. In 1996, 1.5 million people were in prison, not including the 3.5 million on parole and the 500,000 awaiting trial.

"It costs more to send someone to federal prison for four years than it does to send them to a private institution," Thomas said, adding that it costs $5.7 million per day for 105,000 inmates. He asked to the audience to question a society that mistreats its prisoners.

"If they are going to treat people that way behind closed doors, you know what their value system is capitalism, imperialism and oppression," Picariello said.

The forum was sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League, Maoist International Movement, Boricuas Unidos, Commuter Area Government and Black Student Union.

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS...
We are here !!

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
Part Time Evenings
Classes start June 9, 1997
Call UMASS, Continuing Education @ 545-0474
by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.

RESULTS resume
We know what employers want.
Resumes for the real world
▶ Written by a business executive
▶ Student rates, credit cards & checks
▶ Employer lists & cover letters, too
253-9055
In your back yard at 150 Fearing Street

Alfredo's
PHOTOGRAPHIC ART LOCAL AMHERST PHOTOS MAKE GREAT GRADUATION GIFTS
SPORTS PHOTOS & POSTERS
39 S. PLEASANT ST. 413 - 253 - 1707
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

The Coffee Shop
will be open late during exam week offering a late nite breakfast for students studying for finals.
OMELETTES
Bacon/Sausage
Home Fries, Toast & Coffee
$3.95
Special is available from 9:00 pm 'til Midnight.
May 15 -22
Campus Center
End of the Semester/Exams Specials
Student Union
Send It Home!
Finals are stressful enough without worrying about how to get all your stuff home. So this year why not take a load off your cranium and bring your essentials to the Campus Sender.
☺ We can pack and ship just about anything
☺ Each of your goodies is automatically insured for $100
☺ We can use our super high tech computers to track your package and make sure it arrived
☺ We cost about the same as a first class package through the Post Office
More Service, Less Money

Noa
in concert to celebrate Yom Ha'atzmaut
May 12, 7:00pm, Beth El Synagogue/Springfield
$5 UMass Students
Tickets sold at Hillel House/388 N. Pleasant St./549-1710
TRANSPORTATION INCLUDED!
Bus departs at 5:30 from Hillel House
TONIGHT!
Noa, the most popular female singer in Israel today, returns to N. America to share her dazzling musical style after completing a three month concert tour of Europe with rock megastar Sting.

concert

continued from page 1

Jazz Mandolin Project's inspired playing and prodigious talent made for a very unique performance.

G. Love and Special Sauce followed, bringing their woozy blend of folk, rap and blues to the Campus Pond. As traditional as The Jazz Mandolin Project are experimental, G. Love's simple guitar/stand-up bass/drums line-up provided a nice counterpoint to the somewhat overblown pretensions of The Jazz Mandolin Project. Much like 702, though, G. Love and Special Sauce seemed somewhat overwhelmed and out of place in the large outdoor venue — they're definitely more suited to smoky clubs than open-air festivals.

Headliner Redman, though, had no problem filling the stage. The self-described "Funk Doctu" immediately won the crowd's favor with his manic brew of rhymes and hilarious antics, which included stage-diving and crowd surfing. Redman was the perfect antidote to a cold afternoon of generally uninspiring music.

The day's occasional highlights, though, could not save Spring Concert '97. A combination of lousy weather, a new $2 admission fee, and a line-up without any really big names kept most of the student body away. Also, G. Love and Special Sauce just played at Amherst College last month and seem to stop in the Valley at least once per semester — needless to say, there was not a whole lot of demand or interest created by their addition to the bill.

Recent Spring Concert performers have included Bob Dylan, the Beastie Boys, Blues Traveller, Naughty By Nature, Fishbone and the Violent Femmes. In the first half of the decade, Spring Concert was perhaps the most eagerly awaited event of the school year. However, a decimated budget and a desire to please every type of music fan have resulted in what occurred this weekend — a patchy show steeped in mediocrity. Hopefully, Spring Concert '98 will recall some of the event's glory days.

BACHELLE JOSEPH/ COLLEGIAN

We love cheese pizza!
Amherst residents Neil and Karina Vaid and Jamela Ferreira savored the moment with a slice of pizza.

The Collegian would like to announce the following newsroom election results for the 1997-98 editorial staff:

Editor in Chief:
Christopher Stamm
Managing Editor:
Laura Stock

Arts & Living Editor:
Seema Gangatirkar

Black Affairs Editor:
Humphrey brown III

Editorial/Opinion Editor:
Dan Bodah

Jewish Affairs Editor:
Bryan Schwartzman

Multicultural Affairs Editor:
Christine Soh

News Editor:
Jonathan Liberty

Photo Editor:
Kenneth W.P. Scott & Thang Vo

Sports Editor:
Luke Meredith

The positions of Developing Nations, GLBT and Women's Issues Editors are vacant, and the Collegian is currently accepting applications for these paid positions. Contact Laura Stock or Humphrey brown III for more information and an application at 545-1762 or 545-1851, or come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center, room 113.

The Collegian is also hiring for the positions of Night and Copy Editors, Librarian and Assistant to the Managing Editor. Contact Laura Stock for information and an application.

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
*ONE MILE FROM THE BUS ROUTE.

ISRAEL INDEPENDENCE DAY
TODAY! TODAY!
Celebrate with Great Israeli Food, Israeli Music, Israeli Bakery
And at 2:20pm... Raffle Drawing for One Round Trip Plane Ticket to Israel! (donated by Hadassah/Hamaagalmit) All proceeds to benefit United Jewish Appeal and The American Cancer Society. Raffle tickets $1 each. Tickets on sale on the Campus Center Concourse Monday, May 5 - Friday, May 9 and at the event.
MONDAY, MAY 12
12 NOON - 3 PM
FRONT LAWN OF HILLEL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS (RAINDATE: MAY 13)
Event sponsored by UMass Hillel & the Jewish Community of Amherst
Raffle sponsored by Delta Zeta, Alpha Epsilon Pi and Hillel

A Branch Beyond
Silver Jewelry Specialists
Great Selection Low Prices
236 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 253-4997 Mon-Sat 11-6

Concerned About the MCAT?
Listen to Your Friends.
9 out of 10 alumni recommend Kaplan MCAT preparation.
Classes filling fast. Call today!
MCAT
Free MCAT Seminar. Wednesday, May 21. Kaplan Amherst Center.
Call us at 549-5780 for details!
Springtime in the Valley rules!
expert teachers superior materials smart technology proven results
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

Congratulations Class of 1997
THE NEWMAN CENTER COMMUNITY
WISHES YOU THE BEST IN YOUR FUTURE ENDEAVORS
Good Luck and God Bless

Take a Chance SALE
SOLD 25% off 45% off 60% off 75% off 95% off
SHOP EARLY FOR BEST SELECTION
EACH DAY THE DISCOUNT INCREASES
DO YOU DARE TAKE A CHANCE?
WILL WHAT YOU WANT BE THERE TOMORROW?
ITEMS FROM THROUGHOUT THE STORE
MANY ONE-OF-A-KIND ITEMS
in the Campus Center 545-2619
UNIVERSITY STORE
Hours: M-F 9am — 5pm Sat 11am — 4pm

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967. It has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Love and war

I have won the battle of all battles.

There was very little bloodshed, but plenty of frustration and plenty of ranting and raving. And sure, a couple gallons of tears were shed along the way, not to mention objects thrown indiscriminately.

While this situation has all the makings of a torrid love affair gone wrong, it was something much more infuriating, more dismaying.

First of all, my opponent was much more formidable than any boyfriend — my computer. Innocent looking and silent, it sat on my desk, daring me to touch it.

I had tried everything to make our relationship work. We've been together for a year, my computer and I. We've had our ups and downs (it randomly decided not to acknowledge its soundcard anymore, hence retreating into a world of silence, making communication next to impossible). But whatever our faults as a team, I believed wholeheartedly in our relationship.

" I think maybe my computer may have met someone else. Someone else with a pentium chip or a better video card or faster modem or something."

Seema Gangatirkar

And while it was there for me, spell-checking, analyzing data, I tried to support it. I got it new screen savers when it grew tired of the old ones. I added more memory, kept the printer filled with paper. It seemed like we would go on like this forever.

In my heart, I know my computer loves me. I'm sure of it. Only a few weeks ago, it warned me not to run with scissors in my hand. If this isn't love, then what is?

But all good things must come to an end and last week, the end of our relationship seemed imminent. My computer stopped being obedient and supportive and turned into a balky mule instead.

I couldn't believe it. At a time like this, with the end of the semester approaching and papers due left and right, how could it let me down like this?

No professor, however lenient, would ever accept the excuse:

"Uh, Professor Doom, I'm, um, sorry, but ah, um, my computer, um, we're, um no longer, um, together."

Right.

So I pleaded, I cajoled. I promised the computer new disks, more memory, anything, as long as it would stop this silly little temper tantrum.

Talk to me," I would tell it. "Tell me what you want."

But instead, the computer sat there, in all its glory, probably relishing the fact that it had conquered me, its human owner.

I now know how Gary Kasparov must feel playing chess against Deep Blue — IBM's version of the devil in the guise of a computer.

My little gem of a machine is also made by IBM. So I called IBM's Counseling Services. Talked to a recording for a while about my machine and then listened to some lousy elevator musak. Finally, a human voice.

"What's the problem?" the man asked.

"I don't really know. I think maybe my computer may have met someone else. Someone else with a pentium chip or a better video card or faster modem or something."

"I see..."

After a moment, I was informed I should e-mail IBM's Service Center and ask them for further counseling.

So I promptly sent off a message and within hours received one back, saying I should call the 1-800 number I had just called. Thanks, IBM.

I reverted back to pleading with my computer. Slamming doors, kicking doors, throwing things with the wild abandon of a woman scorned. I considered heaving the whole darn thing out the window, but two things held me back. First, my parents would definitely not appreciate that gesture, no matter how stubborn the machine was being. Second, it wouldn't fit. It's hard enough to get your arm through some of these windows, let alone a whole computer.

Finally, I gave up. If the computer wasn't able to make things work out between us, it wasn't meant to be, it just wasn't meant to be. Somehow, I thought with resignation, I would make it. It might take time, but I'd get over the demise of our relationship.

But then help arrived in the person of a friend. The friend sat down and reasoned with the machine. What was said during that hour, I don't know, but when I returned, I found the machine buzzing happily.

The crisis was averted and my computer and I no longer take each other for granted. I'm grateful that it's working now, and the only real traumas I suffered were a couple sleepless nights and three stubbed toes.

And of course, you cannot leave any bad situation without learning a valuable lesson. I've learned mine.

All's fair in love and war.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Scoring points with Scrabble

I'm convinced that there's a lot you can tell about a woman by the way she plays Scrabble. Like so many people have used the "car door test," I've devised what I like to call the Scrabble test. By evaluating any number of Scrabble-related factors, I can tell whether or not any potentially romantic situation has a real shot of developing.

I must first say that like I don't discriminate based on race, creed or hair color, I do not discriminate based on Scrabble playing ability. I wouldn't rule anything out because somebody doesn't play Scrabble the way I like, but there remain many points a woman can gain when playing Scrabble with me.

It doesn't matter so much what someone's score might be, it matters how she goes about getting that score. There are intangible qualities in women that may remain undetected within their day-to-day activities, but come forth when they play Scrabble.

For instance, anyone who plays Scrabble knows that one of the cheapest ways of getting many points off of the fewest number of letters is learning to add on to other, previously made, words. Adding an -s or -es to make a word plural is the perfect example. Adding on, while most acknowledge that it is cheap, is also part of the game, and when used properly is a great tool.

There are a number of ways to do this. If someone were to add an -ed on the end of my "jinx" to a score 20-point word with only an -e and -d, together worth only two, I would understandably be a little annoyed. Now, one of the crucial factors I am talking about involves the method he would use to put the letters on the board. There are a number of possibilities. She could slam the letters down (laughing out loud in doing so), preface the act with an apology or a thank you, or she could place the letters down in silence, not even acknowledging her shady act.

"I like a woman who has a dictionary and isn't afraid to use it."

Mark McGrath

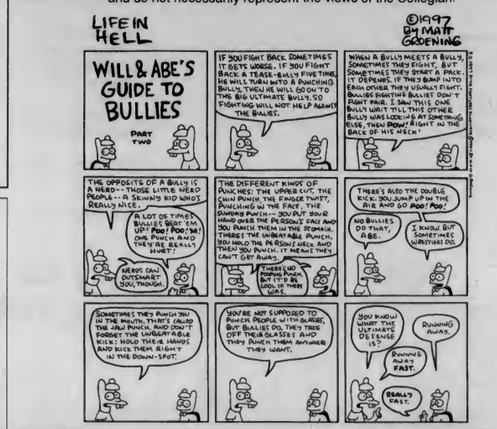
In my book, either of the first two are OK, but the last is unacceptable. If she chooses option A, I don't mind it, because she's opening the door to a loud and obnoxious game of Scrabble, which is one of the best ways to play, and I will gladly match any insult with an insult of my own. If she chooses option B, an apology shows that she is thoughtful — a thank you shows a bit of a digging, sarcastic edge, but in a playful way. Option C would just piss me off. Instead of a game, what would transpire on the board would become a battle of epic proportions, one which would be totally unenjoyable, because I believe that one of the most fantastic things about the game of Scrabble is the anger and frustration you can vent in an honest and up-front way through it. A game of silence kills any therapeutic effect.

Scrabble as a game is wonderful because it allows a person to morph into his or her worst self possible. You can say within the context of a Scrabble game things that would otherwise be unacceptable, meanspirited things like "What's the matter, can't spell?" and "If you're having trouble, 'slow' is a word." Within the parallel dimension of Scrabble, meanness is fine because it will be over in a few minutes, and unless there is a rematch, everything will go back to normal. It's just a game.

There are other Scrabble personality gauges that can be used. Competitiveness on the board is a plus because, when a woman is competitive in Scrabble, she will most likely be competitive in life, a trait near the top of my wish list.

I like a woman who has a dictionary and isn't afraid to use it. Wordchallenging is great because it makes a number of strong statements. When a lady challenges one of my words, she says she isn't spineless and indecisive. She tells me that she can smell my B.S., and will call my bluff if necessary. Knowing that I'm not going to get away with anything is reassuring in a relationship because it will prevent any straying.

I also like to find someone of near equal ability to me because I have always considered myself pretty good, and if beaten, I will want a rematch. If I beat her, I will want her to want a rematch. What could ensue would be a lifetime of playing Scrabble together, which wouldn't be that bad. After all "forever" is worth 39 points on a triple word score.



Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Letters to the Editor

In defense of Heidi

To the Editor:

As the musical director for the UMass Theater Department's production of the Fantasticks, I thoroughly understand the effort, commitment, and pride that goes into a theatrical production. As someone who has been involved in the theater at a variety of levels for a number of years, I have a clear concept of what makes strong art, what makes weak art, and how to communicate about different art forms at different quality levels. As an individual who does not believe in slander, I can honestly express that the UMass Theater Guild's production of The Heidi Chronicles was critiqued in an entirely inappropriate manner ("Heidi fails to chronicle any excitement," May 6).

I would like to strongly encourage the writers, editors and producers of The Massachusetts Daily Collegian to display more professionalism and perhaps even more sensitivity when judging art in the future. We are here at a University which celebrates a wide diversity of individuals who express themselves in a vast domain of mediums. Let us not stifle the arts and artists by attacking individual performers in your writings. I must discourage you from taking your destructive opinions and using them to violate the integrity of students' well-prepared and well-done work. There are certainly times when the human values of the writer must outweigh the obligation to criticize an art which is unappreciated or unenjoyed by the critic.

Gregory Silverman
Amherst

Annoyed

To the Editor:

I recently stumbled upon John Hendrickson's article about the Dave Matthews Band suing New England record stores for selling "bootleg" CDs ("Dave Matthews Band hits new low with lawsuits," May 5). I applaud the Dave Matthews Band for doing so and I am annoyed by the ignorance of John Hendrickson. Although I am not a fan of DMB, I am a devoted fan of Phish and the Grateful Dead. I have been a collector of legitimate bootlegs for several years now, with several hundred in my collection. When bands openly allow the taping of their concerts they are trying to spread the true magic of their performances. But when you rush out to your local store to buy illegal bootleg CDs, you're basically slapping the bands in the face. These bands understand music and are letting you tape their shows for free and advocating the free distribution of these performances. All that happens with illegal bootleg CDs is that some a——e who tapes the show decides to send it off to Europe where they aren't obligated to conform with United States copyright laws. This person makes a ton of money doing this, as do the record labels producing the CDs, as do the record stores selling the illegal CDs. Have you ever gone to a show where they allow taping? If you have ever looked at the back of the tickets, it says in plain English this performance is the property of the band performing (i.e. illegal bootleg CD)... which you favor so much, are not what the idea of taping shows is about. If it was about making money, then the band would be selling these bootleg CDs. All DMB was trying to do was to stop greedy record companies from making money on performances they want their fans to have for free. DMB is not being greedy, they are doing the opposite.

What DMB did was great — I hope all these record stores have to pay the $100,000 fine... basically DMB is suing these record stores because they want these shows to be distributed freely and they are trying to make sure that they are. I hope that you change the article which I found on the Internet because I do not feel that it is accurate at all. All that article represents is some pig-headed kid who knows absolutely nothing about the taping scene, trying to get some glory by making DMB into some big monster.

Brian Meyer
jensuwe@concentric.net

Appalled

To the Editor:

I am totally appalled by what I just read. I can't believe a band like the Dave Matthews Band would do such a thing [lawsuits against bootleggers]. They are certainly not gaining anything by doing this. Is this going to stop the selling of bootlegs throughout the United States? No! It goes on everywhere. Even near my hometown, Scranton, Pennsylvania. I think they [DMB] are trying to scare somebody but it isn't working. I refuse to even buy another CD or ticket of theirs. I am so glad that you brought this to everyone's attention... I hope to see a great boycott, if people really care. Just because they are a good band, and now popular, does not give them the right to push us around!

Kevin Biglin
Dishwashin@aol.com

An Objectivist response

To the Editor:

Frank Smith's attack (letter, May 5) on the UMass Objectivist Club and his misrepresentation of our position are unwarranted.

Mr. Smith seems to think that we can deny a person's "right to volunteer for servitude." This is not the case. We hold that a person can volunteer for any charitable cause that he wishes. In fact, I gave freely of my time to volunteer for the Philadelphia protest against Clinton's summit. While we do object to Clinton's proposed requirement for mandatory service for high school students, that is a side issue. What we reject on principle is the idea that sacrifice or service, voluntarily chosen or otherwise, is morally right. We dismiss out-of-hand any claim that what one has or hasn't done for others is the standard by which to judge a person's moral worth, and that one has a "duty" to serve others.

Mr. Smith states that high school students opposed to the service requirement "have every right, by law, to choose dropping out of high school without meeting this graduation requirement." The implication here is that no matter what a student does he should give up something. If he wants to graduate and have a productive life, he must "volunteer" his time to serve others. If he wants to maintain his independence and live his own life, he must give up a high school diploma and, presumably, a future career, life and happiness. On Mr. Smith's premise, our nation's young people are inexorably doomed to misery and frustration — all because they have a "duty" to serve others. Mr. Smith has not considered that there is a viewpoint that rejects self- sacrifice completely, a viewpoint that says: You have no moral obligation to live for others.

Contrary to what Mr. Smith says, the leaders of the summit do want us "to feel guilt for fending for ourselves." Consider summit–backer Colin Powell's statement that those who are not serving others are on the "moral sidelines." The choice General Powell offers us: live for yourself or be moral. With this false alternative, guilt is inevitable. Feel guilty for being selfish or feel guilty for not finding happiness in the morality of servitude. Consider President Clinton's April 5th radio address where he states that "citizen service is the main way we recognize that we are responsible for one another," and asks us to "think about the duty all of us owe to one another." What becomes of the person who chooses not to serve others? He is according to Clinton, defaulting on his "responsibility" to others. Again, the choice presented to us is self-interest is morally worth. The man who chooses self–interest is to feel guilty for not being moral.

The position of the UMass Objectivist Club is that volunteering by itself is not even a moral issue. One does not become virtuous by giving one's time or energy to others. What is a moral issue is the age–old idea that we have a "duty" to sacrifice, serve and volunteer for others. Students are inundated with this idea from every source imaginable. Professors, parents, clergymen, TV sitcoms, newspapers, celebrities, politicians. There is only one source, one set of ideas, which rejects the vicious doctrine of sacrifice and upholds each person's moral righteousness in pursuing his own goals independently of others. Ayn Rand's philosophy of Objectivism is the only philosophy which upholds morality — and the value of the individual human being. Visit the website of the Ayn Rand Institute (www.aynrand.org) or call the UMass Objectivist Club at 546–1862. Find out more about objectivism. It's in your own self–interest.

Keith Didion
Central
President of the UMass Objectivist Club

Letters to the Editor must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu
Letters may be edited for length, clarity and style.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Monday, May 12, 1997

The Value is in the book

By Millicent Jackson
Collegian Staff

THE VALUE IN THE VALLEY
Iyanla Vanzant
Simon & Schuster

So you've fallen and think you can't get up? Is it the job you hate, but need in order to pay the rent? Is it that relationship that you gave your all only to end up with a broken heart... again? Perhaps it's your children, a family member or a lifelong friend doing you in or dragging you down. Maybe you have been led to believe that this is all your fault or that struggling and suffering is your lot in life.

Empowerment specialist and spiritual–life counselor Iyanla Vanzant says that life is an act of faith and suffering is optional. These everyday challenges and obstacles are what Vanzant calls "valleys," and as bad as they may seem, there is a purpose. Vanzant says, "There is so much value in the valley."

Valleys challenge your fears, strengthen your will and give you valuable insights into yourself, the world and people around you. Those ugly experiences that make you the most uncomfortable can help you grow. Valley experiences let you know it's time to do a new thing in a new way. Valleys are not one–size fits all. They are custom–designed to teach you how to reach your highest potential — to be divine, prosperous and in alignment with your greatest good.

The valleys that Vanzant focuses on are the valleys of love, success, courage, purpose and intent. The valleys that she speaks about are ones that we, at one time or another in our lives, find ourselves into deeply. The valleys that we find ourselves in at a particular time ore often due to the way we perceive ourselves. How do we get out of these valleys? By simply changing our attitude towards the situation and by remaining true to ourselves, above all others.

For example, if we are stuck in the valley of love, we must recognize that the valley of love is merely a reflection of what you are thinking about yourself and doing to, with and for yourself. If the object of your affection did something to hurt you and make you feel down, Vanzant says, "People cannot treat you badly unless you stay around to be treated badly. People cannot disappoint you, reject you, or use you, unless you interpret their actions that way."

As for the valley of success. No matter how we define it as individuals, we must prepare ourselves to receive it by developing a success filled mind and heart. Peace, love, joy and gratitude will attract things like themselves to make us more peaceful, loving, joyful and grateful. We must not accept less than we want, by developing the consciousness that we deserve the best. We must stop squeezing ourselves into uncomfortable places and situations because we believe there is nothing else valuable.

The valley of love and success are a mere foreglean of the wealth of insight Vanzant has to offer. If you've ever been disappointed, rejected or just plain old scared to let go, then you may still be in the valley. Iyanla Vanzant knows — she's been there. On a bad day, she still gets there, but now she shares with you the way out.

Negritude: Ownership of the Black Self

"Tu n'es un negre! Un negre! Un sale negre...* You're only a nigger! A nigger! A dirty nigger! Your heart is a sponge that drinks. Frantically drinks the poisoned liquid of Vice. And your color imprisons your blood. In an eternity of slavery... Dans l'eternite de l'esclavage."

Stephanie Johnson

In 1917 the call rang out for war. The Harlem Hellfighters were on the Rhine. Blacks, despite opposition on all fronts, had integrated into the Allied army. "But no black American troops were allowed to march in the great victory parade of the Allies up the Champ–Elysees." The soldiers were black, but not too black for blood. They celebrated at home. The bugle–boys of the Harlem Renaissance cried, Dance! Dance! Black behinds and feet pounded out Lenox Ave. to 145th St. Then, all of Harlem, stone and steel, was a drum. And those with ears, legs, ideas, songs, poems and books fell in line. Jean Toomer, Zora Neale Hurston and Langston Hughes were in the front line, high stepping, mouths yawning and carnivorous. It was here that Black Power rose. Crumpled shadows grew out like petals of a flowering ghetto. Nature has never been so beautiful, never been so loud! The people were ready and the poetry was their pulse.

However, the pitch of the parade zipped into an inaudible frenzy of race riots. Over 370,000 black men had enlisted in the war, but white America was determined to manufacture a nigga. John Hope Franklin's From Slavery to Freedom recounts, "More than 70 blacks were lynched during the first year of the postwar period." A vermilion sun mauled the sky each morning and covered our almost purple violent horizon. But blacks did more than survive the Red Summer of 1919. We set our blaze, hotter than the Holy Ghost, higher than Black Hawk's flames. We fought the Klan and the Slave Codes. But there were other segregation clauses that would resurface with the constancy of breaking surf on our smoldering sunset shores.

Applauding youth laughed with young prostitutes
And watched her perfect, half–clothed body sway;
Her voice was like the sound of blended flutes
Blown by black players upon a picnic day.
She sang and danced on gracefully and calm
The light gauze hanging loose about her form;
To me she seemed a proudly–swaying palm
Grown lovelier for passing through a storm.
Upon her swarthy neck black shiny curls
Luxuriant fell; and tossing coins in praise,
The wine–flushed, bold–eyed boys, and even the girls, Devoured her shape with eager, passionate gaze;
But looking at her falsely–face,
I knew herself was not in that strange place.

—Claude McKay (1890–1948)
The Harlem Dancer

Many of Harlem's poets, actors, singers sought refuge in Paris. The French who had already torn through Africa in the name of colonization were, by 1920, tripping wire with Creoles and the waving at well assimilated Negroes. But the Negroes from America, as uncouth as they were free with their lips, hips and the banjos, had arrived. Remembered most famously was Josephine Baker. She gave France the rhythmic keys to their starched cuffs laced with mellifluous music and dainty dance. The Russian modernist ballet, Le Sacre du Printemps, started Paris, then the center of high culture. Black, naked and dancing, she became their obsession of primitivism. The French were starving for Jazz Cleopatra. Many other black artists expatriated to France. Luggage–less but thick–skinned we carried our "jass" and "jitter–bugs" to France. If America would not have us as men then were not Afro–Americans. And our music was not the Americanization of Europe. We were seeking freedom. Our human rights are intimately linked to the music of our edited souls. The proud presence of Countee Cullen, Sterling Brown and Claude McKay awakened students in Paris to their Slave Codes, to their own Code Noir.

Leon Damas was among the first generation of French Negritude writers along with Nicolas Guillen and Jacques Roumain. Although fed by the fiery music blustering on the other side of the North Atlantic Ocean, Negritude poetry was "direct, slangy, accessible to the ordinary reader, but better performed than read on the page." The embers of resistance were shared. Paris was burning for a second time. The flames were lapping up everything that was not already fervently on fire. The conflagration attacked colonies doused with the thick pitch of black people since slavery. Negritude carried on Toussaint L'Overture's torch and set both Spanish and French Antilles alive again. All those who could not ignite were consumed. O' Africa's oil is both crude and cruel. Let the coal sing out. "Illuminate me, O darkness, and the world I live in!"

Negritude was born in the hips of Haiti, like the Negresse and her fists. The violent scream of mother and child for the first time in 1971, became The Haitian Revolution. However the father labored in Africa. Leopold Sedar Senghor, first black president of Senegal, is The Father of Negritude. But what is Negritude? It is a world fraternity among blacks who have suffered as a result of the dehumanization of their skin. God freed man with life. And since that moment of breath, man's creation, there is no day of the week in which he shall ever lose his free soul. Negritude is our affirmation to that covenant with God. Black writers all over the world, if they have struggled to be free, shake embers of coal from their hands, and the written word — history — burns away like peeling creation.

There is Negritude in French, Latinity in Spanish, and the Harlem dancer. It has been said that Negritude is not just the by–product of French colonialism, nor is it just the Harlem–Caribbean–Parisian connection of philosophical liberation only. By it is an important moment in history whose permutations and consequences extend to the present.

Negritude is ownership of the black self. However the power of its languages has enabled Negritude poetry to attack the ear and the heart in rhythmic syncopation. To play the tom–toms you have play the "gritty–ness" of the dancers. Whether that be French, Spanish, Senegalese, Creole or the Creolization of any of these languages, the sound is definite. Je suis negre donc je suis. I am black therefore I am. The sounds of certain words with different languages have the ability to capture the essence of their function. If your black and someone tells you: "Cerra la bemba... Close your bottom lip!" You react, "Y tu abuela... and your grandmother, where is she?" The time to write Negritude poetry may have already passed. The black man's scenery has become mute. However the words of truth are liberating. Negritude is not the protagonist to the story of the coming of the white man with his decultturalization and his acculturalization. He is rather new. Negritude and the phonetics of freedom are ancient.

Stephanie Johnson is a Collegian correspondent.

Race, responsibility and history

Allana E. Todman

In post–Civil Rights era America, most white commentators on issues of race emphasize the necessity for all of us to become "color blind." That is, we should be blind to the real imputed differences that divide people by skin color or phenotype, by our physical appearances, or our genetic backgrounds. We should learn to become "comfortable" with the differences which are reflected in the color spectrum of humanity. And to reinforce this perspective of white tolerance, we are often quoted the words of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., that people should be judged "not by the color of their skin, but the content of their character."

The "color blind thesis" almost always is accompanied by an appeal to "forgive and forget." The logic of this argument is as follows:

"Black Americans were terribly oppressed during slavery and Jim Crow segregation. But there's been much social progress in recent years, thanks to the constructive cooperation between the races. We need to move beyond ancient grievances and racial bitterness towards taking personal responsibility for our own lives. After all, we are all responsible for ending racism."

With certain variations, this is the basic argument that is repeated over and over again in the white media, by white political leaders and institutions about the dynamics of race. The argument is that African Americans must stop being so "sensitive" and "defensive" about the problems of their people and communities. "Responsible" black adults supposedly should understand why a white middle–class couple walking to their parked automobile at midnight becomes fearful when they are approached by several African–American teenagers. All of us bear part of the blame for prejudice.

In popular films and culture, the message is the same. At the beginning of Die Hard with a Vengeance, a white man stands in the center of Harlem, on Amsterdam Avenue, wearing a huge poster sign reading: "I hate Niggers." A cluster of justifiably outraged young black men surrounds the undercover white cop. Yet, the film portrays the African– American males as emotional, dangerous, unstable and threatening.

In the award winning film Pulp Fiction, a white criminal "accidentally" blows off the head of a young black man who him gun discharges. Covered with blood and gore, the white man and his black partner take refuge in the suburban home of another white man. The second white man is outraged that this "dead nigger" was dragged into his home. Yet, to display that he's not really a racist, the film then shows that this bigot is married to an African–American woman. The fact that he has a sexual relationship with a black woman is supposed to illustrate that his tirade of racist epithets has nothing to do with hatred or personal prejudice.

The white corporate–controlled media loves to present stories about "black bigotry." When the Oakland, Calif. board of education suggested that African–American young people may learn best in an environment which validates the language they speak in daily life, blacks were attacked for "rejecting" standard English. When African–American students demand Black Studies courses, or advocate residential housing on campuses which emphasizes black heritage and culture, they are charged with "self– segregation." Affirmative action programs are often described in the press as being based on "racial preference" — despite the fact that the overwhelming majority of those who are the chief beneficiaries of affirmative action are white women.

We will never uproot racism by pretending that "everyone" shares a common responsibility for discrimination and inequality. Blacks people were not "equal partners" in the construction of slavery, segregation and ghettoization. We weren't personally or collectively consulted when the criminal justice system imprisoned one–third of our young men, or when we suffer with twice the unemployment rates of whites. To be "color blind" is to be blind to the history of oppression. To forget the past is to permit those in power to evade their responsibility for black inequality in the present.

Dr. Manning Marable is a professor of history and the director of the Institute for Research in African–American Studies, Columbia University, New York City. "Along the Color Line" appears in over 300 publications throughout the U.S. and internationally.

Dr. Manning Marable

One Time For The Mind: The surface of strength

Noleca Anderson

I will always remember that responsibility to myself is when I refuse to let others do my thinking, talking and naming for me.

It means that I don't treat my body as a commodity with which to purchase superficial intimacy or economic security.

It means insisting that those to whom I give my friendship and love are able to respect my mind.

It means not to be continuously available to others when I need time for myself and work.

Once I begin to feel committed to my life, responsible to myself I can never again be satisfied with the old passive way.

— Quotes compiled from Adrienne Riche
Women Images and Realities.

As the spring semester comes to a close, it is important that we, as black women in academia, analyze our internal growth to see how far we have come in terms of dealing with ourselves emotionally as well as academically. The key that will unlock the door to our future is not only the education we receive, but how well we respond to it.

The struggle of being responsible for our education is not only acknowledging the false ideologies and stereotypical views that marginalize our intellect, emotion and stance on issues that effect us on a daily basis, but allowing the new information to be applicable to our everyday lives.

Dealing with the multiple consciousness of being both the bearer and nurturer is one of the challenges we are challenged with as black women.

For instance, how many of our sisters do we know who have been in relationships, gotten pregnant by their boyfriends who aren't even committed and then are left with a baby in one hand and a welfare check in the other?

All of the sudden, she is looked at as being "strong." In this oppressive situation, the mother is left in a condition where she has to struggle as a single parent, and at the same time maintain a sense of stability for her child.

Or there is the young black woman in academia, who thought that when she came to receive her college education all of the men on campus were going to be picture– perfect, handsome, intellectual (yet funny), ready–to–marry, know–what–they–want black males. So they confide, trust, sex and entrust their emotional security into a man who is at a time in his life where he is defining his own "manhood."

Through this confusion, the female finds her emotions and studies at a flux when she finds that the male she is interested in is spending time with someone else.

Once again, that token word "strong" is used for the black woman in this situation, who has experienced a ping–pong effect with dealing with her ability to cope with her emotions being hurt.

"The image of Black women as long suffering victims can keep us passive and confused... Society finds it difficult to believe we really need physical or emotional support like all women of all races," said Evelyn C. White in the book Chain Chain Change.

In regard to the situations above, the fact that these women have experienced hardship and survived through it is something that needs to be acknowledged. Becoming women who grow out of their situations into stable–minded women, as a result of their experience, is very impressive. But by no means should these situations of oppression tokenize black women as being strong.

By labeling ourselves or allowing others to tell us that we are strong because of what happens in our lives, instead of how we deal with what occurs, marginalizes our life challenges as black women.

In fact, the word "strong," when used to describe certain struggles that black women undergo, has allowed white women to separate many of their struggles from those of ours.

It's time that we challenge the "hidden struggles" that are hardly spoken of when it comes to black women in the community. We cannot allow our issues about relationships, politics or our own emotional security to be hindered.

As college women we have the tools to educate ourselves about the causal factors that contribute to the root of some of our oppression as black women.

Some include unhealthy relationships, communal conflict with sistas, economic insecurity and emotional voids that black women fill through unhealthy mechanisms at times.

No, we're going to open the door for you to find answers about yourself as a black women unless you knock. Here at UMass, you have to knock on that door and open it for yourself.

Our growth at this University, is not only academically, but also internally. We receive internal messages everyday. We must not settle for the excuse of being "strong."

It does not always take hardship to become a strong woman. To live as a responsible black woman, to express your views, challenge situations and motivate yourself academically, constitutes strength. To respect yourself and the "erotica" within, as something unique, is being responsible.

To be responsible is to be strong.

Allana Todman is a Collegian staff member.

UMassissippi Burning

Editor's Note.
The views and opinions expressed in this editorial are not necessarily the views of the Daily Collegian as a whole, but they sure as hell are those of this page and we stand behind Noleca and any student of color trying to bring about awareness. Peace and Stay in Knowledge.

It's Friday night at UMass.

The Greeks are getting wasted on frat row.

A couple of idiots are running up and down John Quincy Adams tower, breaking windows and urinating in the hallway.

Some girl is drunk out of her mind and is about to be date raped, somewhere on campus.

Maybe, you're wondering where the police are? Well, there are about 50 in front of the Malcolm X center (just in case those niggers get out of hand) and two officers (let's just call them officer "Y" and officer "T") approach three African–American students. Officer Y asks the students what they were doing that night with a sarcastic, condescending tone in his voice. The three were familiar with the police harassment that exists all over America and realized that UMass was no exception.

The police saw that they could not aggravate the students while they were together and decided to single one of them out. They chose Steven Lewis Andrew Victor Edwards (let's just call him SLAVE), because they knew about him. He was from the inner city and had been harassed by the "pigs" long before he came to college. He had pride and was not about to let anyone, especially the police officers that his tuition employed to serve and protect him, talk down to and insult him. His name was one of many African–Americans that contributed to a list of students who were alleged "trouble makers" and not going to graduate (a sort of black list).

They told the other students to leave and demanded that SLAVE give them his I.D. He asked them why they wanted his I.D. and they began to DISrespect him and curse at him as he refused to hand it over. They placed him under arrest and charged him with disturbing the peace.

I know what you're wondering.

Why didn't SLAVE just cooperate with the police?

Well, if you're not a person of color who has been oppressed, dehumanized and physically and mentally assaulted all your life, and that of your parents lives and ancestors lives, it's obvious why you would ask that question. The question you should be asking is: Why did the cops approach the students in the first place? Maybe because they did not see them as students, but as SLAVES.

As children of color, we are told that we can be anything (doctors, lawyers, presidents) as long as we work hard and go to school. Our parents struggled to send us to college. We pay the same tuition as everybody else. We drive the same cars, wear the same clothes and listen to the same music. But I guess no matter where you go, how hard you try or how much you accomplish, you will always be defined and confined by your color. All the pride you have in your color and ethnicity is over shadowed and undermined by those who oppress you.

For students of color on this campus, racism is not something that can be ignored. We confront it every time we enter a classroom and we are one of the two faces of color in the room. When we are forced to speak for our entire race because we are so under–represented on campus. When other students assume we got here because of some quota. When we are followed in the campus store. When other students get probation for crimes we know we would have been expelled for. When our organizations get no funding and our causes have no voice!

UMass preaches about diversity on campus, but I think many students of color will agree with me when I say that this University is about as diverse as a public bus in Alabama before the Montgomery Boycotts! Sure there are a few faces of color, but we're still at the back of the bus.

I congratulate all of the students of color for overcoming all that works to prevent you from succeeding on this plantation we call America. Although we have lost many battles, the war is still ours to win. Never give up and don't let them hold you down. You are not a MINORITY. You and your people have, and will accomplish MAJOR things. Peace and Love.

Noleca Anderson is a Collegian correspondent.

Arts & Living

Monday, May 12, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Pavement underwhelms in Boston

By Martin J. Keane
Collegian Staff

PAVEMENT/ SHUDDER TO THINK/ SILKWORM
The Roxy
May 9

BOSTON — In today's convoluted world of the indie– rock underground, a group's credibility rating tends to slide once the average alterna–loser discovers the music to be listenable. It is a testament then to Pavement, a band whose popularity has steadily risen with each record, that they've maintained their hip credentials in the face of such daunting circumstances.

Touring in support of their latest LP, this year's Brighten The Corners (Matador/Capitol), Pavement played a sold–out Boston on Friday night in one of the most eagerly anticipated shows to pass through New England this spring. Unfortunately, the aura of anticipation resulted in a show that was a disappointment.

Instead of expanding on the deliriously witty and intelligent musical abstractions found on their consistently stellar recorded output, Pavement chose to play it safe — and lazy. Their "slacker" reputation came to the fore in both performance and stage demeanor which resonated through the audience. While this quirky and aloof approach works masterfully on record, it provided a frustrating approach for which to play a concert.

The mostly collegiate crowd of semi–interested hipsters appeared to be more interested in boosting their own indie– credibility than actually watching the show, while Pavement struck a cooler–than–thou slacker pose that failed to incite anything besides widespread apathy. By the end of the main set, it appeared as if the major topic of discussion amongst audience members was which club on Lansdowne St. to hit after the show.

This obvious lack of enthusiasm did not go unnoticed by the band as they played an uninspired and often boring set that barely lasted an hour. Opening with "Old To Begin," the laid–back tone to the show was unmistakable. While running through the majority of Brighten The Corners, otherwise standout tunes such as "Stereo" and "Date With Ikea" lost their focus through Malkmus & Co.'s ambivalence.

The venue, Boston's infamous Roxy, did little to help things, as the strict 10 p.m. curfew resulted in Pavement pulling the plug halfway through the encore, which personified the mood of their overall performance. Throughout the show, the band played with little enthusiasm and lacked the kooky improvisational tendencies that make them so endearing on record.

However, there were a few bright spots. "Perfume–V," off their debut, Slanted & Enchanted, was a pleasant surprise, as it showcased the excellent percussion duo of Steve West and Bob Nastanovich. The ending cover of Echo & The Bunnymen's "The Killing Moon" was an interesting choice, although the band mysteriously stopped it in the third verse and abruptly walked off.

The first encore of "Grounded," off 1995's highly experimental Wowee Zowee, proved to be the highlight of the evening. It was the only song that had a palpable intensity level, as Malkmus wrestled endlessly with his guitar during the soaring and melancholic main riff, while his bandmates struggled mightily to keep up.

While the headliners aimlessly ran through the motions, the two opening acts proved more than capable of holding an audience's attention, even if it was only for 30 minutes in front of a handful of early arrivals.

Shudder To Think, with their unusual blend of Craig Wedren's operatic vocals, quirky keyboards, and loud glam guitars, entertained the crowd. Looking like a group of art school miscreants who stole Morrissey's wardrobe, they played a set comprised mostly of songs from their last two efforts, Pony Express Record and the new 50,000 B.C.

Opening the show was Silkworm, the Missoula, Mont. threesome. Playing a mix of songs off their last two albums, they sustained an intensity level for 30 minutes that was unmatched by Pavement's snoozy set.

COURTESY CARL BUTENSKY

Along with Nirvana, Pavement are arguably the most important band of the '90s. Unlike their albums, though, Pavement is often a hit–or–miss live act.

UNDERGRADUATE TEACHING ASSISTANTSHIP AVAILABLE

DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS AND STATISTICS
$650.00 A SEMESTER
FOR APPROXIMATELY 10-12 HOURS A WEEK.

FURTHER INFORMATION AND APPLICATION FORMS SEE THE RECEPTIONIST
ROOM 1622 LEDERLE GTWR

Security Positions
Bright Moments Festival
July 10, 17, 24
You must be: A UMass student returning to UMass in the Fall and available to work the nights of the concerts and attend one informational meeting.
Pay is $5 per hour and free admission to concert.
For information call New WORLD Theater at 545-1972 before May 30th.

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

You are invited to . . .
Spectrum Magazine's Opening Reception
HELP US CELEBRATE THE NEW 1996/1997 ISSUE OF SPECTRUM THE UNIVERSITY'S FINE ART AND LITERARY MAGAZINE
MEET THE TALENTED STUDENT WRITERS AND ARTISTS, HAVE SOME CAKE, AND BE ONE OF THE FIRST TO RECEIVED A FREE COPY OF THE MAGAZINE!
ALL ARE WELCOME, REFRESHMENTS WILL BE SERVED.
OPEN HOUSE BETWEEN 7:30 AND 9:30 PM
MONDAY MAY 12TH IN CAMPUS CENTER ROOM 803
SPECTRUM IS SPONSORED IN PART BY THE UMASS ARTS COUNCIL.

■ defense

continued from page 10

team in the nation.

The Minuteman defense lived up to its billing against Hofstra, shutting out the Flying Dutchmen for 49:32. Previously, the longest shutout bid of the season for goaltender John Kasselakis was 40:22 against Notre Dame.

"When you make a save when normally you wouldn't make that save, all of a sudden it's just two minutes into the game and you're already into it," Kasselakis said. "It just made it easier to go on."

The Minutemen started off strong, scoring three goals in the first six minutes, and adding one more in each of the middle two quarters while suppressing the Hofstra attack. Preserving the lead was on the minds of all UMass players, not just Kasselakis.

"A big part of our defense is our offense and as long as they hold the ball for us they make our defense look even better," senior defender Harold Drumm said. "Not that we're scared to play defense, but if the other team doesn't have the ball, that's the best defense you can have."

The UMass backline saw plenty of action. Hofstra outshot the Minutemen 43–17, but only 22 of the Flying Dutchmen scoring bids were on net. UMass landed 12 of its 17 goals on target, and four of their first six hit twine.

"Whether it's Hofstra or Princeton, I hope for the same thing every game," Minuteman coach Greg Cannella said. "I don't hope we go up five goals or four goals or three goals, we just hope we have a lead. Go up early— it's the style that we play, we hope that we can hold on and play well throughout the game."

But the fourth quarter surge by Hofstra was inevitable, according to UMass.

"Hofstra's a good team," Cannella said. "You can't hold down Tony Alexander, Paul Judge and [Brian] Langtry. Down 6–0, they could have rolled over and just given up but they didn't, and they came back. That's probably due to the leadership they have and their coaching staff, and the seniors in their program."

In the second half, when many teams would lose their composure and try to up the tempo to get back into the contest, Hofstra played within its abilities and tried to play its game.

"We played with a lot of character towards the end," Hofstra senior defenseman Richard Langtry said. "We fought back as hard as we could, but you can't let a team like UMass get out to 6–0 lead and expect to win no matter who you are."

UMass was also respectful of its opponent's efforts.

"They did a real nice job in the second half," Cannella said. "They did play zone, but they went at [our attackers] and they pressed hard on us a little bit and that got us in trouble.

"They prevented us from moving the ball around. Early in the game we were able to do that."

The zone kept the maroon and white attack at bay through most of the second half, but the Minutemen were happy to control the ball and consume the clock.

"Coach said unless there's a great shot, why not hold it until there is a great shot," Drumm said. "We're up four goals, they're going to have to come out of the zone sometime."

The zone is nothing new to the UMass attack. Since Loyola used an off–man defense to blank the Minutemen in the second half and come back from a five goal deficit for an 11–8 win on April 12, the Minutemen have been highly aware of it.

"I expect to see [a zone defense] a little next week so we're going to have to prepare for that," Cannella said.

Next week, when the Minutemen face top seed Princeton, they will need to be ready for a lot of things to beat the nation's No. 1 defense, No. 3 offense (15.25 goals per game) and No. 2 margin of victory (8.75).

"They're a great team," Drumm said. "They've got a great offense, but Johnny's a great goalie.

"He's going to make the saves and our defense is going to play hard and our offense is going to play strong also. I figure we've got a great chance, a great opportunity."

"It's also an opportunity for about 65 percent of our guys to go home and play in front of a home crowd," Cannella said, referring to the 17 New York–based players on his roster and the predetermined second round tournament site at Hofstra in Hempstead, N.Y.

As for the imminent challenge of facing the defending national champion, which has won 25 straight games and three consecutive Ivy League titles, Minuteman short–stick defensive middie P.G. Massey offered only humorous determination.

"I figure we're going to have to play them sometime in the tournament, so we might as well get it out of the way and move on," he said.

■ lacrosse

continued from page 10

Brendan Glass, who fired a quick shot past Spruyt with 9:35 remaining in the period.

"Anytime you have a rush in lacrosse and the crowd starts to get on the edge of their seats, like when P.G. throws the ball through and Brendan comes through and finishes on it, that really fires the team up from defense to offense," Cannella said. "It's just a great play all around."

Jim Kennedy added an unassisted tally with just over a minute left in the first frame to give the Minutemen a 4–0 first quarter edge.

While the second quarter was not as lucrative for UMass, it did give the Minutemen a chance to up their lead by one. With only six seconds on the clock before halftime, McKeefrey found the back of the Dutchman cage to give UMass the momentum heading into the intermission.

That momentum translated into another goal to boost UMass' advantage. Just five minutes out of the locker room, Chris Grande whipped a shot close to the ground from 12 yards out to close out UMass' scoring.

It also spelled a third straight shutout period for Hofstra's offensive unit. Stymied by the defensive work of long sticks Drumm, Adam Waxer and Greg Macdonald and defensive midfielders Massey and Todd Sokolowski, the Flying Dutchmen struggled to get close to UMass goalie John Kasselakis.

"A big part of our defense is our offense," Drumm said. "As long as they hold the ball for us they make our defense look even better. It's not that we're scared to play defense, but if the other team doesn't have the ball, that's the best defense you can have."

"Anytime you have a rush in lacrosse and the crowd starts to get on the edge of their seats, like when P.G. throws the ball through and Brendan comes through and finishes on it, that really fires the team up from defense to offense," Cannella said. "It's just a great play all around."

Jim Kennedy added an unassisted tally with just over a minute left in the first frame to give the Minutemen a 4–0 first quarter edge.

While the second quarter was not as lucrative for UMass, it did give the Minutemen a chance to up their lead by one. With only six seconds on the clock before halftime, McKeefrey found the back of the Dutchman cage to give UMass the momentum heading into the intermission.

That momentum translated into another goal to boost UMass' advantage. Just five minutes out of the locker room, Chris Grande whipped a shot close to the ground from 12 yards out to close out UMass' scoring.

It also spelled a third straight shutout period for Hofstra's offensive unit. Stymied by the defensive work of long sticks Drumm, Adam Waxer and Greg Macdonald and defensive midfielders Massey and Todd Sokolowski, the Flying Dutchmen struggled to get close to UMass goalie John Kasselakis.

"A big part of our defense is our offense," Drumm said. "As long as they hold the ball for us they make our defense look even better. It's not that we're scared to play defense, but if the other team doesn't have the ball, that's the best defense you can have."

"Hofstra was also zoning it up against us," Massey said. "Coach said unless there's a great shot why not hold it until there's a good shot. We're up four goals, they're going to have to come out of the zone sometime."

When the Dutchmen did get close though, Kasselakis, who holds the nation's third best goals against average, was there to make the stop. The junior finished with 18 saves, which ties his career–high.

"The second one of the game, I just kicked that one right out and kept on going," Kasselakis said.

The fourth quarter was a different story, though. Richard Langtry was able to beat Kasselakis with a one–on–one fast break shot to put the Dutchmen on the board and Hofstra capitalized on the advantage.

The Dutchmen added three more goals to pull within striking distance of the Minutemen, as Chad Eisenhart, Brian Langtry and Jarred Testa struck for Hofstra.

JONATHAN M. PLACE / COLLEGIAN

P.G. Massey's work in the midfield did not go unnoticed, as the junior helped UMass with a pair of assistants.

Collegian classifieds...gosh darn it...they really DO work!

Australia so much to do you'll be stuck for choice
NEW SOUTH WALES
19 days Reefs & Rainforests Vacation including 2 days of 4-wheel drive adventure and 3 days of sailing (land only) $1525
5-day Rainforest Adventure including a stay on Fitzroy Island, off the Great Barrier Reef (QUEENSLAND) (land only) $495
VICTORIA / TASMANIA
Discover Melbourne (land only) 4 days starting at $281
Tasmania, (land only) 9 day trek starting at $689
L.A. to Melbourne roundtrip airfare $856
L.A. to Cairns roundtrip airfare $962
PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO LIMITED AVAILABILITY AND CHANGE. TAXES NOT INCLUDED. CST#1008080-50
Great Barrier Reef & Beyond
Queensland Australia
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street, Amherst
Tel: 413-256-1261
www.ciee.org or 1-800-2-COUNCIL

The Mill Hill Club
Route 28 West Yarmouth
Cape Cod, MA. 508-775-2580
Pub Menu
Pool Tables
Darts
Satellite TV
22 TVs
Open Daily at 3 pm Sat and Sun Noon
The Summer of 97 "night life on the cape" the lineup includes:
The Slush Puppies
Lulus in Crisis
Alstonians
Mark Morris and the Cattunes
the cast of Beatlemania
the Marcels
Tyson Vs Holyfield
Coors Light Bikini Contest
Miller Lite Men's Hot Body Contest
Plus more great events!
College Week May 10th thru May17th
Must be 18 with proper ID
"Hurricane" Sat
"All College DJ Dance Party" Sun
"Blonde on Blonde" Mon
"Sheep Dip" Tues
"Cape Fear" Thurs
"Men From Heaven" Fri
all male dance revue show 9pm
Plus 96.3 the Rose DJ Steve McVie's Hot Dance Party at 11pm
"Frank Santos" the "R" Rated Hypnotist Sat
THE MADNESS CONTINUES WITH THE WORLD FAMOUS GORDIE MILNE HAPPY HOUR SATURDAYS 3 TO 8
Summer Jobs Available
• bartenders • waitress • cashiers • keno operators
• floor staff • door persons • cooks • immediate openings
Apply in person. No phone calls please

Lincoln Real Estate
Gilreath Manor Condos
on Hobart Lane
Showings Start in April for June or September Occupancy!
• 3 Bedroom
• 1 1/2 Baths
• Heated Basement
• Gas Heat & Hot water
• Hardwood Floors
• 1/2 mile to campus
• On Bus Route
LINCOLN REAL ESTATE • 25 N. PLEASANT ST. • 253-7879

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
UNIVERSITY STORE
Present a Special
Graduation Section
Look for it... Tuesday, May 13, 1997 • Only in the Collegian

When it's time to pack up and go home
call the
HANDLE WITH CARE
Packaging Store
The Packaging & Shipping Experts
We can help!
Getting your stuff home doesn't have to be a hassle. We'll pack and ship it all home for you. From bicycles to computers to a whole apartment full of furniture - we'll get it there safely.
We offer FREE estimates and FREE pick up service
call toll free 888-722-5747 1742 Boston Rd., Springfield, Ma.

A sophomore at UMass, Shannon Voorheis has been selected as a finalist in The 1997Cover Model Search– World Finals, hosted in Irvine, CA, this June. At this event she will have the opportunity to meet and be seen by the directors of ICMS, Gina Ambrose and Super Model Photographer/ International Model Scout Paul St. John. ICMS recruits for over 100 major agencies, U.S. and worldwide, and discovers some of the most photographed models in the world, including dozens of cover girls. Out of thousands of inquiries less than five percent are invited to the World Finals. "I saw the search in some magazine of my little sister's and sent in a picture. I never thought anything would come of it!" Well, it has — and now she is on her way to sunny California. Shannon's parents and family would like to wish her the best of luck and let her know that "You're on your way, baby!"

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Aerobics with Steve Get in great shape this summer at UMass 1st Session M, Tu,Th, 4:30-5:45pm

Take Environmental Science 101 (ES) this summer at UMass. Fulfills BS requirement. Be outdoors, learn about ecology, pest management, soil and water pollution, and more. Numerous case studies. Trudge through swamps, rat rivers, nite hikes and more. Tu, Th, 7-10pm.

SIGMA DELTA TAU invites all university women to their end of the semester Open Rush. May 12th, 5-8, and May 13th, 6-7:30, at 409 N. Pleasant Street. Any questions, call Lori at Michelle at 549-3938

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom renovated- Puffton Fall Option- $640. Heat/Hot Water included. Furniture available. FREE CABLE FOR SUMMER. 549-5079

North Amherst basement apartment 3 miles, UMass/Town. 10 or 20 hours work in exchange for rent 253-4113

Summer Sublet with Fall Option 2 bedroom, spacious Brandywine apartment. Free rent for August! Call 549-5258

Spacious 1 bedroom $430/month incl. hot water. Available June 1st. Call 256-0263

1 bedroom available 6/1 On bus route. 5 minute walk from campus. 549-3502

Three bedroom- Northampton On bus route. $750. Available 6/1. 585-0515

APARTMENT IN TOWN! 1 bedroom. Take over our lease with Fall Option. Call 253-6894

2 bedroom Available 8/1. 1010 N. Pleasant #3. 549-4142

Nice 2 bedroom apt. Available June 1. 10 min. walk to campus. On bus route. Call 549-7585

Take over my lease at The Boulders! $20 off first month's rent and FREE rent in July. Call Jeff at 253-7872

Castle of towns 1,2,3 bedrooms Gas, heat, hardwood floors 253-7879

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550. 2 bedroom- $425. 20 minutes from campus- no bus. Available for Sept. 665-2200

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept. at Squire Village. 885-2203

AUTO FOR SALE

87 Dodge Daxi Grey, dependable. $1100. Call Jessica at 546-4888

Purchasing a used car? Having your car researched? Do you know your rights? Contact The Student Legal Services Office. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

Honda Prelude SI 97- white, standard, sunroof, cond=on- $3200 negotiable. 585-9783, Denise Leave message

1979 VW Bus Runs good. $800 or B/O 586-3074

88 BMW 325is Coupe black, auto, looks/runs excellent. $6900- Josh Fox (days)617-742-6060 ext. 428, (evening)617-899-3002

AUTO FOR SALE

1999 Subaru Station Wagon Great shape, low miles, new tires, alignment, and tune-up. $1500 or best offer. (413)498-5858

Toyota Corolla DX 86 Manual, 4 door, loaded. Less than 6000 miles. Dark green shiner. Leaving country. Must sell! 549-2684

Mazda RX7 85K, 5 speed SP Edtn Red, 1986, power sunroof/steering, A/C, electric windows, AM/FM cassette, Equalizer Sport Rack and Bar. $5500. Call Kim 665-3245

93 Volks Fox Nothing but highway miles. Very clean. Very reliable. $2500 or B/O 549-9221 Leave message

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Jobs Tailelund is hiring $5.50/hour plus bonuses. Hands on computer experience. Apply today. Memorial Hall Basement

SHIPPER/RECEIVER
Summer Position
Milltech Corporation in South Deerfield has a summer position available for a person who can work 30-40 hours per week for June, July, and August. You must be able to pack electronics for shipping and prepare all the paperwork necessary for both shipping and receiving products, equipment, and supplies
To apply for this position fax or e-mail resume by May 16th to Director of Human Resources: Fax# 413-665-0089; e-mail rv@milltech.com

Mullins Center seeks students for '97-'98 season to work part-time, late nights, weekends, and holidays for changeover and post-event clean-up. Stop by Mullins 2nd floor to fill out application

Cape Cod Restaurant Cooks, servers, bartenders dishwashers Will train Housing available P.O. Box 1228 Eastham, MA 02642 Fax (508)255-9374 Call (508)255-9394

Assistant Manager- Cape Cod Restaurants Good opportunity. Will train Housing available P.O. Box 1228, Eastham, MA 02642 Fax (508)255-9374 Call (508)255-9394

Earn up to $3000 part-time in just 4 to 8 weeks. Marketing needs one highly motivated individual to direct summer sales/marketing project at UMass Amherst Contact David (800)563-6854

Earn $20+ Per Hour P/T: Currently hiring college students to process business envelopes for mail-order company. Earn $1 per piece processed. Work from home with no experience required. For FREE info send #10 SASE with phone, school and e-mail address to: The National Mail-House Dept. 2441, POB 13488, Atlanta, GA 30324 or e-mail to genmarkart@aol.com Mention Dept. 2441 in e-mail.

Summer Jobs For The Environment! $25-$5,000/summer. Work with MASSPIRG to stop pollution. Ideal job for college students and others. Career Opportunities. Make a difference this summer. Call Tom 256-8434

Painters experienced in all phases with at least 2 seasons experience with references. $8-$9/hour. Call 256-0831

EMPLOYMENT

Engineering/Technical Graduate Students wanted to sell instrumentation to campus labs. Commissions lucrative. Alic at Scientific Toll-Free (888)290-6080

SUMMER HELP
EARN EXTRA MONEY!!!!!!!!
FLEXIBLE HOURS!!!!!!!
SPEND YOUR SUMMER IN BOSTON!!!!
STARTING PAY $8.00 TO $11.00 PER HOUR PLUS TIPS!
IF YOU ARE ATHLETIC, MOTIVATED, A NONSMOKER
ENJOY HARD WORK AND A WORK OUT
PLEASE GIVE US
A CALL OR COME IN
PLEASE CALL GENTLE GIANT MOVING AT 617-661-3333

Residential Summer Camp Counselors Wanted by Nature's Classroom. Live-in position. Available in Massachusetts to anyone who honestly likes being with kids. 1-800-433-8375

Part-Time Positions available for hard-working, dependable people starting May 21/Competitive wages. If interested contact Justin 549-1128

Summer Childcare Two children, ages 11 and 14. $5/hour. Must have car. 256-1229

Painters Wanted Earn $3000 $5000 for summer. Westwood, Dedham area. Call Mike 549-3758

Bar or Waitperson Apply in person. The Paddock- 127 Elm St., Hatfield

University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts - Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales/ Marketing and PR experience. Call 1-800-743-5656 ext. 122

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call (413)827-7585

Part-Time Sales Rep Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group. 332 Bleecker St. D40, NYC, NY 10014

FOR RENT

1, 2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom apartment. Summer Sublet with Fall Option. Beskallstl/Tennis, pool, partially furnished, AC/Heat included. On bus line. $275 per person negotiable. Call 549-4972

Renovated, Fully Furnished 3 bedroom apartment at Puffton. Available 8/1. Call Rafael 549-4529

Wanted: 3 or 4 people to sublet or take over our 3 bedroom apt starting June 1st. Call 549-5362

Large 2 bedroom Puffton Apt. Available 6/1. Call Marva 549-0207

West Yarmouth Large house. 4 bedroom 253-7436 or (508)775-4776

FOR RENT

Spacious 3 bedroom apt. on bus route. 2 full baths. Heat/H20 included. 1st Floor/Patio. Fits 5 easy. Starts 6/1 to 7/31. 253-7297

3 bedroom apt. Main St. $735. Heat and Hot Water included. Great location. Available 6/1. Call 253-0360

Take over our lease! 1 bedroom On bus line. Available Aug. or Sept. Call 665-5191 or email summer275@aol.com

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September Lease $1,300+. 253-7879

FOR SALE

Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pickup/Delivery available. Retail hours Sunday only, 10am -5pm at Jacksons Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. To sell equipment other days call 256-0541

Buy, Trade, Sell, Consign Good quality. Sundays at Jacksons Flea Market, Route 9 Hadley. 586-4781

U2 Ticket- May 31 Giants Stadium, NJ. Call Jen 253-0609

Large computer desk for sale $50. Call Dave at 253-7520

Apple Powerbook 150 with Claris 2.1 $450 or B/O. Call 549-2907

Color Printer 24 pin Super Quiet Panasonic KXP-2123 dot matrix color. Dave @ 546-6963

AIWA Audio System $150 P-166 Full Package PC $1200. Sharpe VCR $110 (4 headed). Digital Answering Machine $20 or B/O. 256-0767

3 Couches For Sale 2 Loveseats + 1 Huge Couch. Lawn Furniture. 2 Lounges + 2 Chairs w/Pads. Charcoal Grill. Come check it out and make me an offer! Craig 253-3336

HOUSE FOR RENT

House For Rent $1700 per month, 4 bedrooms, one-half miles from Mullins Center. Gas, heat. Call 253-7879

LOST

Have you found a change-purse? Lost somewhere in/ Machmer or around Student Union. Small, turquoise and gray stitched. Please call Amy at 253-6406 if found. Reward!!

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

Cellos
Violins
Violas
Handmade in Vermont
by Thurmond Knight
sold at
Stanwood Strings
Amherst, MA

MISCELLANEOUS

JOIN OUR GLOBAL VILLAGE
1 yr. International MBA
3 Countries & Languages
Financial Aid &
Job Market
Call Texas Graduate
School of International
Management
(512) 888 5441
9 June Enrollment

Whitewater Rafting Student Discounts $65 May 3rd. 1-800-Uncom

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call 1-800-472-9575 ext. 1500018

PERSONALS

A.R. YOU'RE FAT and live in an ugly blue house, but your roommate's gorgeous. - Sarah

Joe. The more I get to know you, the more I want to know you. Can we talk? The Girl Next Door

To all Collegian Staff past and present. Thanks for four great years — and not a single takedown! Best of luck in the future. Jacob

ROOM FOR FOR RENT

Housemate Needed for Fall 2 miles to campus. $280/month. 549-4492

Attention! University Women Rooms available beginning Fall '97. $1260 semester. Includes all utilities and cable. Minute walk to campus. Lynne (508)660-5822 for info.

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+. Call 253-4954 for more info.

1 large room in two bedroom apartment. Looking for two females. Available 6/1 and Fall and Spring Option. On bus route. Very spacious. Great location. Call 549-3992

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+. Call 253-4954 for more info.

ROOMATE WANTED

Male/Female roommate wanted to share a room in our apartment at Salem Place. $175 a month. No downpayment or last month's rent required. Call 546-0334

I need a roommate to share a two bed room apt. in Sunderland for Fall (undergrad, grad, or foreign student). Must be responsible. No drugs. Call Airsen- 546-5812

Free room and board in exchange for babysitting. Must have experience and car. Available Summer with Fall and Spring Option in Holyoke (30 min. ride) 536-9118

ROOMATE WANTED

Need third person Rent split. Two family house. All utilities included. Call 253-9965

Need a place for the summer? We have 1 room available in Puffton/ Male or female. 1 or 2 people. Call 549-9513 Ask for Jessica for more information. Or Chris at 549-8102

SERVICES

Rabbit Rescue can help! Don't abandon your bunny! Call us, we'll find him a new home. Ellen 367-0105

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

SUMMER SUBLET- UPTOWN Apt. 1-4 bedrooms available. Large kitchen and bath. $300/month (negotiable) Call Amy 546-5973

Fall Option Five rooms available in house next to campus. 549-1570

Huge bedroom in South Amherst Mt. Pollux in the backyard. Washer/Dryer $250/month negotiable. Call Peter 253-5482

2 bedrooms available Huge basement, parking. On bus route. LITERALLY on campus. Dan 546-2982

Boulders- 1 bedroom available in 2 bedroom. Includes A/C and water. On bus line. Call 256-0085 ASAP

$200 month Summer rooms available. Very close to campus and town. Call Cheryl 546-0605 or Lynne (508)655-5822

2 bedroom available with Fall Option in Southpointe Apt. Call 253-7967

Rooms For Rent Behind bars. Uptown Amherst. Four bedrooms. Partly furnished. June 1st till August 31st. $250 a month or best offer. Jen 548-8933

1 bedroom available June 1st- Aug. 30. Driftwde Apts. On bus route. Everything included. $500 a month. 665-5171

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom townhouse, for summer sublet. Call 253-6467

Summer Sublet 5 bedroom house On Phillips Circle. Front porch. Backyard. Washer/Dryer. Route 9. Hadley. $1175/month. Call 586-0363

One bedroom apartment Uptown above Newberry Comics. Available for June/ July. August Call 253-0223

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths. Available June 1st. ONE MONTH FREE! Call 253-6467

3 bedroom, fully furnished house on Sunset Ave. 1-5 people. Great location. Less than 1 minute walk from campus. Call anytime 549-2716.

Renovated 2 bedroom apt. in Sunderland. Furnishings negotiable. Washer/Dryer, carpeting, cable, refrigerator. On bus route. Great deal! Call 665-5060.

Mill Valley- 2 bedroom. 2 bathroom. 2 air conditioners. Fully furnished! With Fall Option. Call 253-8880

Sunny 2 bedroom 2 bath. Fall Option. Mill Valley. $825/negotiable. 253-0551

SUMMER SUBLET

3 bedroom Puffton Apt. Great price. Available 6/1. Call 6-6605 or 6-5681

Phillips St. House June 1-Sept 1. Price negotiable. Option of 1 to 4 bedrooms. Call 548-9224

Summer Sublet available 6/1 to 8/31. 1 bedroom in townhouse one block from bus, laundry, and downtown Noho. Great house, big room. A steal @ $300 per month. Option to renew lease. Older/or grad student preferred. Smoking OK. If interested, call John, Ken, or Chris @ 584-8680

Sublet 6/1 to 8/31 in NoHo near Pearl St. and Metro. 2 bedroom $850+/month. Call 586-4388

Nice room in 4 bedroom apt. Great house. Great location. $290/month. Call Yvonne 549-1827

2 bedroom apt. Brandywine A/C. $750. Partly furnished. Available 6/1

2 bedroom apt. Starting June 1st with Fall Option. Heat/Hot Water included. $710/month. Call 549-5272

2 bedroom apt. Starting June 1st with Fall Option. Newly carpeted. $775 a month. Two minute walk to bus. Call 549-5329. Ask for Jess or Mandy.

1 room available in 2 bedroom apt. On-site laundry. With Fall Option. On bus route. Rent $306. Last months rent negotiable. Call 256-0311

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. Rent negotiable. 549-3310

19th Century House in Belchertown. 3 bedrooms, furnished. Close to lake and trails. Great price! 323-9572

Summer Sublet with Option Uptown 1 bedroom. 5 min. walk to campus. $515. Call 256-8251

Large bedroom in 6 bedroom house. On Route 9. $257 a month. Call 256-8243

Spacious 2 bedroom Available 8/1. Heat/Hot Water/Gas included. Minutes from UMass. On bus route. $600/month. Call 549-4982 Fall Option

Share 2 bedroom apt. at Colonial Village for the summer with female 253-3241

1 bedroom is 2 bedroom apartment. Laundry and Gym on site. Guest female non-smoker. No pets. $335 includes heat and hot water. 253-5429.

1 bedroom is a 4 bedroom spacious Hadley farm house. Must see. Starts June at $250. Call 549-1018

2 bedroom apartment with Fall Option. Call 549-4089

Cheap 2 bedrooms near Puffers. $175 per month per person plus utilities. Available 6/1. Call 548-7066

FREE RICE! Single rooms. Alpine Common. Utilities included. Best Offer! 259-1834

Sunny 2 bedroom 2 bath. Fall Option. Mill Valley. $825/negotiable. 253-0551

SUMMER SUBLET

Room Available 5/15 Great location near Amherst Center. $350 includes all utilities. (201)870-8228 Leave message

3 bedroom newly renovated apartment Puffton Village. Best Offer. Available 6/1. Call 549-5405

Sublet or Take Over Lease 6/1 2 bedroom Brandywine. Recently renovated. 549-5132

House with 2 bedrooms available On bus route in Hadley. 1 bath. $170 a month + utilities/bdc. Call Paul 587-0471

Summer Sublet Sterling 6/1 $220/month. 1 mile from campus. 548-3392 Female only.

Great one bedroom apt. for Summer Sublet w/Fall Option. Colonial Village. Available June 1st. $400/month. Call now at 256-0880

2 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Available 6/1 w/Fall Option. 549-4493

Sublet- Sunderland PVTA stops at house. Considerate housemates. One bedroom. $294/month. 665-9066

2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom apt. in South Amherst. 2 bathrooms. Rent negotiable. Call 253-6606

Sublet $200 a month in Amherst. On bus line. Call Andy 253-5482

Puffton! One large room and one small room in 3 bedroom apartment. Call 549-8969

Single, double, triple rooms in big 3 floor house on edge of campus. 3 bath, 3 shower, kitchen, cable, utilities. Only $500 all summer. Available May 23. Call Fabio at 548-7076 for info.

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom in Montague 3825 summer. Cans OK. 367-0297

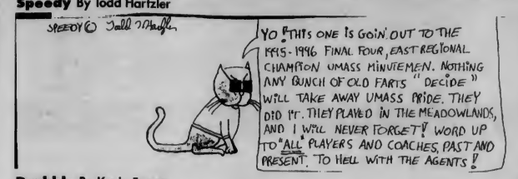
CHEAP! 2 or 3 bedroom apt. Main St. Amherst. HUGE backyard. Call Sam or Joe at 546-3798

Apt. For One!!! June 1st. $495/month. Utilities! Not far from campus (ES) Will go quickly! Veronica @ 256-0665

Need a place to sublet for summer? Nice little cheap room. $230 + utilities. Call 549-5221 for more info.

Two females looking to sublet. Fall Semester only. Call Katy and Rena 546-3114.

Heat and Water included 2 bedroom A/C. $600/month. Starts June 1st. Fall Option. Furnished. Call 549-4324. We can accommodate any needs.



TRAVEL

EUROPE $175.
Within USA $79 - $129
Caribb./Mexico $198 r/t
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!!!!
http://www.airhitch.org
AIRHITCH 1-800-326-2009

WANTED

Jazz Band needed Sat., May 17. Call 253-8520

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

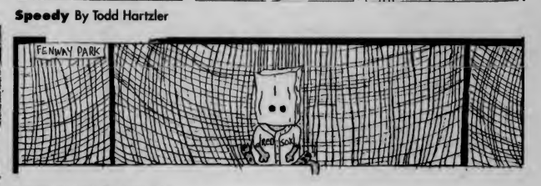
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

University® By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH: Grilled Chick Wich, Turkey Chili, Scalloped Spaghetti
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Fried Shrimp, Lentil Chili, Burgers

Worcester
LUNCH: Charbroiled Chick Wich, Fettuccini w/ Tom Sauce, Golden Burgers!
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Fried Shrimp, Tofu Fajita, Chicken Parm

Hampshire
LUNCH: Burgers, Chick Cutlet Wich, American Chop Suey
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Ravioli w/ Tomato Sauce

Berkshire
LUNCH: Charbroiled Chick Wich, American Chop Suey, Golden Burgers!
DINNER: Beef Fajita, Fried Shrimp, Tofu Fajita, Chicken Parm

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, MAY 12

Art opening — "The Unspoken Configuration," a B.F.A. thesis painting exhibition by Stephanie J. Parenti, will open in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space with a reception from 5–7 p.m. Sponsored in part by the UMass Arts Council.

Art opening — A B.F.A. thesis exhibit of paintings by D. Caleb Wetmore will open today in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space with a reception from 5–7 p.m.

Meeting — Amnesty International will be holding a general meeting tonight in the Campus Center, room 168, at 7 p.m.

Presentation — The Anthropology 481 class will be having presentations in the Campus Center, room 172–176, from 2–4 p.m. We will be sharing information gathered throughout this semester on the diversity requirement and its connection with our administration, faculty, T.A.s and students.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 14

Concert — The Doo-Wop Shop will perform an a capella concert at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Admission is free for students, but tickets have to be picked up at the Fine Arts Center Box Office. This is the Shop Reunion Concert, and the final concert for the three graduating seniors.

NOTICES

Theater — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently accepting applications for Artistic Team positions for their fall 1997 productions of The Who's Tommy and The Passion of Dracula. For more information, call Ien at 549- 1587 or Ari at 546–4629.

Student I.D. Cards — Students, faculty and staff who have not had their picture taken for the new all-campus I.D. card to be issued over the summer for the fall semester, must do so before the end of this semester. Temporary photo locations will be held until May 14 on the Campus Center Concourse from 10 a.m.–4 p.m. Monday–Friday, and the University Library from 3–8 p.m. Monday–Thursday and 3–5 p.m. Friday. The Franklin Dining Hall I.D. office, open from 9 a.m.–5 p.m. Monday–Friday, will take pictures until the week of finals.

Musicians — Mission Improvable, the UMass Comedy Troupe, is looking for someone who can play the keyboard in a variety of music styles, with their own equipment. Call Aaron at 546–5225 for more info.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, meets every Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees.

Community — "Rendezvous with the Soul," meditation, music and prayer meetings, will be held from 4–5 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805–809 weekly on Tuesdays until the end of the semester. Sponsored by the UMass Baha'i Club. For more information, call Chris at 549-4982.

Discussion — Come experience the cultural diversity of the Prince/Crampton Graduate Residence Hall. From April 8 – May 10, residents from many countries around the world will be participating in discussions and presentations about their experiences in their home countries. Scheduled topics: Latin America/Caribbean, May 4–10. The program is free and open to the public.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24 CNN/Headline News
4	CBS/4	Boston	28 BET
5	ABC/5	Boston	28 BET on Jazz
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27 UCTV
7	HSCN	Movie Channel	28 The Learning Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29 TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30 Comedy Central
10	NBC/30	New Britain	32 Much Music
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 12, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Spirits of the Jaguar		Searching for the Maya		American Experience		America on Wheels
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Cosby	Murphy Brown	Cybill	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		Inside Edition	Chronicle	Murphy Brown	Cybill	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)			News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	I Survived a Disaster		"20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" (1997)		Michael Caine		News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.	7th Heaven		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	6		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	All New All Star-Bloopers		"Survival on the Mountain" (1997, Drama)		Martin Post		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	15		Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks	Gooda Beh.	News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	30		News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	All New All Star-Bloopers		"Survival on the Mountain" (1997, Drama)		Martin Post		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61		Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Melrose Place (In Stereo)		Video Justice: Crime on Tape!		News		Coach	Babylon 5
WWLP	22		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	All New All Star-Bloopers		"Survival on the Mountain" (1997, Drama)		Martin Post		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57		Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Spirits of the Jaguar		American Experience		Chicano! History		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40		News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	I Survived a Disaster		"20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" (1997)		Michael Caine		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks	Gooda Beh.	News		Real TV	Mad Abo. You
WTBS	72		Family Matters	Family Matters	Major League Baseball: Atlanta Braves at Pittsburgh Pirates. (Live)
A&E	53		Quincy: The Winning Edge		Law & Order "Misconception"		Biography: Barbara Stanwyck		Poirot		Mike Marple (Part 1 of 2)		Law & Order "Competence"
CNN	24		WorldView		Moneyline		Crossfire		Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today
COM	28		Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)		Poundstone		★★ "I Love You to Death" (1990, Comedy) Kevin Kline.		On Delivery	Dream On	Daily Show	Poundstone
DISC	51		Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "The Great Patriotic War"		Wild Discovery: Serpent.		Antarctica. The Frozen Wasteland		Beyond Bizarre (R)		Wild Discovery: Serpent
ESPN	50		Up Close	Sportscenter	To Be Announced						Stanley Cup Playoffs: Red Wings at Mighty Ducks
LIFE	49		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★★ "No Way Out" (1987, Drama) Kevin Costner, Gene Hackman.					Homicide: Life
MTV	52		(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		World Tour (R)	Singled Out	Indis Outing	Sports (R)	Music Videos (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Daria (R)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	25		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	55		Odyssey	Sci-Fi Trader	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest DSV "Daggers"		Forever Knight "Blackwing"		Y. "Breakout" (R) (In Stereo)		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	26		Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Extreme Machines (R)		What Happened?		Cyberspace-Undiscovered		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	54		In the Heat of the Night		WCW Nitro (Live)		NBA Basketball Playoffs: Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Inside-NBA	WCW Nitro (R)
USA	59		Renegade "Partners"		Highlander: The Series (R)		World Wrestling Federation Monday Night Raw				Le Femme Nikita "Mother"		Silk Stalkings "Patty's Over"
HBO	33		★½ "Iron Eagle IV" (1995, Adventure) Louis Gossett Jr., "PG-13"				★½ "Under Siege 2: Dark Territory" (1995) Steven Seagal. "R"				Real Sports (In Stereo)		"Asylum" (1997) "R"
MAX	34		★★½ "Treasure II: Aftershocks" (1996) Fred Ward. "PG-13"				★★ "Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls" (1995)		"The First Cut" (1995, Suspense) Sam Elliott. "R"				"Black Out" (1995) "R"
SHOW	35		★½ "Sahara" (1995, Drama) James Belushi. (In Stereo)				"Twin Sisters" (1994) Pasin Paul. "PG-13"		★ "Bio-Dome" (1996) Pauly Shore. "PG-13"				Love Street (R) (In Stereo)

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
Don't allow a disagreement to fester this week. The longer it lasts, the more the other person will gain the advantage. An early compromise is best. Major purchases require extra attention to details, or you could miss some vital fine print.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
Now that you've checked out all your options, go ahead and make a decision. Your instincts are pretty good. Don't try to mix business and pleasure this week, or you'll end up feeling short-changed in both.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
A reluctant companion threatens to ruin a pleasant outing. Don't force the issue. Instead, change the subject and enjoy a lively conversation. Concentrate on domestic issues by starting a new

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, May 12, 1997

▼ SPORTS THIS WEEK

MEN'S LACROSSE
MAY 17 vs. Princeton @ Hofstra Stadium (Hempstead, N.Y.)

SOFTBALL
MAY 16-18 ECAC Tournament (site and time TBA)

MEN'S BASEBALL
MAY 15-17 Andrvic 10 Championships (@ Boyertown, Penn)

Things get interesting, but Massachusetts holds on

The UMass defensive corps (l-r: Todd Sokolowski, Harold Drumm, John Kasselakis and P.G. Massey) puzzled Hofstra all afternoon.

JONATHAN M. PLACE / COLLEGIAN

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

WEST POINT, N.Y. — When the members of the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team huddled around their coach for their regular post-game talk Saturday, one voice, slightly muffled by the density packed crowd yelled, "That was history, baby!"

Indeed it was. The Minutemen, by virtue of their 6-4 victory over Hofstra at Army's Michie Stadium Saturday, became only the third UMass team ever to advance to the second round in the NCAA men's lacrosse tournament.

Massachusetts	6
Hofstra	4

"We're only the third team to go past the first round of the play-offs. That wasn't our goal — just to make history — but it's definitely in the back of our minds," defender Harold Drumm said.

With the win, UMass (9-5) moves on to face defending champ and No. 1 seed Princeton (12-0) in a second-round game on Saturday at Hofstra Stadium in Hempstead, N.Y.

It appeared early in the game that the Minutemen would have no problem with the Flying Dutchmen, who beat UMass 7-6 in double overtime on March 22. UMass jumped out to a 4-0 lead at the end of the first quarter and still held a 6-0 advantage going into the final period.

Hofstra made things interesting with a four-goal spurt in the last frame, but the late rally was not enough.

"It's a great win," UMass coach Greg Cannella said.

The Minutemen struck first, scaring after a passing spree that left Hofstra puzzled. Mike McKeefrey carried the ball around the back of the Dutchmen net several times, but could not get a clear look at the goal. Instead, he crossed the ball behind the cage with a pass to a waiting Ken Sussi.

Sussi wasted no time getting the ball to Chris Martens, who was cutting in on Hofstra goalie Mark Spruyt's left side. Martens took the ball and released in a split second. Spruyt's could not react in time, and UMass took a 1-0 lead.

Before the senior netminder even had a chance to refocus, Sussi was again at the Hofstra cage. This time, off an assist from P.G. Massey, Sussi converted for a tally of his own, and UMass went up by two with 10:23 left in the first quarter.

Less than a minute after Sussi's strike the Minutemen were again on the offensive. After the Dutchmen lost control in the UMass zone, Massey grabbed the ball and raced upfield. When he entered the Hofstra zone, Massey dished off to

Turn to LACROSSE, page 7

As the Minutemen celebrate, Hofstra midfielder Tony Alexander hangs his head dejectedly.

JONATHAN M. PLACE / COLLEGIAN

Defense the key in UMass win and next contest

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

WEST POINT, N.Y. — Playoff time is when teams with good defense, goaltending and experience thrive. When No. 8 Massachusetts played Hofstra in the first round of the NCAA men's lacrosse tournament Saturday, it was a meeting of two teams known for some of the strongest goaltending, defense and experience in the nation.

The Minutemen entered the game third in the country in team goals against average, at 7.31, behind only Hofstra (7.00) and No. 1 Princeton. The Tigers (12-0), who have allowed just 6.50 goals per game, are the Minutemen's second round opponent. The team that emerges from this top half of the North bracket will be unofficially the best defensive

Turn to DEFENSE, page 7

Chris Martens started the day's scoring for UMass with a first quarter tally.

JONATHAN M. PLACE / COLLEGIAN

Baseball sweeps through A-10 finale

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

If the losing streak is to come to an end, it may as well be against an Atlantic 10 opponent. Incidentally, that's just what happened.

This weekend, the No. 19 Massachusetts baseball team (33-10, 17-4 Atlantic 10) returned to its winning ways by taking three against St. Joseph's (14-35, 4-17 A-10).

In the first game of Saturday's doubleheader, UMass broke its three-game losing streak by defeating the Hawks, 8-2. In game two, the Minutemen bats went ballistic, posting 19 runs on 22 hits and taking the nightcap 19-1.

Massachusetts	8
St. Joseph's	2

Massachusetts	19
St. Joseph's	1

Even though UMass came out of the first game with a win, it wasn't until the fourth inning that the Minutemen scored a run. Starter Jason Bennett (9-1) gave up a two-run blast to St. Joe's which put the Hawks up 2-0. Bennett would not allow another run and finished his fifth straight complete game. The line on Bennett was two runs on seven hits, and five strikeouts.

In the fourth inning, the Minutemen took control of the ballgame and never looked back. With two runners on, Aaron Braunstein sent a round-tripper flying over the left field fence. The game winning blast helped Braunstein go 8- for-9 on Saturday, with 11 RBIs. He had two homeruns on the day.

From the second inning in the first game to the fifth inning in the second contest, UMass' starters would not allow the Hawks a single run. It was not until the sixth inning in the second game that St. Joe's would score its only run of the game.

Massachusetts	6
St. Joseph's	2

Bill Cooke went six innings in the nightcap to improve to 6-2. Cooke has steadily been the No. 2 man for UMass all season. On Saturday he gave up only one run on four hits, while striking out five. It was by far one of Cooke's best statistical outings of the season.

Bryan Mazzaferro has returned to being an offensive force for the Minutemen. His performance on Saturday showed that all too well. While leading 1-0 in the third inning of the second game, he sent a 400-foot bomb to center field with two outs. UMass would eventually tally six runs in third. It would be more than enough and the Minutemen cruised to an easy victory.

UMass scored runs in every inning accept for the first, posting at least two an inning from the third to the seventh.

The Minutemen completed their sweep on Sunday with a 6-2 victory. Braunstein recorded a homer, a triple and three RBI to power UMass.

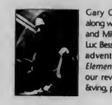
Scott Barnsby picked up the win, while Ryan Cameron got the save.

Other Minutemen notables include Brian Samela, who went 5-for-5 during Saturday's games while clocking in two doubles. Dave Giglio also had two doubles while batting 7-for-8 on the first day of action.

Doug Clark kept his hitting streak alive. With hits in each game this weekend, the center fielder improved his streak to 16 games.

The Minutemen are next in action this weekend, when they travel to Pennsylvania for the A-10 Tournament. Pairings for the championships will be announced today.

Aaron Braunstein hit the ball real hard three times over the weekend as the Massachusetts baseball team swept its final conference series.



JONATHAN M. PLACE / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 139 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, May 13, 1997

The new Nikita

Gary Oldman stars along with Bruce Willis and Milla Jovovich in Luc Besson's new sci-fi adventure The Fifth Element. Check out our review (see Arts &ving, page 5).

Goin' to California

Katie Grogan and the Massachusetts women's water polo team are looking forward to a matchup with No. 1 UCLA. For the scoop, see Sports (Page 16).

Scott downsizes UM faculty amid protests

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Editor's Note: This is the second of a two-part series on the 1998 University budget requests. Part one focused on the request for the College of Humanities and Fine Arts. Part two focuses on Academic Affairs' share of the budget and faculty losses on campus.

Discontent has mounted across the University of Massachusetts campus over the large number of faculty cuts and the decline in the percentage of the University budget going towards Academic Affairs in recent years.

"I am very concerned," Bruce Laurie, chair of the History Department, said. "Especially because of the trend in downsizing what I consider to be the core of the University."

According to Faculty Senate and administration documents, UMass has lost 238 faculty members over the past years six years. At the same time, the percentage of the budget going towards Academic Affairs has been dropping approximately one percentage point a year, going from 65 percent of the overall University budget in 1989 to 57.81 percent in 1997.

"In 1991, there were 1,304 tenured faculty members," said Ernest May, chair of the Department of Music and Dance. "Today there are 1,066. That is a very large loss in faculty while the number of students has decreased only slightly."

These faculty losses have occurred in all departments on campus — not just the College of Humanities and Fine Arts — because as faculty have retired, their positions have not been filled. The funding for those positions, as well as that for additional budgetary items in Academic Affairs, has been moved to other areas of the University budget, including financial aid, information technology, the Campaign UMass capital campaign and classroom renovation.

"The pattern is one of a steady and cumulatively quite serious decline in the share of the budget going to Academic Affairs," James Boyce, chair of the Economics Department, said. "It is a really significant erosion."

The faculty downsizing, as well as the directing of funds away from Academic Affairs, are part of Chancellor David K. Scott's five-year Strategic Action Plan to restructure the University.

> "Our first priority must be to rebuild the faculty."
> Dean Lee Edwards

In order to fund larger amounts of financial aid, building repairs and technology initiatives, Scott initiated an early retirement plan. The plan calls for the retirement of over 400 faculty and staff members between 1996 and 1998. Scott plans to fill only 50 percent of those positions, which, combined with earlier cuts, will result in a total loss of 1,000 faculty and staff members in the 10 years from 1990 to 2000.

Scott feels that these cuts are necessary so that the University will have the money to repair its many failing buildings.

"I wish we did not have to reduce numbers of faculty and staff," Scott said. "The fact is they do not work in an environment that they deserve. We had to restructure the budget between salaries and support."

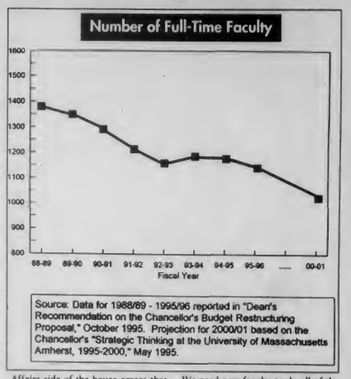
Faculty downsized too far?

Not everyone agrees with Scott's decision. Many faculty members, such as Laurie, feel that Scott has cut the faculty too much and that Academic Affairs must be given a larger share of the University budget if UMass is to fulfill its academic mission.

"There is no reason to downsize for the amount the plan calls for," Laurie said. "It is draconian."

Boyce likened the Chancellor's plan to a "neutron bomb approach to downsizing" in which there are no faculty left to fill the buildings.

"The centrality of teaching has not been a major factor in allocating funds," Boyce said. "It is very important to avoid any worsening of this situation. This really puts the quality of undergraduate education at risk."



The faculty argue that hirings are necessary to reduce class size and student to faculty ratios, to increase the number and variety of classes offered on campus and to bring new teaching techniques and vitality to campus.

"Everybody in the Academic Affairs side of the house agrees that we can not continue to downsize the faculty," CHFA Dean Lee Edwards said. "Our first priority must be to rebuild the faculty."

Interim Provost Patricia Crosson said that her $10 million request for Academic Affairs in the 1998 budget "most fundamentally argues the need for new faculty on the campus."

"We have gotten out of balance. We need new faculty to do all of the things we want to do," Crosson said. "They would bring new energy, new life to the curriculum, to research and outreach activities."

May said that it is unrealistic to pursue goals such as admittance into the Association of American Universities (AAU) and the creation of an Honors College while faculty downsizing continues.

Source: Data for 1988/89 - 1995/96 reported in "Dean's Recommendation on the Chancellor's Budget Restructuring Proposal," October 1995. Projection for 2000/01 based on the Chancellor's "Strategic Thinking at the University of Massachusetts Amherst, 1995-2000," May 1995.

Turn to SCOTT, page 3

WORLD

Israelis celebrate day of independence

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israelis celebrated independence day yesterday with picnics, an air show and a naval parade, and Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said he hoped Israel would achieve peace with the Palestinians in its 49th year.

However, peace talks remained suspended, and President Clinton's Mideast envoy, Dennis Ross, failed this week to get Israel and the Palestinians to agree to resume talks.

The stalled talks were secondary on a day devoted to revelry and honoring the military. Families crowded national parks and feasted on the traditional meal of barbecued chicken, lamb and beef. Air force jets, helicopters and transport planes flew in formation over Israel's main cities and naval vessels paraded off the Tel Aviv shore. Thousands of Israelis visited army bases. In Jerusalem, President Ezer Weizman awarded certificates to 120 outstanding soldiers and gave a reception for former army commanders from the 1948 Mideast war.

At the gathering, Netanyahu said he hoped in its 49th year that Israel would achieve permanent peace with the Palestinians, and also negotiate treaties with Syria and Lebanon.

NATION

Soldier spared death in initiation murder case

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A former Army paratrooper was spared the death penalty and sentenced to life in prison yesterday in the slaying of a black couple gunned down in what prosecutors say was a skinhead initiation rite.

The jury took 1 1/2 hours to decide on the penalty for 23-year-old Malcolm Wright, one of three white soldiers from Fort Bragg charged in the case.

The 1995 slayings prompted an Army investigation of racism in the ranks.

Wright was found guilty May 2 of murder in the deaths of Jackie Burden and Michael James, who were shot at random on a Fayetteville street.

A fellow Fort Bragg skinhead, James Burmeister, 21, was convicted as the triggerman in March and also got life in prison instead of the death penalty.

Prosecutors said Burmeister killed to earn a spider web tattoo like the one Wright has on his left elbow. The tattoo was a sign among neo-Nazi skinheads at Fort Bragg that the wearer had killed a black or a homosexual.

The defense contended that Wright was guilty only of being racist and that he did not know Burmeister planned to kill. A third former soldier, Randy Meadows, pleaded guilty to conspiracy and accessory charges and agreed to testify against Wright and Burmeister. He is awaiting sentencing.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thurs.
HIGH: 60	HIGH: 65	HIGH: 60
LOW: 40	LOW: 45	LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics.....page 15
Crossword .....page 15
Editorial.....page 4
Developing Nations..page 11
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 16

Students pack house as Williams gives a very Brady presentation

Teenage Greg, Barry Williams sported some groovy threads and entertained students in the Campus Center Auditorium last night.

ANNA FEDER / COLLEGIAN

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

In an overwhelming show of support, approximately 500 students at the University of Massachusetts filled the Campus Center auditorium for a once in a lifetime opportunity to be in the presence of adolescent star Barry Williams, also known as Greg Brady, the eldest son of America's favorite television family.

"Far out— I was a teenage Greg," said Williams of his role as he took center stage. Opening the gala was a series of film clips portraying the very best of "The Brady Bunch."

Included within were the infamous Cindy, beautiful Marsha, envious Jan and her constant "Marsha, Marsha, Marsha" chant, timid Bobby, groovy Greg, moral Mr. and Mrs. Brady, Alice, Sam the Butcher, Tiger the dog and mischievous Peter.

Not only did the audience get a nostalgic glimpse into the very best of the Brady moments, but also a first-hand glimpse into the many various rumors surrounding this All- American family.

As Williams scanned the immense crowd, he revealed, "I have the distinct impression that some of you have been watching re-runs of The Brady Bunch."

"We've had a memorable history," said Williams of the explosive show. "From the 1960s up until the 1990s we've had six series, movies, book... It's the show that won't go away," Williams said.

Not only did Williams indulge the audience with the history, fun facts and best moments of "The Brady Bunch," but also he revealed throughout the course of the night the various truths and lies behind many of the Brady Bunch rumors— one of them being the romance between brother and sister Greg and Marsha.

"Even then [when we first met] she was a babe," said Williams about his first encounter with Maureen McCormack. "Though, after all, she was only 12. Patience paid off," Williams said.

Only later on did Williams actually reveal what occurred between him and Marsha. "I had the biggest crush on Florence Henderson. Florence and I only had sex once. It's amazing what a teenage imagination can do with an eight by 10 glossy picture and a bottle of Wesson oil. Eventually I stopped dating my TV mom and started dating my TV sister."

Along with the many years of running daily shows on all three major networks, Williams also delved into a discussion of all the alternate media that the Bradys frequented.

"The corporations believed that the Bradys should be successful in all of the media. We had cartoons and eventually Paramount records made us into recording artists," Williams said. "You haven't lived until you've seen the Brady's shake their booties."

Williams also elaborated on his favorite episodes, reunions and portrayals of the Brady family. "The Brady Brides was the least favorite of all the Brady reunions, probably because I wasn't in it," Williams said.

As well, he dispelled all the rumors circulating about the present status of his television brothers and sisters. "Cindy wasn't in the reunion episode of A Very Brady Christmas and many believed she was dead, or had committed suicide, doing drugs, or in pornos... she got married," Williams said.

Williams led the audience on a fun-filled trip into the Brady past with a plethora of videos and songs, but the highlight of the night was when "Greg" emerged as the notorious "Johnny Bravo" and proceeded to teach approximately 100 students the best of the Brady dances.

"Wow... groovy... these clothes make you feel different on the inside. Most likely it's the shoes," said Williams as he lifted his leg to reveal 3 inch tan platforms to those in the back of the room.

Preceding his awaited transformation as the grooviest Mr. Bravo, Williams delved into his present personal status. Currently, he is working in musical theater. He stopped briefly to elaborate on his talents by serenading the students with a rendition of "Bring Him Home," the core song in the musical Les Miserables.

Despite the lewd disposition of this adult Greg, he kept the massive crowd rolling with laughter as he revealed the best of the Brady moments to UMass.

UM Police issue warning regarding shower stalker

University of Massachusetts Police issued a warning yesterday regarding a second incident of a peeping tom found in a Southwest Residential Area dormitory shower stall.

According to police, on May 10, at approximately 9 a.m., a male individual was observed standing, fully clothed, in a women's shower stall in MacKimmie Residence Hall. The individual was believed to be attempting to look into an adjacent shower stall about to be occupied by a female student.

"When confronted by a resident, the unknown male ran from the floor," the police report read. "The individual was observed just prior to the incident loitering in the corridor of the residence hall."

Police described the suspect as a "white male in his early 20s, approximately 5'7" tall and plump. He had a shaved head with light brown or blonde hair. He was wearing a T-shirt, jeans and dark colored Airwalk sneakers."

Saturday's reported incident is the second of this nature to occur in the last week within residence halls in Southwest Area. Last Monday, a male was observed peeping into a women's shower stall in Cance Residence Hall. Police said the description of the individual in both cases is similar and the incidents appear to be occurring during the morning hours, from 7 to 10 a.m.

University Police are recommending that residents check the bathroom area for individuals loitering or acting suspiciously prior to utilizing the facilities. Residents are also asked to notify the police at 545-2121 if they observe anyone on the floor acting suspiciously.

— Laura Stock

McVeigh's friend testifies;

Army pal says plot meant to cause 'uprising'

By Steven K. Paulson
Associated Press

DENVER — Timothy McVeigh wanted to bomb the Oklahoma City federal building "to cause a general uprising in America" and felt justified in killing the people inside because they were part of an "evil empire," his former Army buddy testified yesterday.

Michael Fortier, who has pleaded guilty to knowing about the plot, said McVeigh told him that he and co-defendant Terry Nichols chose the federal building because it was where the "orders were issued" for the government's deadly siege at Waco, Texas. "He told me they wanted to bomb the building on the anniversary of Waco... to cause a general uprising in America, hopefully that would knock some people off the fence and cause them to take action," Fortier said.

On the second anniversary of the Waco fire, April 19, 1995, a truck bomb exploded outside the Alfred P. Murrah federal building, killing 168 people and injuring hundreds more in the deadliest act of terrorism on U.S. soil.

He said McVeigh considered the federal employees like "storm troopers" in the movie "Star Wars."

"They may be individually innocent but because they were part of the evil empire, they were guilty by association," Fortier said.

As his former friend testified against him, McVeigh stared straight at the witness, leaning back in his chair, hands clasped on a crossed knee.

Fortier said five months before the blast, he drove with McVeigh from Arizona to Kansas, and made a side trip to case the Oklahoma City federal building. "We drove to the back of the building first, and around the side."

Using a model of the building, Fortier showed where McVeigh planned to put the truck, and an alley where he planned to park his getaway car. He said McVeigh wanted to make sure there was another building between him and the blast.

He said McVeigh also pointed out a Ryder truck and said he was thinking of renting one to carry the bomb. Fortier said McVeigh told him he was considering crashing the truck into the building or staying in the truck to make sure his bomb went off.

"Now you're talking about committing suicide," Fortier said he told him.

Fortier said he urged McVeigh to spend his time talking about the government's transgressions, but McVeigh told him he was through talking. "He didn't think talking was accomplishing anything."

When the bomb went off, Fortier said he watched the coverage at home with his wife and child, and was "shocked at all the destruction."

"Right away I thought Tim did it," he said. "I thought, 'Oh my God, he did it.'"

Fortier acknowledged he could have stopped the bombing. "There was no excuse that I could offer why I didn't," he said. "I live with that knowledge every day."

Fortier could get 23 years in prison for pleading guilty to lesser charges in the bombing, including failure to report the plot and lying to the FBI.

Fortier said he was surprised when the agents showed up at his

Turn to McVEIGH, page2

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Mark McGrath
Copy Editor: Suzanne Barber
Photo Technician: Kenneth W.P. Scott
Production Supervisor: Matthew P. McCarthy
Production Staff: Kelvin "El Torro" Torres, Joylyn Lombard

■ McVeigh

continued from page 1

Kingman, Ariz., trailer so quickly after the blast.

"Basically I lied about any of Tim's involvement in the bombing," he said. "I didn't want them to know that Tim had done it."

"Tim, well, if you don't consider what happened in Oklahoma, Tim was a good person."

Fortier broke down in tears at one point during his testimony about lying for McVeigh, saying he did so because if McVeigh was guilty, "that's one step closer for the authorities finding out my crimes." He said he was afraid of getting caught with stolen guns. Fortier said he decided to cooperate after an FBI agent became aggressive during an interview.

"He actually called me a baby killer," Fortier said. "I was still very afraid of the consequences."

Fortier began his key testimony by detailing McVeigh's anti-government views, particularly that "somebody should held accountable" for the siege at Waco, and the "government had declared war on the American public."

"We both believed that the United Nations was actively trying to form a one-world government," including plans to "disarm the American public, take away our weapons," Fortier said.

Fortier also spoke of McVeigh's devotion to the "The Turner Diaries," a racist novel about a war against the government that begins with the bombing of a federal building. Prosecutors have called it a blueprint for the Oklahoma City blast.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
May 10
There was a two vehicle accident on Massachusetts Avenue.
There was a two vehicle accident on Presidents Drive.
A two vehicle accident was reported in the Southwest Circle.
There was a two vehicle accident on University Drive.

Animal Complaint
May 7
Police officers checked on the well being of a raccoon on Hicks Way.
May 10
Horses were loose at Hadley Farm. Staff contained the animals.

Annoying Behavior
May 7
Individuals were banging on resident's doors in Gorman Residence Hall.
May 10
Beer bottles were being thrown from Baker Residence Hall.
Individuals in Webster Residence Hall were throwing bottles at passing vehicles.
May 11
Individuals were banging on parked cars on Infirmary Way.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
May 9
The door was pushed open to the snack shop in Hamlin Hall. Nothing was stolen

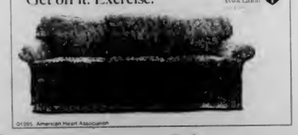
Disturbance
May 10
There was a report of two individuals fighting in Cashin Residence Hall.
Jason Guidetti, 18, of 58 Cottage St., Melrose, was arrested for assault with a dangerous weapon, possession of liquor and falsifying and misusing an I.D. card.
There was a report of a large fight in progress in the Southwest Residential area.
A fight was reported outside of Gorman Residence Hall on Butterfield Terrace.
May 11
Staff requested assistance with Individuals throwing fire extinguishers and breaking windows in John Adams Residence Hall.
A fight was reported in progress near Cance Residence Hall.

Family Offenses, Domestics
May 7
An emergency restraining order was issued in Mackimie Residence Hall.
May 10
An incident was resolved between two individuals at North Village Apartments.

Health/Safety Hazard
May 10
The Physical Plant responded to a steam pipe problem at Goessmann Laboratory.
May 11
Police investigated a burning odor in the ventilation system of Morrill Science Center.

Larceny
May 7
A telephone handset was reported stolen at the Campus Center.
May 9
Tires were stolen from two vehicles in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
A backpack was stolen and later recovered minus the wallet at the DuBois Library.
May 10
A book bag was stolen from the coffee shop at the Campus Center.
A bicycle valued at $300 was stolen from McNamara Residence Hall.

Liquor Law Violations
May 9
Justin M. Morrison, 18, of 3 Metters Street, Attleboro, was arrested for possession of liquor for a person under 21.
Christian Primea, 19, of 8 Birchwood Rd., Princeton, was arrested for possession and transport of liquor for a person under 21.
Ryan Faria, 20, of 68 North St, Foxborough, was arrested for the possession and transport of liquor for a person under 21.
May 10
Todd Baron, 18, of 66 Crowydent Co. in Albertson, N.Y. was arrested for possession of liquor for a person under 21.



Motor Vehicle Theft
May 11
A vehicle was reported stolen from parking lot 22 on University Drive.

Suspicious Person/Activity
May 10
Benjamin Jacobson, 20, of 31 Brushy Plain Rd. of Branford, Conn., was arrested for breaking and entering in Coolidge Hall.
A male was reported looking into women's bathroom shower stalls in Mackimmie Residence Hall.
Individuals were throwing glass and objects from Coolidge Residence Hall.
Kinard Montgomery, 23, of 147 Rolling Green Apartments, was arrested for breaking and entering, possessing burglarious instruments, and attempting to commit a crime.
May 11
Aaron Proulx, 18, of 36 Huntington Ave., Worcester, was arrested for open and gross lewdness, breaking and entering, and resisting execution of the law.

Vandalism
May 7
Damage occurred to a vehicle in parking lot 13 on University Drive.
May 9
There was damage to a vending machine in Mary Lyon Residence Hall.
There was damage to a service elevator in John Adams Residence Hall.
Damage occurred to a vehicle in parking lot 13 on University Drive.
A fire extinguisher was thrown through a window on the fourth floor of Patterson Residence Hall.
May 10
A mirror was broken in a bathroom of Coolidge Residence Hall.
A bathroom window was smashed on the third floor of Emerson Residence Hall.
There was a report of an individual pushing over motorcycles in the Southwest Residential area.
Windows were smashed in a fourth floor bathroom of Cance Residence Hall.
Windows were smashed on the third floor of Pierpont Residence Hall.
A rock was thrown through a window of Marshall Hall.
May 11
There was a report of individuals running across parked vehicles on Massachusetts Avenue.
A window was broken on the third floor of Pierpont Residence Hall.
Damage was reported for two vehicles in parking lot 43 on Thatcher Way.
Damage was sustained to a vehicle in parking lot 33 on University Drive.
There was damage to a vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
There was damage to a vehicle in parking lot 43 on Eastman Lane.
A window was smashed at Tillson Farm.

Correction

The author of "Negritude: Ownership of the Black Self" appearing on yesterday's Black Affairs Page is Stephanie Hope. The Collegian regrets the error.

Get off it. Exercise.
American Heart Association

©1995 American Heart Association

American Heart Association
Fighting Heart Disease and Stroke

What's on Tonight?
Check out the T.V. Listings on the Classifieds page.

Champion Champion Champion Champion
Don't Leave Campus Without One (at least!
REVERSE WEAVE SWEATSHIRTS*
in crewneck and hooded styles
Champion
CAMPUS CENTER
545-2617
M-F 9am-5pm
SAT 9am-4pm

Congratulations
Class of 1997
THE NEWMAN CENTER COMMUNITY

WISHES YOU THE BEST IN YOUR FUTURE ENDEAVORS
Good Luck and God Bless

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

It's laundry time!
Julio Lopez, reaches into a washing machine at the only 24-hour Laundromat in Amherst to wash some clothes.

Villagers struggle in quake aftermath

By Afshin Valinejad
Associated Press

ZOHAN, Iran — A villager pulled from the rubble, stunned but breathing. Two friends meeting in the ruins, stopping short and consoling each other.

There were moments of relief in the stricken villages of northeastern Iran. But they were rare, and the desolation overwhelming.

The first international aid reached Iran's earthquake victims yesterday, slowed by landslides that blocked roads in Saturday's magnitude-7.1 jolt. For many, yesterday was simply a time to bury the dead from the disaster: at least 2,400, by official count; a pro-government newspaper in Tehran put the number much higher — 4,000.

In the foothill village of Abiz, a mother celebrated the survival of her son, dug out alive after 27 hours trapped beneath jagged slabs.

On Sunday, an old man in the village heard what he thought was a cry for help. After an hour of furious digging, villagers came across a chicken that somehow had survived. Then they dragged out a mangled corpse, to the wails of relatives who beat their chests and pulled their hair.

Suddenly, they heard a desperate cry and managed to drag out Alireza Rayee, 32, barely conscious.

"God has given my son a second life!" shouted his mother Fatemah, crying and cradling his head in her arms.

Rayee, wincing from the pain of a broken shoulder, said he had all but given up. "But I prayed all the time that I was under there, and God answered my prayers."

More often, the search for loved ones ended in grief.

In the village of Zohan, residents buried 25 of the community's children, crushed Saturday when falling walls trapped them in an alley near their school. The village's surviving children climbed over the dusty mounds of collapsed homes yesterday, searching for toys or food.

The disaster killed 65 people from Zahon's 300 families. Here, as in other villages, most of the victims were women, the elderly and children.

The men were in the fields of the river valley carpeted with the red berries and yellow flowers of bayberry shrubs.

The tremor also brought down the pride of the village — the 700-year-old Jammeh mosque that was the envy of surrounding hamlets. It had withstood floods, storms and snow. Today, the 115-foot-tall, twin-minaret mosque built of baked mud bricks is a heap of broken walls and spires.

"One hundred floods could not destroy the mosque — but this time the earthquake took its toll," cleric Hojatoleslam Mushtabah Ohadi said.

In the village of Ardakul, Hossain Horshastar turned off his bulldozer when he felt its bucket hit something soft amid the rubble.

Digging carefully with a shovel for a half-hour, he unearthed the body of Hassan Mohammadi, 27, clutching his dead 3-year-old son, Hamed.

In Zohan, villagers quickly buried their dead — washed and draped in shrouds — in freshly dug mass graves.

After saying prayers, they set up homes in tents supplied by aid workers, laying out blankets to fend off the 35-degree cold that envelops the valley at night.

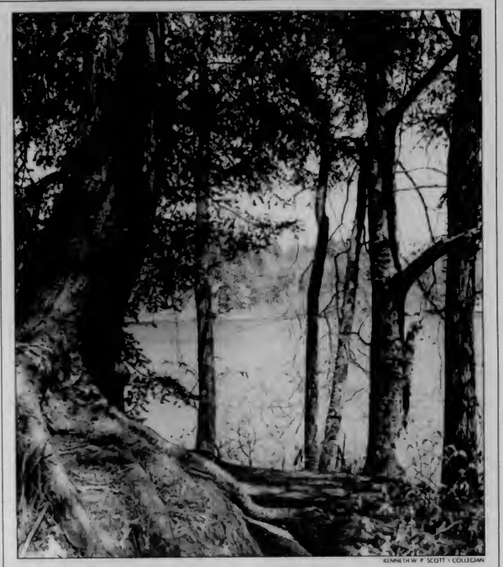
Standing in queues, they collected a ration of flat Iranian bread, tea and sugar, salvaged vegetables and rice from the rubble and cooked stew on stoves fired by wood or cooking gas.

■ scott

continued from page 1

"All these lofty ambitions are occurring at a time when faculty cuts have occurred and the percentage of the total University budget that goes into Acajemic Affairs is shrinking 1 percentage point each year," May said. "My largest concern is this: for most of the time I have been at UMass, there was enthusiasm for building a really great faculty. There is no enthusiasm any more."

Scott: the cuts will pay off in the long run



Chancellor Scott responds to these criticisms by saying that he is aware of what effects his downsizing policy will have on the campus and that he has no choice but to reallocate the funds.

"I can only think about advancing the entire enterprise," Scott said. "Certainly it puts more stress on the faculty and students. We will have to find ways of providing quality education for the same number of students with less faculty."

Scott believes that new technology may ease the burden of the remaining faculty.

"Investing a lot in technology may help," Scott said. "In the long run, it can be a positive environment for the future."

"We will be better in 2001 than if we had not taken these actions," Scott said.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Scenic view
This section of woods is located on the edge of Puffers pond. No butts about it, Puffers pond is a great place to relax.

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE
DETOURS 30 No Limits
NO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAP

WEEKLY UPDATE
University Career Center
Mather Building 545-2224

CONGRATULATIONS to the Class of '97
from the staff at the University Career Center.

new summer co-ops!

Allen Davis & Associates	MKTG
Stoneleigh - Burnham School	Alumni Development
Omnipoint Taunton	RadioFrequency Engineer
Process Software	MKTG, ACCTG
Mohawk CDT	ME, EE, PHYSICS
Digital	MKTG
Data General	ACCTG, FOMGT
Kraft General Foods (6 months)	FD SCI, CHEM, CE
JH Maxymillian	CEE
Biscom	graphic design & MKTG
Spectro Analytical	Inorganic Chemistry
Rangsit Biotech	CHEM

For more information, stop by the Field Experience Office or call 545-6265.

HAVE YOU ACCEPTED A JOB?
Call the Employment Options Office! We want to hear all about it! 545-2224

ATTENTION SENIORS!
Are you still in the market for a job?
Let Dr. Pro, the Disc Resume Professional, assist you.
Even after you leave campus, Dr. Pro allows us to continue sending your resume to appropriate employers.
Are you already using Dr. Pro?
Stop by the Employment Options Office in the Mather Building to update your information and change your status to...
ALUMNI!!

Savings up to 50% in Gifts
Book Sale 20% off Selected Titles
25% off all Posters
Sale on Selected Items in the Computer Dept.
Sale on Selected Art Supplies
SALE
Selected Tees over 25% off
On the Concourse $5.00 Tees, Tanks, & Shorts
Selected Shorts & Boxers on Sale
1/3 off Business Cards Create Your Own
Frisbees Now on Sale
Save on Sheaffer Pens
in the Campus Center 545-2619
UNIVERSITY STORE
Mon - Fri 9 - 5 Sat 11 - 4

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareyu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quin Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majercowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Oh Captain, dear father!

Joseph Fountain

There was a time when I had a voice that seemed to have influence. I had the ear of a mayor and even a state representative. However, since being here at UMass, all of that has changed. I look back at the past year and it seems like I have lived a lifetime.

I have tried to live by an idea stated by Robert Kennedy: "Some men look at the world as it is and ask why. I dream what other men have never dreamed and ask: Why not?"

I have always tried to struggle and fight against injustice. I often act foolishly alone and stupidly like a lone wolf. I don't know how many bills I have written for the Student Senate that failed simply because I didn't ask enough people to support them.

Well, in December alone, I filed a Federal lawsuit seeking a change in the process for the way city councilors get elected. In Springfield, the system for electing councilors is unconstitutional because it dilutes the minority vote. The City Council is voted on by the whole city. The problem is that no matter how much an African–American or Latino wins by in a minority ward, they lose city–wide. That is why at–large voting is unconstitutional.

For this lawsuit, I couldn't go forward alone. I'm white and have no standing in the court, no matter how well meaning I may be. I started calling people and bringing them together. Three groups joined for the lawsuit: Arise for Social Justice, the Million Man March Committee and the Latino Breakfast Club. They were all supporting the lawsuit I started. Others have joined too— The NAACP and National People's Campaign as well as the late Bill Kunstler. Even the world–renowned civil liberties attorneys law firm, The Center for Constitutional Rights, has taken on the fight — my fight. I have to say it has been difficult to be here at UMass, so far from something that was mine and to which I now can't get back.

Last week, someone I thought was a friend decided it was better to ignore and not acknowledge my work than to even say my name. I am not bitter, even though I left my father while he was sick in a hospital bed so that I could make sure the lawyer and others had all of the paperwork necessary to go forward with the lawsuit. We had to add plaintiffs and that is what we did. The paper wrote stories about all of us and they treated us all equally.

Then things changed. The people I once worked with seemed all at once to turn their backs on me. I am not mad. I wasn't even mad when they all but removed me from the lawsuit and placed someone else as lead plaintiff, even though all along I was told I would remain as lead. I wasn't mad when the Union News kept referring to my lawsuit as one that was newly filed by three groups — groups that I was instrumental in bringing together in the first place. They would never have come together if it weren't for my lawsuit. I was sad and my feelings hurt.

Oh Captain, my captain! / Our fearful trip is done, / the ship has weathered every rack / the prize we sought is won...

I told my father before, in the hospital, that I would make him proud of me — that this lawsuit would win and I would go to law school.

...the port is near, the bells I hear, / the people all exulting, / While follow eyes the steady keel, / the vessel grim and daring. / But oh heart, heart, heart! / Oh, the bleeding drops of red — / where on the deck my Captain lies, / fallen cold and dead.

Of course life doesn't always work out that way and it seems as though the port with the prizes is getting farther away. I read to him the stories in the Advocate about the lawsuit.

Oh Captain, my captain! / Rise up and hear the bells! / Rise up — for you the flag is flung, / for you the bugle thrills, / for you bouquets and ribbon'd wreaths, / for you the shores a–crowding, / for you they call, the swaying mass / their eager faces turning. / Oh Captain, dear father! / The arm beneath your head! / It is some dream that on the deck / you've fallen cold and dead. / My captain does not answer, / his lips are pale and still. / My father does not feel the arm under his head, / he has no pulse nor will.

Unfortunately he couldn't hear me and now I am alone with my lawsuit. The lawsuit is the single most important thing that I have ever done. I don't know why, but it seems as though it has been co–opted from me — this last thing that my father saw me do, the greatest thing.

But I with mournful tread / walk the deck my Captain lies / fallen cold and dead.

I walk the deck, the floor where my father died in my arms. Solemn, thinking "what next?" with my life and the lawsuit that I have been separated from.

They say that fathers and sons become more and more alike as they get older. My father and I were very different people. He was a man of his times, a conservative labor guy. I am a rampant liberal. There was a time when he hated the "Cosby Show" because there were too many African–Americans on the show. Now he was supporting me in my work on a lawsuit that has been called the most important civil rights lawsuit to be filed in the last 30 years in Springfield. In fact, this lawsuit might set a precedent for the nation as a whole. At–large voting systems discriminate.

I am going home this week, really for the first time in two years, and my father is not going to be there. My lawsuit is not my lawsuit anymore and I need to decide what my future will be. I just know when I go back, I have to believe:

"Some men look at the world as it is and ask why.

I dream what other men have never dreamed and ask why not!"

—Conrad J. Moise

Joseph Fountain is a Collegian Columnist.

"Oh Captain, my captain" is a poem by Walt Whitman.

The dream lease is up

Daniel Bodah

Imagine that once upon a time you signed a really sweet lease with your landlord. In fact, imagine that this lease was so wonderful that it: a) lasted for 20 years; b) entitled you to live in your landlord's swanky house right in the center of town; c) arranged that your landlord live in a dingy little apartment in Hicksville and d) exempted you from paying any rent.

Does it sound almost too good to be true? Well, it happened, baby, right here in America.

Two hundred and three years ago, the fledgling United States made a deal this sweet. The 1794 Treaty of Canadaigua required that the Seneca and Tuscarora nations of the Iroquois Confederacy relocate to reservations and lease their land to the U.S. government.

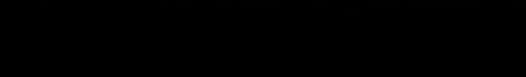
In 1999, the lease is up.

As you might imagine, the U.S. government is not crazy about the idea of returning the territory. The guys who originally arranged the lease were probably thinking there wouldn't even be Seneca and Tuscarora people by 1999. After all, it was Benjamin Franklin who wrote the solution to the "Indian problem"— "exterminate." And while today's government may have the milder credo "starve and assimilate," there are some serious complications to giving these nations their land back.

After 200 years, you can really get used to living in a place. Things like towns and private citizens' homes are hard to relocate.

I'm sure the Seneca and Tuscarora understand about that one.

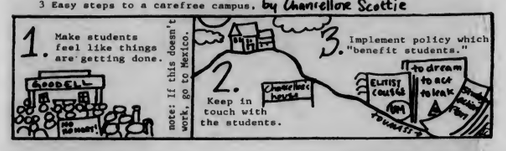
In fact, when the lease is up in two years, they do not plan to evict anyone, and they've expressed a willingness to negotiate with the current tenants. The situation is likely to be especially muddled: it's doubtful that any of the "owners" of this land realized when they bought it that it was leased, and would be due back to its owners eventually. But certainly the two nations are entitled to legal ownership of the land. After all, a lease is just a lease, not a deed.



Remember that it was European colonists who imposed their idea of private property and ownership of land on the native populations of the northeast. While indigenous peoples had contracts and systems to control land use, these were oral and often put land in the hands of whole communities. Our founding daddies (George Washington was among the best of them) got stinking rich by exploiting the confusion that resulted when European legalities came into contact with native concepts of land use. Shouldn't the U.S. government now be playing by its own rules?

Recently, there have been reports that armed bands of Federal Bureau of Investigations agents have raided reservations in attempts at getting the Seneca and Tuscarora to relent in their claims to the leased land.

How do all you U.S. citizens out there feel about what your representatives are up to? Let Ms. Ada E. Deer of the Bureau of Indian Affairs know: Dept. of the Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Office of Public Affairs, 1849 C Street NW, Washington, DC 20240-0001. Her office phone number is 202–208–3711, and the BIA webpage is at http://www.doi.gov/bureau-indian-affairs.html.



Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Letters to the Editor

Shut up and study

To the Editor:

I see that our wonderful politically correct student government is quite determined to prevent any improvements to this campus from occurring. It's satisfying to know that there would win and I would go to law school.

The idea that the Commonwealth College proposal is racist is the dumbest thing that I have ever heard. Anyone can get in. If one can't get in directly after high school, he or she can get in after studying here for a semester and getting a 3.2 GPA or above. Is that unreasonable?

Our student government seems quite determined to keep this ZooMass. Let us be honest for once. The majority of the poor students on this campus are not Asians, blacks or Hispanics. They are the white drugged–out liberals, who would much rather get drunk than study.

Believe it or not, UMass has outstanding faculty. I once read the results of a research that concluded that UMass has more distinguished faculty than Boston University, Boston College, Brandeis and Tufts combined. The problem is that students simply do not want to learn. Should the students who actually aspire to get a good education be penalized for the majority's lack of motivation? That would be unfair.

Finally, if you can't get into the Commonwealth College, you may kiss your hopes of a good future goodbye anyway. What are you going to do if you're graduating with a GPA lower than 3.2?

The choice is clear. Support the Honors College, shut up and study — or party, whine and find yourself out on the street.

Maxim Voronov
Orchard Hill

Honors College will benefit all at UMass

To the Editor:

Jason Vecchio, quoted in the Collegian (April 28), says, "What I would like to get at is that I view public higher education as an opportunity for the working classes of Massachusetts." The typical view of working class people is probably blue–collar folks who make a decent living and who probably did not graduate from an Ivy League institution. I believe that anyone who has to work is working class, which means everyone who is not heir to a fortune is working class. Therefore, the bottom line for most students at UMass is a good job upon graduation. But this is the dream of thousands college graduates, and it is swiftly fleeting in the face of cutthroat competition as the numbers of college grads swell and their grandparents refuse to retire.

To a prospective employer, a name matters. Forced to sort through a thousand applications for one probable employee, an employer will often sort through the applicants based on the name of the school and/or the reputation of the program. UMass offers a good education for the working class that Jason Vecchio was talking about, but if there is a chance to make this education appear better to a [prospective] employer, why would anyone go before the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education and denigrate the idea, insulting the board chairman, Aaron Spencer, to his face?

The proposal of an Honors College is an excellent idea, and I am disappointed that our President, Lia Wong, so shamefully misrepresented me when she put together a committee whose sole purpose was not to represent the student body, but to represent a small faction without a proper representation of the other side. This faction maligned the idea, stating that it was "elitist and unfair." The program would be based on the existing Honors Program, which accepts anyone with a 3.2 GPA. The message which Lia Wong's faction sends is that minorities are incapable of gaining admittance to the Honors College, based on low SAT scores and the inability to perform academically. What kind of message is that? An intelligent and motivated student is capable of a 3.2 GPA regardless of race or economic background and a majority of people do not feel that their SAT score indicates their overall academic profile, including those who scored well. These students, spear–headed by ALANA member and President Lia Wong, seem to have been sucked into a cultural view that minorities cannot achieve. I beg to differ.

Viraphanh Douangmany believes that the Commonwealth College would "create two separate sets of education." I assume by this she means two separate standards in a difference in quality. The separate standards already exist because the Honors Program is already in place and has different requirements from those of the general student body. Quality is much more complicated and harder to measure, and it is just as likely that there will be a less–than– stellar honors class as opposed to a regular class, depending on the criteria.

My point is this: we are not all created equal in terms of intelligence and motivation. It is also true that we are not born into equal circumstances but at this age, we should have some understanding of what we need to do to achieve and succeed in the real world which is a few short years away. When we graduate from this institution, we should be able to compete with the best students from public and private colleges and universities. Therefore, any opportunity to make this a better place should be thought over very carefully. The Honors Program does not discriminate based on race or class, and students should not be lulled into thinking that it is someone else's fault if they cannot make the most of their college experience. UMass is in a book about receiving an Ivy League education for a state school price, and any students who is willing to challenge themselves deserve the opportunity to fulfill that idea.

The Honors College is not for everyone, but its benefits will be. Respect for this school will increase by its creation, and with that respect will come better job opportunities for graduates and more funding from the state legislature. Massachusetts has tradition of excellence in education both in its local towns and in its many colleges and universities. As figureheads for the whole, our state universities should reflect our state's tradition of excellence, just [as] our President should represent the views of our student body.

Alexis Pushkar
Orchard Hill

Honors College offers affordable alternative

To the Editor:

Here is a point of information for those of you wishing to receive a high–er level of education: You are "elitist, classist and racist." No longer is striving for a better education normal— it is now exclusionary. Or at least this was the view expressed by the group of students to the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education. This group of students, who supposedly represented the views of UMass students, shared "our" view with Board volunteer Aaron Spencer on April 25. The group of students sent to do this was appointed by student body President Lia Wong. When I asked her about the composition of the group, I was told: "We [the group] were not for or against the Honors College."

This statement seems rather odd considering the fact that the group was extremely outspoken in its opposition to the Honors College and President Wong admitted that the group which we set up contained no students in favor of the Honors College. This, of course, made sure that a one–side argument could be brought in front of the Board of Higher Education. There is a major problem with the way this issue has been dealt with.

First of all, let's establish the fact that I am not a member of the Honors Program, so I can't be deemed a "self–serving elitist." I am in favor of the Honors College for the simple fact that it would offer an affordable alternative to private universities of higher learning. An Honors College would also create competition because the program would be a very appealing option to many and thus would increase the value of a degree earned and received through the UMass system.

In the Collegian article "Clash ensues..." (April 21), one of the quoted "representatives" whose name was not printed said, "It is very hard to take giving 3,000 people an incredible education... I pay the same amount of money, but I don't get the same service."

If the problem is the quality of education that you will receive by not being in the Honors College, then study hard and maintain the 3.2 GPA necessary for admittance into the program. If you can do that, then there is no need to complain. If you cannot perform to that level, then it is selfish to insist that those who can perform to that level do not receive recognition for their accomplishments. The "Honors" label is earned and not a gift given to students upon entering the school.

Jason Vecchio stated, "I view public higher education as an opportunity for the working classes." The Honors College would not require higher tuition, only higher academic standards.

Resa Singleton said, "I don't see how being an advocate for students means selecting one group."

Well, when you hear about UMass, there are certain programs that are offered that are very highly respected throughout the country. Engineering, nursing, management and the sciences are all very competitive areas of UMass. These programs are that way because at one time, the school decided to dedicate time, money and effort into these programs. The improvements of the aforementioned programs give UMass students a better education and has enabled many graduates to have a better shot at a top–notch job. It makes sense to improve the Honors Program. I would be very concerned if the Administration was satisfied with the status quo and did not attempt to improve the level of education in the University. It is great that the University is taking strides to make a degree from UMass to have as much immediate impact as a degree from some of the other highly esteemed public institutions around the country.

The most outspoken member of the group appeared to be Viraphanh Douangmany. Her point regarding SAT scores and acceptance into the Honors College would be valid if they were in fact the only criteria by which Honors students are chosen. She then stated, "Why can not that concept be given to the entire student body?" This question is rather puzzling, unless, of course, you feel that every student is predisposed to the same level of academic achievement, which, of course, has not been and is not true.

It seems that Ms. Douangmany could not leave the meeting without completely speaking her mind. Her statements, "This Honors College is going to be racist and classist," and "I have a problem with business people coming because you are not being socially responsible. You [Aaron Spencer] have done more to harm UMass and stigmatize my education. You are an embarrassment to the state."

These statements are reprehensible and disgusting. Opinions aside, this is no way for a mature individual to act, much less [an] individual [who] represents the entire UMass community. Aaron Spencer is a volunteer who hopes to contribute to education, and I am thankful that this immature outburst will not deter him from achieving the goal that many people have envisioned. Douangmany only "stigmatized" UMass students as loud–mouthed and off– based, and if she is really concerned with being "socially responsible," then she would make a point of apologizing to Mr. Spencer. The true "embarrassment" here has been the way the "voice" of the students was presented to those representing the Board of Higher Education. As for the "racist and classist" statement, it would only have merit if the people who would benefit from the Honors College were rich and white, and that is clearly not the case.

Aaron Spencer left after telling the students to make their own proposal and have the four "most articulate and open– minded students" present it to the entire Board. It is a shame that none of these students would have fallen into the open– minded category. It is abundantly obvious that their collective goal was not to represent the views of the student body, rather it was to perpetuate the views of their small group.

It all comes down to one thing. Our President, Lia Wong, put forth the views of our student population by forming a committee of biased and anti–Honors College students. The views of the school were not represented. Only the views of a specific group and possibly the views of a small minority of UMass students were brought up. I'm sure the conduct of the group has taken away from their credibility, but it is unfair that those of us who support the Honors College find out there was a meeting with the Board of Higher Education after a slanted group of students already spoken for us, and spoke against the views of many students. Those in favor of an Honors College have been ignored. It is now time to let your voice be heard, don't let your opinions and rights be pushed aside by a vocal group [which] clearly does not represent the views of our population. Let your opinions be known so a gross misrepresentation of public opinion cannot happen again.

Senator Jeffrey Howe
Orchard Hill

Arts & Living

Tuesday, May 13, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

COURTESY JACK ENGLISH

Ian Holm watches as Milla Jovovich, "the perfect being," learns Earth's history in a matter of minutes in Luc Besson's latest film The Fifth Element.

Besson's search for the perfect movie

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

THE 5th ELEMENT
Directed by Luc Besson
with Bruce Willis, Milla Jovovich, Gary Oldman
Playing at Hampshire Six Theater

Science Fiction, in its intended form, has continuously served as the most symbolic of all film genres (with perhaps arguably the exception of the Western). Our present day accomplishments and atrocities can both be criticized and praised within the safe distance of the science fiction format. The Fifth Element is no exception to the rule that sci–fi can administer intensity when constructed successfully. In the tradition of its worthy predecessors, ranging from the classic Metropolis to contemporary futuristic noir Blade Runner, The Fifth Element is an altruistic and horrifying look into the future of our precious humanity.

In the most primitive essence of the concept, The Fifth Element is basically a story representing the eternal conflict of good and evil. However, it is the smaller, yet distinctive, details which bring Luc Besson's (La Femme Nikita, The Professional) latest film to a higher, more passionate level. Most notably, in his respectful fetish for the quest of the perfect being flawless, yet vulnerable without affection and love, the fifth element, so to speak.

Milla Jovovich plays this role of the "perfect being" eloquently, she is Leeloo, humanity's last hope for survival. Leeloo was constructed by the generous prophet–like Mondoshawans, a superior race which guards four stones representing each of the four known elements. She was created to defend the universe from the mysterious sphere of anti–matter headed towards Earth. Patiently awaiting her arrival is the Priest Cornelius (Ian Holm), who has been passed down the knowledge of the fifth element from a line of ancestors ranging 300 years, back to the vast deserts of Egypt.

The circle, however, is not complete without Korben Dallas (Bruce Willis), a hard–edged former military officer who has recently been reduced to a taxi driver. He has been divorced and has thus continued to live a discontented existence within the confines of his tiny cubicle of an apartment. Soon, he is commissioned to re–enlist in the army and help Leeloo and Cornelious on their crusade to save the planet.

Besson's construction of the New York City of the 23rd century is a marvel to the eye. Each detail appears to have been created with fine precision, thanks to production designer Dan Weil, who previously collaborated with Besson on The Big Blue. Besson's future however, is similar in magnitude, yet in other ways remarkably different from other sci–fi odyssey, The Fifth Element is a brighter world than most, congested but somehow organized, a stability in chaos. Like in Fritz Lang's Metropolis, affluent society has immigrated above the dark trenches of the Earth's surface to high rise skyscrapers, while everyone else lingers below. The commercialization of society is also acknowledged in much the same way as Blade Runner, with nearly every frame containing a symbol of advertisement.

Apart from the social criticisms, the rest of the special effects also stand on their own. Some of the films most brilliant parts take place inside Dallas' apartment, which is equipped with all the fascinating gadgets needed to set the stage for a believable futuristic setting.

The aliens have been created with particular attention to the finite details as well, each contributing to the spectacular, timeless special effects. The most distinctive effect, however, is how cleverly the film is edited. Not only does Besson allow us to see what is occurring on opposite sides of the galaxy simultaneously, but he interc–cuts conversations to create a humorous tone.

Willis has once again proven that he can perform his roles more than adequately and can be taken seriously as an important leading star. He plays Dallas in much the same tradition as his John Cole character in 12 Monkeys, with endearing intelligence and sensitivity intertwined with brute strength. Gary Oldman, who is quickly becoming one of Besson's stock actors, gives the best performance he can despite his limited material. He is Zorg, a high maintenance corporate cut–throat who welcomes the evil entity and will do anything to allow its current path of destruction to continue. Hopefully, in a director's cut of some sort, Zorg's motivation will be more explained, yet he still pulls off the persona of the ultimate agent of evil with a sinister ease, speaking with a bizarre southern dialect. His timing and delivery are perfect through his dialogue with the alien mercenaries,

Turn to MOVIE, page 6

Sleater Kinney to play Iron Horse

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Even though Sleater Kinney has yet to record their version of Exile on Main Street (or even sell over 10,000 records), Details has called these three young women from the Northwest "the toughest, fiercest punk band since the Rolling Stones" — with good reason.

Why all this praise for a bunch of former Riot Grrrls? Like Nirvana, Sleater Kinney has found a rare ability to take all the energy and anger of punk rock and translate it into pure rock 'n' roll. Their formula? Two guitars, drums and lots of screaming vocals.

Screaming is nothing new to the members of Sleater Kinney. Lead singer Corin Tucker tore apart many a vocal chord with the classic Riot Grrrl band, Heavens to Betsy, while her current partner in crime, Carrie Brownstein, led Excuse 17, an all female trio that never received the proper credit.

Together, Tuker and Brownstein form an explosive team, dueling each other with their guitars and screams — often creating results that match the best of Team Dresch or Bikini Kill. And with both those bands beyond their prime, Sleater Kinney has become the only former grrrl band still worth listening to.

Their new album, Dig Me Out (Kill Rock Stars) follows on the heels of their album Call the Doctor (Chainsaw/ Villa Villakula) which the Village Voice named the third best album of 1996 (behind Beck and the Fugees).

With lyrics like "Dum–dum–diddy–dum–dum–de–dum, yeah" Sleater Kinney may not always tackle the pertinent issues that Heavens to Betsy fans are accustomed to, but the band has hardly lost their activist side.

In an interview with the Los Angeles Times about their Riot Grrrl roots, Tucker said, "The issues that Riot Grrrl was trying to deal with, albeit in a very unsophisticated way, were issues of rape and sexual abuse and being physically unsafe, which are extremely important issues for young women... I definitely think we're inspired by the same issues. I just think that as you get older... you have different voices and different means to tap into them."

Tonight, expect an intimate show by one of our generation's most powerful bands. Just listen to their lyrics, "You bring your heart to us/ We'll get it purified."

Opening tonight's show is the Northampton trio, Pirate Jenny. Since releasing one of the best local singles of the past few years, the band has been laying low. Their music, obviously influenced by the Riot Grrrl scene, lacks the over– the–top energy of Sleater Kinney but makes up for it with beautiful melodies and catchy tunes.

Sleater Kinney and Pirate Jenny perform at the Iron Horse Music Hall tonight at 8:30 p.m. The show is all ages; tickets are available at the door.

COURTESY JOHN CLARK

Kill Rock Stars performing artists Sleater–Kinney will play the Iron Horse tonight.

PHI BETA KAPPA
Nu Chapter of Massachusetts
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Induction ceremony and family reception, Saturday, May 24, 3:00 - 4:30 p.m., Lincoln Campus Center Auditorium, University of Massachusetts.

The three deans of Arts and Sciences and Nu Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa are pleased to announce new members elected from the Junior and Senior Classes. Phi Beta Kappa is the oldest and most prestigious American honor society in the Liberal Arts. It was founded at the College of William and Mary on December 5, 1776. Yale's chapter was formed in 1780, Harvard's in 1781. During the next century additional chapters of Phi Beta Kappa were added and in 1883 a national organization called the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa was created. At present, only 237 liberal arts colleges or universities have been accredited by the national organization and permitted to form chapters. In New England only six public institutions are so recognized.

Candidates do not apply for membership nor is application made on their behalf. They are nominated by the chapter's faculty members on the basis of their academic records as shown on their transcripts. Candidates must be majors in one of the three faculties of the College of Arts and Sciences and must satisfy certain grade point, foreign language and distribution requirements set by the national organization. Approximately 3% of Seniors with the strongest academic records are elected each year; one half of 1% of Juniors are selected.

Class of 1998

Debby M. Almeida	PORTUGUESE HRS
Amr A. Bokhari	BIOLOGY HRS
Catherine M. Burns	ENGLISH HRS
Janice M. Coughlin	PSYCH/ENG
Nicole R. Cournoyer	ENGLISH HRS
Peter M. DeGlopper	ENGLISH HRS
Juliette T. Doro	JS/POLSCI
Steven M. Elefson	PSYCHOLOGY HRS
Nathan C. Emley	ASTRONOMY HRS
Carey J. Fagerstrom	BIOLOGY HRS
Mary Gerst	BIOLOGY
Mariantonietta Giglio	PSYCH HRS
Jennifer H. Gutzman	BIOLOGY
Brian D. Hanechak	MATH/COMPSCI HRS
Jennifer L. Hubley	ENGLISH HRS
Shane M. Karcz	ECONOMICS/ENG
Christine Kostek	BIOLOGY HRS
Hannah C. Kristek	BIOCHEM & MOLBIO
Steve O. Kwon	BIOLOGY
Leah M. Laricia	BIOLOGY HRS
Ryan M. Loss	PSYCH
Felix A. LoStracco	POLSCI/ECON
Amy B. Makowski	CHEM HRS
Jennifer L. Mayer	PSYCHOLOGY HRS
Kathleen E. McSheehy	PSYCH/EDUC HRS
Ann Y. Nakayama	BIOLOGY HRS
Emily Niemitz	BIOCHEM & MOLBIO
Amy T. Pelletier	ENGLISH/HISTORY
Jennifer L. Ptau	BIOLOGY HRS
Joehanna K. Rizzadini	PSYCHOLOGY HRS
Inber Shani	PSYCH HRS
Scott B. Sullivan	POLYSCI
Carly R. Varela	PSYCH HRS
Shaun P. Vogel	GERMAN
Scott A. Weltze	BIOLOGY HRS
Jennifer L. Wheelock	BIOLOGY HRS

Class of 1997

Adam J. Adelman	PSYCH
Roberto G. Aldworth	ECONOMICS
Jason A. Bailey	PSYCH
Maryanne Bailey	SPANISH
Michael D. Beland	BIOLOGY
Amy K. Bosworth	HISTORY HRS
Joshua J. Cabral	FRENCH
Michael A. Camara	SPANISH
Brian R. Campbell	CHEMISTRY HRS
Guy Chayoun	ECONOMICS HRS
Alexandra R. Clark	LEGAL STUDIES
Abigail E. Coy	PSYCH HRS
Darcie E. Dennigan	ENGLISH HRS
Lisa J. Ditto	MATHEMATICS
Ronald Q. Dottin	ECONOMICS
David A. Drubin	BIOCHEM&MOLBIO HRS
Keith P. Enright	POLITICAL SCIENCE/PHIL HRS
Noah J. Finkel	PSYCH HRS
Panagiotis S. Gianopoulos	ENGLISH HRS
Samantha A. Gross	COMMUNICATION HRS
Neil K. Grover	BIOCHEM&MOLBIO HRS
Christine M. Guay	POLITICAL SCIENCE
Kathleen A. Harrington	SPANISH
Elizabeth E. Hogan	ENGLISH
Lillian R. Horwitz	BIOLOGY
Jason J. Hyjek	HISTORY HRS
Mark L. Ingerson	HISTORY/POLSCI HRS
Nicole H. Jeanloz	ENGLISH HRS
Mark S. Johnson	BIOLOGY
Celina E. Kapoor	STPEC HRS
Jessica E. Kennet	JAPANESE HRS
Amie B. Kimpton	PSYCH
Paul H. Koenig	ANTHROPOLOGY
Matthew D. Krajewski	COMP SCIENCE HRS
Dainora V. Kupcinskas	LING/PSYCH HRS
Kevin S. Lanmore	BIOLOGY HRS
Karen L. Lavarnway	FRENCH HRS
Thomas C. Lawrence	CLASSICS
Bethany R. Levrault	PSYCH HRS
Lisa H. Levy	PSYCH
Nicole M. Liss	WOMEN'S STUDIES HRS
Mark S. Livingstone	BIOLOGY/MATH HRS
Marguerite R. Lombardo	SOCIOL/PSYCH HRS
Frederick MacDonald	ECONOMICS HRS
Derek H. Markwarth	POLITICAL SCIENCE
Lee R. Marlow	MATHEMATICS HRS
Tara C. McCarthy	COMP LIT HRS
Collin C. McKay	STPEC/GERMAN
Jeffrey A. McClelland	MATHEMATICS HRS
Kathryn A. McGarvey	WOMEN'S STUDIES/ENGL
Mark D. Mitchell	ART HISTORY HRS
Brian P. Neumann	ENGLISH/ECONOMICS HRS
Craig R. O'Connor	HISTORY HRS
Amy R. Orciari	ENGLISH/SPANISH
Shannon M. Pelkey	ASTRONOMY HRS
Julia G. Pfrommer	ENGLISH/HISTORY
Marc J. Randazzo	ECONOMICS/ENGLISH HRS
Matthew Renzi	PHYSIC HRS
Heather G. Richard	ENGLISH
Michele A. Roberts	LINGUISTICS&ANTHRO
Aletta C. Schnitzler	BIOLOGY HRS
Nicole A. Severse	BIOLOGY
Eric H. Sherman	COMMUNICATION HRS
Robert I. Shulman	COMP LIT HRS
Sara Shulman	COMP LIT HRS
Gregory C. Silverman	PSYCH/MUSIC HRS
Jodi R. Smith	PSYCHOLOGY
Jessica E. Sowa	ENGLISH HRS/POL SCI
Tiffany H. Sprague	ART HISTORY HRS
Jayna S. Stafford	ENGLISH/PSYCH HRS
Jesse M. Steinberg	COMP SCI HRS/MATH
Vera A. Stupina	BIOCHEM& MOL BIO HRS/CHEM
Amy L. Tien	BIOCHEM &MOLBIO
Jennifer A. Tierney	PSYCHOLOGY
Jason Tomasian	PSYCHOLOGY HRS
Bethany Uhlig	HISTORY
Nathan E. Vaillette	LING& PHILOSOPHY HRS
Keith A. Vasco	COMPUTER SCIENCE
Natanya Wachtel	BDIC HRS
Kevin M. Welch	POLITICALSCI/HISTORY HRS
Carl O. Wied	POLITICAL SCI/PSYCHOLOGY
Karin E. Wiklund	COMPUTER SCIENCE HRS
Rebecca S. Wolk	ENGLISH HRS
Todd E. Wright	COMPUTER SCIENCE HRS
Mei Y. Xu	BIOLOGY

Class of 1996

John Lucius Ada	PSYCHOLOGY
Sarah A. Adams	ENGLISH
Amy E. Albernaz	PSYCHOLOGY
Kelly K. Bartolome	BIOLOGY
Lisa R. Becker	PSYCHOLOGY
Steve V. Belpedio	PSYCHOLOGY
Nicole M. Boisvert	THEATER
Esther Chang	JAPANESE
Steven L. Cohen	POLITICAL SCIENCE
Katherine M. Earle	PSYCHOLOGY
Peter F. Flynn II	MATHEMATICS
Palko S. Goldman	BIOLOGY
Kimberly S. Guisie	GERMAN
Niloufar Haghaveghi	BIOCHEMISTRY
Dorothea S. Hertzberg	STPEC
Christopher S. Hibbard	ENGLISH
Carrie R. Hildreth	PSYCHOLOGY
Lori A. Hrdlicka	BIOLOGY
Alison E. Hussey	PSYCHOLOGY
Timothy J. Jacobs	PSYCHOLOGY
Alina N. Johnson	FRENCH
Scott L. Keyes	SOCIOLOGY
Jennifer A. Kinkele	ECONOMICS
Robert A. Letteney	HISTORY
Beth A. Manchester	HISTORY
Jennifer D. Moodie	BIOLOGY
David C. Mumper	PHILOSOPHY
Kara E. Niedbala	PSYCHOLOGY
Kelly L. Ovitt	ECONOMICS
Anna L. Palin	ENGLISH
Janet M. Perles	COMPARATIVE LITERATURE
Deirdre Quirk	ENGLISH
Heather L. Redfern	JOURNALISM
Robert J. Reginio	ENGLISH
Kim E. Richman	PSYCHOLOGY
Judith A. Silva	ENGLISH
Alison K. Sisitsky	BIOLOGY
Tracey M. Smith	HISTORY
Deirdre Spezeski	PSYCHOLOGY
Samantha L. Stone	PSYCHOLOGY
Matthew R. Tagliani	MATHEMATICS
Julianne M. Touchette	BIOCHEMISTRY
Gina M. Vizzari	GERMAN
Lucinda H. Wheelock	BIOLOGY
David S. Yorio	BIOCHEMISTRY

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
London $199 $370
Rome or Milan $340 $635
San Jose, Costa Rica $246 $460
Roundtrip
TOKYO $879
SYDNEY $898
Subsidized flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Extensions available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs–imm granon taxes apply.
Fares subject to change without notice. ISIC student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

flight check
LONDON $395
PARIS $587
AMSTERDAM $539
ROME $653
MADRID $629
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst
Tel : 413-256-1261

■ movie

continued from page 5

the Mangalores, whom he hires to steal the sacred element stones.

The supporting roles from Jovovich, Holm, Chris Tucker and, surprisingly, Luke Perry are equally satisfying. Tucker (Dead Presidents, Friday) is Ruby Rhod, the sexy fast talking D.J. who finds himself entangled with Dallas & Co. His role is devised by Besson to examine the explosive nature of the media. The entire second half of the film is broadcasted live by Rhod as he and Dallas continuously attempt to defy death and boost his show's ratings at the same time. Although Luke Perry (formerly of Beverly Hills 90210 fame) only has about 10 minutes of screen time, he proves he has acting talent. He plays Billy, the apprentice of the archeologist who first discovers the key to the fifth element.

The most striking performance is by Ian Holm (Cold Comfort Farm, Richard III), the film's true Thespian. From one startled facial expression to the next, Holm's performance is the link that holds the film so neatly together; in fact, he is the only character to have dialogue with both Dallas and Zorg individually.

The Fifth Element expands the dimensions of sci-fi with its subtle, yet often hilarious, dark comic side. As the film begins to take off in the direction of a surreal dream, with a calm blend of stunning visual stimulation and new age electronic music, a moment of humor will occur in order for the film to not fall too ahead of itself. This allows Besson's work to remain somewhat personal for the viewer, with a distant future that is familiar at the same time. One example being the nagging voice of Dallas' mother screeching at him over the phone or the gentle homages to other classic sci-fi movies including a brilliant tease of Princess Leia's hair style.

The only disappointment in Besson's masterpiece is that it appeared not fully complete. Hopefully, in much the same tradition as Blade Runner, a director's cut will be released to finalize Besson's vision. The Fifth Element is not a film that is easily forgettable, and its intriguing imagery will remain in a viewer's mind for quite some time. Although beautiful, Besson's world of the future is equally disturbing, but its optimistic approach is inspiring nonetheless, however in a far more classy manner than that of the absurd patriotism of Independence Day. The Fifth Element is a tribute to science fiction's past and a landmark set for science fiction's future. A-

Ska's the limit with Mephiskapheles

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

Downstairs at Pearl Street on Saturday night, it was hotter than hell— literally. Could it have been because there were just too many sweat producing, pre-pubescent teenagers? Maybe some would believe it was the lack of ventilation, or the sardine conditions of the crowd. Whatever the case, in totality, it was the doing of Mephiskapheles, the "satanic ska" band of the two-tone world.

Mephiskapheles, unlike past shows during which they've addressed the crowd with their notorious "G-O-D-D-O-G" howls, began the long set with more laid back, musically seasoned songs. There were additions to the band (a new bass player and horn performers), who ended up creating the more concentrated sound that Mephiskapheles has been striving for.

Working from their debut disc "God Bless Satan," the lead singer, the Nubian Nightmare, couldn't stop the gush of energy once it started. Interestingly, everything from "Doomsday" to "Rank and File" was increased in tempo, thus causing the crowd to skank more rapidly than considered possible. "Bad John" was also among the many beloved songs that Mephiskapheles cast onto the crowd.

Although the set seemed a bit lethargic and far from the finale at times, Mephiskapheles made up for these dips with the "The Bumble Bee Tuna Song" and their encore melody "Saba." Overall, Mephiskapheles didn't disappoint, but they did have their moments when the entire audience would steal glances at their wristwatches to see what time it was and how soon they could go home.

The Royal Crowns, a western-flavored ska band, was one of four to precede the headliner. Working with the sounds of a handsome stand up bass and steel guitar, the Elvis Presley look-alike vocalist not only wooed the crowd with his dancing, but also his outgoing and amiable personality.

This honkey tonk realm of music, with songs like "I Don't Have the Time" and "Fireball Stomp" was interesting and unconventional. If they didn't have a profusion of fans before, then they definitely acquired more after their fine display of talent following the sing-along "Scene of the Crime" and "Hat Size."

Three other bands started off the night. Up-and-coming Big Lick, a Boston based band and Canadian band Jiker not only impressed, but prepared the crowd for a lengthy night of music.

According to the lead singer of the Royal Crowns, that show was the best that they ever played. No doubt, it was— not only because of the amazing bands with whom they had opportunity to play, but also because of the masses of hysterical teenagers who had nothing better to do than mosh on a Saturday night.

Some would beg to differ. A show of such stature and talent should not have been confined to the downstairs of Pearl Street. Restricting the space for this sold out show only extracted the finest of what was being offered.

Some actually long for the old days where the venue of a great ska show would be saturated with the two tone Rudies who had elbow room to display their skanking talents. Today, the populace of ska fans are flowing from the high schools to right in front of the Mephiskapheles stage. Do not expect to have any more elbow room. Expect crowd surfers.

Summer offers theater treats

By Alex Iglesias
Collegian Staff

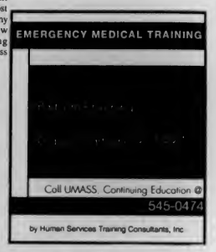
As the school year begins to dwindle closer and closer to the end, so has the spring theater season throughout the Five Colleges Area, but theater fanatics need not worry. A refreshing surprise is in store for this summer's stages. For summer students who complain there has never been and there will never be anything worthwhile to do in the Pioneer Valley during the roasting months, well, think again.

In a few weeks time, Mt. Holyoke will be proud to kick off its 27th season of Summer Theater — a non-profit professional, summer stock theater company. Year after year, company after company, the Summer Theater has delighted audiences of all ages throughout the long summer months from June through August. This year, Summer Theater will be presenting an extensive variety of shows — ranging from comedy to farce, from mystery to drama, and with a little dash of horror thrown in.

So who is the man at the helm of these productions? He is Producing Director John Grassilli, a first time producing director for summer stock theater at Mt. Holyoke. Grassilli is no amateur in the theater business though — Especially in the Summer Theater company, where he was one of the "founding fathers" of this educationally elite theater program back in the '70s. Grassilli — a West Springfield native and a UMass graduate — has enthusiastically returned with his wife, with hopes of expanding and reviving the summer stock theater just a tad.

"This is the greatest format there is to teach theater," Grassilli said in a recent interview.

Grassilli believes this rare form of summer theater is one of the best teaching tools for young actors, actresses, directors and crew members — and he is undoubtedly correct. From the early days of the Summer Theater until the present, the theater stages of Mt. Holyoke have hosted over 3,000 company members — with about 600 still in the business — and this year, the company consists of about 130 fresh, hard-working and enthusiastic members. Their hard work sure is cut out for this vibrant cast and crew, starting the morning of June 1 when the entire company has to report for their summer of a lifetime.

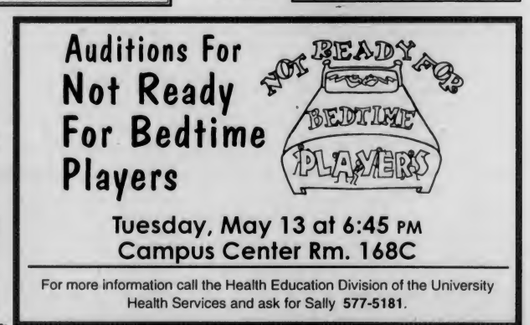


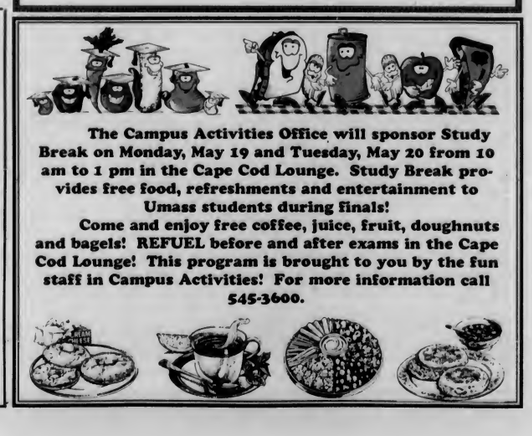
For the first three weeks of summer stock theater, the entire company works vigorously to construct their very own outdoor tent theater in which they will be performing all of their shows (with the exception of a surprise performance at the Mt. Holyoke amphitheater). The work doesn't stop there, though. For 12 hours a day, six days a week, the cast and crew will continue the relentless work toward perfecting their non-stop weekly performances. This is the real life experience which Grassilli preaches — nowhere else can one have the opportunity to continuously cooperate with a massive number of people and actually still have flawless performances. The most impressive endeavor for this company will be the ability to have one show performing, while the following week's is still in the making — mass production is in effect.

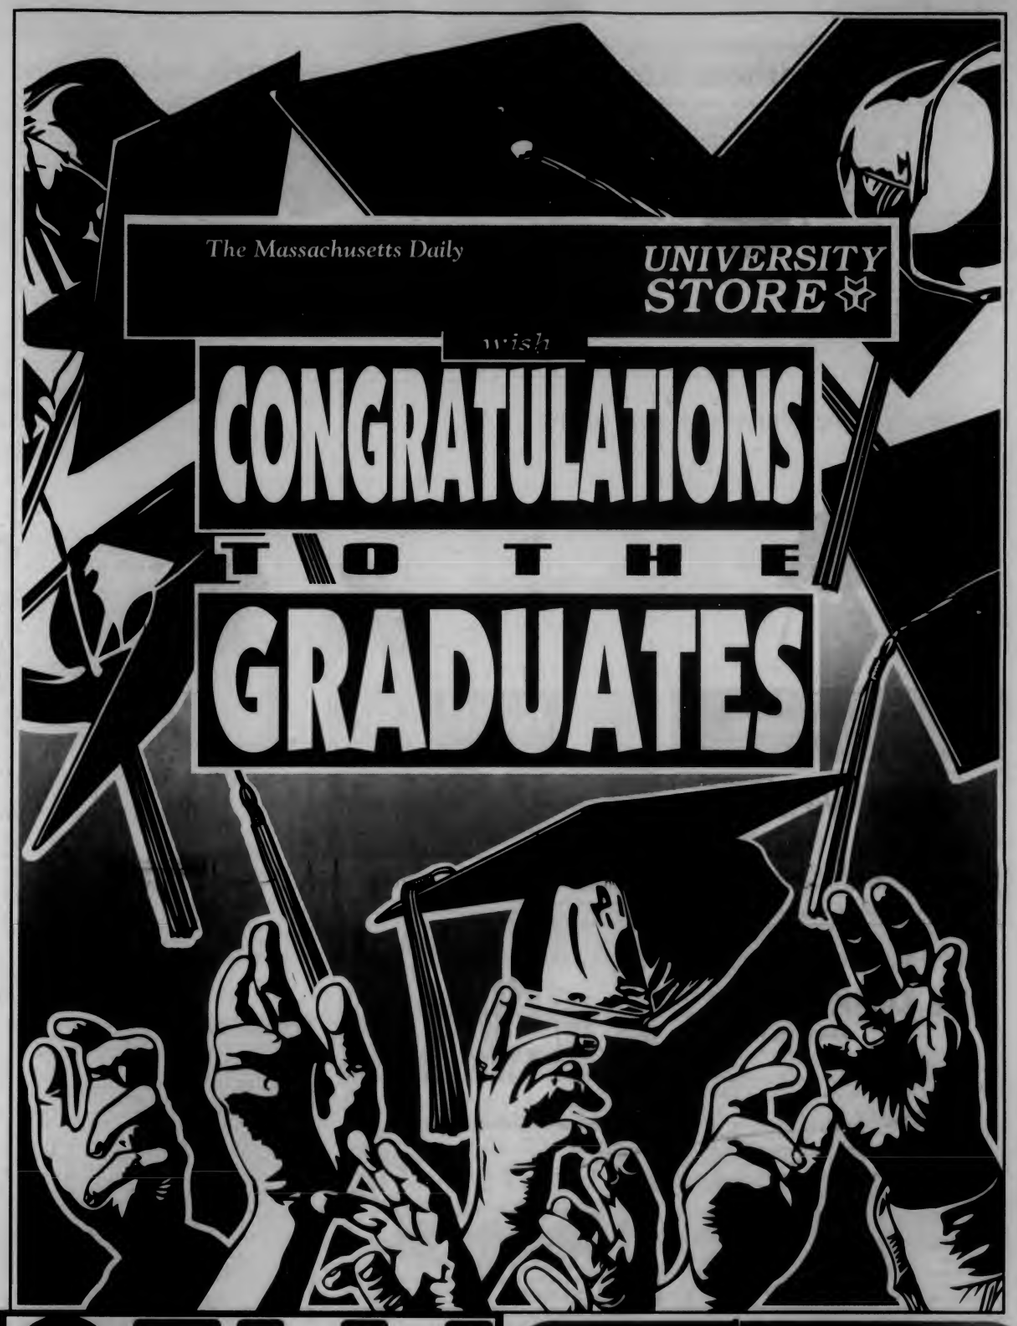
As for who is in the company — well, it's one of the strangest mixes of entertainers audiences have seen in a while. The company consists of the Intern Company which includes students from universities around the United States, the Apprentice Company consisting of high school grads and undergrads ages 16 and up and a few guest performers such as Amelia White — who performed in Broadway's Crazy For You.

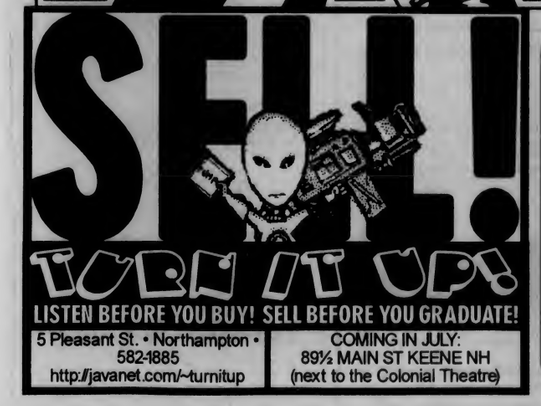
This 1997 Summer Theater company will be a pleasant summer delight for people of all ages. Opening June 21 with its Variety/Comedy Night, the summer season will continue through Aug. 12. During the back to back weeks, a total of eight straight plays including Mary Shelley's legendary Frankenstein and the one woman play Shirley Valentine — starring Amelia White — will captivate audiences. The Theater For Young Audiences will bring about a pleasing touch, with youthful shows such as Noah Smith's Return To The Land of Oz. So, take a break from the norm of weekend excursions to the shore and step into the Summer Theater's delightful fantasy world. You don't want to miss this opportunity.

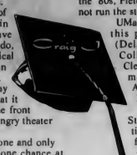
The Summer Theater's individual main stage tickets are $17-$19 and Theater for Young Audiences are $4. Season subscriptions are still available. For info or tickets call the box office at (413) 538-2406.











A world without windows

I am not a journalist, I am a businessman. I was asked to write an article on what I saw over the past four years at UMass and my past three and a half years at the Collegian. The truth is that due to the lack of windows in the office, I didn't see much.

In the world of the Collegian, (many of you out there will agree that we are in our own little world down here), I have learned to not have an opinion. If you do, you can get caught in a four-hour political debate about nothing (I once had an hour-long debate on why I think Structure clothes suck). Also, if you stay away from an opinion, you will find that it is a lot easier to field complaints at the front desk from various picketers, debaters, angry theater people, etc.

You know what— I didn't want my one and only column to head in this direction. My one chance at stardom is beginning to sound like a depressing "screw the campus" column, and I have read too many of those during my days at the Collegian. I have wanted to write a column throughout my four years at UMass. I am a huge fan of the '80s. This would have been my topic if I were to write a real column and not the "here you go Craig, we ran out of editorial content" column. My main focus would have been the year of all years — 1985 (Fletch, The Super Bowl Shuffle, Spiked hair, Shannon's, "Let the Music Play", Jordache, etc.) But to quote the greatest character of the '80s, Fletch would say, "You can't run the ad and not run the story."

UMass is a great place. I had a lot of firsts at this place. I had my first beer at a bar (Delano's — age 19); I went to my first College Basketball Game (UMass vs. Cleveland State); I lived in my first apartment (711 Main Street with Lee and Andy); I hosted my first party (156 South East Street with Nick, Nelson and Zima); I saw my first Matthews show (Pearl Street, 10/94); I saw Fletch another 60 times; I aced a botany exam; I went to a fraternity party; and I met the greatest girl in the world (Christine). I also can now say that I wrote a column for the Collegian. It has been a great four years and I wouldn't trade them for the world. If anyone is still reading this, thank you. You have made my moment in the spotlight a success. I think I will stick to my day job.

Craig J Brody is the Collegian Advertising Manager.

What I wanted to be; what I am now

"In the days of my youth, I was told what it means to be a man. Now, I've reached that age, I try to do all those things the best I can." — Led Zeppelin

Since my first days at UMass, I knew I was where I wanted to be. The scenery, the architectural designs (Butter Henge), the diversity and of course— the many parties.

People try always to discredit this school, but they know it has a lot to offer. Open your eyes and you will see. Instead of boring you with a sermon, I've decided to list all the things I've done. Let's see if you can follow along...

The greens, the blue skies, the Sunday afternoon rides; the magical trips to Wildwoods, Canada, the sundial, the Fine Arts, the garden and of course— the Dairy Marts. The hikes to Mt. Greylock and the Holyoke Range, the journeys to the Farm House, Central Hill and Hobart Lane. I will remember Springfest, Spring Concert, the Raves, Uptown and the high-priced Brody Feats. Sure there was water, fire, snow and Extravaganza, but I'll let you figure out the rest.

Thank you Mom, Dad, Bob, Alain, Holly, Dan, Imeld and Sheila. I also want to thank the rest of my family and all my friends who have experienced these good times with me. God Bless you all!

Eric R. Remillard IV is the Collegian Finance Manager.

Commencement Morning Schedule

1. Routes to campus/travel assistance: Please advise your guests to plan ahead to allow sufficient travel time to campus. Traffic off major routes and into the greater Amherst area may be heavy as early as 9:00 a.m., and delays may be encountered.
2. Parking and shuttle services: Guests will be directed to designated parking lots. Beginning at 8:30 a.m., free shuttle buses will circle campus every 5-10 minutes, taking you and/or your guests to the Stadium, and returning after the ceremony.
3. Snacks and souvenirs: Coffee, soft drinks, bottled water, donuts, and pastry will be available at the Stadium. University hats, banners, sweat shirts, film, and disposable cameras will also be available for purchase.
4. Food Services: Following Commencement there will be a "Food Court" adjacent to the Stadium. There will be tents from which a variety of reasonably priced items will be served including grilled quarter pounders, all-beef franks, vegan burgers, grilled chicken sandwiches, and other selections. There will be gourmet desserts, fresh fruit, chocolate-covered strawberries, and gourmet coffee. Reservations are not required. For further information about this option, call 545-2472.

In addition, "Graduation Luncheons", for which reservations are required, will be featured at the Top of the Campus Restaurant (549-3216) and at the Faculty Club (545-2551). Call immediately for reservations!

What to do / Where to go / When

1. 9:00-9:30 a.m.: Arrive at the Stadium by 9:30 a.m., carrying your cap and gown.
2. 9:30 a.m.: Robe, after which you will receive instructions from Marshals about assembling and the Processional on to the field.
3. 10:10 a.m.: Processional of Degree Candidates begins.
4. 10:30 a.m.: Ceremony begins
5. 11:45 a.m.: Ceremony ends - Alumni status begins!

My life: the University soap opera

I entered college with the belief that I was here to learn academics. I thought my days would be filled with classes and nights filled with studying.

Was I WRONG!

As I look back over the events of my past four years, I realize that everything that happened should only be allowed in a daytime soap opera. I've also come to the decision that if I had to spend one more day at this school past May 25, someone may as well take me into a dark alley and give me a random beatdown.

I am glad I flew the 3,800 miles from the West Coast to attend UMass. I kept Sugar Jones and DP Dough in business. I became very inspired by Professor Oates. I lost my mind when I sold my soul to the Collegian and became Business Manager down in this vast windowless place. I learned what real pain feels like and I learned what real happiness feels like.

I am definitely prepared for anything that life would like to throw my way as I venture beyond the walls of UMass. My suggested ways to deal with stress: Hop in your car around 3 a.m. with roommates, turn on Hakuna Matata (from The Lion King) as loud as it will go and drive to Dunkin Donuts at highly illegal speeds. Run around your apartment screaming and jumping on all the couches — so far, I haven't gotten any complaints from neighbors. Don't ever live in #63 Puffton — I apologize to the guys who will be taking over our lease, but the place is haunted and your life is in trouble. Sail with "The Captain."

Although I did learn how to deal with some stress, my days at the Collegian still drove me to drink. My drinking at Delano's drove me to miss classes. Missing classes has driven me to take incompletes. But it hasn't been all bad. There were many inspirational classes I took. There were many wonderful people I met and the bartenders and bouncers know me at Delano's. I think I deserve a free T-shirt.

Alycia T. Hines is the Collegian Business Manager Extraordinaire.

Congratulations and Thanks Again!
Worker-owned CollectiveCopies

安城中國飯店 AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE.
• HOME STYLE COOKING, WE USE OUR FARM ORGANICALLY GROWN PRODUCE DURING LOCAL GROWING SEASON.
• EAT-IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS.
253-7835 • 253-2813 • 62 Main Street, Amherst
O.C.M.P.

R&P Liquors
• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S.Amherst • Fridge Rentals
505 West St. • South Amherst
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brooks, & The Residence
549-7758

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Fried Cheese & Onion Rings 6.25 3.13
Shrimp Cocktail 5.75 2.88
Lite Potato Skins 7.25 3.63
1/2 PRICE!
J Judie's DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street 253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

Graduation Party!
STARS OF
The COMMITMENTS
Saturday, May 24
Shows at 7 & 10 pm
Special dinner menu served at both shows!
All ages - bring your family!
Beat the two hour wait at most area restaurants with guaranteed seating for dinner and a show!
Doors open at 5:30 for the 7 pm show and at 9:30 for the 10 pm show
Tickets: $15
Northampton Box Office: 586-8686
(Dinner not included in ticket price)
Call the Iron Horse for table reservations for parties of 8 or more.
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
20 Center St. In downtown Northampton

we deliver anywhere
Always in Bloom
Thanks Grads! & Good Luck
Best! 1997
230 N. Pleasant Street, Amherst, MA, 01002
253-5545

ICHIBAN いちばん
Authentic Japanese Restaurant
ADVOCATE ★BEST★ OF SPRINGFIELD READERS POLL 1996
ADVOCATE ★BEST★ OF SPRINGFIELD READERS POLL 1997
1st Place Japanese Restaurant
SUSHI BAR • TATAMI ROOMS
CATERING • DELIVERY
CALL FOR MOTHER'S DAY RESERVATIONS
1 ROUNDHOUSE PLAZA
NORTHAMPTON, MA
413-585-1185

Celebrate Commencement at Salem Cross Inn 1785
A National Historic Landmark
Route 9, West Brookfield 1-508-867-2345
Thirty Minutes East of Amherst
Tuesday - Friday 11:30am - 9pm
Saturday 5pm - 9pm • Sunday Noon - 8pm
Traditional New England Cooking
Your reservations & inquiries warmly welcomed

Congratulations Class of 1997
and their Families
Best Wishes from the Collegian

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES!
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

Nostalgia time, oh yeah

When looking back on four years at the University of Massachusetts, I don't want to sound typical and say that many memories come to mind and that I'll miss college, and all of that boring, mushy stuff. But how else can I write the truth?

College changed me. (So much for originality, huh?) The whole experience — academics, jobs and of course the people — changed me. I remember when I was a mere freshman in 1993, a timid 17-year-old girl from Sturbridge. I thought I knew it all. (I'm sure all of you seniors out there can attest to saying that.) I was finally "independent" of the 'rents and all of that blundering blah, blah. Little did I know... but that's for another day...

Nostalgia time, oh yeah. Who could forget their first night ever at college? I was assigned to 700 Webster, up in Orchard Hill. Oh God. What a chore it was living all the way up there. We had a great view from our balcony though. I remember feeling so lost and out of place on this huge campus. A line or two must be said about the Frat Row/Puffton/somewhere-off-campus-party experience. Those keg shindigs years later turned into cocktail parties, nightclubbing and hanging' with the gang at Hugo's and Fitzwilly's (rum 'n' coke and disco, guys!) in Noho. Then there were the concerts! Phish, Beck, Radiohead, Chucklehead, Violent Femmes and Blues Traveler!

And I can't stress enough the importance of my educational experiences (That's really why we are here, right? Or did I miss something?) at the Collegian, and my internships at my hometown area paper the Southbridge Evening News and the Daily Hampshire Gazette/Amherst Bulletin. (A big "Wie geht's?" goes out to my floormates living in the German Language Program in Thatcher Hall. Hiya! A "Waka waka waka, don't I feel like Fozzy" goes out to that diva from Starbucks country, Seattle.)

Senior year was the best year out of the bunch, (forgive me, I just saw Greg Brady! Groovy!). I turned 21 — 'nuff said. No, actually I've met many wonderful people this year, and from them I've learned a great deal about myself and, not to sound cheesy or anything, but the world around me. It's utterly depressing to say that two of those people I met were on exchange here this year, and as I leave for the "real world," they, too will soon be on their journey home to England.

It's a shame that once you meet people, and grow to care for them, it's soon time to say goodbye. That's why it's difficult to write this. I don't want to even fathom that I have only two weeks left with the people I love most, and this piece only brings May 25 to gruesome reality.

Alas, with the end of my four years at UMass comes the exciting beginning of a chapter to what certain folk know as the life of "Banski." A summer trip to Europe awaits a friend I met during freshman year and me. Oh, yeah, and of course a job at some newspaper. Can't forget the real point of a college education, of course.

In an effort not to sound like a typical graduation column, which I have failed to do, it's time to come to terms with saying goodbye to UMass and the shelter and experiences it has provided me. "Thanks for the memories."

Lorraine Urbanski is a Collegian staff member.

Night Graphics wishes all graduates the best Graduation Wishes

Congratulations Class of 1997
and their Families

Following Commencement...
Bring a picnic blanket, relax, avoid the traffic, and celebrate with:

Vegan Burger	$1.50
Quarter Pound Burger	$2.00
Quarter Pound Burger w/cheese	$2.25
Grilled Chicken Sandwich	$2.00
All Beef Hot Dog	$1.50
Turkey Grinder	$3.00
Roast Beef Grinder	$3.00
Ham Grinder	$3.00

Bonducci's Gourmet Coffees

Gourmet Desserts

Fresh Fruit Cups	$1.50
Chocolate Dipped Strawberries	$1.00/2
Bluewall Cookies	$1.00
Gourmet Cake Slices	$2.00
Fresh Fruit	$ .50

Beverages

Canned Soda	$1.00
Arizona Tea	$1.25
Spring Water	$1.00

University of Massachusetts-Amherst Dining Services

WIR SPRECHEN VOLKSWAGEN
The Valley's largest VW inventory! Whether it's a tune-up or a full blown restoration project; from engine valves and bearings to door handles or gas caps, we have the parts for just about any model VW ever made! Plus a full inventory for Japanese and Korean cars and trucks.
WE SPEAK VOLKSWAGEN!
PELHAM AUTO PARTS
ROUTE 9
AMHERST/ BELCHERTOWN LINE
256-0457
It All Starts With Parts...
BECK/ARNLEY WORLDPARTS

CONGRATULATIONS CLASS OF 1997
Stop by the University Store for all your graduation Gift needs
Diploma Frames - as low as 39.99
Pen & Ink and Watercolor Prints
It's never too late to order your class ring
UMASSOPOLY includes all the favorite sports
Open Graduation Weekend
Saturday and Sunday 9-4
For Your Shopping Convenience
The Areas Largest Selection of UMass Gifts
Clocks-Lamps - Pewter - Brass - Marble - Crystal and more
UNIVERSITY STORE 545-2619

The (Honors College) vision division

In a weird twist of fate, in a room with Aaron Spencer, I saw the fangs of big business sink deeper into the arteries of the working class... perhaps it was just politics.

Aaron Spencer, a member of the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education, is working hard on bringing his brainchild, the Honors College, into fruition. Since state schools do not enjoy good public perception, he says, he hopes the Honors College would change that. Spencer sees the Honors College as increasing the value of our degrees, resulting in increased salaries and alumni giving.

Viraphanh Douangmany

In March of this year, just days into the Goodell takeover which listed the needs of students of color and the poor, Mr. Spencer received a proposal entitled "An Honors College at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst: A Concept Paper In Response to Commonwealth College," submitted by Chancellor Scott on behalf of both faculty and administration.

Concerned with the proposal betraying the mission of state institutions, students met with Aaron Spencer in his office in West Roxbury, Corporate Headquarters of Uno's Pizzeria on Friday April 25. Decked in plain clothes and cloaked in warm demeanor, Spencer opened with these remarks: "I am not an educator. I am a businessman. I know marketing and sales." Exercising the epitome of patience, he listened to students contend that the Honors College proposal was racist, elitist and the nearly $17 million dollar price tag should best be spent elevating the quality of education of everyone.

Denying allegations that Scott's Honors College proposal would result in a decrease in the number of people receiving a college degree, Spencer recommended Community Colleges as an option. (Scott's proposal intends to double the number of honor students from 1,600 to 3,200 without increasing the population of UMass which is currently just under 18,000.)

According to Scott, you may be considered a part of the elite 3,200 if you score at least 1,300 on your SAT and are ranked in the top 10 percent of your class. Membership privileges for the elite include living and learning in isolation; $10 million dollars would be used to construct an academic building to house new classrooms, offices and technology spaces. A dormitory would undergo renovations nearby to as to create a small Ivy League feel. Half a million dollars would be used to pay for distinguished visiting faculty. The Honors Program would undergo a $4 million renovation, not withstanding costs to upgrade the current Honors Program director position to Dean, the addition of 10 new faculty advisors, recruiters and a director position for the Post Graduate Fellowships office.

Has UMass remained faithful to its land grant mission of student access and public service? Campaign UMass literature espouses this tenet: "The UMass dream fuses with the American dream. The dream that means the hope of every child of mean streets or immigrant parents or hard times or bad luck or humble beginnings... The dream that calls to all who work hard everyday to maintain their footing. For all these people a better life beckons."

Mr. Spencer may be able to dish out a grand here and there for SAT preparation courses faster than he dishes out his pizzas, but for many of the working class, this is not an option. However, do not mention class struggle and how the Honors College would widen the disparities between the haves and have-nots because in a blink of an eye, Rodney Dangerfield will exit for the emergence of Horatic Algier. Leaving the "no respect" lines on public higher education, Spencer quickly switches to a popular American ethos of hard work and motivation as determinants of success. He will tell you how he financed his Boston University education by himself. How he comes from a four-member household sharing only one bedroom. He goes on to say that persons with disabilities receive special accommodations, why not an honors college for honors students?

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT/COLLEGIAN

An Honors Program worker holds up various pamphlets concerning the program. The University is currently undergoing review for a Commonwealth College at the Amherst campus.

As mentioned earlier in the article, the honors college concept is a renewed initiative to reserve public higher education for only the elite. Public higher education did not always look like this. When there was an influx of Jews admitted into American universities, schools like Harvard tried to slow down this trend by instituting an interview process, thus setting precedence for other schools. After the ruling of Brown vs. Board of Education in 1954, making schools open up its admissions to people of color, public institutions were no longer free as the student population increasingly became more diverse.

In a reactionary manner, UMass upholds the use of SAT scores at a time when a growing number of schools are ignoring them after critics contend that they are culturally biased toward white males.

If Chancellor Scott could take us back to the period of discrimination he would. The question is then asked: For whom was it all good?

Viraphanh Douangmany is a UMass student.

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT/COLLEGIAN

The computer lab in the Honors Program in Goodell is one of the facilities reserved and available to Honors Program students.

Kwame Ture's speech at UMass continued...

Editor's note: The following is a continuation of Kwame Ture's speech when he spoke at The University of Massachusetts. The first part of this speech appeared in the April 29 Developing Nations Page.

Speaking about history, if we speak from Stokely Carmichael to Kwame Ture, we must let you know that we have many differences of history as presented by American Capitalism. In the first place, we know history is not made by any one individual. I promise you, we are a living example of this. If one man, if one woman, could free the people, I would have done it a long time ago. The people can only be free by their own conscious actions. That is to say, history is not made by any one individual, it's made only by the masses of the people, and the reason why we have faith in these masses, is because, their instincts, their mass instincts, are instincts of justice.

Kwame Ture

To prove this, we will go to the enemy of humanity, let us take Adolf Hitler. When Adolf Hitler called the Germans before him, he could never say to them, "comrades, we're going to rip off the world. We're going to rape all the women. We're going to destroy the homes." No, he couldn't say that, nobody would come. He had to give them a just basis for their unjust actions. And, of course, he told them: "In World War I, when they had the treaty, they treated us like Africans, like savages, we have no power, we can't say anything, they're oppressing us. They've taken this from us, They've taken that from us, we must come now, and just be taken back."

Of course Hitler was not a fool. He understood he had to fool the Germans into thinking they're unjust actions had a just basis. You can see the same thing in the Vietnam War, in the world. Ho Chi Minh, a great fighter for humanity, speaking for the Vietnamese people would say to them, "You're fighting for truth, You're fighting for justice, You're fighting for democracy."

Lyndon Baines Johnson, the president of the United States, when sending troops in America, 10,000 miles away, would tell them, "You're fighting for truth, You're fighting for democracy, You're fighting for justice."

Somebody must be lying somewhere. Of course, both could be lying, but at least one must be. Therefore, we know that the mass instincts of the people are just, never unjust. Therefore, our faith is based in this instinctive love of justice that the masses have and they are the only makers of history.

When the call for the American Revolution comes, the people who come forward, the ones who make history is not George Washington, he only represents them, and he'd better understand this properly. The reason why I can accept all the love that's given to me, especially since my incident with cancer, is because I know that this love is given to me only because of what I represent, a people's sacred struggle. And all my life I've tried to represent this struggle with total dignity. If there's any aspect of my life of which I am extremely proud, I can say, no woman, no man, anywhere in the world can ever look me in the eye, and say I've told them a lie. I've never lied, to anybody. And I will never lie to anybody. There's no reason to lie, life is guided by the truth. I'm a revolutionary— revolutionaries are made on the basis of truth, not lies. Not lies.

The struggles in the '60s didn't start in the '60s. Many people get confused, they think that when they had to struggle, struggle begins. Struggle begins when the first human beings appeared on the face of this earth. Struggle for the continual and eternal perfection of human beings. This aspect must be properly understood. Most people think that struggle is usually based on hatred, something You're against, but struggle is based on love. You want to perfect human beings, and the first way for them to be perfected is in the atmosphere of perfect justice. If there is injustice, there can be no perfection of any human being, neither of the oppressed, nor the oppressor. Therefore, the first thing is to struggle to destroy all forms of injustice in the society in which you live, anywhere in the world. Martin Luther King's proposal is absolutely correct; "Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere." Therefore conscious men and women must struggle against injustice anywhere they find it, no matter where they find themselves.

The struggle in which I'm involved is a particular struggle, not of the Africans. A journalist some years ago, not understanding, said to me, "Kwame Ture, we haven't heard about you in some time. You're in Africa?"

"Yes."

"Just working for Africa?"

"Yes."

"Just Africa?"

"Well, more or less, that's where I am."

"Well ah, don't you know, if you just work for Africa, You're a racist?"

"Who me?"

"Yes."

"No, you are."

"I am?"

"Yes you are."

"How's that so?"

"Africans are a part of humanity. Anytime I benefit part of humanity, I benefit all of humanity." This is clear. This is not rhetoric, this is actuality.

I will make a statement which may sound arrogant, but I know it's historically correct. Practically every profound change in this country, since the '60s, is a result of the mass movements of the Africans in this country. Practically everyone, certainly the women's movement have their legal leg to stand on thanks to the movement of the '60s. It's that movement, especially the Civil Rights Bill, which said, "no discrimination according to race, creed or sex."

Let it be clear, white women were not part of the movement which fought for this bill, but let it be clear, they certainly enjoyed it, because this is humanity, this is justice. It is universal, never particular. The fact that policemen themselves come to picket today, is a result of the struggle of the '60s, we know this. As a matter of fact, we say they have not dealt with it properly, and of course this is our job here, of these professors and you students to deal with it properly. I remember once, a long time ago, I was sent to Brigham Young University with the Mormons, Salt Lake City, Utah. When I first heard of it, I said to the party, I said; "What am I going there for?"

"No, no, you've got to go."

"No, I'm not going there, that's nonsense, I'm not going to waste my time there."

"No, no, you've been promising."

So anyway, of course I'm a disciplined soldier, and I've always learned that even though I'm a minority, you have to follow orders. So, me, I'm a disciplined soldier, I followed them. So I went to Salt Lake City, All eight members of the African Student Association met me at the airport, and all eight were fighting to carry my bag. They didn't want my feet to touch the ground. "Oh nobody will come to see us sir, we ask everybody to come, nobody comes, no body comes. We're so happy you came."

"Well I'm happy to be here too," thanks to my party. So they take me to the Universlty Inn where I will stay. They're all around me, they won't even let me sign my paper. They're filling it out, but now I have to come and sign, so the white student standing behind the desk, when I come to sign, He says, "Well who are you? Why are they making all these noise about you?"

So I look at him very carefully and I saw he had long hair, I said, "Well you see that long hair You're wearing?"

He said, yes. I said, "You must thank me for that."

Of course in 1960s, you would have to wear a crew cut and saddle shoes, we're broken the conformity of America, seriously. You must know the victories that you have made; the enemy will never tell them to you, but you must know them.

Last year, when I was ill, I was getting ready to go to Cuba, a man said, "You going to Cuba?"

I said: "Of course."

"Well you can't go to Cuba."

I said: "Who told you that? I've been to Cuba when I was a child, who told you that I couldn't go?"

"Well you can't go."

"Let me tell you something, my people during slavery, needed a pass to go from one plantation to the next, once my people got out of slavery, I promise you, I will never ask a white man permission to go anywhere else in the world."

Trouble in the Tents of Zion

Bibi is in real trouble. The ongoing criminal scandal, by which he has been exposed as a petty crook, is just the tip of the iceberg. In a few short months, Netanyahu has actually succeeded in splitting the Zionist movement at its core.

The divisions between Zionists, in Israel and the United States (the only two places that really count), about the most fundamental issues have been brought the fore with vengeance. These are certainly the greatest fissures in the Zionist movement since the establishment of the Israeli state some 50 years ago.

Hussein Ibish

First of all, divisions are getting deeper and more bitter about how to deal with the occupied territories.

Yitzhak Rabin's plan was to formalize and legitimize Israeli occupation and de facto sovereignty over the West Bank by creating a set of Palestinian Bantustans: small, isolated pockets of "autonomy" where the Arab rabble would be policed by their own quislings rather than Israeli troops. Meanwhile, and quietly, land expropriation and settlement activity would continue apace, leading to eventual formal annexation. In this way, Rabin sought to pacify the Palestinian cities, please the United States, give the Arab nations and others the excuse to open trade and diplomatic relations with Israel and defuse international condemnation of ongoing Israeli colonial activity.

Netanyahu was having none of it. Bibi rejected Rabin's pragmatic Bantustan policy on ideological grounds, holding that direct and unqualified Israeli rule over the whole West Bank was central to Zionism. In his mind there is no role for Palestinians in "Eretz Yisrael," even as collaborators. Therefore, he set to work systematically sabotaging the Oslo process, and has succeeded in doing so against strong PLO and American opposition with breathtaking speed. From the Jerusalem tunnel, to the unilateral demand to re-negotiate the Hebron deal, to the new settlement at Abu Gheinem, Bibi labored day and night to wreck the Oslo process, and it worked.

Netanyahu's success in reversing the peace process has made him wildly unpopular with vast numbers of dedicated Zionists in Israel and the United States, including President Clinton and Vice-President Gore.

Pragmatically minded types despair at the manner in which Bibi has squandered the diplomatic, trade and propaganda gains for Israel they saw arising from Rabin's Bantustan policy. Huge segments of the Zionist movement believe that the Bantustan policy was responsible for unprecedented breakthroughs in international acceptance, especially regionally, for Israel and was a brilliantly effective cover for colonialism.

Now, thanks to Bibi's fanatical actions, they see Israel more than ever exposed as a ruthless occupying power, a racist colonial state, and an obscurantist enemy of regional peace and United States plans to pacify the Middle East. The logic of Netanyahu's policies is clear and has already inevitably led to a renewed intifada. Ultimately, these polices can only lead to another bout of massive ethnic cleansing of Palestinians from the West Bank, which would almost surely precipitate another war.

It is becoming crystal clear that Bibi and company are willing to risk all in order to ensure direct Israeli control of "Judea and Samaria," and place the strict dictates of Zionist ideology over preserving the gains of the past century.

In other words, there is still a Zionist consensus about denying the Palestinians their right to statehood and national self-determination, but no consensus at all about how to achieve this and what price to pay to retain permanent control of the West Bank. The murder of Yitzhak Rabin was an early symptom of this quarrel, which, under Netanyahu, has exploded in degree and scope.

COURTESY AP

Benjamin Netanyahu

The second dispute is, if anything, even more bitter and divisive. Netanyahu's government, which includes extreme Jewish fundamentalists, is forcing through a law which formalizes the Israeli practice that conversions to Judaism will only be recognized if performed by an Orthodox rabbi. This law strikes at the very nature of Israel as an ethno-nationalist state. Israel is unique among nation states in as much as it sees itself as dedicated not to the people who live in it, least of all the millions of Palestinians, but to the "Jewish people of the whole world" (without specifically defining that group).

Hence the bizarre "Law of Return," whereby anyone deemed ethnically or religiously "Jewish" by the Israeli state authorities is entitled to automatic Israeli citizenship.

The new law undermines the ethno-nationalist nature of the Israeli state and tends towards the creation of an Orthodox theocracy, implicitly drawing distinctions between "real" (Orthodox) Jews and others. The power of the Orthodox Rabbinate in Israel is such that it determines what one's official ethnicity is, who one may marry, where one may be buried, etc. Traditionally this arrangement has been deployed mainly as a vehicle to enforce a system of apartheid against Palestinians. But the new law threatens to extend discrimination into the Jewish community as well.

To add fuel to the fire, The General Union of Orthodox Rabbis recently issued a statement declaring that Conservative and Reform Judaism are not forms of Judaism at all but "different religions altogether," implying that their followers, who certainly consider themselves Jewish, are not actually Jews.

American Jews (who are overwhelmingly non-Orthodox) as well as many Israelis (who consider themselves "secular" and not politically religious) are outraged. Bibi's new law even invokes visions of some day being denied automatic Israeli citizenship. Is this what we have been paying for, they ask. Rabbi Schornch, a leading Conservative rabbi, has even called for the elimination of the Rabbinate and the withholding of private aid to Israel because of this law.

The whole dispute has brought to the fore the long-standing tension in the Zionist movement between conceptions of Israel and Jewish identity as principally racial and ethnic, based on presumed ties of consanguinity (a sort of extended tribalism), or principally religious. It has been the understanding of most Zionists, especially in the United States, that Zionism was based on the ethnic model of Jewish identity. The new law is widely recognized as quite incompatible with this understanding.

The bitterness among many American Zionists against Bibi for pushing this "treacherous" law can hardly be overstated, especially given the fact that it is well known that Bibi's second wife, Fleur, was converted from Christianity by a Conservative rabbi and their wedding conducted by a similarly "unqualified" cleric. Netanyahu's assessment that these observations amounted to a "base intrusion into my private life" rang particularly hollow under the circumstances.

Needless to say, the fact that this whole dispute amounts to the height of racism is largely unrecognized by both sides. It would be an understatement to say that from the Palestinian point of view, this bitter quarrel has an absurd and surreal quality. After all, in the end it is a dispute about which set of colonialists gets to come to Palestine, seize their land, move into their houses and farms, shoot their children, practice apartheid, and deny them their basic human rights.

Nonetheless, a formerly existing consensus among Zionists has broken down, with unprecedented levels of anger and resentment on both sides. When rifts like these begin to express themselves in terms regarding American aid to Israel, whether private or public, it is clear that the stakes couldn't be higher.

Even though Bibi is likely to just barely survive the latest corruption scandal, his policies seem certain to continue to exacerbate these and other serious splits emerging in the Zionist movement. Even the Zionist "Hasbara" (propiganda) machine, the all-important umbilical cord which ties Israel to the American billions which it depends on to sustain itself, is starting to crack. Israel's press in the United States has never been worse, which is to say that some of the braver American journalists are starting to suspect that some Palestinians might just have a point, and are expressing doubts about Israeli motives. This is, of course, a calamity of unparalled proportions, and Bibi's divisive policies are undoubtedly responsible. For those of us who advocate the cause of Palestinian human rights in the United States, the past few months have been time off. Bibi is our best propagandist.

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian columnist.

Committee against torture concludes 18th session

Editor's note: The following is a statement released by the United Nations Information Service at Geneva on May 9, 1997.

The Committee against Torture completed today its 18th session — a two-week series of meetings marked, among other things, by a spirited debate with Israel over a Government–approved use during interrogations of what is termed "moderate physical pressure" in efforts to elicit information that could foil pending terrorist attacks.

This morning the Committee acted in official conclusions that such interrogation methods apparently included restraining in very painful conditions, holding under special conditions, sounding of loud music for prolonged periods, sleep deprivation for long periods, threats, including death threats, violent shaking and use of cold air to chill. It concluded that in the Committee's view, such methods constituted torture as defined by Article 1 of the Convention against Torture, especially when used in combination, which it said appeared to be the standard case.

It called, among other things, for Israel to "cease immediately" the use of those and any other interrogation procedures that violated the Convention, and emphasized that no circumstances — even "the terrible dilemma of terrorism" that it acknowledged was faced by Israel — could justify torture.

Israel had submitted a special report on the interrogation techniques at the Committee's request following a widely publicized Israeli Supreme Court decision on the matter last Nov. Members of a Government delegation appearing before the Committee contended that such methods had helped to prevent some 90 planned terrorist attacks over the last two years and saved many civilian lives, in one recent case enabling members of the country's General Security Service to locate a bomb. The delegation repeatedly denied that the procedures amounted to torture.

The Committee also considered during the two–week session periodic reports from Ukraine, Mexico, Denmark, Paraguay, Namibia and Sweden. They and Israel are among 102 States parties to the Convention against Torture, and under the terms of that international treaty are required to provide the Committee with periodic summaries of their efforts to prevent any such ill–treatment and to punish such acts if they occur...

Conclusions and recommendations on special report of Israel

The Committee said in conclusions issued this morning on the report of Israel on interrogation methods that such apparently systematically applied methods, as described by non–governmental organizations, and were neither confirmed nor denied by Israel, and so assumed to be true, included restraining in very painful conditions, holding under special conditions, sounding of loud music for prolonged periods, sleep deprivation for long periods, threats, including death threats, violent shaking and use of cold air to chill. In the Committee's view, such methods constituted torture as defined by Article 1 of the Convention, and said that was particularly true where such methods were used in combination which appeared to be the standard case.

The Committee acknowledged the terrible dilemma confronted by Israel in dealing with terrorist threats, but stressed that as a State party to the Convention, the country was precluded from raising before the Committee exceptional circumstances as justification for acts prohibited by Article 1 of the Convention. It further stated concern that a November 1996 decision by the Israeli Supreme Court dissolving an interim injunction against use of such interrogation practices against a particular detainee would result in continued use of such practices and would legitimize them.

It recommended, among other things:

• That such interrogation methods, which appeared to be applied systematically, and others in violation of the Convention, be ceased immediately.

• That the provisions of the Convention be incorporated into Israeli law, particularly the definition of torture contained in Article 1, as was currently under consideration by Israel's Expert Committee of the Ministerial Committee for Legislation.

• That Israel consider making declarations allowing the Committee to receive communications from individuals and from other State parties alleging violations by Israel for the Convention.

• That interrogation procedures pursuant to the country's "Lanadau rules," in any event, be published in full.

• That Israel include information on measures taken in response to the Committee's conclusions and recommendations in its forthcoming periodic report of the Committee, which should be submitted no later than 1 Sep. 1997, so that the Committee could review it at its next session, in Nov. 1997.

Background on Convention, Committee

The General Assembly unanimously adopted the Convention in 1984 and it entered into force on 26 June 1987. States parties to the Convention are required to outlaw torture and are explicitly prohibited from using "higher orders" or "exceptional circumstances" as excuses for acts of torture. The convention includes other significant new elements to the United Nations fight against torture. First, it specifies that alleged torturers may be tried in any state party or they may be extradited to face trial in the State party where their crimes were committed. Second, it provides for international investigation of reliable reports of torture, including visits to the State party concerned, with its agreement.

Under article 20 of the Convention, if the Committee receives reliable information which appears to it to contain well–founded indications that torture is being systematically practiced in the territory of a State party, the Committee shall invite that State party to cooperate in the examination of this information.

Under article 21, a State party to the Convention may at any time declare that it recognizes the competence of the Committee to receive and consider communications to the effect that a State party claims that another State party is not fulfilling its obligations under the Convention.

Under article 22, a State party to the Convention may at any time declare that it recognizes the competence of the Committee to receive and consider communications from, or on behalf of, individuals subject to its jurisdiction who claim to be victims of a violation by a State party of the provisions of the Convention.

Educational Apartheid: who's subsidizing whom?

CorporateWealth College,
BureaucratHealth College,
TechnocratStealth College,
CommonerDeath College...

E. Okwa
Fox Tree

So many people love to fend off "unjustified accusations of racism," especially when no such accusations have been articulated. However, since this is the way proponents of the Honors College would like to understand the debate, I might as well make this indistinct issue more concrete.

One problem with the proposed college involves how Americans explain racial disparities in income, education and incarceration rates. Acknowledging these disparities is not a difficulty. "Racism" comes into play, depending upon how people interpret and react to the problem. Let me outline two common interpretations:

1. Some people — whether they openly acknowledge it or not — interpret racial disparities as being the result of inborn genetic predisposition. This attitude is usually understood as being a fundamental component of traditionally-defined "racism" and is the underpinning of White Supremacism.

2. Other people, perhaps most, will attribute these disparities to various social factors. Their theories involve cycles of poverty, declining resources, or perhaps self-destructive reactions to societal rejection.

Unfortunately, most of the people described in this second group will do nothing to try to end these social disparities which manifest themselves according to race.

They will justify their opposition to corrective measures by using a variety of excuses: They will say: "Just give it time..." Even though recent statistical data demonstrate that racial inequities are getting worse. Or, "The world is a rat-race of individual competition, and categories of race unfairly collectivize those individuals..." This deviant religious faith in a two-dimensional "individual," is an unrealistic abstraction that ignores how our needs, beliefs and desires are determined in a social context. "I never discriminated against anybody, why should I support policies that give advantage to others based on past injustice?" This excuse not only disregards any idea of "enlightened self-interest," it also fails to acknowledge that the same injustices still occur. In addition, those past injustices have set up the situation where, today, one group of people have benefited at the expense of another.

How interesting... The policy decisions derived from the White Supremacists end up being identical to the otherwise "liberal" position!

What does all of this have to do with the "Commonwealth College?" The proposed college will have an even smaller representation of people of color than the dismally low representation which UMass already has. (This is in no small part the result of an almost totally segregated primary education system in this state).

However, proponents will say they are merely allocating resources to the students of the Honors College based on "merit." One recent letter to the Collegian ignorantly proclaimed that college education itself merely discriminates against "the monumentally obtuse." Well, of course we should reward accomplishment! But why do we need to duplicate a parallel campus and administrative structure for a program that even advocates admit will not be substantially different from the present Honors Program?

Why do we need to pay X times as much per a student for an "Honors College" when improvements of the current Honors Program haven't even been entertained? Why do proponents keep making unsubstantiated claims about how "the rest of UMass" will somehow bathe in the glow of the Honors College? (Isn't that like saying "white flight" has made inner cities a better place to live?)

This situation is only made worse by the fact that as taxpayers, people of color already subsidize the standard of living of white citizens in other ways. How? They pay federal and state taxes for government contracts (e.g. defense), farm subsidies, highway systems, sewer systems, and yes, educational systems which more likely directly benefit, employ and help the economies of our suburban and whiter citizenry.

So, Professor John Bracey's comment about "grades discriminating against people who get F's," totally misses the point. The Commonwealth College is a continuation of the process of diverting public resources in a manner that increases social stratification and economic inequality.

How we evaluate "merit" is a complete diversion; what matters is the origin of merit. Until the origins of motivation, aptitude and academic accomplishment are understood, we need not expand educational Apartheid; especially when urban folks subsidize suburban infrastructure and suburbaners manage to buy "merit" with a better K-12 system.

True "equality of opportunity" would not be limited to "equality in admission standards," but rather equality in the history that create academic aptitude. True equality occurs when an individual is free from the discriminatory processes which emanate from grade one, the set of standards by which a person's "academic aptitude" is measured for entrance to higher education.

The Honors College would surely be a better idea if equality in opportunity already existed. Now I know that "equality" long ago ceased to be a worthy goal and "oppression" supposedly no longer exists, but the Honors College debate has everything to do with inequality and oppression.

E. Okwa Fox Tree, class of '96, is a UMass alum.

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT/COLLEGIAN

Kwame Ture spoke at UMass last month.

Editor's note: The following is a continuation of Kwame Ture's speech from the previous page. Due to length, Ture's speech could not be printed in its entirety on this page, if anyone would like a copy of his speech, contact Lisa Chiu at 545–1851.

You have to know the victories you fought. I'm going to tell you just about three things about the '60s, bringing it up to the '90s. Of course, you know that Sekoutoure, a great, great son of Africa who said, "The only woman that doesn't make a mistake, is she who does absolutely nothing."

So everybody makes mistakes, I've made a lot of mistakes in my life, and if live, I shall make a lot more, because I intend to do a lot more before I die. So we all make mistakes. The Chinese of course, give us the correct solution here, they say, "If you make a mistake, you know it's a mistake, you don't correct the mistake, you've made your second mistake."

Of course, in the job we're involved in, mistakes are fatal, therefore, we have to correct them. We have to correct them. Of course, everyone must do this, I'm sure students, when you get to your sophomore year, you must reflect upon your freshman year, see what errors you committed, and how you can strengthen yourselves, strengthen your life as a student in your sophomore year. If you do not have this reflection, this thought, then you really are unconsciously stumbling through your college life, and this is really an error. You have to always look and see the errors.

Of course, those of us who are seriously revolutionary and strugglers, have looked carefully at the 1960s and many of the errors there. Tonight we're not going to go through all those errors, but we'll just highlight one or two.

The first one is the error made between mobilization and organization. This error continues to today. People get confused with mobilization/organization. I'm tired hearing people tell me, "Oh I wish I was in the '60s, you were so organized." We were not organized, we were mobilized. Mobilization is for temporary purposes, over usually singular issues. Organization is permanent and deals with all issues. If you would look at the African community. If you don't know it around the world, in America, you would see here the real problem they have. They are great at mobilization, but they're really, really, really, backward at organization.

This can be demonstrated anywhere. If you would look at the rebellion in Los Angeles, at Rodney King, you will see it clearly here. Do you know what it takes to organize a rebellion in an urban area? Just dream about it. Do you know what it takes? It takes discussions, it takes planning, it takes logistics, it takes movement, I mean seriously, for the Africans in Los Angeles, if the decision is unjust against Rodney King, 3 o'clock in the afternoon, without the slightest discussion, without the slightest decision, without anything, they all take the street — attacking capitalism with a vengeance, taking lives, wrecking serious damage. Keeping the police and army at bay. Well, after all, it's only a couple of days. It's not organized, it's mobilization, it's spontaneous. Can you imagine what is going to happen when these Africans organize a rebellion in Los Angeles? And it will come now, I'm going to tell you that. I'm going to tell you, I'm not a prophet, but I'm a revolutionary and my job is to know the future of the political trend, and it is going to come. There is no question about it. This is human nature, you repeat, you repeat, you repeat. After a while, you've got to make, even instinctively, some progress.

As you can see here, there is plenty of difference between mobilization and organization. In 1992, I was in Libya when it occurred. I was in California in early March of 1992. I met with the Crips, the Bloods, all the gangs in Los Angeles. We spent the whole day together, after much much, much, struggle, at the end of the day, I told them, "Listen, they are going to let these white policemen go, you all going to have to do something."

So I said, "You all don't have to do anything difficult, just some little tactics like they do in Northern Ireland. Nothing big, you know. Get some gasoline, and get some bottles, and get some rags, you know, Molotov Cocktails, the easiest thing in the world to do. You just pour gasoline in a bottle, put the rag in, and light the rag, throw it, anything it hits has to explode against it.

Then you've got to see the biggest buildings you have in Los Angeles, put some snipers up there to keep the police and the army at bay, nothing big you know. And then you get some rubber tires, and gather a lot on the streets where you want to block, so when the police start coming, you spread out the tires, burn them and it keeps the police at bay. Very simple things."

You know what they told me? "Oh Kwame Ture, you think it's the '60s, all that stuff is finished."

I said, "Alright, anyway, I know history, and whether you're ready or not, once history moves, you've got to move. Whether you are ready or not, once history moves, you have got to move."

Of course, I was in Libya, when it started, and there they were in the front lines, shooting and carrying stuff with them, they even got Molotov Cocktails, they've got new tires, but they rumbaged and rambled for three full days, full of mobilization, but no organization at all.

Clear distinctions there must be made between mobilization and organization. When you mobilize you don't seek power, you seek influence. When you want power, you must organize.

This is one of the great differences that existed between Dr. King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and the Student Non–violent Coordinating Committee. Dr. King sought influence, we look for power. Therefore, the trends you take are entirely different. It is here that this question of non–violence or violence would come to play itself out.

[The purpose of] Dr. King's organization was to go into different towns, i.e. Birmingham, Albany or wherever, where there was discrimination, bring in his forces, mobilize the town, create demonstrations, put the white racists on the defensive and filled the jails, until segregation was repudiated and there was no more overt segregation. Dr. King's organization would now move on to the next town. SNCC's work was different...

Here it is, my last page of the semester. And my last page at Collegian. As I study abroad in Vietnam and China my senior year, I hope to gain real life experience on issues which we have been developing on our pages.

Thank you to all those who have helped the Diversity Pages become the best aspect of the Collegian. Thanks to all those who read and continue to comment on the content of these pages, and lastly thank you to those whose struggles constantly remind us of why we are here, and why we must help the fight for equality everywhere — without you, we are nothing.

Thank you to those at the Collegian who have aided in making the Diversity Pages what they are: Shymala Ivatury, Warimu Magua, Hussein Ibish, Michael Elliott, Viraphanh Douangmany, Colin Cavell, Sunada Ghosh, Raghuram Vadarevu, Christine Soh, Mike Burke, Matt Vautour, and Chris Conner.

There are still so many things to fight for, especially when the face of UMass is looking less and less like the diverse face of the United States, and the fate of the world is more and more controlled by Multinational Corporations. We must continue to act, to challenge and to write. We must continue the struggle.

Peace.
Lisa Chiu
Deeveloping Nations Editor

Fox's Murdoch seeking Dodgers

By John Nadel
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers owner Peter O'Malley expects to reach a sale agreement for his team within two months, and Rupert Murdoch appears to be the likely buyer.

The Los Angeles Times, quoting unidentified NFL sources, reported yesterday that a deal with Fox Sports and Murdoch was under negotiation, a contract that could be worth $400 million for all the baseball properties O'Malley owns.

A television source, speaking on the condition he not be identified, told The Associated Press the deal could be announced next week. New York Newsday reported yesterday that a deal between O'Malley and Fox was finalized late Saturday night after three days of "intense negotiations."

Newsday, which said the sale price would be $350 million, said the parties expected to put the finishing touches on the deal within the next few weeks.

Any deal would be subject to the approval of baseball owners, which would take several months. O'Malley would still run the team during the approval process.

O'Malley, whose family has controlled the Dodgers since 1950, told the Times that if he had been able to build a football stadium near Dodger Stadium, he might not have put the Dodgers up for sale. "I can't deny that was a factor," he said. "I must tell you I was extremely disappointed when we were asked to shelve our ideas."

When O'Malley announced on Jan. 6 that he was selling his team, he said he supported the city's efforts to attract an NFL team despite even though he wasn't part of it. His main reason for selling, he said, was estate planning.

O'Malley said Mayor Richard Riordan first asked him to help attract an NFL franchise in August 1995 — shortly before LA's first season without an NFL team since 1946. The Rams moved to St. Louis and the Raiders to Oakland before the 1995 season.

O'Malley figured a new stadium next to Dodger Stadium would complement his efforts to help.

But last summer — before the feasibility study on the impact of a football stadium next to Dodger Stadium was even finished — the City Council voted to build a new stadium at the Los Angeles Coliseum. Riordan said yesterday the NFL insisted the council endorse the Coliseum.

O'Malley said he notified Riordan in August it was "technically feasible" to build a football stadium on Dodger Stadium property. But a few weeks later, O'Malley received official notification from a Riordan representative asking him to throw his support behind the Coliseum.

"We were extremely disappointed, but I completely understood the position we were asked to take," O'Malley said. "I still believe it was the right decision not to compete with the Coliseum, and I completely understood the position we were asked to take. The Coliseum deserves that final look, but it must have closure at some point."

■ Torbin

continued from page 16

the head honcho upstairs only grants in limited quantities, and might be better served being used when his Minutemen play at Kansas' dreaded Allen Fieldhouse in December.

• Saturday the women's soccer team did what they do best. They were hard-nosed and aggressive. They took nothing from nobody, and nearly drew blood on occasion. Saturday afternoon the gloves were off and anything went. No holds barred. It's a wonder they still talk to each other.

Oh, by the way, I'm talking about their banquet, not their 4–1 spring game win over Omega de Montréal. Most banquets that you end up going to are very, very, very dull affairs. Good food, and a catchy video usually work, but the in–betweens can drag like an Econ 103 lecture.

Coach Jim Rudy's banquet format is slightly different. He and his assistant coach tool on his team, then the underclassmen rank on the seniors and the seniors finally rebut in vicious manner, all in good humor though. Meanwhile, everyone in attendance laughs their way into the ground.

I really can't print what gets said without risking my life, but rest assured it isn't pretty and just about every player blushed a new shade of red at some point. That's just the appeal of this team though. It's why I keep coming back to it every year.

Sports should be fun, and rest assured Rudy makes it just that, even allowing beat writers Jorma Kansanen and yours truly the opportunity to rip a tremendous senior class.

• When the men's lacrosse team plays No. 1 and defending national champion Princeton on Saturday for a berth in the final four, one UMass student–athlete will have some mixed emotions. Softball leftfielder Tracey Osier's cousin Jason is a starting midfielder for the 11–0 Tigers.

Now, the school's career stolen base leader by a margin best measured in light years, is torn. Her cousin who in his senior year has one last chance to go to the best kept secret in all of college athletics, the men's lacrosse championship before 35–40,000 fans every year at Maryland' Byrd Stadium; or her school who has the same focus.

UMass has never advanced to the final four in its storied history, and its team parents would represent the maroon and white well at the best tailgate this side of a Jimmy Buffett concert, or Dave Scott letting loose at a Patriots game.

Tracey Osier, a family and consumer sciences major, answered questions about her sympathies on the subject like someone who could have an easy 4.0 in PolySci.

"I'm torn," UMass' Osier said. "My cousin and I are family, blood. I have loyalty there but I have loyalty here too. I want UMass to win, but I'd be happy for my cousin if they win, so I don't know. I'm torn. Either way it's a win–win situation for me."

Last year, Osier's Minutewomen were knocked out of the NCAAs partly due to a 4–0 loss to Princeton. With Greg Cannella's smothering team defense firing on all cylanders of late and prepared for the Tigers' massive attack, UMass might repay the favor for the other Osier.

• This week's sign that you've been around UMass athletics too long: Friday night it became apparent to me that I knew the menu at Rafters better than my waitress, whom I of course know by name. Along the same lines, you know you've been there entirely too often when you recognize the menu you're handed (even though you have it memorized) based on the crayon coloring work. No, that's not the worst, that comes when you can guess the check within a few cents.

OK, I go there too often but, you honestly don't expect me to eat the DC food do you? Ask me to hit Harry's fastball why don't you, it's a much more pleasant death.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

THANG VO-COLLEGIAN

Nobody gonna slow me down...

Doug Clark (No.17) and the Massachusetts baseball team head to Boyertown, Pa. for the A–10 Championships, which run from Thursday to Saturday. The Minutemen enter as the No.1 seed.

Take a Chance SALE

SHOP EARLY FOR BEST SELECTION

EACH DAY THE DISCOUNT INCREASES

DO YOU DARE TAKE A CHANCE?

WILL WHAT YOU WANT BE THERE TOMORROW?

25% off 45% off 60% off 75% off 95% SOLD

ITEMS FROM THROUGHOUT THE STORE

MANY ONE-OF-A-KIND ITEMS

in the Campus Center 545-2619 UNIVERSITY STORE Hours: M-F 9am — 5pm Sat 11am — 4pm

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE CLASS OF 1997!

• Did you have a positive UMass Amherst experience?
• Would you like to share your UMass experience with prospective students?

Become a member of the Umass Amherst Alumni Admissions Council
The Alumni Admissions Council is a nationwide cadre of volunteers who assist the Office of Undergraduate Admissions with recruiting prospective students.

Volunteer activities include:
- Representing UMass Amherst at college fairs
- Telephoning and congratulating accepted students
- Hosting receptions for accepted students
- Alumni Informational Interviews

Interested??
Call 545-0222 and ask for the Coordinator of the Alumni Admissions Council or complete and send the interest form to: AAC Coordinator, Admissions Center, UMass, Amherst MA, 01003.

AAC Interest Form
Name:
Mailing Address:
Town:
State: ZIP:
Tel: ( )
Major: GPA:
Campus Activities:

■ Bird

continued from page 16

coach. I'm too old to play, and the only other option is to coach."

Bird, who reportedly will be paid $4 million to $4.5 million per year, said he would probably begin searching for a coaching staff next week and begin immediately to contact each of the Pacers players.

"I feel they can compete. If we can make a few moves and get a little better defense and get the ball and run, we're going to improve right away. You don't have to do a lot. Of course, you have to have the talent, and I feel we have the talent."

Pacers president Donnie Walsh said he wasn't concerned about Bird's lack of coaching experience.

"There's been a lot of speculation why we want Larry. We want Larry back because we know he's going to help us win ball games," Walsh said, adding that when Bird finished coaching he would move to the Pacers' front office.

"If you look at his career in high school and college and the NBA and the records of teams before he got there and after he came, you can see he's had a substantial impact wherever he's gone." Bird was a Celtics special assistant — mainly scouting — for the five years since a bad back forced his retirement. Walsh approached him after Brown hinted he might not be back.

JON PLACE/COLLEGIAN

Bring on the Tigers...

Led by Casey Costello (No.9), the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team heads off to battle No. 1 seed Princeton in NCAA tournament second round action.

Tubby takes 'Cats job

By Mike Embry
Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Tubby Smith has already made history as the new coach at Kentucky and was ready for the question about it the moment it was asked.

"It's more important that I be judged on my character and the content of my character than the color of my skin," Smith said yesterday after he was introduced as Rick Pitino's replacement. Kentucky's history has been tarnished by its reluctance to recruit black players, especially during most of Adolph Rupp's 42-year reign as coach of one of college basketball's most storied programs.

Rupp's all-white team that lost to Texas Western, a squad that started five blacks, in the 1966 NCAA championship game came to symbolize segregation in college basketball.

And that's one of the reasons Smith realizes Kentucky's hiring of the first black men's basketball coach is so important. "Just like I mentioned to everyone that is a Kentucky Wildcat fan, there are blacks that also are interested and excited because I am a black head coach," Smith said. "That is quite an honor." While Rupp may have been a victim of the times, he wasn't successful in recruiting a black player until Tom Payne in 1969, three years before he retired.

Rupp's son, Herky, said his father would have welcomed Smith as coach.

"He would have gone up and shaken his hand and congratulated him," he said. "He would have wished him well and he would have volunteered to be able to help him in any way he could."

Kentucky women's basketball coach Bernadette Mattox, who is black, didn't think race was an issue in Smith's selection. "My feeling is they put the best person in the position for the job," she said.

Smith received a five-year contract, but financial terms were not disclosed. However, he reportedly would increase his salary from the $605,280 he would have received at Georgia next season to more than $1 million.

"He was the only candidate that we interviewed," said UK President Charles T. Wethington Jr, before the UK Athletics Association approved the appointment. "He is truly the choice of this administration for the filling of this position of basketball coach."

Smith planned to meet with returning players in the next few days.

"My philosophy is based on love, family and discipline," he said. "I'll challenge them to raise the bar another level and work even harder than they have in the past."

Smith said he has talked to parents of this year's recruiting class.

"I think they're all pretty positive," he said about the coaching change.

Smith inherits a program that won the national championship in 1996 and finished runner-up this past season.

"I hope we can reach those expectations," Smith said. "Coach Pitino set the bar pretty high."

Smith was an assistant coach under Pitino at Kentucky from 1989-91, serving as associate head coach the second season. It was during those seasons that Smith bought into Pitino's use of the 3-point shot and up tempo pressing defense.

"Those are the things I took from that program," Smith said. "I think I've made good use of them."

He left Kentucky in 1991 to become coach at Tulsa, where he compiled a 79-43 record in four seasons, including NCAA tournament appearances the last two years. He was named Missouri Valley Conference coach of the year in his last two seasons.

Smith, 45, was at Georgia for two seasons with a 45-19 record and two NCAA trips. The Bulldogs registered a school-tying 24 victories in 1996-97 and marked the first consecutive 20-win seasons in the program's 92-year history.

His first Georgia team earned the school's first NCAA tournament appearance in five years while advancing to the regional semifinals.

Losing all five starters from the 1995-96 squad, Smith turned in a masterful coaching job last season. The Bulldogs won the Rainbow Classic, reached the SEC tournament championship game and were ranked No. 17 in the final Associated Press poll.

Smith said it was difficult leaving the Georgia program. "It's tough whenever you leave a place but I hope they understand," he said. "Hopefully, we left them in pretty good shape with everyone returning."

After graduating from High Point (N.C.) College in 1975, Smith spent six seasons as a high school coach. He was an assistant coach at Virginia Commonwealth (1979-86) and South Carolina (1986-89) before joining Pitino's staff.

Jim Letourneau's OOPS!
•Free Estimates
•Lifetime Repair Warranty
•Auto Glass Replacement
•Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA
549-2880
one mile from UMass on the bus route

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

Do we know how to spoil you?
Worker-owned CollectiveCopies

SUMMER WORK
EARN $8 up to $15 TO START
•All majors considered
•Scholarships/Internships Possible
•Professional Training
•Gain valuable business and communication skills
•Build resume
•Over 200 Massachusetts openings
In Western Mass. (413) 736-3230
In Berkshire County (413) 448-2877
In Worcester County (508) 757-7900
In Greater Boston Area (617) 449-5255
Call NOW / BEGIN AFTER FINALS

Australia so much to do you'll be stuck for choice
Reefs & Rainforests Vacation including 2 days of 4-wheel drive adventure and 3 days of Sailing $1525
Rainforest Adventure including a stay on Fitzroy Island, off the Great Barrier Reef $495
L.A. to Cairns roundtrip airfare $962
Discover Melbourne (land only) 4 days starting at $281
Tasmania, (land only) 9 day trek starting at $689
L.A. to Melbourne roundtrip airfare $856
Great Barrier Reef & Beyond
Queensland Australia
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street, Amherst
Tel : 413-256-1261
www.ciee.org or 1-800-2-COUNCIL

Kaplan students get into Law School.
Case closed.
9 out of 10 Kaplan LSAT students go to one of their top 3 school choices.
LSAT
Summer classes in both Amherst and Springfield!
It's not like we'll give you the answers...
Well, yes it is!
Call us in Amherst at 549-5780.
expert teachers superior materials smart technology proven results
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

TEXTBOOK BUYBACK INFORMATION
SPRING 1997

Students Need to be Paid Higher Prices for their Books!

We agree. That is why the Annex and the Campus Center Commission has a campaign to get faculty to order their books for next semester before the Buyback starts. If faculty submit their order before the Buyback starts, the Annex can pay 50% of the price of a new copy for books that we need for the fall. If we don't need the book, a wholesale company will pay you their price. Since they resell those books to some other schools (which require shipping), the price will always be less than the Annex pays.

A student was heard to say: "I can't sell it at the Annex unless I bought it there."
Many people think that unless they purchased the book at the Annex they cannot sell it back there. NOT TRUE! We will buy any book that has wholesale value.

When is the best time to sell books?
Though we will buy books from you any day we are open, the best time to sell books is at the end of the semester. Then we know many of the titles we will be stocking in the upcoming semester and we can pay you 50% of the publisher's list price if we are adding that book to our inventory. At other times of the year we can probably only offer you the wholesale price.

Buyback starts May 14, 1997
at the Textbook Annex, Campus Center Room 162, and Hampden Student Center in Southwest.

BUYBACK HOURS

WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, 1997
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 5PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
THURSDAY, MAY 15
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 5PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
FRIDAY, MAY 16
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 5PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
SATURDAY, MAY 17
CAMPUS CENTER	11AM - 5PM
MONDAY, MAY 19
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 5PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
TUESDAY, MAY 20
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 5PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
WEDNESDAY, MAY 21
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 6PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
HAMPDEN	10AM - 6PM
THURSDAY, MAY 22
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 6PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
HAMPDEN	10AM - 6PM
FRIDAY, MAY 23
CAMPUS CENTER	9AM - 6PM
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
HAMPDEN	10AM - 5PM
TUESDAY, MAY 27
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM
WEDNESDAY, MAY 28
TEXTBOOK ANNEX	9AM - 4PM

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to congratulate our newest Sisters: Tara, Leurie, Sibyl, Arbeli, Andrea, Sabrina, Jaclyn, Kelly H., Zoe, Ruthie, Julie, Astar, Clerissa, Adina, Mireya, Aisling, Gretchen, Kelly T.

Study Spanish for medical professionals at UConn. Strengthen your Spanish. Increase your effectiveness as a "future" health professional by enrolling in Language Culture and Health. Offered 5/21-6/11. For more info contact Christina Cowell (860)486-3313 or CE059001@uconnvm.uconn

Aerobics with Steve Get in great shape this summer at UMass 1st Session M, Tu,Th, 4:30-5:45pm

Take Environmental Sciesca 101 (BS) this summer at UMass. Fulfills BS requirement. Be outdoors, learn about ecology, pest management, soil and water pollution, and more. Numerous case studies. Trudge through swamps, net rivers, nite hikes and more. Tu, Th, 7-10pm.

SIGMA DELTA TAU invites all university women to their end of the semester Open Rush: May 12th, 5-6, and May 13th, 6-7:30, at 409 N Pleasant Street. Any questions, call Lori or Michelle at 549-3838

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Uptown apartment- Starting June 1. One bedroom, very affordable! Call soon! 253-7109

AUGUST RENT FREE 3 bedroom, 2 bath. Take over June-1st Mill Valley. Heat/Hot Water/AC included. Call 256-6953 ASAP

Puffton- 3 bedroom Spacious, renovated Puffton Apt. Close to laundry, bus stop, and tennis courts. Available June 1st with Fall Option. Call Mark, Seth, or Scott. 549-2645.

Take Over Lease 6/1 Two bedrooms. Hot Water/Heat included. A/C. Brandywine. Fall Option. Patty 549-3740

2 bedroom renovated- Puffton Fall Option. $540. Heat/Hot Water included. Furniture available. FREE CABLE FOR SUMMER. 549-5079

North Amherst basement apartment 3 miles, UMass/Town. 10 or 20 hours work in exchange for rent. 253-4113

Summer Sublet with Fall Option 2 bedroom, sun-ross Brandywine apartment. Free rent for August! Call 549-5258

Spacious 1 bedroom $430/month inc. hot water. Available June 1st. Call 256-0263

1 bedroom available 6/1 On bus route 5 minute walk from campus 549-3502

Three bedroom- Northampton On bus route. $750. Available 6/1 585-0515.

APARTMENT IN TOWN! 1 bedroom. Take over our lease with Fall Option. Call 253-8694

2 bedroom Available 6/1. 1010 N Pleasant #3. 549-4142

Nice 2 bedroom apt. Available June 1. 10 min. walk to campus. On bus route. Call 549-7569.

Cooler of town 1,2,3 bedrooms. Gas, heat, hardwood floors. 253-7879.

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550/ 2 bedroom- $425. 20 minutes from campus- no bus. Available for Sept. 665-2103

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept. at Squire Village. 665-2203

AUTO FOR SALE

1988 VW Cabriolet Black with white top. AM/FM cassette. Alarm. Runs great. $4000. Call Kelly @ 253-7096.

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

87 Dodge Omni Grey dependable. $1100. Call Jessica 546-4869

Honda Prelude SI 87, white, standard, excellent condition. $3200 negotiable. 585-9793. Denise. Leave message.

1979 VW Bus Runs good. $800 or B/O. 586-3074.

88 BMW 325ic Coupe black, auto, looks/runs excellent. $6900. Josh Fox (day)617-742-8060 ext 428, (evening)617-489-3002

1986 Subaro Station Wegon Great shape, low miles, new tires, alignment, and tune-up. $1500 or best offer. (413)498-5856

Toyota Corolla DX 86 Manual, 4 door, loaded. Less than 6000 miles. Dark green silver. Leaving country. Must sell. 549-2684

Mazda RX7 65K, 5 speed SP. Edtn Red, 1986, power sunroof/steering, A/C, electric windows, AM/FM cassette, Equalizer Sport Rack and Bar $5500. Call Kim 665-3245

93 Volks Fox Nothing but highway miles. Very clean. Very reliable. $2500 or B/O. 549-9221 Leave message

EMPLOYMENT

Delivery Parsons Wanted Apply at D.P. Dough

Campus Business Opportunity- Help UMass students protect their PC's and other equipment from theft. Largest seller of computer anti-theft devices in the US is looking for campus entrepreneurs. For details visit our Web Sita at www.pc-security.com/campusrep or call Benson at 1-800-724-4338

Summer Jobs Have fun in the sun performing $7-$10 per hour. Northampton and Westfield areas. Call Rob 256-1299

Part-time childcare for infant. Summer and Fall. Approximately 25 hrs/wk. On bus route in Amherst 549-5035

Mothers Helper Wanted 15-20 hrs/wk. 6 month and 5 year old. Light housekeeping. Call Ginny 549-7788

Loaders Needed: Summer Teenage Bicycling Trips. US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hostelling Program. Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-6132

Summer Jobs Thailand is hiring $5.50/hour plus bonuses. Hands on computer experience. Apply today. Memorial Hall Basement

SHIPPER/RECEIVER
Summer Position
Millitech Corporation in South Deerfield has a summer position available for a person who can work 30-40 hours per week for June, July, and August. You must be able to pack electronics for shipping and prepare all the paperwork necessary for both shipping and receiving products, equipment, and supplies.
To apply for this position fax or e-mail resume by May 16th to Director of Human Resources: Fax# 413-665-0889, e-mail:hr@millitech.com

Cape Cod Restaurant Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train. Housing available. P.O. Box 1228, Eastham, MA 02642. Fax (508)255-9374. Call (508)255-9394

Assistant Manager- Cape Cod Restaurants Good opportunity. Will train. Housing available. P.O. Box 1228, Eastham, MA 02642. Fax (508)255-9374. Call (508)255-9394

Earn up to $3000 part-time in just 4 to 8 weeks. Memolink needs one highly motivated individual to direct summer sales/marketing project at UMass Amherst. Contact David (800)563-6654

Summer Jobs For The Environment! $2500-$4000/summer. Work with MASSPIRG to stop pollution. Ideal job for college students and others. Career Opportunities. Make a difference this summer. Call Terri 256-6434

Can You Sell?
Immediate openings for cheerful, energetic sales people.
Achievement based $$$
Call Joe at 253-2381
Be out and about !!

Painters experienced in all phases with at least 2 seasons experience with references. $8-$9/hour. Call 256-0831

Residential Summer Camp Counselors Wanted by Nature's Classroom. Live-in position. Available in Massachusetts to anyone who honestly likes being with kids. 1-800-433-8375

Part-Time Positions available for hard-working, dependable people starting May 21/Competitive wages. If interested contact Justin 549-1128

Summer Childcare Two children, ages 11 and 14. $6/hour. Must have car. 256-1229

Painters Wanted Earn $3000-$5000 for summer. Westwood, Dedham area. Call Mike 549-3759

University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales, Marketing and PR experience. Call 1-800-743-5566 ext. 122.

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call. (413)827-7555

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "I read the way into the 21st Century with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St. D40, NYC, NY 10014

FOR RENT

Cape Cottage For Rent South Yarmouth. Great location near jobs. Steps from beach. Available for entire summer. Call 549-1516 for more info.

4 bedroom- Northampton. June-June. 5 bedroom- Hadley. June-Aug. 4 bedroom- Northampton Aug. 13 months, country location. Rooms now- Aug. 31. Northampton. Also- Call in August for possible rentals. Skibiski Realtors 586-1827

Sunny Mill Valley Apt. 2 big bedrooms, 2 full baths. Fits 4 easy. With A/C and dishwasher. On bus route. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. $700 a month negotiable. 256-8288

1 or 2 bedroom house available next Fall. $300. Close to campus. Call Melanie 549-5596

1, 2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom apartment. Summer Sublet with Fall Option. Basketball/Tennis, pool, partially furnished, AC/Heat included. On bus line. $275 per person negotiable. Call 549-4972

Renovated, Fully Furnished 3 bedroom apartment at Puffton. Available 6/1. Call Rafael 549-4529

Wanted: 3 or 4 people to sublet or take over our 3 bedroom apt. starting June 1st. Call 549-5362

Large 2 bedroom Puffton Apt. Available 6/1. Call Maria 549-0267.

West Yermouth Large house, 4 bedroom. 253-7436 or (508)775-4776

Specious 3 bedroom apt. on bus route. 2 full baths. Heat/H20 included. 1st Floor/Patio. Fits 6 easy. Starts 6/1 to 7/31. 253-7297

3 bedroom apt. Main St. $735. Heat and Hot Water included. Great location. Available 6/1. Call 253-0360

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September. Lease $1300+. 253-7879

FOR SALE

Oakwood Furniture desk, dresser, night table. $85. Call Melissa 549-5739

FOR SALE: couch, chairs, microwave, refrigerator. Contact Anita at salomone@bo.umass.edu

Mountain Bike- brand new, never used. Cannondale M300 (with manual!) Retail over $400. Asking $300 or B/O. Call 546-0717

Epson Stylus Colour IIS Inkjet Printer 720dpi with cartridges. 546-5776

Twin Bed $30 Night Stand $10 B/O. Call 256-0829

CB-700 Orem Set New head and throne. $425. Call 546-4309

Living room, bedroom, and dining room furniture. CHEAP! Call 256-1545

25 inch JVC TV Very clean. $150 or B/O. Must sell. Call 546-4078

Twin Bed with 3 dreware Headboard with 3 shelves included. Excellent condition. $150/BO. Call Eva 549-9285

COOLEST IGUANA EVER! Call Jess 9-4367. Fish Tank $gpt too

Double Futon Like new. $100 or best offer. Call Kendra 548-7095

Senior Graduating Selling bed, desk and more. Call Soren 548-7017

Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pickup/Delivery available. Retail hours Sunday only, 10am-5pm at Jacksons Fine Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. To sell equipment other days call 256-8941

Guy, Trade, Sell, Consign Good quality. Sundays at Jacksons Fine Market, Route 9, Hadley. 586-4781

Large computer desk for sale $50. Call Dave at 253-7520

Apple Powerbook 150 with Claris 2.1. $450 or B/O. Call 549-2807

AIWA Audio System $150 P-166 Full Package PC, $1700, Sharpe VCR $110. (4 headed). Digital Answering Machine $20 or B/O. 256-0767

3 Couches For Sale 2 Loveseats + 1 Huge Couch. Lawn Furniture. 2 Loungers + 2 Chairs w/Pads. Coffee Grill. Come check it out and make me an offer! Greg 253-3336

HOUSE FOR RENT

Four bedroom house On bus route. Available 6/1. Call 256-8572

House For Rent $1700 per month 4 bedrooms. One half miles from Mullins Center. Gas, heat. Call 253-7879

LOST

Have you found a change purse? Lost somewhere in Machmer or around Student Union. Small, turquoise and gray stitched. Please call Amy at 253-6406 if found. Reward!!!

MISCELLANEOUS

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call 1-800-472-9575 ext. F50018

JOIN OUR GLOBAL VILLAGE
1 yr. International MBA
3 Countries & Languages
Financial Aid &
Job Market
Call Texas Graduate
School of International
Management
(512) 888-5441
9 June Enrollment

PERSONALS

To All Collegian Staff- past and present, Thanks for four great years- and not a single takedown. It's been a lot of fun. -Jacob

Congratulations Tara, I'm so proud of you. Love, Your Big, Attia

To all the people who made my semester an emueing one, (Di Boys, Freaks, and Drama Thug) included. :) I had a great time- even when I was muttering profanities to myself. The only thing I can suggest is- next semester make Julie Orio Day a reality. Thanx You, Best Wishes, Jeremy

To all the people who made my semester an emueing one, (Di Boys, Freaks, and Drama Thugs included. :) I had a great time- even when I was muttering profanities to myself. The only thing I can suggest is- next semester make Julie Orio Day a reality. Thanx You, Best Wishes, Jeremy

Congratulations Tara, I'm so proud of you. Love, Your Big, Attia

Attention University Women Rooms available beginning Fall '97. $1250/ semester includes all utilities and cable. Minute walk to campus. Lynne (508)655-5922 for info.

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+. Call 253-4954 for more info

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate to share a 3 bedroom apt. with 2 others. Located right in town. Available 9/1. call 546-5978

2 females looking for 2 people to share apartment for Summer/Fall. Michele 546-4954

Need 1 person to share room with female in two room apt. 6/1-8/31. $228 per month. Must rent. Will negotiate. Call Jenn 549-1086

$185/month No lease, cheap, quiet, and on bus route. Call John @ 256-3569. Belchertown/Amherst

Three outgoing females looking for roommate to share two bedroom Mill Valley apartment. $174/month including utilities. Fall Option. Plenty of room. Call 256-8780

Roommate Wanted to share 2 bedroom / 2 bathroom apartment in Mill Valley for Fall '97. Spring '98. Rent negotiable. Call 253-9592

Geo female UMass student with two bedroom in Brandywine looking for 1 or 2 roommates. Sept '97. Aug '98. Please call 549-7660

Male/Female roommate wanted to share a room in our apartment at Salem Place. $175 a month. No downpayment or last months rent required. Call 546-0334

I need a roommate to share a two bedroom apt. in Sunderland for Fall (undergrad, grad, or foreign student). Must be responsible. No drugs. Call Alison 546-5612

Free room and board in exchange for babysitting. Must have experience and car. Available Summer with Fall and Spring Option. In Holyoke (30 min. ride) 536-9116

Need third person Rent apt. Two family house. All utilities included. Call 253-9905

Need a place for the summer? We have 1 room available in Puffton! Male or female. 1 or 2 people. Call 549-8513 Ask for Jessica for more information. Or Chris at 549-5102

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

Cellos Violins Violas
Handmade in Vermont
by Thurmond Knight
sold at
Stammel Strings
Amherst, MA

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Rabbit Rescue can help! Don't abandon your bunny! Call us, we'll find him a new home. Ellen 367-0105

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

Great 3 bedroom apt. in prime location. 5 min. to campus. 5 min. to town. Call Rachel for more info. 253-6449

6/1 with Fall Optio 2 bedroom Victorian House in Belchertown. On bus line. Peaceful location near Quabbin Reservoir. 323-7756

Only $665 for 2 bedroom apt. Sublet from June 1st to Aug. 31st. On bus route. Call 253-3764 after 6pm.

2 bedroom Brandywine with Fall Option. Available 6/1. $699/month. Call 548-8943

Sublet- Northampton Walk to downtown. Unfurnished, except stove and fridge. 3 bedrooms. Available June end/or July. 584-7096

Uptown- 4 bedrooms Great price. Great location. 549-1959

Summer Sublet One bedroom available. Female only. 1 mile from campus. 546-3392

Renovated Puffton Village Apartment 3 bedrooms available for June 1st sublet. Call Bill at 549-1373

1 room in otherwise vacant apt. Front end backyards. Dishwasher, washer and dryer. Wall to wall carpet. Full basement. Fully furnished with cable and phone. Great for singles or couples. 5 min. to campus or uptown. Across from Southwest. Best deal in town. Call 549-5893 for info.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 large room in two bedroom apartment. Looking for two females. Available 6/1. Fall and Spring Option. On bus route. Very spacious. Great location. Call 549-3992

Available- 1 bedroom in a Puffton 3 bedroom. Big enough for one or two people. September- May. Call 549-8745

Housemate Needed for Fall 2 miles to campus. $280/month. 549-4492

Attention University Women Rooms available beginning Fall '97. $1250/ semester includes all utilities and cable. Minute walk to campus. Lynne (508)655-5922 for info.

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+. Call 253-4954 for more info

SUMMER SUBLET

CHEAP! 1-2 people needed for 1 bedroom in a clean, furnished apt. Central air/H20 included. On bus line. 1 mile from campus. Call 548-8850

Happy Downtown Apartment One bedroom. Furnished. $400/month including utilities. 253-8505

Summer Sublet $200. Clean and quiet. 25 min. walk to UMass. Call 549-5957

SUMMER SUBLET- UPTOWN Apt. 1-4 bedrooms available. Large kitchen and bath. $300/month (negotiable) Call Amy 546-5973

Fall Option Five rooms available in house next to campus. 549-1570

Huge bedroom in South Amherst Mr. Pollox in the backyard. Washer/Dryer. $250/month negotiable. Call Peter 253-5482

2 bedrooms available Huge basement, parking. On bus route. LITERALLY on campus. Dan 546-2982.

Bedders- 1 bedroom available in 2 bedroom. Includes A/C and water. On bus line. Call 256-0665 ASAP

$200 month Summer rooms available. Very close to campus and town. Call Cheryl 546-9605 or Lynne (508)655-5922

2 bedroom available with Fall Option in Southpointe Apt. Call 253-2967

Rooms For Rent Behind bars Uptown Amherst. Four bedrooms. Partly furnished. June 1st till August 31st. $250 a month or best offer. Jen 548-8933

1 bedroom available June 1st- Aug. 30. Cliffside Apts. On bus route. Everything included. $500 a month. 665-5171

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom townhouse, for summer sublet. Call 253-6467

Summer Sublet 5 bedroom house. On bus/bike route. Front porch. Backyard. Washer/Dryer. Route 9, Hadley. $1175/month. Call 586-0363

One bedroom apartment Uptown above Newberry Comics. Available for June, July, August. Call 253-0223

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths. Available June 1st. ONE MONTH FREE! Call 253-6467

3 bedroom, fully furnished house on Sunset Ave. 1-5 months. Great location. Less than 1 minute walk from campus. Call anytime 549-2698

Mill Valley- 2 bedroom, 2 bathroom, 2 air conditioners. Fully furnished! With Fall Option. Call 253-6660

3 bedroom Puffton Apt. Great price. Available 6/1. Call 6-6805 or 6-5581

Phillips St. House June 1-Sept 1. Price negotiable. Option of 1 to 4 bedrooms. Call 549-3224

Summer Sublet available 6/1 to 8/31. 1 bedroom in townhouse one block from bus, laundry, and downtown Northampton. Great house, big room. A steal @ $300 per month. Option to renew lease. Older/or grad student preferred. Smoking OK. If interested, call John, Ken, or Chris @ 584-8680

Sublet 6/1 to 8/31 in NoHo near Pearl St. and Metro. 2 bedroom $650+/month. Call 586-4388

Nice room in 4 bedroom apt. Great house. Great location. $280/month. Call Yvonne 549-1627

2 bedroom apt. Brandywine. A/C. $750. Partly furnished. Available 6/1. 549-4198

2 bedroom apt. Starting June 1st with Fall Option. Heat/Hot Water included. $710/month. Call 549-5272

2 bedroom apt. Starting June 1st with Fall Option. Newly carpeted. $775 a month. Two minute walk to bus. Call 549-5329 Ask for Jess or Mandy

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. Rent negotiable. 549-9210

10th Century House in Belchertown. 3 bedrooms, furnished. Close to lake and trails. Great price! 323-9572.

Summer Sublet with Option Uptown 1 bedroom. 5 min. walk to campus. $515. Call 256-6251

Large bedroom in 6 bedroom house. On Route 9. $267 a month. Call 256-8243

Specious 2 bedroom Available 6/1. Heat/Hot Water/Gas included. Minutes from UMass. On bus route. $600/month. Call 549-4982 Fall Option.

Share 2 bedroom apt. at Colonial Village for the summer with female. 253-3241

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment. Laundry and Gym on site. Quiet female non-smoker. No pets. $335 includes heat and hot water. 253-5428

2 bedroom apartment with Fall Option. Call 549-4089

3 bedroom newly renovated apartment Puffton Village. Best offer. Available 6/1. Call 549-5405

Sublet or Take Over Lease 6/1. 2 bedroom Brandywine. Recently renovated. 549-5132

Great one bedroom apt. for Summer. Sublet w/Fall Option. Colonial Village. Available June 1st. $400/month. Call now at 256-0660

Sublet- Sunderland PVTA stops at house. Considerate housemates. One bedroom. $284/month. 665-9066

2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom apt. in South Amherst. 2 bathrooms. Rent negotiable. Call 253-6606

Sublet $200 a month in Amherst. On bus line. Call Andy 253-5482

Puffton! One large room and one small room in 3 bedroom apartment. Call 549-8969

Single, double, triple rooms in big 3 floor house on edge of campus. 3 bath, 3 shower, kitchen, cable, utilities. Only $500 ell summer. Available May 23. Call Fabio at 548-7076 for info

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom in Montague $625 summer. Cats OK. 367-0297

CHEAP! 2 or 3 bedrooms apt. Main St., Amherst. HUGE backyard. Call Sam or Joe at 546-3798

Apt. For Cool!! June 1st. $495/month. Utilities! Not far from campus (EB) Will go quickly! Veronica @ 256-0669

Need a place to sublet for summer? Nice little cheap room. $230 + utilities. Call 549-5221 for more info

Two females looking to sublet. Fall Semester only. Call Kelly and Rene 548-3114

Heat and Water included 2 bedroom A/C. $500/month. Starts June 1st. Fall Option. Furnished. Call 549-4324. We can accommodate any needs.

TRAVEL

I need a ride to Charlotte, NC on Sun., May 25. Will share expenses. Call Heidi 665-8130

WANTED

Jazz Band needed Sat., May 17. Call 253-6520

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

AMY FAIRCHILD
LIVE TOMORROW

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
28 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 Bud Light Drafts
15¢ wings
after 10pm

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 13, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Spirits of the Jaguar		Frontline "Little Criminals"		Holding Ground		America on Wheels
WFSB	3	3 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Promised Land		Last Don (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3 Pt.)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land		Last Don (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3 Pt.)				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Home Imp.	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Spin City	NYPD Blue "Is Pans Burning?"		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Step Team. Next Gener.		★★½ "Above the Law" (1988, Drama) Steven Seagal, Henry Silva.		News				Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Med Abo. You	Caroline	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Moesha	Homeboys	Burning Zone "Wild Fire"		News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Med Abo. You	Caroline	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	"Quicksilver Highway" (1997, Suspense) Christopher Lloyd.				News	ITAR	Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Med Abo. You	Caroline	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Spirits of the Jaguar		Frontline "Little Criminals"		Distant Echoes Yo-Yo Ma		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Home Imp.	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Spin City	NYPD Blue "Is Pans Burning"		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld		Med Abo. You	Moesha	Homeboys	Burning Zone "Wild Fire"	News		Real TV	Med Abo. You
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	NBA Basketball Playoffs Teams to Be Announced. (Live)						★★★ "Jeremiah Johnson" (1972, Adventure) Robert Redford.			"Man-Liberty"
A&E	69	Quincy "Nine Blood		Law & Order "Progeny		Biography Arthur Godfrey		Columbo "Forgotten Lady"				Law & Order "Reincarnation"
CNN	29	23 World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Blue	Moneyline
COM	67	28 Tick	Dresm On	Daily Show (R)	Lizards	Kickin' Aspen: Comedy		Paula Poundstone		Viva Variety	Dresm On	Daily Show	Lizards
DISC	70	Movie Magic	Nest Step (R)	Wings "Casquals" (R)		Wild Discovery "Nightraiders"		New Detectives "Web of Clues"		Beyond Bizarre (R)		Wild Discovery "Nightraiders"
ESPN	68	Up Close	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 5 — Teams to Be Announced.					Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	71	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★ "The Bride in Black" (1990, Drama) Susan Lucci, David Soul.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	31	(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		World Tour (R)	Singled Out	Unplugged (R) Sheryl Crow		Music Videos (In Stereo)		Undercover	Undercover	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	42	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	66	Twilight Zone	Fifth Element	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Sesquest DSV (In Stereo)		Forever Knight "Blind Faith"		V.R.5 "Pilot" (In Stereo)		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	72	28 Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Medics Detect Danger Zone		What Happened?		Cyberspace-Undiscovered		Medics Detect Danger Zone
TNT	72	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball Playoffs Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					NBA Basketball Playoffs Teams TBA
USA	33	Renegade "Lyons Roar"		Highlander: The Series (R)		Murder, She Wrote (In Stereo)		Boxing Tyrone Boone vs. Buster Douglas. (Live)				Silk Stalkings "Killer Cop"
HBO	43	★½ "If Takes Two" (1995, Comedy) Kirstie Alley. PG.				★★½ "Eraser" (1996, Adventure) Arnold Schwarzenegger. R				"Skeletons" (1997, Suspense) Ron Silver. R		"Girl 6" (1996)
MAX	45	★½ "Folks!" (1992, Comedy) Tom Selleck (In Stereo) PG-13		★★ "Versus Rising" (1996) Costas Mandylor. R		★★ "The Sweeper" (1996) C.Thomas Howell. R		★★ "The Surgeon" (1995) Isabel Glasser. R				Erotic	"Public Enemy"
SHOW	46	★★★ "Silver Streak" (1976, Comedy) Gene Wilder. PG				★½ "Powder" (1995, Drama) Mary Steenburgen. PG-13				★½ "The Surgeon" (1995) Isabel Glasser. R		"Raising Cain"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University² By Frank Cho

University² By Frank Cho

Non Sequitor By Wiley

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Don't seek to avoid difficulty—you could miss out on a lesson you really need to learn. You're lucky in love, but don't trumpet this news too loudly: someone close to you may be feeling pretty lonesome.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Working for a promotion is rewarding, but difficult, so allow yourself to be pampered if you're lucky enough to receive an offer. Romance flourishes as the weather grows balmy.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Tension builds at work as a de

SPORTS

Tuesday, May 13, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Brewers could surprise

I could talk a little baseball with you today, but I'm not going to lie to you.

I haven't been watching that much ball lately.

I'm sorry, kids. It's my fault. I dropped the ball. Since it's my duty to provide you guys with a little baseball once every few weeks, you would think I might catch a game here or there. I'm supposed to be informed.

LUKE MEREDITH ON BASEBALL

Well, I'm not.

But today is the last sports column I will write until September. (College Football's around the corner, kids. I'll give you a little taste of what's ahead with one definitive statement. Wisconsin fullback Ron Dayne is the new "Pimp Daddy." I'll gladly give up my title to the nation's biggest fullback, who is college football's next "Biggie Smalls".)

But I digress.

Alright, alright, I'll talk a little baseball. I'm sure I'll be able to scrape up something.

No sleep 'till Miwaukee...

Don't sleep on the Brewers. They've got a decent pitching staff, (Ben McDonald may win 20 yet), a nucleus of good young players like Jeff Cirillo and Marc Newfield, who are, most importantly in a city that has to pinch pennies, cheap good young players. They will not win the AL Central, because Cleveland will write its ship come early June and blow the rest of "Fiscally challenged" contenders (Kansas City, Minnesota) away. But they'll make noise in the wild-card race, because they've got the horses to weather a long season.

Hi, I'm today's starting pitcher. Nice to meet you...

The Pittsburgh Pirates performed one of the classier acts in recent memory when, on the advice of Al Martin, the entire team greeted fans filing into the ballpark before Saturday's game with the Braves. Not only did they beat the Braves 9– 0, they showed how a small–market team can take advantage of their situation. Kudos to the Pirates, who proved that, despite wearing uniforms that look like they came straight from the seafood restaurant in Fast Times at Ridgemont High, you can finish last and still have the people like you.

You, you're not good...

I will not comment on Red Sox reliever Heathcliff Slocumb, besides saying that maybe keeping Ken Ryan wouldn't have been so bad after all.

Mmmbop...

That sub–head above you has nothing to do with anything I want to say right now, but I needed to include at least a little something about teen sensations Hanson, who are combined still younger than Mariner pitcher Dennis Martinez. "El Presidente" is so old, he played with Jim Palmer and Lenn Sakata. Ouch.

Famous last words...

Sometimes I get a little nervous, because I'm leaving you for a whole summer, and I want to cram it all in at once. So in closing, I'll leave you with the following nuggets of knowledge...

Baltimore and Seattle will be on top of the American League when we get back.

Atlanta and Houston will be on top of the National League in September.

And finally, alas, former Met first baseman Lee Mazzilli will not make a comeback.

Have a nice summer, kids. Watch some "SportsCenter" for me.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian Columnist.

Water polo heads west; ready to battle No. 1 UCLA

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The No. 14 University of Massachusetts Women's Water Polo team is on the road next week, beginning with the CWPA Tournament at Dartmouth, before going to California to face No. 1 UCLA.

The tournament, which takes place in Hanover today and tomorrow will include Dartmouth, Brown, Wesleyan and Williams. The team will then head out to the West Coast, where they will take on Golden West CC, the University of Redlands with Indiana, USC and UCLA. They will round out their trip with the Claremont Colleges Tournament March 21–23.

But right now, the Minutewomen are concentrating on playing well against the reigning national champions, UCLA.

"It's tough because we have never played a team of that caliber before," said senior Vicky Bamond, UMass' all–time leading scorer. "We have never played a team in the top five.

"This weekend is Brown, at Hanover. They are probably our big rival. They beat us last year by one goal, but they lost their best player to California. And I don't believe they have any new recruits."

The Minutewomen have 10 strong recruits this season, six from California, two from Puerto Rico, one from Ohio and one from Michigan.

"They are all good players, they are all from junior nationals or junior Olympics, and we have the national goalie from Puerto Rico, Peggy [Nieves]."

Though a relatively new and young team, the Minutewomen have been steadily improving each season. Last year they were 16–8 overall, and this year, one of their main goals is to make it to nationals.

"I think we are well on our way to where they [the California teams] all are. Our team is only three years old. We have gone from being a team who lost every single meet, or close to it our first season, to one who last year almost made it to nationals," Bamond said.

According to Bamond, one of the strongest aspects of team is unity, and the fact that every one of the women is a team player, which should help them on their way to a championship.

"The girls get along very well, which had been a problem in the past. But now we are very close, we play well together. There's no selfishness or no ball hogging," Bamond said. "Everyone wants to win, so everyone works extra hard. The girls have improved on everything — their swimming ability, their playing ability.

"I know this year we are making it to nationals."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Vicky Bamond and the Massachusetts women's water polo team is looking forward to a match with No. 1 UCLA next weekend.

Harry fanned 14 vs. St. Joe's, why not Bru too?

LEIGH TORBIN

Just because my name hasn't been popping up on these pages very often, doesn't mean I've fallen right off the face of the Earth.

While I've eschewed my daily duties here in favor of more responsibilities at home in Bogotá, I can't quit cold turkey. I tried, but it's like Mark Twain said:

"Quitting smoking [here, writing for this rag] is easy. I've done it a thousand times."

So this is a dry run of some sort of experimental column for next fall, looking at the little untold stories that often get lost in the shuffle. Hopefully it works.

• So Bruiser Flint thinks he can hit UMass' flame– throwing softball pitcher Danielle "Harry" Henderson. Yeah, and the next Pope will be a hare krishna.

So the story goes that a few weeks back Henderson was accepting WHMP–UMass Athlete of the Week honors at the Sports Luncheon after striking out about 17 batters in a game against La Salle. The diminutive Philadelphia native, who has to look up at the 6–foot–1 Henderson, must have thought he was Mike Schmidt when he spoke later in the luncheon and said that he could hit Harry's 65 mph smoke from a closer than baseball (42–foot) softball mound.

Assistant coach John Robic, who does the bulk of UMass hoops' opponent scouting, was spotted watching Henderson throw a pair of shutouts against Canisius on Thursday in an NCAA play–in series sweep. The word is out in 301 Mullins, but the question is, can the big guy hit her? After all, a baseball curve ball going outside is one thing. If you're off you can still slice it out of play. But what do you do with a rise ball coach Flint?

Having worked with this team for three years now, I would sooner take my chances with Evander Holyfield. Henderson's pitches have so much velocity on them that when her wild ones hit the backstop, green paint chips go flying off the fence into the press box, one of which almost blinded me once.

The sophomore already holds 10 school records, one of them for her 287 strikeouts this season. Mind you that the UMass team record entering the year was 253. Harry's done that all by herself, let alone contributions from Liz Wagner and Sarah Watters.

Personally, I'd be scared that if she hit me that little round ball would leave a gaping two–foot hole coming out of my other side. I'm just another college kid and disgustingly single, Bruiser's got a wife and daughter to think about.

Henderson might be a demure, gentle giant away from the mound, even in the dugout between innings, but she's a terminator on it. Before the game, whether you tell the Long Islander she's starting against the New York Yankees or Middle South Central Massachusetts State College, her reaction will be the same non–chalant "Oh, OK." On the mound, it's a different story.

People who play softball daily can't touch her, and I find it hard to believe that coach Flint has a snowball's chance in Storrs, Conn.

It would take a miracle, one which

Turn to TORBIN, page 12

Coach Bird grabs reign of Pacers

By Steve Herman
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Larry Bird's Hoosier roots were showing.

Perhaps the most celebrated player ever to come out of basketball–mad Indiana, Bird returned to Market Square Arena yesterday as the coach of the Indiana Pacers, a match 19 years in the making. "The Pacers passed me up in the draft in 1978. I never thought I'd be here," Bird told a news conference on the floor of the arena, the home of the Pacers. "Now I'm here. I want to do whatever I can to make them proud."

Once a shy Hoosier country boy, the self–styled "Hick from French Lick," Bird is certain to fill the downtown arena by virtue of his name alone. Making a winner out of the Pacers is far less certain, especially since it's his first job as a coach and he's going to get a huge amount of attention.

"I don't like being in the public eye, but I want my team to succeed," Bird said. "Of course I'm young and I'll make mistakes... I know it's completely different. It's tough, but it's something I want to do.

"I crave winning. Whether I'm going to be a great coach or not, I don't know that. But I think I will."

Bird, a 12–time NBA All–Star with the Boston Celtics, retired as a player in 1992 because of chronic back problems. He said he never missed playing and never seriously thought about coaching until about two years ago.

He said he was asked to coach the Pacers in 1993, before Larry Brown was hired, but turned them down.

He didn't have to be asked again.

"This is my home state... Every kid from Indiana watched the team in the ABA. Watching the Pacers, being from Indiana, you get caught up with it.

"I felt if I didn't take the opportunity now, this might be my last opportunity," the 40–year–old Bird said. "I've always been very competitive. If you want to compete in the NBA you have to play or

Turn to BIRD, page 13

UM's spring athletes distinguish themselves

Editor's note: Over the course of the next week, the Collegian sports page will look back at the year that was in UMass sports. Here are a few athletes who were faces in the UMass spring sports crowd.

Stephanie Walsh • women's lacrosse • senior • attack

5th all–time in goals at UMass with 103... 7th in career points with 115

John Kasselakis: men's lacrosse • junior • goalie

Third in the nation with a 7.28 Goals against average... led UMass to NCAA first round win over Hofstra

Brendan Glass • men's lacrosse • senior • attack

Fifth all–time in goals at UMass with 128, 9th in career points with 164... Led team in scoring despite nagging injuries

Jason Bennett • baseball • senior • pitcher

Broke the all–time record for wins at UMass with his 21st versus Temple in April... 9–1 this season, with a 4.17 ERA, 25–4 all–time

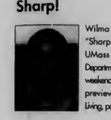
Brad Gorrie• baseball •senior• shortstop

All–time leader in stolen bases at UMass with 96, Has 41 this year, along with a .362 average, 8 hrs and 38 RBIs

Ola Gerasimova• freshman• women's tennis• 13–7 In singles play as the No.1, 12–5 in doubles... led UMass to as third place showing at A–10's, their best finish ever

Andrea Vazquez •women's water polo• sophomore

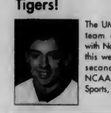
Vazquez was named second team All–Tournament at the Eastern Championships, and honorable mention All–Tournament at this weekend's Nationals.



Bo Navarro • sophomore • men's tennis • Went 16–7 in doubles play, 14–9 in singles... won the New England Championships No. 5 singles, teamed with Rob Manchester to win the No. 1 New England Championships doubles.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 140 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesay, May 14, 1997

That's Sharp!

Wilmo Pruitt's play "Sharps" ends the UMass Theatre Department's season this weekend. Check out our preview (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Top that Tigers!

The UMass lacrosse team mixes it up with No. 1 Princeton this weekend in the second round of NCAA action (See Sports, page 16).

WORLD

Report: Tunnel needs work on safety issues

LONDON (AP) —Safety experts investigating a train fire that crippled the Channel Tunnel last year found "fundamental weaknesses" in safety procedures and recommended dozens of changes yesterday.

Operations have yet to fully resume since the Nov. 18 fire on a shuttle train carrying freight trucks between France and England, and the Anglo–French investigation said the problems discovered "need to be recognized by Eurotunnel at the highest levels." But the report to Eurotunnel, which operates the 31–mile undersea tunnel linking France and England, stopped short of calling for expensive design modifications to the train cars that carry the trucks.

"The incident was more serious than it should have been because the emergency procedures were too complex and demanding and the staff on duty had not been adequately trained to carry them out," said Roderick Allison, chairman of the safety authority that monitors the tunnel.

Even though workers on the French side of the tunnel saw flames shooting from the train as it went in, safety devices in the tunnel were slow to confirm there was a fire, according to the report from the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority

NATION

Digital sues Intel for patent infringement

BOSTON (AP) — In a clash of computer industry titans that could involve billions of dollars, Digital Equipment Corp. is suing Intel Corp., accusing it of copying Digital technology in designing the powerful Pentium chip.

In a federal lawsuit filed Monday, Digital claims that Intel, the world's biggest maker of computer chips, infringed on Digital patents.

"Our goal is very simple: to stop Intel from unlawfully using Digital's patented technology in its present and future microprocessor products," Robert Palmer, Digital chairman and chief executive, said yesterday.

Nearly all of Intel's $5.2 billion in profits last year came from the chips in question. The suit seeks triple damages, but Palmer refused to say how much money that might be.

Tom Waldrop, a spokesman for Santa Clara, Calif.–based Intel, said of the lawsuit: "We will defend against it vigorously. It was a total surprise."

Intel's chips are the "brains" in 85 percent of the world's personal computers. Intel has shipped just over 1 million Pentium–family chips since it began producing them in 1993, according to Dataquest Inc. of San Jose.

The suit was filed less than a week after Intel rolled out its latest chip, the Pentium II.

Aside from money, at stake is ownership of technology critical to the improved speed and power that have placed Intel in increased competition with Digital for high–end office computer systems.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 67	HIGH: 64	HIGH: 62
LOW: 44	LOW: 43	LOW: 38

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics.....page 15
Crossword .....page 15
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 3
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 16

Gay life criticized at CC table; 'Christian' pamphlet draws fire

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Students look on as UMass junior Leslie Nirenstein (second from right) talks to Paula McCusker (right) about homosexuality.

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Representatives from a group calling themselves "Friends of Jesus Christ" set up a table on the Campus Center Concourse for the first of two days yesterday under a banner reading, "Christian Response to: Straight Talk about Heterosexuality."

Jim and Paula McCusker, ministers from Farmington, Maine, spoke with people on the concourse about what they feel are the sins of homosexuality in response to a pamphlet from 1986 called "Straight Talk About Homosexuality." They backed up their stance with various pamphlets and brochures.

"We've done a lot of studies... and discovered many inaccuracies in [the pamphlet]," Jim McCusker said. "We know a lot of things said in the pamphlet simply aren't true. Out of love for the homosexual community, we want to present what we feel is the truth."

In a written packet, the Friends of Jesus Christ compare homosexuality to stealing.

"Society's disapproval of homosexuality is not based on prejudice, stereotypes, lack of knowledge or fear of the unknown," the pamphlet reads. "It is based on the intuitive knowledge of right and wrong that God has placed in everyone's conscience. Just as people have a God–given intuitive sense that stealing is forbidden, they also have a God–given intuitive sense that homosexuality is forbidden."

Leslie Nirenstein, a junior at the University of Massachusetts, and a member of the homosexual community, sat with the couple in the concourse and said she tried to get them to see another point of view.

"I feel sad because they still haven't given me an answer to why my loving women is wrong," Nirenstein said. "Their only

Turn to FIRE, page 2

DS implores University to make new adjustments

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

Issues surrounding accessibility for disabled students may be taking center stage next year, as they come to a boil by the end of this semester.

As Disability Services (DS) worked to organize and unite both mentally and physically disabled students on campus, the administration was notified of the growing tension due to limited access for those with physical disabilities.

Madeline Peters, director of Disability Services, explained the difficulties in trying to make progress with accessibility issues due to the loss of two DS staff members and no budget with which to work.

"We're taking baby steps, but we have a lot to tackle all at once," Peters said.

Peters said DS is not about taking over and changing policies, but about working with others in order to make accommodations.

"People are very ignorant around issues of disabilities... it's everyone's responsibility to make changes," she said.

Peters, who has been out on sick leave for the last month, has continued working on the issue.

A voice among the crowd

One main student activist, Rick Malley, a junior legal studies undergraduate, has been active in making the administration aware of the limitations of disabled students.

Legally blind, Malley works for the Architectural Access Board, which makes renovations on campus to ameliorate accessibility. Malley said he feels that by changing minor things, such as larger room number signs, access could be made easier for everyone.

Malley said he feels there is a "human issue" at stake concerning more serious accessibility problems, such as elevators without braille and buildings without accessible bathrooms.

"The word disability — you think weakness, less–than. That's the entire stigma in society," Malley said.

History of accessibility

Turn to ADJUSTMENTS, page 3

Teen accused of murdering local man

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A suburban teen–ager was charged Monday with capital murder in the death of an 18–year–old from Massachusetts, police said.

A six–count indictment unsealed in Albany County Court accuses James G. Bowles of robbing and killing 18–year–old Jeffrey Levitz of Stoughton, Mass.

Levitz' badly decomposed body was found Easter Sunday about seven miles from Albany in the suburb of Colonie. He had died from a gunshot wound to the head, police said.

Levitz, the son of a Stoughton, Mass., school principal, had been missing since early February, when he came to the area on a road trip with friends from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Levitz was not a UMass student.

Levitz was last seen driving away from his friends in Troy, N.Y., on his way to visit his aunt in Albany. He never arrived at his aunt's house, and relatives reported him missing Feb. 4. His car was found the next day in Colonie, about four miles from the body.

Russian defense minister backs nuclear missile reduction

By Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Russian Defense Minister Igor Rodionov said yesterday he supports the START II nuclear arms–reduction treaty, even though it has not been ratified by the Russian parliament.

"I'm deeply convinced we can ensure the security of our country with a lesser number of missiles and warheads," Rodionov said at a Pentagon briefing also attended by Defense Secretary William Cohen. The Russian defense minister came to the Pentagon for his first–ever session with Cohen, who took over defense chief in January. He was questioned about a report in The Washington Times that he opposes START II despite the backing of Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

Rodionov said he has "had some doubts" about the treaty in years past, but has come to see its benefits.

"We need to do it," he said of Russian ratification.

Rodionov, however, remained opposed to NATO's planned expansion to include some former Soviet bloc countries.

"This is a mistake to expand NATO eastward," Rodionov said.

"We agreed to disagree," responded Cohen.

President Vaclav Havel of the Czech Republic, one of the countries expected to join NATO, told a Capitol Hill news conference that expanding the military alliance would fill a "security vacuum" that has existed in Central and Eastern Europe since the Soviet Union dissolved.

But Havel, who will meet with Cohen on Friday, objected to any attempt to limit conventional forces for new member states as part of a NATO–Russia charter that could be signed this month to ease Moscow's concerns

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor:
Jacob W. Michaels

Copy Editor:
C. Taylor Conner

Photo Technician:
Lauren Kosky

Production Supervisor:
Marc Dionne

Production Staff:
Danial Bodah
Matthew Guilmette

Correction

Yesterday's editorial cartoon was written and drawn by Lisa Chiu.

Also, the story "Water Polo heads west; ready to battle No. 1 UCLA" ran previously. The correct story can be found in today's sports section.

The Collegian regrets the errors.

■ fire

continued from page 1

defense to my being 'unnatural' is that God doesn't want it that way. I'm not leaving until they admit that my love is valid."

Another point made within the "Christian Response" is that men and women should keep sex strictly within a heterosexual marriage.

"Common sense, science, medicine and history have all proven that men and women were designed to keep sex within the heterosexual marriage union," the pamphlet reads. "This is why the inclination to homosexuality and bisexuality has, generally speaking, been minimal in the history of the human race."

A question raised by Tom Doughton, a visiting assistant professor of history, concerned different faiths and their views on homosexuality.

"In many faith systems, what you do with your genitalia is irrelevant... Where is your Christian message of compassion and mercy?" Doughton said before walking away.

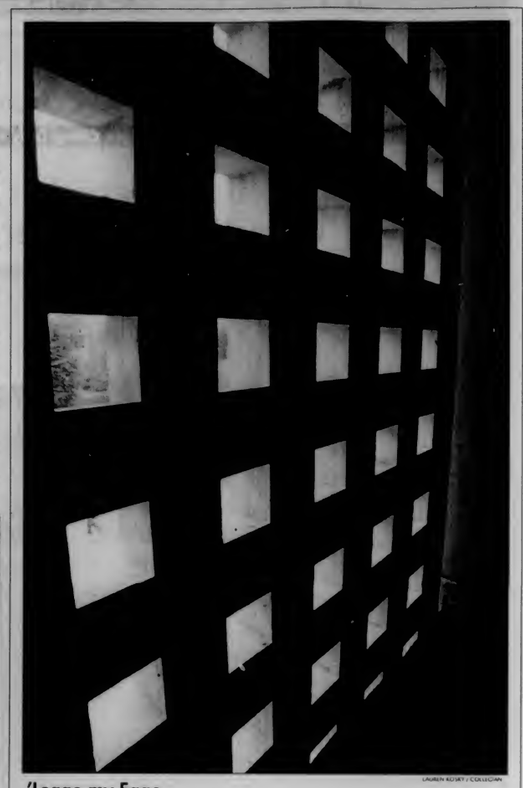
"It saddens me that this happens, that people will unload and walk away," Jim McCusker said.

He also said that there has been a broad range of people visiting the table throughout the day.

"There have been people who would call themselves Christians and have been supportive, there have been people who are just curious, and then of course, the homosexual faction who will refute us, but we expect that... [our information] is heavily weighted with medical information, the lifestyle, and how it harms society," Jim McCusker said.

According to the McCuskers, the group obtained permission from the Campus Center/Student Union Commission to set up a table in the concourse.

"I really appreciate UMass students. Generally speaking, they are very respectful..." Paula McCusker said. "We hope that God will work in people's hearts."



Representatives from the Stonewall Center set up a table next to the "Friends of Jesus Christ" and had flyers refuting the group's claims and comparing homosexuality to other issues that the Bible has justified.

One Stonewall Center flyer said, "the Bible has been used to justify slavery, and to relegate women to second-class status."

"[Friends of Jesus Christ] is in response to a pamphlet UMass put out, and they are taking the pamphlet and point by point dispute it," graduate student Kelly Garrett said.

"[Friends of Jesus Christ] just have a lot of wrong information here," UMass sophomore Stacy Coleman said. "There are narrow surveys and studies... and a lot of misinformation in these pamphlets."

A mission statement was displayed on the Friends of Jesus Christ table beside the pamphlets. It reads: "For the sake of the homosexual community and the general public we are presenting what we consider to be the correct Christian response to the inaccurate statements in 'Straight Talk about Homosexuality.' We hope you will read the Christian Response with an open and tender heart."

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

'Leggo my Eggo
Light shines through the Campus Center Garage yesterday afternoon.

HELP WANTED

The Collegian Newsroom is looking for ambitious undergraduates interested in getting involved with the Collegian next semester, particularly freshman, sophomores and juniors.

Journalism experience preferred, but not required.
Collegian staff positions are chiefly learning experiences.

The following paid editorial positions are available:

Developing Nations Editor
Gay Lesbian Bisexual Transgender Affairs Editor
Women's Issues Editor

Additional positions are available for:

Assistant to the Managing Editor
Librarian
Night and Copy Editors

These interested should come down to the Collegian Office (113 Campus Center) before the end of finals, fill out an application, and submit to Laura Stack, Managing Editor.

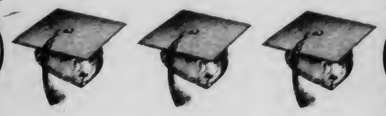
Take a Chance SALE

SHOP EARLY FOR BEST SELECTION

EACH DAY THE DISCOUNT INCREASES

DO YOU DARE TAKE A CHANCE?

WILL WHAT YOU WANT BE THERE TOMORROW?



ITEMS FROM THROUGHOUT THE STORE

MANY ONE-OF-A-KIND ITEMS

in the Campus Center 545-2619 UNIVERSITY STORE Hours: M-F 9am — 5pm Sat 11am — 4pm

Congratulations
Class of 1997

THE NEWMAN CENTER COMMUNITY

WISHES YOU THE BEST IN YOUR FUTURE ENDEAVORS

Good Luck and God Bless

For Your Information

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 14

Book drive — The Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League will be collecting academic and political books to donate to MIM's Books for Prisoners Program. Books are sent to prisoners in Gulag for education and revolutionary politicization. Please bring any books to the table on the Campus Center Concourse today.

Concert — The Doo-Wop Shop will perform an a capella concert at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Admission is free for students, but you have to pick up tickets at the Fine Arts Center Box Office. This is the Shop Reunion Concert, and the final concert for the three graduating seniors.

NOTICES

Study Break — The Campus Activities Office will sponsor a Study Break on May 19 and 20 from 10 a.m. – 1 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. Study Break provides free food, refreshments and entertainment to UMass students during finals.

Theater — The UMass Theatre Guild is currently accepting applications for Artistic Team positions for their fall 1997 productions of The Who's Tommy and The Passion of Dracula. For more information, call Jen at 549-1587 or Ari at 546-4629.

Student I.D. Cards — Students, faculty and staff who have not had their picture taken for the new all-campus I.D. card to be issued over the summer for the fall semester must do so before the end of this semester. Temporary photo locations will be held until May 14 on the Campus Center Concourse from 10 a.m.–4 p.m. Monday-Friday, and the University Library from 3–8 p.m. Monday–Thursday and 3–5 p.m. Friday. The Franklin Dining Hall I.D. office, open from 9 a.m.–5 p.m. Monday-Friday, will take pictures until the week of finals.

Musicians — Mission Improvable, the UMass Comedy Troupe, is looking for someone who can play the keyboard in a variety of music styles, with their own equipment. Call Aaron at 546-5225 for more info.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, meets every Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees.

Community — "Rendezvous with the Soul," meditation, music and prayer meetings, will be held from 4–5 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805–809 weekly on Tuesdays until the end of the semester. Sponsored by the UMass Baha'i Club. For more information, call Chris at 549-4982.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pliner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program, is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577-5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Hey, hey, hey, goodbye!
A last view of the W.E.B. Du Bois library and the Student Union before students leave campus for the summer.

■ flexibility

continued from page 1

meal," said Katie Burns, a junior English major. "Sometimes I'll eat five meals a week, other times, I need more meals than I'm allotted."

Additionally, a new option will be provided for staff and off-campus students in the Commuter Dining Plan, which will allow five meals per week, Monday through Friday, for $450, or a base price of $5.60 per meal.

Food Services Director Dick Rossi said the changes have come due to a change in the eating patterns of students.

"The students asked for changes in the meal plan. A number of students are saying 'I want to eat on weekends with the 10 meal plan,'" Rossi said. "They want to get away from the traditional plans."

Rossi said Dining Services is looking into other options to make the system better fit student needs. Ideas being discussed include bringing ethnic foods, such as Mexican and Asian cuisine, to the dining commons.

Plans are also underway for a total renovation of Franklin Dining Hall in the summer of 1999. The plan would involve the creation of eight different eating stations, each offering different foods, some of which would be prepared and served at the same time. Students would be able to take and eat what they wanted.

■ adjustments

continued from page 1

Malley's work on campus is similar to what Marie Desmond started about 43 years ago. Desmond came to the University of Massachusetts in 1954 as an English major. As one of the few disabled students on campus, Desmond was confined to a motorized chair to get around campus.

Finding problems getting around campus, Desmond based her English thesis on accessibility issues on campus. Desmond worked with William Lambert from the Planning Office on measuring and analyzing buildings on campus in order to determine their accessibility.

Through her efforts, Desmond was invited to visit other schools, such as Smith College, to share her data and help them in their own renovations. In addition, Desmond designed the first brochure highlighting the accessible locations on campus, which is still updated and used today.

Desmond described the faculty during her time at UMass as "perfectly willing" to help her endeavors, and said improving accessibility was a "simple matter of communication, without being obsessively vocal."

Recent progress

Present-day concerns, however, are demanding more than the brochures are able to offer. Students like the at-times wheelchair-confined Anthony Recchia still feel more needs to be done.

Recchia, with the help of his 497 Photography Class, worked on a list of suggestions this semester for improving accessibility to present to the administration. The class' project was organized by undergraduate women's studies major Bonnie Page, and was presented by Recchia to the administration. Their list, as well as a photo display, were used for considerations in next year's renovations for the Campus Center and Student Union.

Recchia, who said he feels comfortable with his disability, still explains the constant struggle he faces in planning out how he will get around campus each day. One such struggle is the inaccessible location of his dean in the Machmer academic building, which is not equipped with elevators.

Ashavan Dcyon, former Student Government Association secretary of University Policies last semester, worked to raise awareness on the issues of the disabled students. Doyon is responsible for the braille which was installed into the Campus Center elevators. However, like most elevators on campus, there is still a problem for blind individuals to determine the floor location.

The next step

Recently, Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) officer Paul Appleby was invited to attend a DS mentor meeting so that disabled students could voice their opinions and concerns for renovations and change.

Appleby, who is in charge of making sure the ADA is upheld, said the University is not prepared to meet the needs of students who are visually impaired and that renovations would cost hundreds of millions of dollars.

One issue currently being addressed concerns the grievance process for the disabled, which allows them to voice their opinions when they feel they have not been treated fairly. A five-day decision process, like the one used at the University of California at Berkley, is being proposed to replace the present process, which can take six months up to a year.

In addition, Appleby said he hopes to install an audible beep in elevators to indicate floor locations. As for other issues, Appleby said that there are "plans on file" and he intends to follow up on the questions and issues presented to him by keeping in touch with students this summer.

"I was told six months ago that Chancellor Scott was aware, but here nothing's changed," Malley said of the progress thus far.

Malley said he feels the issues at stake keep getting handed back to DS, instead of being implemented by Appleby. Due to his frustration, Malley said he now intends to go to the top of the chain of authority with his concerns and continue his efforts with other disabled students throughout the summer.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE CLASS OF 1997!

- Did you have a positive UMass Amherst experience?
- Would you like to share your UMass experience with prospective students?

Become a member of the Umass Amherst Alumni Admissions Council
The Alumni Admissions Council is a nationwide cadre of volunteers who assist the Office of Undergraduate Admissions with recruiting prospective students.

Volunteer activities include:

- Representing UMass Amherst at college fairs
- Telephoning and congratulating accepted students
- Hosting receptions for accepted students
- Alumni Informational Interviews

Interested??
Call 545-0222 and ask for the Coordinator of the Alumni Admissions Council or complete and send the interest form to: AAC Coordinator, Admissions Center, UMass, Amherst MA, 01003.

AAC Interest Form
Name:_____
Mailing Address:_____
Town:_____
State:_____ ZIP:_____
Tel: ( )_____
Major:_____ GPA:_____
Campus Activities:

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quint Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quint Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The chief's final say

After four years, today marks the last paper of my college career. It also marks the end of being too liberal, too conservative, anti-student, anti-administration, sexist, racist, classist and anti-Semitic.

If anything has soured me on the University, it's the way we at the paper are treated by the rest of the student body. I can stand the political correctness and I have no problem with the jokes about our mistakes. But even though I should just ignore it, the personal attacks still upset me.

Let me start by explaining something very basic to you — there is no secret agenda at the paper. We are simply a bunch of students with a variety of interests trying to put out what we feel is the best paper possible. We even frequently disagree on what that is.

Even though I should just ignore it, the personal attacks still upset me.

Jacob W. Michaels

The next thing I wish people would understand is we're not a professional paper, though we do try to be as professional as we can be. We're students like everyone else. We have to go to class. We're still learning what we're doing. We work hard — at times staying up until 5 a.m. to make sure the paper is finished — but we're not perfect.

I despise when someone makes a basic mistake — like forgetting to show up to take a photo — and suddenly it's an act of racism. You can't show me someone who hasn't once forgotten something or made a mistake. But those people aren't racist, they just screwed up. The same thing goes for us. Just because one staff person forgets something doesn't make all 150 people here racist.

However, unlike almost any other group, when a newspaper makes a mistake, it makes public amends. Almost no other group will help disseminate criticism of itself, but the paper publishes critical letters to the editor all the time. We've got no problem doing it, either.

However, I'd have a lot less problems if people would be polite when they came down asking for help. If you tell me you want to "stick your boot up my ass" — as people have done — or threaten me in some other way, don't expect me to go out of my way to help you. On the other hand, if you're polite and realize that it was a basic mistake, I'll do as much as I can to help you rectify the situation. Like all other people, we respond much better to courtesy and politeness.

(If you want to talk about immature unprofessional groups, look at the Student Government Association and the Graduate Student Senate. People in the former are so immature and petty they stole the speaker's sweater based on a story in the Collegian's April Fool's issue. Those in the latter — who should be mature — spend their meetings rudely laughing out loud while others are speaking and calling each other "Satan.")

As for being too liberal, conservative, pro-student or whatever, I don't buy it. I think the vast majority of our news articles represent both sides of the story. They're not always perfect when an inexperienced writer is getting started, but most of us try to get both sides in fairly.

The Ed/Op page is a different story, but people don't need to be unbiased there. Sure, most of the editorials are pro- student and liberal, but think about where the writers are coming from. Most of the students on this campus are liberal and it shouldn't be a surprise when they write that way. Again, it's not a conspiracy, it's just everyone writing what and how they want.

The next gripe I've got is with the grad students who come down here demanding stories. I'm going to go back to the common courtesy thing again. Treat us undergraduates with a little respect. After all, you're coming to us asking us to do something for you. Treating us with the customary arrogance grad students have to undergrads isn't going to make us want to help you. We don't have to cover anything. We choose to because it's what a good newspaper does. One of these days though, when some group of pompous grads (GEO, anyone?) come down here demanding something, they're going to be told to just go up to the rag they call a graduate student newspaper. Perhaps the Voice can stop infantily insulting people by ascribing stupid "meanings" to their names long enough to cover something relevant to the grad community.

But I think the thing we get most accused of is anti- Semitism, due to some people's articles on Israel. It's the most frustrating and annoying for me, since I am Jewish.

First of all, I'd ask those levelling the accusations to remember that the majority of the paper is very even-handed on Israel and Jewish issues. There are just a couple sections which spend a lot of time writing about the country.

Now those writers would argue they're simply writing about a political issue they feel is covered with bias in the national papers, and not about Jews.

Yet in reality, most people equate Jews and Israel as the same. Further, it also has always struck me as odd (and rather sad) that a graduate student has so much time to write so much for an undergrad paper. It's also odd when you consider that the Middle East tends to dominate both the editorial and advertising content of the grad "paper." In the end, I guess I just think it's sad that people claiming to support and promote diversity spend so much time attacking another minority group. I suppose it might be possible the writers' defense is true, but I can't help but wonder why they're so focused on just one thing.

After finally voicing some of the complaints and thoughts I've had over the last four years, I'm ready to leave for the real world where I don't need to worry about being taken over every time we run something.

All that's left to say is "That's the news and I am out of here..."

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist who never has to defend something he disagrees with again.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Last shots at the rogue's gallery

When I was first given the opportunity to write one last column, my initial plan was to take some time aside to reflect and thank those individuals who've helped me along and to take an opportunity to say a tearful goodbye.

My second thought was to skewer a few choice individuals and get out a few parting shots on my way out the door.

Well, that little devil on my shoulder is hopping up and down like a Spice Girl with a twisted thong, so I think I'll take this space to take my shots where and while I can.

So, without any further ado, let's run down this semester's rogue's gallery, shall we?

Bob Dunn

• UPC: OK guys, let's face it, your concert sucked this year. Don't come down here complaining that the paper doesn't give you guys a fair shot and our coverage is skewed — the last four years I haven't been able to say, I'm ready to leave for the real world where I don't need to worry about being taken over every time we run something.

All that's left to say is "That's the news and I am out of here..."

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist who never has to defend something he disagrees with again.

Still skinny after all these years

Has it been four years since I moved into Orchard Hill, scared out of my pants because I was positive that my roommate would be a 35 year old child molester (I was only 18 at the time, just a kid) who listened to nothing but Doctor Demento tapes and called his mother crying every-time someone looked at him?

I am still remember shaking as my parents drove up to Orchard Hill passing all these "cool" kids playing frisbee and hanging out in Central.

Mike Burke

I was quite naive about everything (my parents are Irish– Catholic) from drinking to drugs to sex. I entered college without a clue as to what I wanted to do with my life and here I am four years later; everything else has changed except the fact that I still have little, if any, direction in life.

But I am not really a slacker — just the opposite. Or maybe I am a slacker without enough time to slack off. Balancing the Collegian and school work has successfully prevented the formation of anything resembling a typical UMass social life over the past two years. Maybe that's why I am graduating.

Don't get me wrong, I don't hole myself up in my house in Sunderland and just study the writings of Du Bois for days on end, but I still haven't visited the true Zoo.

Below is a list of things that I've never done and don't regret one bit:

• I have never pissed in my roommate's retainer cup.

• I have never puke–surfed on a PVTA bus.

• I have never gotten really drunk at Time Out or frat row.

• I have never found myself lying in the Campus Pond.

• I have never seen a band I truly like at Spring Concert.

• I have never found the need to start a Bowl War when living in Orchard Hill.

• I have never had my stomach pumped at the University Health Services.

• I have never gone cow–tipping or elevator surfing.

Pretty boring, huh? I haven't lived the typical ZooMass life — no keg stands either.

But these past four years have been truly wonderful, even though I may have spent a bit too much time (and energy) at the Collegian. But it's been worth it. Who would have thought that I would evolve from a skinny boy who would only write music reviews about completely obscure bands to the Editorial/Opinion Editor with rather strong political views.

I am still skinny though — some things never change.

Maybe I would have gained a bit more weight had I done at least one keg stand. Oh well, there is always the graduation party with my 87 year–old grandmother Ma Burke!

And kids there are lots of fun activities to do besides keg stands:

• Start a revolution on campus — remember Goodell.

• Take photos of yourself bathing in a tub of fake pot leaves and develop the photos at CVS.

• Square dancing at Seven–O's in Sunderland! Yee–hah!

• Lie face down in the Campus Pond.

• Volunteer! Hey, the government doesn't care about the people, so someone should.

• Hang fake MassPIRG posters all over campus.

• Become a disc jockey at WMUA and help the station revive its progressive side before it changes its call letters to WHMP.

• Write for the Collegian and become rich and famous!

Sorry if this column has little direction — just like my post–graduation life. I haven't even pieced together the fragments of a road map for the rest of my life. So please, no questions about what I want to do with my life.

I feel like a character taken straight out of Linklater's Slacker. No direction. No plan. No resume. No worries. Just plain nothing.

Mom and Dad, sorry I won't be living on Wall Street trading and selling mutual funds like they were baseball cards. I think I would rather go through a slow, painful death than dress up and hang on Wall Street. Exploitation of the less fortunate is simply not my slice of pie.

Thanks to all my friends and professors throughout the last four years — I owe you one big shout–out! Hopefully you all know who you are.

Mike Burke is now a former Collegian columnist. At press time, he is still skinny.

There! I said it

As one of the few who make it through college in four years, I'm heaving a sigh of relief while gasping for air thinking about the "real world." After reading the graduation issue of the Collegian for the past three years, I find it difficult to avoid falling into the same trite trap of nostalgia coupled with bleak outlooks on the future. I don't have the answers — In fact, I think I am beginning to have more questions, but I give pretty good advice and I'm devoting my final Collegian column to passing on a little wisdom.

I have always vowed that I would never subscribe to the trend of writing a column in the list format of which many Collegian columnists are fond. But frankly, I have nothing left — I'm all tapped out in the advent of finals. Bottom line — I am tired. I hope you enjoy the following litany of stellar advice with the fewest cliches possible:

• Be proud of your school. Though my years here have been filled with self-deprecating humor about the University, I am pretty damn proud of this place. (Granted, seeing "UMass diploma" written on a bathroom stall next to the toilet paper was a little disheartening.)

• Take a history class with Steven B. Oates. He's the man. (Not to be confused with The Man — which would be a bad thing; rather, Oates is The Man). His dramatic presentation of the past is a performance art, transporting students to another era. Until I took the standing–room–only History 491, I had never seen a lecture hall full of students show up for every class, some of whom aren't even registered for the class but are captivated by the subject and the professor's passion for it. Until this semester, I had never seen a professor weep about a subject he has been teaching for years, presenting it as though it were the first time he ever taught it. Until last week, I had never seen a class thank a professor with a standing ovation.

• Eliminate "should've," "could've" and "would've" from your vocabulary.

• On wintery weekend nights, as you stagger home from the Puffton Village/Hobart Lane area, you may be tempted to rest on the "hot box" in Northeast. As the resident hypochondriac, I advise against it. Not just because heat emanating from the ground suspiciously resembles a portal to hell, but because the "hot box" lives right next door to a building labeled "Experimental Lab." I don't know— what's that word I'm looking for?... Carcinogen! Enough said.

• If you see someone at a party without a beer, mind your own business. Asking them to drink is as annoying as if someone asked you not to.

• As a copy editor and a stickler for grammar, I beg you to represent yourself better as a college student and learn the basics. Learn the difference between "its" and "it's"; "their" and "there"; and "to," "two" and "too." Most importantly, the word, "myself," is usually an indirect object— it is never used as a subject. For example:

"Missy, Odessa and myself were harassed by tow truck guys and were denied police protection when they arrived on the scene." This statement has a commonly incorrect use of "myself." This is more recognizably incorrect when the story continues to use "myself" as the subject: "Myself was almost arrested for assaulting a police officer when myself lost my Irish temper."

The story should read: "Missy, Odessa and I were harassed by tow truck guys and were denied police protection when they arrived on the scene. I was almost arrested for assaulting a police officer when I lost my Irish temper."

• "Can't" is a four–letter word.

• Always introduce your cleverly nicknamed friends by their real names. Nicknames are tricky and can be embarrassing when improperly communicated. For example, once I introduced "Strapcat" to my friend, Carrie, who later addressed him as "Strap–on," a faux pas that could have been avoided if I had said his name was Dave.

Suzanne Barber

Most importantly, nicknames aren't as much their identity as it is your identity for them. It's rude to impose on natural first impressions.

• The Dining Commons are neither dining nor common — discuss.

• Go to Charlie's on Monday nights for 10–cent mozzarella sticks. How good is that? I thought it was really good until I realized sticks are fried cheese. I mean, it's cheese and then they fry it. That can't be good for you.

• If you find yourself talking about other people's lives more than your own, yours isn't interesting enough and you should work on that. There! I said it.

• In college, you will finally come to the realization that your parents are human beings... from another planet. No, seriously, when your parents ask you for advice, it is a crippling mixture of feeling helpless because the people you have always counted on suddenly count on you and feeling joy and shock that they finally respect your opinion.

• Enough with the spring protests! I appreciate a good cause, but if you've ever heard the story of the boy who cried wolf, you'd know that your message is beginning to fall on deaf ears. Figure out what's important and prioritize.

• "Question everything. College is not knowledge, it's a business." I don't remember who said this but I know it was one of the performers from Spring Concert '95. I have no idea why I remember it, but it makes sense and it's a lot more printable than anything said by this year's headliner, Redman.

Thank you, everybody, goodnight! Tip your waitress at the door. Try the salad — It's great. The 9:30 show's entirely different from the 7:30 show.

Suzanne Barber is a Collegian columnist, class of 1997.

Do you want to write for the Ed/Op page?

As soon as the Fall semester begins, the Ed/Op page will be seeking new, talented writers for a variety of focus columns on topics from science & technology to economics to local race relations. Anyone with an interest is strongly urged to contact Dan Bodah either now or upon first returning at the end of the summer by calling 545-1361 or stopping by our offices in the Campus Center Basement.

~ SENIOR COLUMNISTS OPINION/EDITORIAL PAGE~

Final wrap–up

I have just come from the Textbook Annex — probably for the last time — to pick up my cap and gown. I still can not believe it, I'm graduating. The past four years were a wild ride.

At the end of each semester, I always leave a few columns left undone. However, in the past, I was always able to hold them until next semester. Some of those subjects included the abuse of prescription medicines like antibiotics, Spring Concert and living off campus. Now there are no more semesters left at UMass, so I thought I would sum up a few of these unwritten columns.

I will miss the days when everyone had a voice on this campus

Matthew Wurtzel

I can sum up the prescription medication column in about one sentence. Do not abuse drugs of any kind. OK, I will briefly elaborate. If you abuse antibiotics, then bacteria will become immune to the medicine; so do not abuse them. Let your doctor prescribe them to you — do not play doctor.

Now last spring and this year, I wanted to write columns about the lack of a Spring Concert. Excuse me, I forgot there was a Spring Concert this year, but you would have never known by the number of people who actually turned out. Where did they get these bands? I never heard of them except G. Love. Why Trick Knee? If they wanted a recognizable local band, why not the Mitchells or Tizzy? This year's set did not even try to appeal to varied tastes in music. The last concert, which featured KRS–ONE and Blues Traveller, successfully wooed the students because there was something for everyone. I will miss the days when everyone had a voice on this campus.

Last spring I wanted to write my final column about living off campus. Make no mistake, I love living off campus, and I do not want to discourage any one thinking about moving off to stay in the dorms. However, I think now after two years living off campus, I have some pearls of wisdom for others who have yet to experience the off campus life style.

First, limit the number of people to three, and make sure you all have your own rooms. Next, live close to campus. Do not let the PVTA proponents fool you. Car owners should also entertain living close to campus because gas becomes expensive. I live about six miles from campus, and I basically buy gas once a week — that comes out to $50 per month. Third, I have developed a formula for a fair division of rent if the bed rooms are dramatically unequal in size. The equation goes like this: (square feet of a bedroom)*(total rent/total square feet of all bedrooms). Finally, avoid couples because if they break up, someone ends up on the couch the rest of the semester, or they move an extra bed into your room.

There was one other column I wanted to write, but did not because Evan Young wrote it last week. If you have something to say, and get pissed off by all the columnists or what goes on around campus, then get down to the Collegian's offices in the Campus Center Basement and write.

***

I cannot recall any other unwritten columns. I still have space left to fill, so I thought I would conclude my final column with a few parting thoughts that were not quite column material.

About a month ago, I did not want to leave UMass. I was looking for all sorts of ways to stay on campus without remaining a student. However, I eventually realized that staying on campus for 12 years or more is really pathetic. I can face the real world, unlike others who waste their lives hiding from it.

Finally, I would like to thank all my friends for the good times. I am not going to write all your names because you all know who you are. Those moving away, I will miss you. I will also miss my underclassman friends. Finally I will miss the Collegian, Hillel and the journalism and economics departments. I will remember all the good times.

Matt Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist always and forever...

Things we think, but do not say...

By the time you read this, I'll be gone...

During the course of the past week, you might have looked at me and said, "Hey there, little camper, what's wrong? You've lost that youthful glow, that je ne sais poulet you normally have."

It's true. If you did say that, then odds are you were right. I've felt like I'm done for, like my lines were cut and my role was recast by someone who doesn't share my interpretation of the part.

Last week I turned 23 and next week I'll finish an extended undergraduate career. I'm old and I'm graduating. Pretty soon, I'm going to be something I never imagined myself — an old graduate. Imagine the implications — if I ever get a car, I'm going to have to put on that silly "UMass Alumni" sticker. If I ever move out of Amherst, I'll have to say, "Oh yeah, I'm done school. I used to go to UMass Amherst. Now I don't do anything or go anywhere."

Jeremy Brothers

So I'm not going anywhere, and I'm going to try my hardest to not do anything. Those are the two qualities that I always cherished about being an undergraduate, and the reasons I decided that staying an undergraduate forever wouldn't be a bad idea — then I saw Eric Stoltz ape my life in Kicking and Screaming. Sad and pathetic is one thing, seeing your sad and pathetic life on the big screen brings you back to reality.

I seriously thought staying in school forever would be the answer to all my problems. Not so. This semester, I realized that I'm living in an unnatural environment, sitting in classes surrounded by 17– and 18–year–olds — I'm an outcast who has to shave every day. The other day some 18–year–old asked me after kicking at our Oceanography homework assignment (yeah, I know, I'll get to that in a minute...) and said, "What does 'dissuade' mean?" How am I supposed to answer a question like that? If I tell him, will he ever learn for himself? I shrugged, put on a stupid face and said, "I dunno." He then turned to the schmuck on the other side of him and said, "Hey, what's a Czar?" I jumped in, "One of the rulers of Russia before the revolution in 1917," without looking up. I may be old, but I still know how to amuse myself.

My main tactic in trying to stay in school forever was never getting around to those last few GEN ED requirements that I had been dodging: BS, PS and the Foreign Language Requirement. This was quite possibly the worst idea that I've ever had — yes, even worse than that time I got my '85 Chrysler LeBaron stuck in the swamp in between Orchard Hill and Sylvan after seeing people go off– roading in there. (Sure, they were with trucks, but mine was a lean, mean sedan.) This spring I've supposedly been attending three classes that I've avoided for nine semesters, the names of said classes I shall withhold to protect the innocent instructors who never wanted my un–scientific ass in their classes.

I'm also glad to find that the end of my college career will echo the beginning. Last Friday, one of my professors told me that I had been academically withdrawn according to his updated roster. I proceeded to shuffle from office to office around Whitmore, waiting in lines. I started to get a little weepy, remembering all those precious hours of my youth spent stuck with the women of Whitmore, whose names I always imagined were all either Delores or Helen.

So I can't stay in school forever. I tried. I fought the good fight and I lost. If it's any consolation for those who were rooting for me, I took some classes that I'm pretty happy with and some classes that I'm proud to have taken part of, even though they might seem lame to those unknown with the material (God knows my mother never understood the practicality of them) — "Hans Christian Andersen;" "Beowulf: Introduction to Old English;" and "Climatology, Epidemiology and Demography" amongst them.

I've gotten all those sappy obligatory "senior memories" out of the way, I can thank all the people who made my senior year in Arts Edition so much fun:

• The I.R.A. — Oh, those rascally Irish. If my people really threw frosted marshmallows instead of bombs, then we'd never have The Devil's Own. So I have to be thankful. The uproar that Adam Levine's review caused brought a new dimension to those unknown with the "Letters to the Editor" column. I still don't exactly understand the controversy that the review caused. In fact, my theory lies that if you simply mention the I.R.A., you'll get a plethora of crap letters to the editor — no matter what position the original piece took.

• The UMass Theater Guild — These people shook up the Collegian offices like no other group beforehand. Unfortunately, they shook up the Collegian business office. Most people don't understand that the people who deal with business and classifieds sit out front. Alex Iglesias' review of "The Heidi Chronicles" brought down a lot of people screaming and crying about its unfair stance. Little did they know that the people they were yelling at don't write for the paper — for that matter it's a rare occasion when they even read the stinker.

• A Certain Group Which Shall Remain Nameless — Okay, I'll admit it — I'm afraid of this religion which has many actors and actresses defending it and is currently being persecuted by a certain Teutonic country. (Can you tell I'm trying to make sure they don't find this piece on the Internet?) They managed to harangue our e–mail address with letters to the editor to the point where we didn't know which way was which. Thankfully, we finally got our heads "cleared."

So that's it. I've thanked, I've vented and I've mocked. It's time to begin the next scene.

Jeremy Brothers is a Collegian columnist.

The truth about my new dream job

In 1979, my family and I emigrated from India to Canada. I was enrolled in the local public school and along with my family, had to deal with the harsh realities of trying to adjust to a new country while trying to learn two languages, French Canadian and English. I did learn some English in the country of my birth because India was under British occupation. At this place, I was able to learn some of the her majesty's English under the remnants of British Colonialism.

Raghuram Vadarevu

During my high school years, my life was not the greatest, but I did find a love for horses and the great Canadian wilderness. I remember once, during my sophomore year, my school was graced by the presence of Sgt. Pierre Boutreau of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. From that time on, I, being a Canadian citizen, wanted to become a member of the glorious Mounties.

Now, in less than 11 days I will be riding on the back of a horse in the Canadian wilderness fulfilling my dream of becoming a Mountie. You see, early last Thursday morning, I was called by Sgt. Francois De Ritier, who informed me of my acceptance into my dream job.

I worked very hard for my five years at UMass, studying, working on improving my horse back riding skills, being active in the community and working at the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. I have held positions from the Multicultural Affairs Co–Editor to Copy Editor.

I also held the masochistic position of Associate News Editor, covering the ridiculously boring meetings of the University of Massachusetts Student Government Association. Imagine spending every Wednesday night at 7 p.m. listening to the rants of those wannabe politicians (especially the rants of the Republicans — or should I say the Pro–Student Caucus?).

In a little more than 264 hours, I will be receiving my degree in journalism and a minor in biology. This UMass education has, needless to say, prepared me for the position this writer has secured in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Now that I have achieved what I have always wanted, I would like to reflect what I have learned. Working at the Collegian has given me an interesting perspective on the power of printed words on the pages of newspapers and media in general. Words, once written, become the "truth." Unfortunately, most people don't care or question whether or not the words they are reading are true and whether or not the sources are credible.

The American media, supposedly the watchdog of the government and the money interests, are now (if not always) under the leash of multinational corporations and the U.S. government, whose only interest is furthering their free market capitalist agenda. Their truths and propaganda make it to the front page of every newspaper in the country, while the truth about the Gulf War, the Palestinian struggle for fundamental human rights and statehood, and the real causes of the horrendous conditions which people all over the world are enduring are consistently ignored.

That is what I have learned thus far in my life. And if you have read this far into this column you would have learned some truths about me: that there are less than 264 hours until graduation of the Class of 1997; I have worked at the Collegian during my college career; my family is from India; and that I am now employed by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (or is that just this writer's version of the truth?).

Raghuram Vadarevu is a Collegian columnist who is not from Canada, but once visited Niagara Falls in 1990.

Toppling the status quo

Three years the Collegian have taught me, why more than ever, I must participate in the struggle of people of color in the United States and the Third World. Not only because it is a just thing to do, but also because there are way too many people here who participate actively on the other side.

Lisa Chiu

Yes, the other side. The side that wants to maintain the status quo; the side that withholds information; the side that can only criticize on the number of graduate students writing at the Collegian rather than the content of their articles; the side that by doing absolutely nothing causes harm.

They will call us Communists, chauvinists, racists and anti–Semitics. But what we really are just a few people who want to uncover the truth, who believe that the struggles of the Tupac Amaru, the Black Panther Party, the Sandinistas, SNCC, the Zapitistas, the Red Guard, the American Indian Movement, SDS, Hamas and all the other struggles for equality in this world were not fought in vain. And while leaders may be assassinated and movements may infiltrated, the spirit of the movement, the energy of the leaders are still among us.

In September I leave this country that I have known my whole life to travel back to Asia, where up until my parents left it, my ancestors had lived for thousands of years. I will finally leave this oppressive and domineering place to join the majority of the world, the majority of the world's people of color — the Third World.

The reason why we are so "militant," or why we don't report on the shiny happy elements of being a person of color in the United States (this is to the guy who suggested that I write about positive Chinese cultural aspects rather than criticize a Marxism conference which excluded talk of Chinese socialism) is because there is nothing in this world that is shiny and happy, which global domination of this world by the First World has not corrupted or wiped–out.

Colonization and occupation are the main characteristics of Third World countries. Continents cut up, nations torn apart, divide and conquer, rape and murder at the hands of the colonizers are stories all too familiar to the Third World.

And while decolonization has made significant changes in the world, repercussions of it or neo–colonization by governments and big business have taken its place. Sex trafficking of girls in the Phillipines and Thailand; Koreans treated as second–class citizens in Japan; sanctions against Iraq which have murdered 500,000–plus children; useless military occupation in Okinawa which results in hundreds of violent acts and rapes; the divide and conquer tactics in Rwanda's history which created fertile ground for its current civil war... the list is endless.

So when people ask why we keep stressing the plight of the Palestinians, I answer, because nowhere else will you find a worse case of old–school colonization, the kind most countries have gotten rid of, than in Palestine. Soldiers with guns, checkpoints, passbooks, raids — even South Africa has seen the err of its ways, but Palestine remains taken, by Israel, by Zionists and by European and American aid.

Why are we belligerent? Because if we stop this fight, if we follow the ways of our government and our press and censor the truth, we might as well have pulled the trigger. The blood is on everyone's hands who does not speak up. I wish everyone who is so quick to criticize the Diversity Pages had seen what Robert Fiske, foreign correspondent of the London Independent saw a year ago:

"Qana — It was a massacre... The Lebanese refugee women and children and men lay in heaps, their hands or arms or legs missing, beheaded or dismembowelled... A baby lay without a head. The Israeli shells had scythed through them as they lay in the United Nations shelter, believing the last they were safe under the world's protection."

"Israel's slaughter of civilians in this terrible 10–day offensive — 206 by last night — has been so cavalier, so ferocious, that not a Lebanese will forgive this massacre."

— Robert Fisk, April 1996.

Lisa Chiu, Developing Nations Editor and former Multicultural Affairs Editor is a Collegian columnist and will be studying in Vietnam and China her senior year.

The blurry lines of college

How can I not be cliche? How can I sum up the last four years of my life in a small column that will be tossed away tomorrow?

This column is really strange for me because it is my last column, but it is also a first for me in a way. Previously I have just submitted when I had an idea, never been on a schedule down here. But here I am a senior columnist, and they tell me I have one last space that will be held for me in the last paper of the year. I can't choke, I gotta come up big...

Jeremy Hurewitz

But where should I start? College isn't one big tangible chunk of experience where you arrive as a dumb freshman and leave an erudite graduate. It's the experiences that fall between the cracks that carve our identity. Bad love affairs and life–changing, near–death hangovers have had just as much effect on me as any course, though I choose to think about the latter stuff in a much more pleasant light than the former.

I suppose you can basically break down college into two wings from which the entire experience can be included: studying and partying.

Looking back over college I gotta say I feel like I got a top–notch education. I worked hard in my major with great professors and even one Pulitzer Prize winner to shape my degree into something that is not just a piece of paper on my wall. This is what I've found to be the secret of getting a good education at a large university like UMass: active participation in your major. If you just take the required courses and get by, you'll get an education. But if you seek out professors and use the resources that the University has to offer, you'll get so much more.

If you take advantage of the University, your education can go way beyond the classroom. I was in the fourth row when Allen Ginsberg read "Howl" so packed FAC. I got to ask Richard Linklater what he thinks about Oliver Stone and the way the media has reacted to violence in film. I've traveled around Europe and been to nearly every major landmark on the continent, meeting interesting people and partying along the way.

Oh, did I say partying? In college these lines get blurred very easily. Yes, I went to the Van Gogh museum in Amsterdam, but I had just smoked a big hash bomber with some Italian girls right before. How many of you have studied with a six–pack or been to class stoned? College is all about crossing lines drawn in the sand and evaluating it later.

Am I going anywhere with this? I'm not sure. Should I talk about that time back in J. A. when I got drunk on red wine and my hair caught on fire in the bedlam of dorm chaos? It seems so long ago. Or how about that time in Van Meter I got into a massive argument with a close friend and got super–drunk and wound up with a black–eye from my roommate? Just humor me here, I'm getting nostalgic.

Yeah, it's been a great time. Faces, names and places are blurring into vague memory as I write final papers and take final (and I finally mean final) exams. These last days are really odd. I keep thinking about the past and the future and I get the feeling that life is going in slow–motion and fast–forward at the same time.

So graduation is in 11 days. The family will be up and everybody will be proud — me included — but I'll also be drunk. I hear the graduation ceremony can get a little rowdy. I heard some story about a dude grabbing an old lady and giving her a big sloppy kiss until security came by and restrained the excited graduate. I hear some people bust out champagne and smoke fatties right out in the field there. Well smoke 'em if you got em, boys and girls, we're outta here!

Jeremy Hurewitz is a Collegian columnist and one hell of a party animal.

Hate & health services revisited

Well, it's hard to believe that I am writing my final column for the Collegian. The four years I have spent here at UMass have literally gone by faster than I ever imagined possible. Like most college seniors, I have made friendships that will last a lifetime, and I have vivid memories of the time I spent here.

Given more time, there are a plethora of issues I would have liked to write about, on attitudes and comments I have witnessed around campus. So for my final column, I'll mention just a few.

Lisa M. Oliveri

First, the anti–Semitism and other forms of hatred, all disguised in the catch phrase multiculturalism, drive me crazy! Multiculturalism should be an expression and appreciation of all races and ethnicities, but instead acts as a cop–out term at the University with the sole intent of perpetuating prejudices and stereotypes.

Even after the Goodell takeover, which I don't fully agree with, I've yet to see students actually act together to find common ground. Instead this campus thrives on finger pointing and name calling. When any given person doesn't get what they want, whether it be front page coverage in the Collegian or funding for a group, the term racist is shouted and accusations fly. My senior advice — If we continue to turn everything into a race issue, then the term racism will lose its overall value. Maybe it's time people realized that racism is not at the root of all campus problems.

Last week I was reading The Voice, the graduate student "newspaper," or so they'd like it to be called, and never before have I seen such a lack of objective and responsible reporting. The one–sided, poorly written propaganda the horribly misinformed writers (or is it writer?) try to pass off as journalism is pathetic. Maybe it's just me, but can Israel be attacked anymore in that paper?

More senior advice — try and write some balanced articles, or at least some with value, then maybe you'll get more funding. If you are going to try and produce a newspaper, or the closest thing you can to one, try and be real journalists. And I'll give you a hint: real journalists will never run a list of people's names with insulting and childish definitions. Down here at the Collegian, we call stuff like that libel.

Another thing that bothered me is the constant attack on University Health Services. Many of the stories I hear are often blown way out of proportion. To the gentlemen who wrote of his experience at Urgent Care, saying that all the staff was concerned about was insurance, stop and think for a second. Maybe the personnel at Urgent Care just wanted to make sure you would not have to pay a huge bill at Cooley– Dickinson before you were sent there. You see the situation and the people involved as incompetent. I see it as concerned.

The people who work at UHS are a dedicated and devoted group of individuals who work 24 hours a day, 365 days a year to provide you with medical services. Everyone takes for granted the fact that they can come in at two in the morning to get stitches after a bar room brawl or antibiotics for an ear infection. Trust me, you would wait a hell of a lot longer if you went to the Emergency Room, as well as pay a lot of money.

Before I came to UMass, I went to a private university that only ran a health clinic from 8 a.m.–5 p.m., Monday through Friday. So when one night I had an allergic reaction, I had to go to the nearest hospital by ambulance, pay a huge bill and wait a long time, which is an example of something that Urgent Care can take care of.

Even more senior advice — before you complain the next time, think about how bad you would be if UHS wasn't there. You'd be begging this University for a facility which would provide the exact services they provide now. Don't take Urgent Care for granted; instead, try and appreciate them.

And finally, these four years have been a wonderful experience for me. Try and focus on the positive aspects of UMass, rather than the negative. True, things may not always go your way. After all, it took three years and my father had to be unemployed for over a year for me to receive financial aid, but I still can't hold any animosity toward this school.

UMass is still cheaper than private institutions, and the education I receive here is far better than anything I would have gotten at my former $24,000 a year university. Don't spend too much time complaining, because you'll find the time goes by too quickly, and you'll look back and wonder where the good time went. Four years seems like a long time, but it's not.

Cherish the time you spend with friends, drinking uptown, hanging out in dorm rooms, finding an off–campus apartment, eating at the DC — even pulling an all–nighter or finishing off a 20–page paper five minutes before class — because before you know it, they'll all be memories.

Lisa M. Oliveri is a former Collegian columnist and will miss Sunderland forever.

Arts & Living

Wenesday, May 14, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Local group takes on many genres

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

THE CLOUDY SATCHEL
The Money Blues
Cider Records

The University of Massachusetts has always had, and still has, much musical talent on its campus. From alternative acts like The Pixies and Dinosaur Jr. who have "hit it big," to more centralized local acts like Bongos To Circus (in the late '80s and early '90s), Synaesthesia (in the mid–'90s) and, more recently, Hallraker, Trick Knee, The New Life and The Cloudy Satchel, area bands have been raising brows around the valley.

The Cloudy Satchel is a band centered around one Jimmy Connors. Connors, a UMass student well known in the music department by world–famous jazz theory professors and professional jazz musicians Yusef Lateef and Archie Shepp has teamed up with a number of lineups for the forthcoming debut CD by The Cloudy Satchel, The Money Blues. The title is drawn from the final track on the record, a tumultuous Shepp tune that is re–done by Shepp with help from Connors on guitar (his focus instrument, but he also sings), and a multitude of percussionists, vocalists and horn players drawing from bands like Mocha Java and Synaesthesia. Shepp's vocals and fine tenor sax playing are featured to full effect.

Also on The Money Blues are blues–rock, as well as "hippie" tunes like "Daydreamin' Blues," "Passerby" and "Gentle" that all have a summer–ish feel to them. Connors is not going to be known for his singing, though. He often seems to sing a little too flat, and his lyrics too often reflect traditional hippie philosophies, especially the "be gentle to yourself" theme of "Gentle."

However, once Connors steps away from the microphone and starts picking at his guitar, he can guide the listener through some truly motivating territory. On the studio take of "Gentle" (there's also a live version here as well) and "Blend," he is joined by his regular rock band consisting of Dave Hayes on bass and Amy "Biz" Bisiewicz on drums, as well as B.J. O'Reilly, who is the keyboard foundation of Synaesthesia's ambitious sound.

Connors also dabbles in fusion, a sub–genre of jazz which blends rock and funk into jazz theory and sounds. Besides "Money Blues," which can be described as fusion–ish, there is also a version of Thelonious Monk's classic "Well, You Needn't," featuring Connors on the piano's evil twin, the Fender Rhodes. The Rhodes' subtle, yet biting, electric piano sound was a trademark of '70s fusion (with Chick Corea probably having been its best player), and even pop sometimes (such as Leo Sayer's ballad "When I Need You").

There is a little international flavor to Money Blues also, with the light samba of "Wishing Well" (featuring UMass music dept. professors Michael Dessen on trombone and Chris Merz on tenor sax and flute, as well as Connors, Hayes and drummer Doug Reneri). The open sound of Connors on Rhodes and Juan E. Cruz on the chirimilla, a double reed flute native to Latin America, is featured in the song, "El Cuerpo y La Madera."

Money Blues is to be a nice addition to the local CD archives. Connors, despite his singing drawbacks, has a good open mind, and knows where to look for the sounds that will grab a listener.

COURTESY UMASS THEATRE DEPT

The Cast for "Sharps," appearing this weekend at the Hampden Theatre: L–R (Standing) — Samuel Bass, Kimberly Hopkins, Brett Mallory, Ingrid Askew, Khalil Reed. Jesus MacLane is kneeling (missing — Rick Gordon).

"Sharps" by Pruitt runs at Hampden

By Tricia Van Winkle
Collegian Correspondent

The two–act play "Sharps," by Springfield African American playwright Wilma Pruitt is coming May 16, 17, and 18 to the University of Massachusetts' Hampden Theater.

"Sharps" is a "humorous insight" about the African American life in Pruitt's own hometown during the 1940s. The play, set in rural Alabama, is a drama based on the adventures and misadventures of Dock (played by Brett Mallory) and Bubba (Kalil Reed). The two men are "moonshiners, hustlers, and pool hall sharps," and respect and support each other. The third character is Stonewall (Samuel R. Bass), a bitter man who has much harbored pain and is seeking revenge. Rounding out the cast is Pinky, (Kimberly N. Hopkins), Dock's girlfriend. The play has a nasty rivalry between Dock and Stonewall for Pinky's affection.

Pruitt is not new to the area. She founded the Mustard Seed Theater Company in Springfield in 1988. She is the author of six plays and is the mother of a teenage daughter.

Ingrid C. Askew is the director of "Sharps;" Larry Novakav Lawlor is the set designer; theater major Jesus MacLean is the stage manager; UMass intern David Polanzak is the production manager; Damien Stevens is the Artistic Director, with UMass intern Melissa Lovallo assisting, and Herschel Shohan is the Playwrights–In– Progress Executive Director.

The play is being brought to UMass by the Amherst–based theater company Playwrights–In–Progress. The company is now in its fifth year. It features original scripts by area playwrights in readings and full productions. "Sharps" is the end of the spring season which also included "Thank You, Dear" by Northfield playwright Lynne Warrin and Meg Peterson of New Jersey.

Sharps will run May 16, 17, and 18. It will be appearing at the Hampden Theatre at the University of Massachusetts at 8 p.m. all three nights. Tickets will be $7. Following Friday's premiere performance, there will be a reception with the cast.

Arts Staff picks their highlights...

All right, we're tired of you all pretending you don't give a rat's ass what we down here at the Collegian really think. So we decided to give you what we thought of this semester in music and film. After all, we know you all secretly worship us. That said...

Jeremy Brothers
Arts & Living Editor

Sometime last year, my friend told me that sports reporter Bob Ryan sees around 80 movies a year. I sneered, claiming that I must see more movies than any silly sports reporter. Starting Jan. 1, I began recording in a little notebook I keep next to my pillow all the movies I see in the theater. I'm up to 41 this year. With that in mind, my best and worst list goes as follows...

BEST

1. Chasing Amy — Kevin Smith seems to have finally gotten the critical respect he deserves, and I'm pretty happy about it. Amy is the conclusion to "White Trash Trilogy" that Smith started with Clerks and Mallrats. Enough has been said about Ben Affleck, Joey Lauren Adams and Jason Scott Lee; the supporting actor who needs to be praised from this film is the hilarious Dwight Ewell. He deftly portrays the gay author of "White Hatin' Coon," who proports to be a militant Black Power activist in order to sell his comic book.

Runners up:

1.) The Fifth Element — A science fiction film that is not afraid to be silly or an epic. I saw it yesterday and I'm still giddy. If Luc Besson died tomorrow, he'd have left a legacy in my book. Bruce Willis, Bruce Shmillis — the real star of this film is Besson's skills as a writer and director.

2) Hamlet — Kenneth Branagh not only assembled a cast worthy of an Irwin Allen film, he updated the story of the melancholy Dane and created a cinema event by refusing to cut any of Shakespeare's original text.

3) Sling Blade — Billy Bob Thornton has already been honored by the Academy for his screenwriting achievements. That's great, but it's a real shame that his portrayal of Karl was ignored, because it remains in my mind one of the most superb roles in recent memory.

The Worst:

1) Crash: What the hell was going on here? There are few moments where I'm really glad that my mother isn't

Turn to BEST, page 7

Summer Employment Opportunities at Abt. Associates, Inc.

Research Interviewers

If you are seeking full or part–time employment, check out the following opportunities at Abt Associates Inc.:

- ✔ Flexible schedule to meet your needs
- ✔ Professional and supportive work environment
- ✔ Competitive wages with regular increases starting at $6.75 with paid training
- ✔ Benefits package including health and dental

If you have good communication skills with some computer experienc (a plus but not required), a minimum of 20 hours available per week, THIS COULD BE THE JOB FOR YOU!

For more information and to arrange a personal interview call:

1–800–792–4514
An Equal Opportunity Employer

The Right Decision Is Abt Associates, Inc.

The Coffee Shop will be open late during exam week offering a late night breakfast for students studying for finals.

OMELET
Bacon or Sausage, Home Fries, Toast & Coffee
$3.95
Special is available from 9:00pm 'til Midnight. May 15 - 22, 1997

Good luck with your finals and have a great summer!

COURTESY IAN GITTLER

Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise, part of the Funk Festival Sunday at Look Park, will get your feet moving to the beat.

Parker, NYC trio play Funk Fest

By Jean Sienkewicz
Collegian Staff

Here's a riddle: blue skies above your head, sun shining on your skin, grass soft and cool beneath your feet, and you're dancing all pre–finals week tension away. Where are you?

Spring Concert? Nope. Hartford Meadows lawn seats, your face one in a sea of many? Uh–uh. Think locally. No, not Amherst's town common either. Try this weekend's super– duper Funk Fest at Northampton's Look Park on May 17.

Funk Fest, produced by the Pioneer Valley's own Jordi Herold, showcases three dazzlingly talented musical acts that promise, by the end, to leave the audience breathless, sweaty, exhausted and stress–free. Guaranteed.

Why? Five words: Medeski, Martin, Wood, Maceo Parker. Did your pulse just quicken? Medeski, Martin and Wood, as well as elsewhere across the country, have made a name for themselves here in the Valley. With MMW's unique blend of funk, hip–hop, reggae and blues infused into a central jazz core, their shows are at once danceable and provocative, intelligent and visceral, and appeal to both older jazz fans and young "tourheads" alike. Rather than limiting themselves to strictly–jazz venues, MMW have established themselves as a group of hard–working musicians and a touring band, with a groove/improvisational–minded stage presence right out of the rock 'n' roll scene.

Born from New York City's "downtown" music scene, John Medeski's keyboards, Billy Martin's infectious percussion, and the bass of Chris Wood have been likened to Jimmy Smith's soulful organ jazz, the cosmic voyages of Sun Ra and '70s–era Miles Davis. And after four albums (Shack–Man is the latest, released by Gramavision last October), tons and tons of sold–out gigs, and absolutely explosive high–energy live shows, MMW has taken the country by storm. They are an alterna–jazz band that must be seen to be believed.

Maceo Parker, like MMW, needs little description. Perhaps best known as one of the founding fathers of funk and formerly the James Brown Band's prime saxophonist, Parker is also notable for his long–term work with George Clinton, Bootsy Collins and the various conglomerations of musicians that have made up Parliament and P–Funk. Self–described as "2 percent jazz and 98 percent funky stuff," Maceo delivers a hard–hitting, impossible–to–resist–the–urge–to–boogie mix of steamy jazz, R&B and driving funk grooves.

It is his sax in the James Brown Band that's been listened to for over 25 years (and has made him the most sampled horn in history). Also like MMW, Parker has been touring extensively, hitting the Valley several months ago with as much power as a dynamite–driven steam locomotive, and collaborating in the meantime with such artists as De La Soul, Rod Stewart, Bryan Ferry and Dave Koz. As "the unchallenged holder of the funky sax solo patent," Parker has been linked to the horn greats: Coleman, Byrd and Coltrane. There's absolutely no doubt about it — this Saturday Parker is gonna rock the house.

Opening for the two bands is a lesser–known, though no less notable group of musicians: Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise. As the Detroit News Colendar says, "You can take the musician out of the streets, but you can't take the streets out of the musician." And it's virtually impossible to ignore the aspect of Bradley's rumbling, raspy, classic R&B style vocals and the earthy feel and scat rhythms of his band's playing that culminated from Bradley's roots. He has logged more than 20 years performing and passing the hat around on Detroit street corners. Fronted by the talented Bradley, a 46–year–old blind singer/songwriter, Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise tosses at typically receptive audiences their sound, an improvisational, street–style lead followed by backing that's a sweet mix of traditional rock n' roll, Motown, swamp boogie–vibe and soul.

All in all, this Saturday's Funk Festival promises to be an all–out grand old time. It'll be a day to dance your cares away and enjoy all that this good life has to offer.

Tickets for the Funk Music Festival (held rain or shine) at the Pines Theater in Northampton's Look Park this Saturday, May 17, are available in advance for $20 at the Northampton Box Office or by calling (413) 586–8686. No pets or coolers allowed. Food will be sold on–site by local restaurants.

■ best

continued from page 6

around when I'm reviewing a movie, but this is one. It's an embarrassment for Cronenberg, who never seemed to feel the need to be this "artsy" before, and it's an embarrassment for me who took someone to see it with me.

2) Vegas Vacation: The film proved that Chevy Chase has gotten unfunnier with age and that sequels of popular films will still draw in the crowds.

3) Anaconda: The sad thing is, it's not really that bad. The film is endemic to a system where films that pack enough people and so–called "thrills" into them, then they'll make more than their share of money.

This semester was wonderful because of the Collegian staff as a whole. Thank you for playing with me. I laughed. I laughed some more, and then I laughed the tiniest bit more. So with that said, I'd like to close my semester with something that Yoko Ono once said to Malcolm X in a cafe in Venice, "The food's not that great, but the waiter's a riot..."

John Hendrickson
Arts Associate

Best Album: Redd Kross' Show World (Mercury). Runner up: Blur's Blur (Virgin). However, Radiohead's new album, O.K. Computer, is due out July 1 and I'm sure that will blow away everything else released this year.

Worst Album: Eight Arms To Hold You–, Veruca Salt. Aside from the ace single, "Volcano Girls," this album completely, unequivocally, sucks. Runner up: Matthew Sweet, Blue Sky On Mars. Musically O.K., but the most boring album I've heard all year.

Best Live Show: Social Distortion at Tuxedo Junction, Danbury, Conn. A truly awe–inspiring display of punk attitude and guitar overload. Rawkin', man. Runners up: Descendents at Pearl St. and Cheap Trick at the Mullins Center.

Worst Live Show: Breeders, Pearl St. Nothing really good to say about this one at all.

Thankyouverymuch. Adios.

Adam Levine
Arts Associate

So here it is, the best and worst of the spring season. We've laughed, we've cried and we've been entertained and painfully bored. In my, once again, so humble opinion, here is the ultimate movie list.

And the Winner is...

The Fifth Element

Luc Besson's beautifully haunting vision of the future foretold within the context of the ultimate battle for good. Bruce Willis stars as the humble hero vying for the affection of the fifth element, which is none other than the "perfect being," played by Milla Jovovich. On the side of evil is Gary Oldman, who at any cost will fight to admit the entity of destruction to omit all life in our dimension. The Fifth Element is the most thought–provoking and satisfying sci–fi adventure since Blade Runner.

The Runners up are...

1. Shine — The heroic, yet disturbing tale of the life of musical prodigy David Helfgott, who was ultimately driven insane as a result of his father's overbearing protectiveness.

2. Sling Blade — A sensitive film describing a mentally challenged individual's attempt to rejoin society after 25 years in an institution.

3. Star Wars Trilogy rerelease — Finally, the chance to see three of the most exciting movies of all time digitally enhanced with new surprises.

4. Donnie Brasco — Mike Newell's inside look at an FBI agent's infiltration of a notorious mob family, centering on the relationship between the agent (Johnny Depp) and the mob's underappreciated hitman (Al Pacino).

The bottom of the barrel are as follows :

1. The Saint — Perhaps the stupidest film of the decade, thus far.

2. Beverly Hills Ninja — An hour and a half of Chris Farley making fat jokes about himself.

3. Crash — Not necessarily a bad film from a certain point of view. Yet David Cronenberg could have made a powerful statement here, but rather resides on mere shock value.

Well that's it from me this semester. Thanks to the rest of the staff for their help and support and special thanks to all those wonderful leters to the editor I received from my adoring fans.

Joshua Boyd
Arts Associate

Turn to BEST, page 10

IRON HORSE

ALL AGES
ALL THE TIME

thursday, may 15, 7 pm • $10 adv.
PATTY GRIFFIN
CONTEMPORARY SINGER/SONGWRITER
JULIE ADENUGA

thursday, may 15, 11 pm • $10 adv.
PORK TORNADO
art rock, funk • synthesized percussion

friday, may 16, 7 pm • $21 adv.
LEON RUSSELL
powerhouse piano with clapton, dylan, & stones

friday, may 16, 10 pm, $5 adv.
FAT BAG
FUNCTIONAL LOONACY
TRIP HOP FUNK

saturday, may 17, 10 pm, $6 adv.
big GERANIUMS
JUMP LITTLE CHILDREN
Irish rock & acoustic funk from SC

Graduation Party!!
STARS OF
The COMMITMENTS
Saturday, May 24
TWO SHOWS AT 7&10 pm
Special dinner menu served at both shows

monday, may 26, 8:30 pm
MAGNIFICENT SEVEN TOUR
MARK EITZEL, TUATARA, MINUS 5 triple bill of SUPERgroups • $14 adv.

[illegible] FROM GOOD HOMES
[illegible] OMBUTTRUE EDISON
[illegible] Gregory & Friends
[illegible] Rugburns
TICKETS [illegible] Record or Ray's Northampton • OH [illegible] 586 8686
24 HOUR CONCERT INFO
413 584 6[illegible]

Give the Student Association Your Opinion on

THE HONORS COLLEGE

Visit our web site at http://www.umass.edu/rso/sga or email us at scera@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Attention!! Cancellation Fee Information

Don't Duck the Issue! While there is still time!!

If you are moving off campus;
If you've found an apartment and you know there is no way you'll return to the residence halls next fall, cancel your housing assignment before July 9, 1997 and pay no fee. If you cancel between July 10, 1997 and August 1, 1997 you will be charged a $50.00 cancellation fee. If you cancel on or after August 2, 1997m, you will be charged a $100.00 cancellation fee.

Questions?
Do you still have questions?
Give us a call...
Housing Assignment Office 545-2100
TTY 545-0327

HOUSING ASSIGNMENT OFFICE
HOUSING SERVICES

Senior Superlatives '97

Alycia Hines • Business Manager

Most likely to be mistaken for a "Beanie Baby" and sold in a local Sears

Most likely to answer a telephone with a 10-minute introduction

Matthew Wurtzel • Columnist

Most likely to unknowingly wed a member of the IRA

Suzanne Barber • Columnist

Most likely to dryly, subtly insult you without your being aware of the affront

Raghuram Vadarevu • Multicultural Affairs Editor

Most likely to tell her grandchildren about the "good ole Graphics days"

Lorraine Urbanski • Night Production Supervisor

Most likely to still be driving his mother-whale of an automobile five years from now

Eric Remillard IV • Finance Manager

Kathryn Gracia • Advertising Graphic Designer

Most likely to forever tower over most of the chumps who hit on her

Most likely to boast to Craig Brody on a daily basis if he makes more money than him

Nelson Ferreira • Account Executive

Mike Burke • Ed/Op Editor

Most likely to be asked if he's really from New Jersey when he makes it in L.A.

Craig Brody • Advertising Manager

Most likely to play "Kramer" in the "Seinfeld" movie

John Hendricson • Collumnist

Most likely to take over the free world in a very, very cordial manner

Poh-Yng Wong • Account Executive

Most likely to get arrested at a pro-Marilyn Manson rally

Lisa Oliveri • Sports

Most likely to have her apartment tapped by mysterious government agencies (or at least believe she's bugged)

Lisa Chiu • Developing Nations Editor

Most likely to flirt until his tongue gets numb

Bob Dunn • Columnist

Most likely to revere a woefully unknown indie band

Most likely to root for an AFC team no matter how many consecutive Super Bowls they lose

Jacob W. Michaels • Editor-in-chief

Most likely to permanantly vacate the Pioneer Valley five minutes after graduation

Kamali Thornell • Advertising Graphic Designer

Most likely to miss the office picture session:

Scott Sisun ..... Account Executive
Jeremey Brothers ..... Arts & Living Editor
Antonio Sardinas ..... Account Executive
Kerry Weatherhead ..... Advertising Graphic Designer

Layout by Josh Sylvester • Photos by Thong Vo & Kenneth W.P. Scott

■ best

continued from page 7

What a semester for music it was! I must hand it to the Iron Horse for putting on the best shows over this whole school year, and specifically this semester, from Michael Brecker, Pat Metheny & friends in the first week of school to the nighttime blues of Levon Helm & The Crowmatics near the end of April.

The Iron Horse has overshadowed the other clubs in the Valley by a landslide. While Pearl St. has started to move too much into a genre–specific schedule of punk, hardcore, and alternative, the Horse (which is luckily still around even though two years ago, it was put up for sale and re–opened under new management) have kept their doors open to the finest jazz, rock, blues and folk, as well as alternative and punk. Hats off to the staff of the Iron Horse, and their Advocate "Best Of The Valley Award" for "Best Place For Concerts" is well–deserved.

That said, here are my picks for best CDs from this semester:

1. Alison Krauss & Union Station, So Long, So Wrong (Rounder): Acoustic perfection all through. Krauss' heavenly voice tiptoes atop flowing mandolin, bass, acoustic guitar, banjo and sometimes her own virtuosic fiddle. It is an album that transcends typical bluegrass and hovers above categorization.

2. 13 Featuring Lester Butler (Hightone): Finally, some contemporary electric blues without glossy over–production. This whole album kicks into high gear with real dusty blues–rock.

3. The Complete Tampa Red Bluebird Sessions 1934–36 (BMG): A beautiful two–disc re–issue package of "The Guitar Wizard's" high–howl acoustic blues in small band ensembles (often just Red on guitar and another on piano). The music here is truly timeless, and BMG is to be applauded for giving us the goods in a superb overall product.

4. Buckshot Lefonque — Music Evolution (Columbia): A fine, diverse recording encompassing all the best of urban music in one place. You get rap, R&B, jazz jamming and hard funk all from one revolving band centered around saxophonist Branford Marsalis.

5. John Prine — Live On Tour (Oh Boy!): One of the best lesser–known singer–songwriters in America recorded in intimate music hall appearances. Great music and lyrics abound here.

Best Concert(s): Simple — Bob Dylan, April 15, at John M. Greene Hall (a very chill country–rock affair) and April 19 at University of Hartford Gym (all–out bashing rock, for the most part).

Worst concert: Branford Marsalis at the Iron Horse in February — he just looked like he was not exactly thrilled to be there, and played lazily as such.

Mike Burke
Editorial/ Opinion Editor & former Arts & Living Editor

Best Concerts:

1.) Terrastock Festival in Providence, R.I., April, 25–27. Three days of mindblowing music, focusing on the experimental side of rock featuring Flying Saucer Attack, Bevis Frond, Windy & Carl, Azusa Plane, Bardo Pond, Neutral Milk Hotel, Barbara Manning and lots, lots more. A bit pretentious, yes, but an unforgettable weekend.

2.) Beck at Amherst College

3.) The Ninjas and Pest 5000 at Greenough

4.) The Lillys at Pearl Street

5.) Softies/Pest 5000/Tokidoko at the Middle East

Worst Concert: Pavement at the Roxy in Boston. After driving all the way back to Boston, I caught only the encore of Pavement's recent set. They covered Echo & the Bunnymen — it was no "Forklift."

Jean Sienkewicz
Arts Staff

All right, I admit it. Most of my semester was spent blowing off school for Strangefolk. (I bet you couldn't tell by all the pieces I wrote on them, right?) But I did manage to broaden my horizons a bit and see some other stuff that blew my mind equally as well as any SF show. I'm not lying!

5. Funk Fest (May 17)

Okay, so it hasn't happened yet. But honestly, I've been excited about this show since I bought my ticket a month and a half ago. How can you beat dancing to MMW and Maceo, outdoors? Trust me when I say it's going to be a lot better than just dancing to them in Butterfield Kitchen Sunday mornings.

4. Percy Hill. Butterfield, April 29.

The second of two bigger–name acts from the groove scene to play Butterfield this year, this sparsely–attended show (about 150 people the Saturday night before Easter) was an excellent opportunity to experience Percy Hill, jam masters, at work, up close and personal.

3. Leftover Salmon. Pearl Street, March 25.

Having never seen these Colorado–based acoustic slamgrass musicians before, I came home late that night unexpectedly exhausted from boogieing, along with half of UMass' and Hampshire College's hippie populations, a little too hard.

2. Chucklehead. Iron Horse, May 9.

Having missed their spin around the Valley a few months before, I'm exceedingly glad I was able to catch these guys last week. They are funny! They're smooth and suave, hip– hoppy, funky and jammy. And never, ever in my life have I seen such an outrageous white guy with so much soul.

1. Strangefolk. Butterfield, Jan. 31.

You knew this was coming, but bear with me. Of the 25 Strangefolk shows I've seen this semester, this was one of my favorites. It was the culmination of a lot of hard work by a lot of good people, and in the end it paid off. Four hundred and fifty people crammed into B–field basement, and the SF boys jammed it up to the most attentive crowd at any college they've ever played (They told me so!). I don't think I've stressed out and smiled so much in one single night.

Martin J. Keane
Arts Staff

Best Album: Bis, The New Transistor Heroes. Easily the freshest and most energized effort to come along this year. These Scots' brand of adolescent energy and barbed lyrics make them the brightest hope for a breakthrough this year — and most worthy.

Worst Album: U2, Pop. What the hell happened to these guys? After spending a decade ranting on their political misgivings regarding Ireland, this group of yuppie retreads is now reduced to churning out mindless songs in a calculated and tacky ploy to be hip. Clue to Bono — nobody's buying it, go away.

Best Single: "Tricky Kid," Tricky. An amazing lyrical statement of self–confidence, combined with some of the most innovative and funky rhythms ever heard since George Clinton's heyday, make this song the best so far this year. While most people today struggle with the transition, Tricky knows he's "famous." Honorable mention to everyone's guilty pleasure, the Spice Girls.

Worst Single: "MMMBop...," Hanson and "The Freshman," The Verve Pipe. There was nothing as nauseating as hearing these two prime examples of why music is going down the toilet. While The Verve Pipe try in vain to sound meaningful and end up sounding stupid, Hanson are just plain stupid.

Best Concert: The Jesus Lizard, Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel. The usual suspects were at it again in Providence, touring in support of the vastly underrated Shot.

Worst Concert: Dinosaur Jr., Pearl St. J Mascis and Co. just don't have it anymore live. A poor sound mix, along with a ho–hum performance, proved too much to overcome. When the songs all sound the same (LOUD), something else needs to keep the crowd interested and Mascis' zero charisma make this show utterly forgettable.

Coolest Moment: Beck winning two Grammy's over such luminaries as Bryan Adams and Bruce Springsteen. When he took the podium at MSG to accept his first award, the awestruck look on his forlorn and perpetually lost face said it all. The music industry's latest attempt at hipness, however contrived, had officially arrived with the big boys. Long live the "Loser."

Worst Moment: The senseless killing of Notorious BIG. As evidenced on his new double opus, Life After Death, this guy was a real talent. The single "Hypnotize" was killer, and Biggie should be around to reap the rewards of his work. When will people learn?

Best Video: "Virtual Insanity," Jamiroquai. How does he always get out of the way of the moving couches? One of life's greatest unsolved mysteries.

Worst Video: "Freaks," Live. Yeah, this bunch of clowns from York, Penn., are really freaky. Who does Ed Kowalyck think he's kidding? These guys need to lighten up and have a little fun.

Byrne does HBO original; film looks at TV moguls

By Jennifer Bowles
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The real-life, cutthroat world of media tycoons provided Larry Gelbart with more than enough fodder for his latest satire.

"Weapons of Mass Distraction," debuting on HBO Saturday at 8 p.m., is about two media barons whose personal and business rivalry explodes into an all-out war.

Anybody you know? The storyline seems to reflect the very public feud between Rupert Murdoch, head of the News Corp. empire, and CNN founder Ted Turner, who merged his media holdings with Time Warner (which coincidentally owns HBO).

Turner, after all, raised a firestorm of controversy last year when he compared Murdoch to Adolf Hitler.

"Obviously, we all know who we're talking about here on one level," said Gabriel Byrne, who plays ruthless media mogul Lionel Powers, heir to an empire his father built by pumping septic tanks. "But I wanted to be very removed from that because I didn't want to be seen to be in some way trying to impersonate a well-known figure."

Ask Gelbart, the film's writer and executive producer, and he slyly skirts the issue. "You're free to make any assumption you want," he said with a laugh. "There are certainly enough of these people so you don't have to rely on those two for inspiration. It's a mogul stew, you know, it really is." Byrne is cast opposite Ben Kingsley, who plays Julian Messenger, a European immigrant whose determined rise to power is fueled by the scars he and his family suffered at the hands of Hitler. The two tycoons bribe senators, use their tabloids to punish rivals and engage in a battle royale over ownership of a pro-football team.

While Turner and Murdoch have been locked in a bitter feud over broadcasting rights, Gelbart thought viewers could relate more to a football team.

"A lot of their feud is so esoteric that there's no way the average person can absorb what the battle is about or all the details," Gelbart said. "It's not to say I completely understand either when we start talking about high-definition and digital TV, etc. So I thought it would make it much more accessible to an audience by concentrating their rivalry for an entity that is much more understandable." Both actors play their roles with devilish vigor.

"We wanted two actors who just in their own personas give off a great deal of strength, toughness and intelligence. And they seemed ideal," said Gelbart.

Byrne and others say Gelbart's creativity attracted them to the project. Gelbart earned Oscar nominations for his Tootsie and Oh, God! scripts and developed the series "M*A*S*H" for television, among other things.

"One of the things about Larry's work, I think, that's really great is that it works on two levels," said Byrne. "While you're laughing, he's also, you know, making some incredibly potent point."

And that point is? "It's basically an elaborate letter to the editor, saying this is what I think is going on, this is what I think are the dangers," Gelbart said.

"We already see a concentration of power and what people do with those powers. They use the means at their disposal, the means which they own, to get their message across, to a great extent control what we read, what we see, what we hear and ultimately what we think."

Tabloid news, in particular, said Gelbart, is "a chief distraction to keep us titillated and interested in things that don't really have a great deal to do with our lives."

"The bigger issues are that they really select items which further their corporate goals. They tell us which wars to get interested in, which countries to ignore or to be outraged about," he said.

PIZZA SUBS GYROS
the Sub
33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5160
Thank you for supporting The Sub! Have a great summer vacation.
Pizza's, Subs, Calzones, and more. . .
Hours: 11am -2 am
549-5160

when classes
STOP
GO
to buyback

Textbook Buyback

Campus Center
May 14 - 15 - 16 9:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
May 17 11:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
May 19 - 20 9:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
May 21 - 22 -23 9:00 A.M. - 6:00 P.M.

Textbook Annex
May 14 - 15 - 16 9:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
May 19 - 23 9:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
May 27 - 28 9:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.

Hampden D.C.
May 21 - 22 10:00 A.M. - 6:00 P.M.
May 23 10:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

Goten OF JAPAN
TUESDAY - SUNDAY
TUES., WEDS., THURS., FRI., AND SAT. 5 TIL CLOSE
SUNDAY 2 TIL CLOSE
COOKING AT YOUR TABLE
CONGRADULATION TO THE CLASS OF '97
WE CAN TAKE ON ANY SIZE GRAD PARTY
All Dinners include salad, vegetable noodle soup, rice tea & ice cream
Function room available for your party
TWO DINNERS FOR $ 18
SHRIMP AND STEAK COMBINATION
TWO DINNERS FOR $ 16
SHRIMP AND SCALLOP COMBINATION
TWO DINNERS FOR $ 15
STEAK AND CHICKEN COMBINATION
Please call for reservations today!
(413) 665-3020
Rt. 116 Sunderland
Casual Dress • Full Bar • Exotic Specials • Take the Sunderland Bus from campus, get dropped off at our front door

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385
• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

Join the Panel Discussion and Meeting
Perspectives on the Biological Effects of Low-Dos Radiation: Current Initiatives and Implications for LLRW Management and Regulatory Reform
Umass Campus Center, Amherst, May 20 7-10 P.M.
Hear Keynote Speaker, Dr Edward Calabrese, Ph.D. Chairman, Biological Effects of Low Level Exposures Advisory Committee, Northeast Regional Environmental Heath Center, Umass Amherst
Challenge nationally known panelists:
*Myron Polycove, M.D., Professor Emeritus of Laboratory Medicine and Radiology, University of California San Francisco, and NRC Visiting Fellow
* Dr. Judith Johnsrud, Ph.D., Director, Environmental Coalition on Nuclear Waste Task Force
*Christopher Nelson, Environmental Engineer, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency
*Dianne Quigley, Executive Director, Childhood Cancer Research Institute
*James Mukerheide, Director, Center for Nuclear Technology and Society, Worcester Polytechnic Institute
Sponsored by: Massachusetts Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Board
For More Information, call (617) 727-6018

■ softball

continued from page 12

strength gave her an unlimited amount of potential that soon caught the attention of college coaches. Henderson began to see softball as a major part of her future when the recruiting process began before her senior year.

"I knew that I wanted to go Division I," Henderson said. "But I wasn't very good then because I hadn't been doing it for long."

Henderson was recruited by UMass and Hofstra University. The two schools gave her lucrative offers and Henderson was faced with a tough decision. She had to choose between Hofstra, a school practically in her backyard and whose softball team she grew up idolizing, and Massachusetts, whose team and coach she quickly became fond of.

"I had always loved going to games at Hofstra, and I had always just assumed I would go there," Henderson said. "Until I came to UMass on a recruiting trip and I decided I really liked the team and I loved the coaches. They seemed like they would really help me."

Henderson has done a lot of growing since she made her first appearance at UMass. In just two short years of work, she has emerged as one of the top pitchers in the country.

Part of her success can be attributed to working with junior catcher Kelly Buckley. Buckley was a first year catcher during Henderson's freshman year.

"I think she's great," Henderson said. "She's improved a lot between this year and last year, and even from the beginning of this season to now."

Henderson has been attracting national attention with her performance this year and the many records she has shattered. But fame is not why she's here.

"I don't do it to break records and get recognition," Henderson said. "I just do it to win."

Henderson is a very competitive player, and has no fear of any batter or any team. Whether it's against a weak or a nationally–ranked school, she is always ready to play and always looking to do nothing but send batters back to the dugout.

"I was ready to play against anyone [in the Regionals]," Henderson said, "I was willing to take on UCLA, or anyone they wanted to fly out here."

Her approach when she takes the mound in a game can be seen in the tattoo on her right ankle. There lies the raging Tasmanian Devil, getting prepared to take a swing at a blistering fastball. If it's one of Henderson's pitches, you can be assured he'll miss.

Henderson takes this fearless approach to life as well, as she is willing to dedicate herself to the game of softball for the rest of her life. When she receives her degree in sports management, she hopes to pursue a career as a coach at any level.

"Softball is everything to me," she said. "It's all I do."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

UMass took their first step towards a championship when sophomore ace spurned hometown Hofstra to come to Amherst.

■ lax

continued from page 16

offense will be a job for the nation's No. 3 ranked defense. Anchored by goaltender John Kasselakis, close defensemen Harold Drumm, Adam Waxer and Greg McDonald and defensive midfielders P.G. Massey and Todd Sokolowski, the Minutemen are poised to stand up and rock the college lacrosse boat, and they know it won't involve walking on water.

A final note to all the graduating UMass students:

We know it won't be easy without the Mass. Daily Collegian in your life anymore, but don't despair.

There is still meaning out there somewhere if you just look hard enough.

And don't worry about us, we'll still be waiting here, just like an old friend, when you come back to a visit.

Pick us up and it'll be like old times all over again.

Jones to be Blizzard coach; will bring tradition to ABL

By Pat Eaton-Robb
Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. — For K.C. Jones, the American Basketball League reminds him of the old NBA, a time when players concentrated on the fundamentals and the game was everything.

Jones, 64, was introduced yesterday as the new head coach of the ABL's New England Blizzard, bringing with him a tradition that includes 12 NBA championships as player and coach — and instant name recognition.

"I must say [the league] exercised extremely good judgment, 'cause I am one of the great coaches,'" Jones joked at a news conference held amid a throng of fans and a lunch-time crowd inside the Hartford Civic Center mall.

Jones, fired last week as an assistant coach with the Boston Celtics, signed a four-year contract with the Blizzard. Financial terms were not disclosed, and league officials would not say if there are provisions for Jones to leave the club if he is offered an NBA job.

Jones said he was drawn to the ABL by the enthusiasm of the players and the nature of the women's game, which he called the purest form of basketball, reminding him of the game played by the men in the '50s and '60s, when he starred with the Celtics.

"They are pioneers," he said. "They are the beginning of a pro league that will help others out of college; and if they remember that, they will work especially hard to keep this thing going."

For the league, the signing of Jones means another step towards credibility and respect in their battle for recognition with the WNBA, a new women's professional league backed by the NBA.

"Last year at this time we were struggling to get head coaches just to join the league, take a chance and leave their programs," said Jennifer Rizzotti, the Blizzard's star point guard. "It's definitely a surprise that after one year we can get... a top coach from the NBA."

Last month, the ABL announced a new franchise in Long Beach, Calif., and the signings of Connecticut star Kara Wolters, the Associated Press Player of the Year; Kate Starbird, Stanford's career scoring leader and winner of the 1997 Naismith Award; All-America forward Shalonda Enis from Alabama; and several other top players.

Blizzard general manager Pam Batalis said Jones' signing will be followed by news of more companies investing in the league. She said the ABL is also well on its way to landing a major television contract.

"We're choosing to establish women's basketball the old-fashioned way — we're going to earn it," Batalis said. "We're going to earn it one autograph at a time, one fan at a time, one player at a time and one phenomenal coach at a time."

Jones said there will be a learning curve for him, adjusting to the women's game and zone defenses, and learning the strengths and weaknesses of opponents. He will also need to learn the name of his club, which he referred to throughout the news conference as "The Blizzards."

But Jones said he does not consider the move to women's basketball a step down from the NBA.

"The NBA is a professional league and the ABL is a professional league," he said. "For me they are both on the same level."

■ baseball

continued from page 16

to left field, where he stayed for the entire season.

UMass finished the season 33–10 overall, 17–4 in the Atlantic 10. The Minutemen won every conference series this year except for the three–game set against Dayton. It was after the loss to the Flyers that UMass went on an 18 game tear, capturing the nation's longest winning streak of the season.

Leading the team in hitting this year was Bryan Mazzaferro. Even while battling a broken foot and missing a good portion of the season, "Mazz" was able to sustain a .449 batting average.

Among the everyday starters, sophomore Doug Clark led the team with a .434 batting average, which was consistent the entire season. Along with his average, Clark was first on the team with hits and RBI, third on the team in stolen bases, home runs and slugging percentage.

Jason Bennett (9–1) led all UMass pitchers this year as the No. 1 starter. After winning his ninth game of the season, he surpassed his season high total of eight wins from his sophomore year. The senior was first in innings pitched (69.0), strikeouts (40), tied for first with two saves, second on the team with a 4.17 ERA, appearances (12), and third on the staff with a 5:2 K's to walks ratio.

If the Minutemen win the Atlantic 10 Tournament, they will advance to the NCAA Tournament, which is to be held from May 22–26. Last year, UMass entered the regionals with a No. 5 seed and advanced to the regional final game against the University of Florida.

■ polo

continued from page 16

UMass 8–6. According to Newcomb, his team was looking forward to playing the Terrapins after Maryland put down UMass at Easterns.

"They were saying they were better than we were, that we shouldn't be there and that we were out of our league," Newcomb said.

UMass took the lead 2–1 in the first quarter, and sustained the advantage throughout the game, crushing Maryland 8–4. Grogan led the UMass offense once again, tallying three goals, and Claudia Clement had two. Nieves was in top form holding Maryland back with 16 saves.

"We were motivated to keep going," Newcomb said. "We were not going to give up. We're a tight, tough group of individuals who know how to play the game."

A final note from the Collegian Editor in Chief:

To all the people I've enjoyed meeting over the last four years but will never see again: the only thing left to say is...

D.P. Dough
Delivers Calzones
256-1616

ANY 2 CALZONES FOR $7.50 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 2 Calzones
ANY 2 CALZONES FOR $7.50 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 2 Calzones
3 FOR $11 ANY 3 CALZONES FOR $11 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 3 Calzones
3 FOR $11 ANY 3 CALZONES FOR $11 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 3 Calzones
2 FREE COKES WITH PURCHASE OF 2 CALZONES Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 2 Calzones
2 FREE COKES WITH PURCHASE OF 2 CALZONES Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 2 Calzones
4 FOR $15 ANY 4 CALZONES FOR $15 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 4 Calzones
4 FOR $15 ANY 4 CALZONES FOR $15 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 4 Calzones
ANY 2 CALZONES FOR $7.50 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 2 Calzones
ANY 2 CALZONES FOR $7.50 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 2 Calzones
3 FOR $11 ANY 3 CALZONES FOR $11 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 3 Calzones
3 FOR $11 ANY 3 CALZONES FOR $11 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 3 Calzones
2 FREE COKES WITH PURCHASE OF 2 CALZONES Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 2 Calzones
2 FREE COKES WITH PURCHASE OF 2 CALZONES Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 2 Calzones
4 FOR $15 ANY 4 CALZONES FOR $15 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 4 Calzones
4 FOR $15 ANY 4 CALZONES FOR $15 Expires 8/31/97 • One Coupon Per 4 Calzones

¡SENIORS!
Why wait in line at some stupid, over-priced resteraunt with your parents?
Come to
WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
No reservations accepted

THE CANDIRU
is a tiny parasitic fish that swims into one's urinary tract and extends its spines into the walls of the urethra, causing excruciating pain. Once there, it is impossible to dislodge. We tell you this so that if you don't get into medical school, you will know that there are others suffering more than you.
Free MCAT Seminar Wednesday, May 21. Kaplan Amherst Center. Call 549-5780 for details
For information about Medical School and the MCAT, call
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
London $199 $370
Rome or Milan $340 $635
San Jose, Costa Rica $246 $460
Roundtrip
TOKYO $879
SYDNEY $898
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs/immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l students I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave. NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Lincoln Real Estate
Gilreath Manor Condos
on Hobart Lane
Showings Start in April for June or September Occupancy!
• 3 Bedroom
• 1½ Baths
• Heated Basement
• Gas Heat & Hot water
• Hardwood Floors
• 1/2 mile to campus
• On Bus Route
LINCOLN REAL ESTATE - 25 N. PLEASANT ST. - 253-7879

★ ★ ★ Save This Ad ★ ★ ★
COLLEGE GRADUATES!!!
COME TO NEW JERSEY'S
Largest Career Fair
75 Fortune 500 Companies will be HIRING for positions in the Tri-state Area.
Tuesday May 20th / 10:00 am - 4:00 pm
Held at Mayfair Farms in West Orange, NJ.
Bring plenty of resumes!!! Admission $3.00
Positions Available Include:
Sales, Advertising, Human Resources, Marketing, Management, Management Training, Technical & Computer, Graphic, Retail Management, Stock Broker Trainees, Banking, Customer Service.
A Professional Edge, ADP, Abra Cadabra, Allen Thomas Associates, AOE Ricoh, Bell Atlantic Nynex, Bell Atlantic Yellow Pages, Bloomingdale's, Budget Rent A Car, CVS Corporation, Century Office Products, Inc., The Chubb Institute, Computran Systems Corporation, Duke & Company Inc., Dean Witter Reynolds, Electronic Office Systems, Enterprise Rent A Car, Fedders Corporation, First Colonial Mortgage, Hoffman Floors, John Hancock Financial Services, Kelly Services, Lincoln Technical Institute, Inc., Megamicrosoft United Staffing, Merrill Lynch, McDonald's Corp., Nordstrom, MCS Canon, Prudential Securities, MetLife, Mutual of New York, Mutual Of Omaha, New York Life, Northwestern Mutual Life, Olde Discount Stockbrokers, Pagenet - NJ, Principal Financial, The Prudential, Prudential/Preferred Financial Services, Quality Photocopy, Smith Barney, Chase Manhattan Bank, Sprint Communications Inc., SPL World Group, Sprint Yellow Pages, Staples - The Office Superstore, State Farm Insurance Company, Summit Financial Resources, TeleCheck Services, TSR Paging Inc., WaWa Inc., Xerox, & Many More!!!
Directions:
1. From Route 90 West: Take Rt 90 East to end of Rt 290 East. 290 East to Exit 9B (Prospect Ave.) Prospect North on Prospect to 2nd light. At light turn left on Eagle Rock Ave Mayfair Farms in 1/4 mile down on the right.
2. NJ Turnpike: Turnpike to exit 15W. Rt 280 West 280 West to exit 8B (Prospect Ave.Continue as in No. 1
3. From Route 78 West: 78 East to end of expressway and signs for Rt 22 East. Proceed on 22 East to Garden State Pkwy North. Pkwy North to exit 145 Rt 280 West. Rt 280 West to exit 8B (Prospect Ave.) Continue as in No. 1
4. From Route 78 East: 78 West to Garden State Pkwy North. Pkwy North to exit 148 Rt 280 West to exit 9B (Prospect Ave.) Continue as in No. 1
5. From Route 80 East: 80 West to Garden State Pkwy South. Pkwy South to exit 145 Rt 280 West. 280 West to exit 8B (Prospect Ave.) Proceed North on Prospect. Continue as in No. 1
6. Garden State Parkway: Parkway to exit 145 Rt 280 West. Continue to exit 8B (Prospect Ave.) Prospect Ave. North to 2nd traffic light. Turn left at light (Eagle Rock Ave.) Mayfair Farms is 1/4 mile down on the right.
★ Superior Job Fairs ★
If you cannot attend fax your resume for free career placement to: 201-906-8535 or call 201-906-8363

■ misty

continued from page 13

ing my Lou Gehrig speech to an empty Matthews Arena; and seeing a grill-less Olds pull out of the Campua Center at 4 a.m. A "teer came to me aye, laddy" at that time, but there was another "good 'un."

Two, the night of the hockey banquet, and ripping Pruddy's up with representatives of my three teams (women's soccer, hockey and women's lax) this year; getting my name chanted by certain Ridley, Penn., residents; and planting the noggin of the owner of a grill-less Olds into the ceiling of his kitchen at 3:30 a.m. (but he picked me up first). Reading Virginia Woolf on the UVM bench in Gutterson Field House was nice, but a ride to Brown University ended my semester the best. It wasn't about drunken escapades, but about simple respect. It's not about wins and losses sometimes, but commitment, and working with the seniors of the women's lacrosse team was both a blessing and a honor. It was all good, girls.

Damn, Danielle, I need a tissue again.

Leigh Torbin — Amidst the stress ball that is my life, nothing I do might ever be quite as therapeutic as spending five days in the Valley of the Sun with 20 of the loveliest ladies on this campus. Just the concept of sitting by an outdoor pool on Feb. 16 is all I needed. I mean March is one thing, but February? I really didn't need the largest buffet outside of Vegas, an introduction to Petri, Bert coming to a dead stop in the middle of an interstate, the scariest flight I've ever taken, or hearing "No Diggity" 17,281 times (all at Kim Gutridge's request) to forget about life for a while.

Yet, hockey was the last full-time beat I'll cover here and those memories also run deep. A great weekend (off the ice anyway) at UNH and the Portsmouth Brewery, home of Smuttynose Old Brown Dog Ale, and their "experimental" 8.9 percent stout... that and the memory of Jorma knocking the noggin of the owner of "the beast" into the ceiling of his own kitchen will stick around for a while. But no single day this semester was more memorable than the one Jorma described above (Jan. 18, 1997). To save space just read his recap, and remember that he didn't run into one of his professors at McGann's to top it all off.

Mike Corey — Aw yes, this time of year again. How very difficult it is to figure out what to say my favorite memories are. I must say that splitting time with WMUA and the Collegian is most definitely strenuous — however, both have produced some great times. The trip to Pittsburgh for the NCAAs was a great experience and probably my most favorite time of the semester.

I just want to thank everyone of the Collegian and WMUA for a phenomenal year and a lot of fun. Luckily no one is leaving, except Jeremy (sorry, buddy) and we can all come back in the fall, see our grade point averages fluctuate and write for sports once again. You guys were great, keep up the good work down in the basement.

Rolling Rock

Luke Meredith — It's strange, but it really does get a little misty when it's all said and done. It's been a crazy year, from the moment I first sat in a press box down in Villanova to the day I found out I'll be your Sports Editor next year. I could whine for days, so I'll keep it short.

To the departing Jeremy Adams, I'll leave you with the one line I've tried to instill in you all year: "Being cocky is a good thing." Don't lose the swagger, kid...you just may be the "Luke Meredith of Susquehanna" yet (just kidding, Isaiah).

To the boys and girls of the basement, nobody knows how hard it can be sometimes, so saying thanks is an understatement. To Jorma and Leigh, I'll say that your dedication to whom you cover is both an inspiration and a lesson, and having the Flying Finn as my wingman will be a blessing. To Place, baseball was a blast, even if Lorden isn't Miami: "I need a new winter jacket, Dad. I'm covering baseball this semester." To Casey, I'll only ask, "Hooking up with ex-Holyoke High tennis teammates of yours years ago doesn't make me a bad person, does it?" To Stamm, what's up kid, it's been a long year. Trips to the TOC for the EIC and the Pimp Daddy will cure that in '98. To the rookies who will step up next year, I say, "Get fired up." To Kathleen, don't worry. It's tough, but it's worth it.

To my co-Captains in the press box (you know who you are): "Arrrr, the Captain." Wherever y'all set sail, don't forget to dock at the local watering hole with an ex-sailor someday. To the UMass baseball team, I give props, because not only do you play hard, you're not afraid of a little "Mill Valley therapy" on off days.

To everyone out there, saying thanks would be an even bigger understatement. It never gets old hearing people say they appreciate what you're doing. I may have retired the "Booty Schwag" to greener pastures, but its spirit lives on. I'll see you in September.

Sam Adams

Casey Kane — Two years here, and I'm pretty sure the Collegian is officially my second home (I get mail here and I've slept here, I guess that counts). This semester I covered two beats, men's basketball and men's lacrosse. Each will always have special places in my heart.

I didn't expect to cover lacrosse this year, but I wouldn't change it for anything. I can remember watching several games last year in bewilderment and many more this year with some understanding of the game. Going into a season without knowledge of the basic fundamentals of the sport is daunting, but I think I handled myself well.

The bond I felt covering the baseball team last year, when inwardly you hope with all your heart for a win while remaining impartial on the outside (the bane of being student media), took longer to develop with lax. It is here now, though. They are unofficially my boys, in my mind at least.

It helped that I had a great group to work with: John Kasselakis, the goalie with no lack of confidence; Brendan Glass, the epitome of sportsmanship; Chris Grande, who was simply en fuego this year; Casey Costello, who got kicked out of the locker room at Brown (post-shower, don't worry, he had a towel); Harold Drumm, "Soul to the Hole!"; and, of course, P.G. Massey (you had to know he'd be here), whose vicious hits left me shaking my head in amazement. God, I love his game!

There are so many other guys, whose names don't get mentioned often enough despite all the hard work they put in — Todd Sokolowski, Mike DelPercio, Adam Waxer, Jay Negus, Mike McKeefrey and Greg Macdonald to name a few.

Coach Cannella, it was a pleasure. I look forward to the times to come.

It is hard to say goodbye to all the people I've worked with, even if it is for only the summer in most cases. I'll miss the 90210 conversations and corny Whitney Houston renditions with Corey Peter; listening to Jackie's answering machine (before it was changed); obsessing to Lisa O. (my surrogate sister, I will miss you) and Place about two certain little letters; enjoying a 40 with Lauren; singing "O Canada" on the 50-yard line of McGuirk Stadium with Jorma, Juice, Matty and a very drunk Torbin; Market Square in Pittsburgh with Paul Bilodeau, Matty and a very drunk Stamm on St. Patty's weekend (don't forget Pete DeNagy guys, I know I won't).

Jeremy, Jacob and Lisa — farewell and best of luck. Jeremy, you better send us a media guide next year! Jacob, I can only say you have made an excellent decision in the personal department. Lisa, what can I say, I am going to MISS you! You have to come back and obsess with me! Stamm — Second-floor hose? Frozen in the chamber? You are my third little brother and I love you. Luke — Best of luck, kid. We are all behind you. Make us proud.

Thanks must be extended to the Collegian Business and Graphics Departments. A huge helping of thanks also go to the UMass media relations office. We would be lost without you guys and we really do appreciate what you do.

Thank you, everyone. It can not be compacted into 50 short lines, but you have given me a year I will never forget.

Chris Stamm — Things that make me misty: Long walks on a moon-lit beach, snuggling in front of a roaring fire... OH! Things that happened in my tenure as co-Sports editor.

Where to begin, so many beats, so many tag-team partners. From my early days recycling women's crew stories to this past year banging out men's hoop stories, the friendships I've made along the way have been just as amazing as the things I've seen on the playing fields and in the gyms. As far as athletics is concerned, my misty-eyed "meat and potatoes" memory has to be watching lowly Coppin State downing South Carolina in NCAA's. While the Minutemen had some heartstoppers (Maryland at the Centrum, UConn at the Civic Center, BC at the FleetCenter, Xavier at home, Temple home and away, etc...), watching those guys rip it up on national TV was amazing. Walking into that locker room and seeing the looks on the Eagles' faces, basking in the glory of knocking off a giant, epitomizes what college athletics is all about.

As far as covering the Minutemen, there were many great courtside moments. Seeing a Fordham forward's eyes pop out of his head when he came off a pick and found himself staring at Tyrone Weeks toe-to-toe (they could have used it as footage for Bugs Bunny). Those funky URI cheerleaders are... Talking smack to the upper class elitist trash reporter in the press box of the FleetCenter when Lari threw down on the great white hoax Mickey Curley.

And then the road trips. Somewhere late and rainy somewhere on the Jersey Pike. Chris and Casey are running late en route to Philly. What do you do? According to the CaseDog, drive 100,000 mph. It's all good and ticket free. Being a part of the greatness that was McGonigle Hall for the final UMass–Temple battle (Travieso en fuego). Is Hartford really the most confusing waste of municipal planning and civilization? YES. So what if we are the cheapest people picking up our car from the valet at the Center City Embassy Suites? Speaking of the City of Brotherly Love and A-10's, that could be a list in and of itself: An adventure with Brad D. (Christian Laettner — sorry Case — the Rocky Steps, South Street etc...)

Those road trip people, who could forget them? First and foremost, Jim from Pittsburgh's "The Havanna House." The most knowingest cigar humador guy I've ever met (oh, the only one I've ever met). Then big (really) Pete DeNagy, Case, he was down. The old Cardinal (who was she kidding?). Have you ever driven to Pittsburgh? It is in between Amherst and Hell. Don't do it. Market Square and St. Patty's day spells either trouble or lots and lots of beer. For the Collegian, it meant both. I thought Boston did St. Patty's day right. They dye the damn river (or all three) GREEN!!

Finally, the important stuff, my sports buddies. CaseDog, a year I will never forget. From late nights working on the Hoop Preview to going mach 5 on road trips, thanks. We've been through a lot and let me say, I wouldn't have wanted to share the ride with anyone else. Thanks for the support and memories. (Where are those guys at the Collegian at? Ooops, did we do that?)

Hoopla, Hoopla, Hoopla. What's up, once again the Collegian had the best student media finish in the Media Division. Humphrey, we all know you carried us on your back but hey, I think I played a little D. Bri and Luke, what's up, those New Balance guys were junk, we should have had them. Cas, all I can say is, games tied, Stamm top of the key and we all know who stuck a trey in the other's eye. (OK, so what if it was the only bucket I scored in the game but...).

Jormin and Torma. What a long strange trip it's been. If I learned anything this year, it was that it's not unusual to find a lead by one of you chock full of musical references. You bros are what this desk is all about. Dedicated, talented and funny as hell, even when it hits the fan.

Placey and J.R. The frosh that rocked the party. You guys get a big tip of the hat, stepping up and gettin' it done right. Place, best of luck next year, bigger and better things to come. J.R., Susque... I can't spell but I hope they know they're in for it. Good luck, we'll miss 'ya.

I'd like to talk to the Pimp Daddy if I could. God D—n! Let me just say, it's been a barrel of laughs. Who would have thought that guy that was freaked out by layout and wrote a story while in another place would someday run the show? Best of luck pal, I'm sure you'll rock the mic next year. MVC is in the house.

There's so much more to say, I know I didn't fit it all in. You guys rock. All I can say is, if I was going to spend my days in a basement with no windows, I couldn't pick a better bunch of people. Later.

■ misty

continued from page 16

"Harry" made things interesting for us this spring. Remember to suck away from a certain Springfield reporter. And always remember that "I know Connsl" But my most endearing memory would have to be consuming several beers at the Sports BBQ later today...

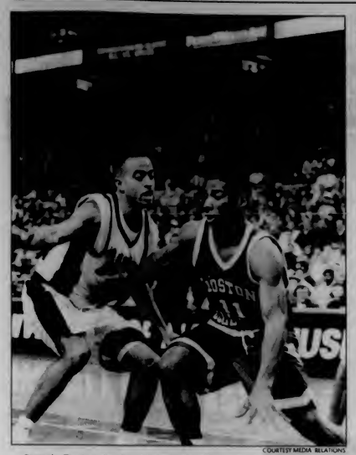
Jackie Leroux — This was my first year with the Collegian, and one I won't soon forget. Many thanks to Chris, Casey and Luke for helping me cut my teeth. And thanks to Jorma for all the writing tips (I'm sure Corey thanks you, too). The memories of all those never-ending phone conversations with Bill MacConnell will always bring tears to my eye. My how I will miss them! The best part of the year would have to be covering the softball team. Damn those girls can play! Sitting on the bleachers with Goodman, just hoping a foul ball would either hit someone or break a window. Too bad you missed the lacrosse coach incident, kid! But thanks for cracking me up during all the games. It was a fun year guys! See ya next fall!

Jacob W. Michaels — After three years, I finally got the sports editors to let me write, though I never did get the wrestling column I wanted. Without a doubt, the Patriots going to the Super Bowl was great. However, even better was the finale of the Bill Parcells saga, when instead of leaving whenever he pleased, Parcells and the Jets had to give the Pats four draft picks.

On campus, the best thing was clearly the basketball team coming out of its doldrums to beat the "upper class elitist trash" from BC. Speaking of which, how funny is it that the two premier basketball franchises in Boston — the Celtics and Eagles — are now coached by UMass alums?

Lisa M. Oliveri — Well, this was my first (and last, sadly) semester writing sports for the Collegian and I wish I had started earlier. Not much in my Collegian career will even compare to my trip to Columbus, Ohio, for the Regional Gymnastics championship, although meeting Garth Brooks was still pretty cool. Heck, just about all of my sports memories revolve around the gym team. I get misty thinking about Dave Kuzara buying myself and the team slurpees after the meet, and hanging out and eating pizza with just a great bunch of girls, who make me very sad about graduating. I can only hope they will get great coverage next year... and get to spend a fun-filled weekend at UCLA.

Travelling to Washington D.C. and Philadelphia (twice!) with Tabi and Anna, touring the ghettos and staying up way too late the night before A-10s. Reading Jorma and Leigh's hockey column put a smile on my face during late nights copy editing. I know I always tell you I liked them, but now I get the chance to write it, although I think Mario is the greatest. And to Casey, thanks for giving me the chance to write, the opportunity to travel with the gym team, the inspirational "boyfriend stories" and for being one of my best friends down here — I'll miss you!



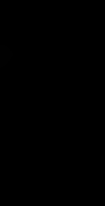
Jonathan M. Place — I still get misty about the Beanpot in the FleetCenter with Leigh and Jorma, the fattening hot dogs, $3 pizza, the media credentials I almost lost, the huge Miller Lite Beanpot sign I stole outside of some bar on Causeway and the tears in Jorma's eyes coming off the ice. The WMUA "End of the Year Party." There's nothing like seven innings of shamefully scoreless whiffle ball chased by cans of MGD. Once again, Jorma cried, but this time it was for the line-drive I robbed him on. The ticket I talked myself out of getting just outside of West Point, N.Y. after the UMass–Army lacrosse game. That fuzzy hour between 5 and 6 p.m. on May 4 that only Jorma and Jeremy clearly remember.

The trip with Andy and Jorma for the Beanpot at Fenway Park that we were all concerned we weren't going to make, but everyone was glad to see us there. Getting a close up on Dick Vitale's glass eye. And finally, my first "End of the Semester Collegian party." Listen up kids, a gin martini should not go on top of 10 Rolling Rocks. (I apologize to the fire escape next to Walker's Grill.) It was a great first year.

Bud Light

Jorma Kansanen — Oh, so many times to remember, and so many to try and remember. But the nominations for my misty-eyed memories go a little like this: the first was Jan. 18, 1997, dedicated to the basketball team's 90–78 win over BC, and the hockey team's 5–4 OT win over Northeastern; hitting almost every bar from Fanuell Hall to the North End to the Back Bay in a 14-hour span; giv-

Turn to MISTY, page 12



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Carmelo Travieso leading his team into Boston and coming out with a win against the Eagles was one of many misty-eyed memories from the last year.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

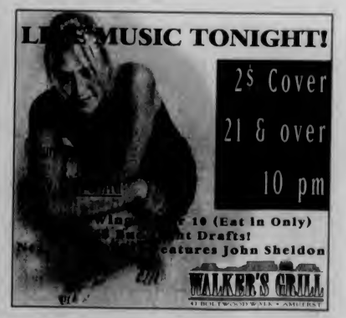
Ryan Thistle, Doug Clark and Mike Stone helped the Minutemen win the Beanpot Trophy for the second straight year, and brought some more tears to our eyes in the process.

flight check
LONDON $395
PARIS $587
AMSTERDAM $539
ROME $653
MADRID $629
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst
Tel : 413-256-1261

ENTER THE TRAVEL ZONE and explore the world for less
Council Travel
44 Main Street, Amherst
Tel : 413-256-1261

classe cafe
eat heavy, eat light, eat sweet, eat smart
eat natural, eat veggie, eat meat, eat soup
EAT GOOD IT'S HERE
morningOnoonOnight
M-Sat. 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
wine & beer
168 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. thru Wed 16-21 / Separte Tickets
the Perfect Exam Brake You Deserve
Only area Showing Daily at 7:00 Only
THE MOST ACCLAIMED COMEDY OF THE NEW YEAR!
WINNER of the New York Film Critics Circle Award for Best Screenplay
WINNER of the National Society of Film Critics Award for Best Screenplay
ALBERT L. BROOKS DEBBIE REYNOLDS
MOTHER
THIS WEEKEND, CHASE DOWN THE BIGGEST LAUGHS AROUND!
NOW IN HER 5th Week! Daily at 9:10 Only
FROM THE DIRECTOR OF "CLERKS" COMES A COMEDY THAT SHOWS JUST HOW UNPREDICTABLE ROMANCE CAN BE.
"THE FUNNIEST, MOST HONEST SEX-COMEDY I'VE EVER SEEN!"
"FULL OF TRUTH AND EXPLOSIVE COMEDY!"
"A BLAST OF GLEEFUL PROVOCATION!"
CHASING AMY
Sex is easy. Love is hard.
ACADEMY OF MUSIC Opera House 584-8435 NORTHAMPTON, MASS.



Get in on the Action
Vigorous activities done for 30-60 minutes, 3-4 times weekly, offer these benefits:
• Improves circulation
• Controls weight
• Prevents and manages high blood pressure
• Lowers blood cholesterol levels
• Raises HDL-cholesterol levels
• Boosts energy levels
©1998, American Heart Association

OOPS!
•Free Estimates
•Lifetime Repair Warranty
•Auto Glass Replacement
•Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA
549-2880
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

Security Positions
Bright Moments Festival
July 10, 17, 24
Pay is $5 per hour and free admission to concert.
For information call New WORLD Theater at 545-1972 before May 30th.

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

College Pro
Home Painters
Make $3,000 - $5,000 this Summer
Why not get a tan while you work?
For work in the Sudbury/Concord area call Pete @ 413 - 546 - 6058 or 508 - 897 - 0714

TONITE
LIVE MUSIC
FEATURING
Electric Carnival
9:30 - 1:00
Drink Specials
Red Dog - 16 oz - 1.50
Bicardi Limon & Coke - 16oz - 2.00
Pete's Mardi - 12oz - 1.50
2.00 Cover
THE PUB
Smoking Section 10-1
15 East Pleasant Street

The Campus Activities Office will sponsor Study Break on Monday, May 19 and Tuesday, May 20 from 10 am to 1 pm in the Cape Cod Lounge. Study Break provides free food, refreshments and entertainment to Umass students during finals!
Come and enjoy free coffee, juice, fruit, doughnuts and bagels! REFUEL before and after exams in the Cape Cod Lounge! This program is brought to you by the fun staff in Campus Activities! For more information call 545-3600.

When it's time to pack up and go home
call the
Packaging Store
The Packaging & Shipping Experts
HANDLE WITH CARE
We can help!
Getting your stuff home doesn't have to be a hassle. We'll pack and ship it all home for you. From bicycles to computers to a whole apartment full of furniture - we'll get it there safely.
We offer FREE estimates and FREE pick up service
call toll free 888-722-5747 1742 Boston Rd., Springfield, Ma.

Congratulations Class of 1997 and their Families
Following Commencement...
Bring a picnic blanket, relax, avoid the traffic, and celebrate with:

Vegan Burger	$1.50
Quarter Pound Burger	$2.00
Quarter Pound Burger w/cheese	$2.25
Grilled Chicken Sandwich	$2.00
All Beef Hot Dog	$1.50
Turkey Grinder	$3.00
Roast Beef Grinder	$3.00
Ham Grinder	$3.00

Bonducci's Gourmet Coffees

Gourmet Desserts

Fresh Fruit Cups	$1.50
Chocolate Dipped Strawberries	$1.00/2
Bluewall Cookies	$1.00
Gourmet Cake Slices	$2.00
Fresh Fruit	$ .50

Beverages

Canned Soda	$1.00
Arizona Tea	$1.25
Spring Water	$1.00

University of Massachusetts-Amherst Dining Services

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CONGRATULATIONS! to the new Sisters of Iota Gamma Upsilon: Kendre, Siren, Lynna, Sharon, Cheryl, Alish, and Jess!

The Sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to congratulate our newest Sisters: Tara, Laurie, Sibyl, Arbeil, Andrea, Sebrine, Jaclyn, Kelly H., Zoe, Ruthie, Julie, Astar, Clarissa, Adina, Mireya, Aisling, Gretchen, Kelly T.

Study Spanish for medical professionals at UConn. Strengthen your Spanish. Increase your effectiveness as a "future" health professional by enrolling in Language Culture and Health. Offered 5/21-6/11. For more info contact Christine Cowell. (860)486-3313 or CEC35001@uconnvm.uconn

Aerobics with Steve Get in great shape this summer at UMass' 1st Session: M, Tu,Th, 4:30-5:45pm

Take Environmental Science 101 (BS) this summer at UMass. Fulfills BS requirement. Be outdoors, learn about ecology, pest management, soil and water pollution, and more. Numerous case studies. Trudge through swamps, run rivers, mile hikes and more. Tu, Th, 7-10pm

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Lease Two bedroom apt. Crestview. Call 548-7017

A studio and a cozy one bedroom Near campus, bus, center. $365 w/heat, $385+ heat. Summer with Fall Options. 586-0746

Uptown apartment- Sterling June 1! One bedroom, very affordable! Call soon! 253-7109

AUGUST RENT FREE 3 bedroom, 2 bath. Take over June 1st. Mill Valley. Heat/Hot Water/AC included. Call 256-8953 ASAP

Puffton- 3 bedroom Spacious, renovated Puffton Apt. Close to laundry, bus stop, and tennis courts. Available June 1st with Fall Option. Call Mark, Seth, or Scott. 549-2645

Take Over Lease 8/1 Two bedrooms. Hot Water/Heat included. A/C. Brandywine. Fall Option. Patty 549-3740

2 bedroom renovated- Puffton Fall Option. $640. Heat/Hot Water included. Furniture available. FREE CABLE FOR SUMMER. 549-5079

North Amherst basement apartment 3 miles. UMass/Town. 10 or 20 hours work in exchange for rent. 253-4113

Summer Sublet with Fall Option 2 bedroom, spacious Brandywine apartments. Free rent for August! Call 549-5258

Spacious 1 bedroom $430/month incl hot water. Available June 1st. Call 256-0263

Three bedroom- Northampton On bus route. $750. Available 6/1. 585-0515

APARTMENT IN TOWN! 1 bedroom. Take over our lease with Fall Option. Call 253-6894

Caeter of towe 1,2,3 bedrooms. Gas; heat; hardwood floors. 253-7879

CHEAP RENT! 3 bedroom- $550. 2 bedroom- $475. 20 minutes from campus- no bus. Available for Sept 665-2203

Large 2 bedroom apts. available for June or Sept at Squire Village. 695-2203

AUTO FOR SALE

86 Honda Accord 5 speed, good gas mileage, great condition, 4 door $3000 or B/O. 253-4985

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1988 VW Cabriolet Black with white top. AM/FM cassette. Alarm. Runs great. $4000. Call Kelly @ 253-7095

AUTO FOR SALE

87 Dodge Omni Grey, dependable. $1100. Call Jessica 546-4869

1979 VW Bus Runs good. $800 or B/O. 585-3074

88 BMW 325ic Coupe black, auto, looks/runs excellent. $6900- Josh Fox (days)617-742-8060 ext 428, (evening)617-689-3002

1986 Subaru Station Wagon Great shape, low miles, new tires, alignment, and tune-up. $1500 or best offer. (413)498-5856

Toyota Corolla DX 96 Manual, 4 door, loaded. Less than 6000 miles. Dark green silver. Leaving country. Must sell. 549-2684

Mazda RX7 65K. 5 speed SP. Edtn. Red, 1986: power sunroof/steering, A/C, electric windows, AM/FM cassette. Equalizer. Sport Rack and Bar. $5500. Call Kim 665-3245

93 Volks Fox Nothing but highway miles. Very clean. Very reliable. $2500 or B/O. 549-9221 Leave message

EMPLOYMENT

FUN SUMMER JOBS IN THE SUN Earn $3000- $5000 painting with other students in Worcester County. (413)546-1912 or (508)842-2303 Tim

Delivery Persons Wanted Apply at D.P. Dough

Campus Business Opportunity- Help UMass students protect their PC's and other equipment from theft. Largest seller of computer anti-theft devices in the US is looking for campus entrepreneurs. For details visit our Web Site at www.pc-security.com/campusrep or call Benson at 1-800-724-4339

Summer Jobs Have fun in the sun painting $7-$10 per hour. Northampton and Westfield areas. Call Rob 258-1299

Part-time childcare for infant. Summer and Fall. Approximately 25 hrs/wk. On bus route in Amherst. 549-5035

Mothers Helper Wanted 15-20 hrs/wk 6 month and 5 year old. Light housekeeping. Call Ginny 549-7788

Leaders Needed: Summer Teenage Bicycling Trips. US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hostelling Program. Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-6132

Summer Jobs Telefund is hiring $5.50/hour plus bonuses. Hands on computer experience. Apply today. Memorial Hall Basement.

SHIPPER/RECEIVER
Summer Position

Millitech Corporation in South Deerfield has a summer position available for a person who can work 30-40 hours per week for June, July, and August. You must be able to pack electronics for shipping and prepare all the paperwork necessary for both shipping and receiving products, equipment, and supplies.

To apply for this position fax or e-mail resume by May 16th to Director of Human Resources Fax# 413-665-0089 e-mail hr@millitech.com

Capa Cod Restaurant Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train. Housing available. P.O. Box 1728, Eastham, MA 02642. Fax (508)255-9374. Call (508)255-9394

Assistant Manager- Capa Cod Restaurants Good opportunity. Will train. Housing available. P.O. Box 1728, Eastham, MA 02642. Fax (508)255-9374. Call (508)255-9394

Earn up to $3000 part-time in just 4 to 8 weeks. Memoirink needs one highly motivated individual to direct summer sales/marketing project at UMass Amherst. Contact David (800)563-8654

Summer Jobs For The Environment! $2500-$4000/summer. Work with MASSPIRG to stop pollution. Ideal job for college students and others. Career Opportunities. Make a difference this summer. Call Terri 256-6434

EMPLOYMENT

Residential Summer Camp Counselors Wanted by Nature's Classroom. Live-in position. Available in Massachusetts to anyone who honestly likes being with kids. 1-800-433-8375

Part-Time Positions available for hard-working, dependable people starting May 21/Competitive wages. If interested contact Justin 549-1128

Painters Wanted Earn $3000-$5000 for summer. Westwood, Dedham area. Call Mike 549-3759

University Directories is hiring students to sell Yellow Pages. Advertising this summer in Amherst for the official University of Massachusetts- Amherst Campus Telephone Directory. Weekly pay plus bonus structure. Training Program. Excellent Advertising Sales, Marketing and PR experience. Call 1-800-743-5556 ext. 122

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call. (413)827-7555

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group. 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Camp Counselors Wanted by Nature's Classroom. Live-in position. Available in Massachusetts to anyone who honestly likes being with kids. 1-800-433-8375

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call. (413)827-7555

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group. 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Delivery Persons Wanted Apply at D.P. Dough

Campus Business Opportunity- Help UMass students protect their PC's and other equipment from theft. Largest seller of computer anti-theft devices in the US is looking for campus entrepreneurs. For details visit our Web Site at www.pc-security.com/campusrep or call Benson at 1-800-724-4339

Summer Jobs Have fun in the sun painting $7-$10 per hour. Northampton and Westfield areas. Call Rob 258-1299

Part-time childcare for infant. Summer and Fall. Approximately 25 hrs/wk. On bus route in Amherst. 549-5035

Mothers Helper Wanted 15-20 hrs/wk 6 month and 5 year old. Light housekeeping. Call Ginny 549-7788

Leaders Needed: Summer Teenage Bicycling Trips. US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hostelling Program. Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-6132

Summer Jobs Telefund is hiring $5.50/hour plus bonuses. Hands on computer experience. Apply today. Memorial Hall Basement.

SHIPPER/RECEIVER
Summer Position

Millitech Corporation in South Deerfield has a summer position available for a person who can work 30-40 hours per week for June, July, and August. You must be able to pack electronics for shipping and prepare all the paperwork necessary for both shipping and receiving products, equipment, and supplies.

To apply for this position fax or e-mail resume by May 16th to Director of Human Resources Fax# 413-665-0089 e-mail hr@millitech.com

Capa Cod Restaurant Cooks, servers, bartenders, dishwashers. Will train. Housing available. P.O. Box 1728, Eastham, MA 02642. Fax (508)255-9374. Call (508)255-9394

Assistant Manager- Capa Cod Restaurants Good opportunity. Will train. Housing available. P.O. Box 1728, Eastham, MA 02642. Fax (508)255-9374. Call (508)255-9394

Earn up to $3000 part-time in just 4 to 8 weeks. Memoirink needs one highly motivated individual to direct summer sales/marketing project at UMass Amherst. Contact David (800)563-8654

Summer Jobs For The Environment! $2500-$4000/summer. Work with MASSPIRG to stop pollution. Ideal job for college students and others. Career Opportunities. Make a difference this summer. Call Terri 256-6434

FOR RENT

3 bedroom, 1 1/2 baths apt. Available 6/1. Fits 5. Free washer/dryer/dishwasher. Deck. On bus line. $875/month. Call 256-0597

Cape Cottage For Rent South Yarmouth. Great location near jobs. Steps from beach. Available for entire summer. Call 549-1516 for more info

4 bedroom- Northamaton, Jane-June. 5 bedroom- Hadley, June-Aug. 4 bedroom- Northampton, Aug. 13 months, country location. Rooms now- Aug 31, Northampton Arms- Call in August for possible rentals! Skibiski Realtors 586-1827

Sunny Mill Valley Apt. 2 big bedrooms, 2 full baths. Fits 4 easily. With A/C and dishwasher. On bus route. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. $700 a month negotiable. 256-6288

1 or 2 bedroom house available next Fall. $390. Close to campus. Call Melanie 549-5596

1, 2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom apartment. Summer Sublet with Fall Option. Basketball/Tennis, pool, partially furnished, AC/Heat included. On bus line. $275 per person negotiable. Call 549-4972

Renovated, Fully Furnished 3 bedroom apartment at Puffton. Available 6/1. Call Rafael 549-4529

Wanted: 3 or 4 people to sublet or take over our 3 bedroom apt. starting June 1st. Call 549-5362

West Yarmouth Large house, 4 bedroom. 253-7436 or (508)775-4776

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September. Lease $1300+. 253-7879

FOR SALE

Gateway 486-SX with Windows 3.1 and Microsoft Office. $300 or B/O. Call Barbera @ 586-9754

Oakwood Furniture desk, dresser, night table. $65. Call Melissa 549-5799

FOR SALE: couch, chairs, microwave, refrigerator. Contact Anita at salomone@bio.umass.edu

FOR SALE: 1yr old Queen Size mattress $100.00 Call: 253-4905

Mountain Bike- brand new, never used. Cannondale M300 (with manual) Retail over $400. Asking $300 or B/O. Call 546-0717

Have you found a change-purse? Lost somewhere in Mastmar or around Student Union. Small, brown and gray stitched. Please call Amy at 253-6406 if found. Reward!!

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

Cello
Violins
Violas
Handmade in Vermont by Thurmond Knight sold at Stanwood Strings Amherst, MA
1-800-766-0936

MISCELLANEOUS

Whitewater Rafting Student Discounts $55. May 3rd 1-800-Unicorn

Collegian Classifieds
for your buck!

FOR SALE

Twin Bed $30 Night Stand $10. B/O. Call 256-0829

Living room, bedroom, and dining room furniture. CHEAP! Call 256-1545

25 inch JVC TV Very clean $150 or B/O. Must sell. Call 546-4078

Twin Bed with 3 drawers Headboard with 3 shelves included. Excellent condition $150/BO. Call Eva 549-9265

COOLEST IGUANA EVER! Call Jess 9-4367. Fish Tank 50g/ too.

Floppies! Stupid Med Crazy Cheap Floppies- pennies per disk @ 546-9963. Hurry, supplies limited.

Double Fotos Like new. $100 or best offer. Call Kendra 548-7095

Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pickup/Delivery available. Retail hours Sunday only, 10am-5pm at Jacksons Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. To sell equipment other days call 256-0941

Buy, Trade, Sell, Coexign Good quality. Sundays at Jacksons Flea Market, Route 9, Hadley. 586-4781

Color Printer Panasonic KXP-2123 Super Quiet 24-pin color dot matrix $100 SUPER DEAL @ 546-6963

Large computer desk for sale $50. Call Dave at 253-7520

3 Couches For Sale 2 Loveseats + 1 Huge Couch. Lewin Furniture. $2 Lounges + 2 Chairs w/Pads. Charcoal Grill. Come check it out and make me an offer! Craig 253-3336

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Krissy, Happy 19th Birthday! 1st in a lifetime together. Love Always, Tiger

HOUSE FOR RENT

Four bedroom house On bus route. Available 6/1. Call 256-8512

House For Rent $1700 per month. 4 bedrooms. One-half miles from Mullins Center. Gas, heat. Call 253-7879

LOST

Golden Seiko Watch In or around Newman Center. Reward! Offered. Kerri 549-0582

Lost- Necklace Plum wooden beads with little birds in front. Very special to me. Please call Andrea at 546-0717

Have you found a change-purse? Lost somewhere in Mastmar or around Student Union. Small, brown and gray stitched. Please call Amy at 253-6406 if found. Reward!!

ROOM WANTED

Need a room to sublet for summer Price range: $200 to $250 plus utilities. Call 549-4600 ext. 5196

ROOM WANTED

Need 1 or 2 people to share spacious 3 bedroom with 2 males. Starting 6/1 going into the Fall. Heat/Hot water included. $380/month plus utilities. ASAP. Call Chris @ 548-0821

Roommate to share a 3 bedroom apt. with 2 others. Located right in town. Available 9/1. call 546-5978

2 females looking for 2 people to share apartment for Summer/Fall. Michele 546-4954

Need 1 person to share room with female in two room apt. 6/1-8/31. $208 per month. Must rent. Will negotiate. Call Jenn 549-1086

$185/month No lease, cheap, quiet, and on bus route. Call @ @ 256-3589. Bellchertown/Amherst.

Three outgoing females looking for roommate to share two bedroom Mill Valley apartment. $174/month including utilities. Fall Option. Plenty of room. Call 256-8780

MISCELLANEOUS

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call 1-800-472-9575 ext. FS0018

JOIN OUR GLOBAL VILLAGE
1 yr. International MBA
3 Countries & Languages
Financial Aid &
Job Market
Call Texas Graduate
School of International
Management
(512) 888-5441
9 June Enrollment

PERSONALS

To Karri Esman- The Aging Expert Hey look, you finally got one. Had a great semester. It's been fun! Liam

Alexandra, Graduation! Welcome to the world of the unemployed! Andy

To All Collegiate Staff- past and present, Thanks for four great years- and not a single takeover. It's been a lot of fun. -Jacob

To all the people who made my semester so amazing xoo, (Oy Boys, Franks, and Drama Thugs included...) I had a great time— even when I was muttering profanities to myself. The only thing I can suggest is— next semester make Julie Orio Day a reality. Thank You, Best Wishes, Jeremy

ROOM FOR FOR RENT

1 large room in two bedroom apartment. Looking for two females. Available 6/1. Fall and Spring Option. On bus route. Very spacious. Great location. Call 549-3992

Available- 1 bedroom in a Puffton 3 bedroom. Big enough for one or two people. September- May. Call 549-8745

Housemate Needed for Fall 2 miles to campus. $280/month 549-4492

Attention University Women Rooms available beginning Fall '97. $1293 semester includes all utilities and cable. Minute walk to campus. Lynne (508)855-5922 for info.

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+. Call 253-4954 for more info

Summer Sublet w/Fall Option on Puffers Pond. 3 rooms available 6/1. Brand new washer/dryer. Clean, quiet, sunny. $300+. Call 253-4954 for more info.

ROOM WANTED

Need a room to sublet for summer. Price range: $200 to $250 plus utilities. Call 549-4600 ext. 5196

ROOM WANTED

Need 1 or 2 people to share spacious 3 bedroom with 2 males. Starting 6/1 going into the Fall. Heat/Hot water included. $380/month plus utilities. ASAP. Call Chris @ 548-0821

Roommate to share a 3 bedroom apt. with 2 others. Located right in town. Available 9/1. call 546-5978

2 females looking for 2 people to share apartment for Summer/Fall. Michele 546-4954

Need 1 person to share room with female in two room apt. 6/1-8/31. $208 per month. Must rent. Will negotiate. Call Jenn 549-1086

$185/month No lease, cheap, quiet, and on bus route. Call @ @ 256-3589. Bellchertown/Amherst.

Three outgoing females looking for roommate to share two bedroom Mill Valley apartment. $174/month including utilities. Fall Option. Plenty of room. Call 256-8780

ROOM WANTED

Roommate Wanted to share 2 bedroom, 2 bathroom apartment in Mill Valley for Fall 97- Spring 98. Rent negotiable. Call 253-0592

One female UMass student with two bedroom in Brandywine looking for 1 or 2 roommates. Sept. 97- Aug. 98. Please call 549-2660

I need a roommate to share a two bedroom apt. in Sunderland for Fall (undergrad, grad, or foreign student). Must be responsible. No drugs. Call Alison 546-5612

Free room and board in exchange for babysitting. Must have experience and car. Available Summer with Fall and Spring Option. In Holyoke (30 min. ride) 536-9116

Need third person Rent apt. Two family house. All utilities included Call 253-9985

Need a place for the summer? We have 1 room available in Puffton! Maia or female, 1 or 2 people. Call 549-8513 Ask for Jessica for more information. Or Chris at 549-8102

SERVICES

Going to sabatical to September? Single graduate woman, PHD, would house sit. Call Clemence (860)233-9878

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offer free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Rabbit Rescue can help! Don't abandon your bunny! Call us, we'll find him a new home. Eilan 367-0105

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

Summer Sublet 5 min. walk to Heigs. $700/room. 29 Phillips St 549-3975

House for Summer Sublet Close to campus. Ask for Mel. $254 549-5996

Great 3 bedroom apt. in prime location. 5 min. to campus, 5 min. to town. Call Rachel for more info. 253-6449

6/1 with Fall Option 2 bedroom Victorian House in Belchertown. On bus line. Peaceful location near Quabbin Reservoir. 323-7256

Only $685 for 2 bedroom apt. Sublet from June 1st to Aug. 31st. On bus route. Call 253-3264 after 5pm

2 bedroom Brandywine with Fall Option. Available 6/1. $698/month. Call 548-8943

Uptown- 4 bedrooms Great price. Great location. 549-1959

Summer Sublet One bedroom available. Female only. 1 mile from campus. 546-3392

Renovated Puffton Village Apartment- 3 bedrooms available for June 1st sublet. Call Bill at 548-1373.

1 room in otherwise vacant apt. Front and backyards. Dishwasher, washer and dryer. Wall to wall carpet. Full basement. Fully furnished with cable and phone. Great for singles or couples. 5 min. to campus or uptown. Across from Southwest. Best deal in town. Call 549-5893 for info.

SUMMER SUBLET

CHEAP! 1-2 people needed for 1 bedroom in a clean, furnished apt. Central air/HW. Included. On bus line. 1 mile from campus. Call 548-9850

Happy Downtowne Apartment One bedroom. Furnished. $400/month including utilities. 253-6505

Summer Sublet $290. Clean and quiet. 25 min. walk to UMass. Call 549-5957

SUMMER SUBLET- UPTOWN
Apt. 1-4 bedrooms available. Large kitchen and bath. $300/month (negotiable) Call Amy 546-5973

Fall Option Five rooms available in house next to campus. 549-1570

Huge bedroom in South Amherst Mt. Pollux in the backyard. Washer/Dryer. $250/month negotiable. Call Peter 253-5482

2 bedrooms available Huge basement, parking. On bus route. LITERALLY on campus. Dan 546-2982

Boulders- 1 bedroom available in 2 bedroom. Includes A/C and water. On bus line. Call 256-0865 ASAP

$200 month Summer rooms available. Very close to campus and town. Call Cheryl 546-0605 or Lynne (508)655-5922

2 bedroom available with Fall Option in Southpointe Apt. Call 253-2967

Rooms For Rent Behind bars. Uptown Amherst. Four bedrooms. Partly furnished. June 1st till August 31st. $250 a month or best offer. Jen 548-8933

1 bedroom available June 1st- Aug 30. Offside Apts. On bus route. Everything included. $500 a month 665-5171

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom townhouse, for summer sublet. Call 253-6467

Summer Sublet 5 bedroom house On bus/bike route. Front porch. Backyard. Washer/Dryer. Route 9, Hadley. $1175/month. Call 586-0363

One bedroom apartment Uptown above Newberry Comics. Available for June, July, August. Call 253-0223

3 bedroom- Mill Valley 2 baths. Available June 1st. ONE MONTH FREE! Call 253-6467

3 bedroom, fully furnished house on Sunset Ave. 1-5 people. Great location. Less than 1 minute walk from campus. Call anytime 549-2698

Mill Valley- 2 bedroom, 2 bathroom, 2 air conditioners. Fully furnished! With Fall Option. Call 253-6660

3 bedroom Puffton Apt. Great price. Available 6/1. Call 6-6805 or 6-5681

Phillips St. House June 1-Sept 1. Price negotiable. Option of 1 to 4 bedrooms. Call 549-9224

Summer Sublet available 6/1 to 8/31. 1 bedroom in townhouse one block from bus, laundry, and downtown Noho. Great house, big room. A steal @ $300 per month. Option to renew lease. Older/or grad student preferred. Smoking OK. If interested, call John, Ken, or Chris @ 584-8680

Nice room in 4 bedroom apt. Great house. Great location. $280/month. Call Yvonne 549-1627

2 bedroom apt. Brandywine. A/C. $750. Partly furnished. Available 6/1 549-4198

2 bedroom apt. Starting June 1st with Fall Option. Heat/Hot Water included. $710/month. Call 549-5272

2 bedroom apt. Starting June 1st with Fall Option. Newly carpeted. $775 a month. Two minute walk to bus. Call 549-5379 Ask for Jess or Mandy

3 bedroom renovated Puffton Apt. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. Rent negotiable. 548-9310

SUMMER SUBLET

18th Century House in Belchertown. 3 bedrooms, furnished. Close to lake and trails. Great price! 323-9572

Summer Sublet with Option Uptown 1 bedroom. 5 min. walk to campus. $515. Call 256-8251

Large bedroom in 5 bedroom house. On Route 9. $267 a month. Call 256-8243

Spacious 2 bedroom Available 6/1. Heat/Hot Water/Gas included. Minutes from UMass. On bus route. $600/month. Call 549-4982 Fall Option.

Share 2 bedroom apt. at Colonial Village for the summer with female. 253-3241

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment. Laundry and Gym on site. Quiet female non-smoker. No pets. $335 includes heat and hot water 253-6426

3 bedroom newly renovated apartment Puffton Village. Best Offer. Available 6/1. Call 549-5405

Sublet or Take Over Lease 6/1 2 bedroom Brandywine. Recently renovated. 549-5132

Great one bedroom apt. for Summer. Sublet w/Fall Option. Colonial Village. Available June 1st $400/month. Call now at 256-0660

Sublet- Sonderlood PVTA stops at house. Considerate housemates. One bedroom $284/month. 665-9066

2 bedrooms in 3 bedroom apt. in South Amherst. 2 bathrooms. Rent negotiable. Call 253-6606

Sublet $200 a month in Amherst. On bus line. Call Andy 253-5482

Puffton! One large room and one small room in 3 bedroom apartment. Call 549-8969

Single, double, triple rooms in big 3 floor house on edge of campus. 3 bath. 3 shower. kitchen, cable, utilities. Only $500 all summer. Available May 23. Call Fabio at 549-7076 for info

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom in Montague $625 summer. Cats OK. 367-0297

CHEAP! 2 or 3 bedrooms apt. Main St., Amherst. HUGE backyard. Call Sam or Joe at 546-3798

Apt. For Dogs!!! June 1st. $405/month. Utilities! Not far from campus (ES) Will go quickly! Veronica @ 256-0603

Need a place to sublet for summer? Nice little cheap room. $230 + utilities. Call 549-9221 for more info

Two females looking to sublet Fall Semester only. Call Katy and Rena 546-3114

Heat and Water Included 2 bedroom A/C. $800/month. Starts June 1st. Fall Option. Furnished. Call 549-4324. We can accommodate any needs.

TRAVEL

EUROPE $175.
Written USA $79 - $129.
Caribb./Mexico $199 r/t
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!!!!
http://www.airhitch.org
AIRHITCH 1-800-326-2009

I need a ride to Charlotte, NC, on Sun., May 25. Will share expenses. Call Heidi 665-8130

WANTED

Jazz Band needed Sat., May 17. Call 253-6520

Collegian Classifieds Dept.
It's a job-selling! Congratulations on a job well done

Five College Community Calendar turn to page 3

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

AMY FAIRCHILD
LIVE TONIGHT • $2 COVER

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 Bud Light Drafts
15¢ wings
after 10pm

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 14, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Spirits of the Jaguar		Colt: The Legend-Legacy		Antique Guns of the West		America on Wheels
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ath Journal	Nanny	Dave's World	Last Don (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3 PA)		News		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Dave's World	Last Don (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3 PA)		News		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Coach		Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Sister, Sister	Smart Guy	Jamie Foxx	Wayans Bros.	News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News		NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Newsradio	Naked Truth	Wings	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Past Imperfect"	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Sentinel "His Brother's Keeper"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	30		NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Newsradio	Naked Truth	Wings	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Past Imperfect"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Pacific Palisades "I'm Away"		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Newsradio	Naked Truth	Wings	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Past Imperfect"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Spirits of the Jaguar		Great Performances		Leonard Bernstein's New York		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Coach		Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld		Mad Abo. You		Sentinel "His Brother's Keeper"		News		Mad Abo. You	M*A*S*H
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★★½ "The Sackets" (1979, Western) Tom Selleck, Sam Elliott
A&E	53	Quincy "T.K.O."		Law & Order		Biography: Stranger		American Justice "I Confess"		20th Century (R)		Law & Order "Pride and Joy"
CNN	23	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Moneyline
COM	24	Tick		Dream On	Daily Show (R)	Howie Mandel	★★★ "Mystery Date" (1991, Comedy) Ethan Hawke, Teri Polo.			Gallagher	Dream On	Daily Show	Howie Mandel
DISC	52	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings (R)		Wild Discovery: Jackal		Discover Magazine "Weather		Bodies – Dead and Alive (R)		Wild Discovery: Jackal
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter			Major League Baseball: Teams to Be Announced. (Live)						Major League Baseball: Orioles at Angels
LIFE	49	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Tomb Song" (1993, Drama) Raquel Welch, Jack Scalia.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	33	(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		World Tour (R)	Singled Out	Music Videos (In Stereo)				Real World	Jenny M.	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	46	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	45	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest DSV (In Stereo)		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		Sightings (R) (In Stereo)		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	28	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Wondr-Wealthy	Ultrascience	What Happened?		Cyberspace-Undiscovered		Wondr-Wealthy	Ultrascience
TNT	25	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball Playoffs: Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Inside-NBA		★★ "Above the Rim" (1994)
USA	62	Renegade "Val's Song"		Highlander: The Series (R)		Murder, She Wrote (In Stereo)		★★½ "The Spider and the Fly" (1994, Mystery) Mel Harris.		Silk Stalkings "T.K.O." (R)		Silk Stalkings "T.K.O." (R)
HBO	29	(4:15)	★½ "Demolition Day" (1995) Martin Sheen, PG-			★★½ "Grumpier Old Men" (1995, Comedy) Jack Lemmon, PG-13				Tracey Takes		Larry Sanders	Comedy Hour. Richard Belzer
MAX	31	★★★ "The Truth About Cats and Dogs" (1996) Uma Thurman. R				★ "Leprechaun 3" (1995) Warwick Davis. R				★★★ "Bad Boys" (1995, Drama) Martin Lawrence. R			"Cemetery"
SHOW	51	(4:25)	★★½ "Tiger Heart" (1996) Liz Roberts. PG-13			Outer Limits "Regeneration" R		★★ "Mary Reilly" (1996, Horror) Julia Roberts. (In Stereo) R				Poltergeist	"Star 21" (1983)

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

HI, KITTY KITTY! YOU'RE A PRETTY KITTY!
WHAT ON EARTH ARE YOU DOING??
I'M MAKING A VIDEO OF MYSELF TO KEEP OOGIE COMPANY TOMORROW WHILE WE'RE AWAY!
HOW'S MY PRETTY KITTY? MEOW MEOW!
I THINK YOU MAY HAVE INHALED A LITTLE TOO MUCH FLEA POWDER.

UMass spring teams off to NCAA tourney action; Minutemen to face No. 1 Princeton Tigers Saturday

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

MEN'S LACROSSE
No. 8 UMass vs. No. 2 Princeton

It is not going to be about moving the Himalayas or parting the Red Sea. None of that "upset of Biblical proportions" jargon will be used to describe it.

The No. 8 Massachusetts men's lacrosse team refuses to assume the position of David when they face the Goliath, No. 1 Princeton, Saturday at Hempstead, N.Y. The Minutemen are 9-5 and the Tigers are 12-0, but UMass knows that if it plays its own style and keeps to the game plan, it can achieve what 12 others have failed at already this season.

"We'll need to defend well, get great goaltending, control the ball on offense and finish our opportunities in transition," UMass coach Greg Cannella said.

The Tigers are in good position to repeat as national champions. They have the stingiest defense in the country, allowing just 6.50 goals per game, and their offense averages 15.3 in the plus column. Their Ivy League affiliation keeps them from scheduling too many top caliber opponents, but that obviously did not hurt them last season.

"I don't think [their schedule] hurts them, maybe in the beginning of the game," Cannella said. "If so it'll be a gap for us jump on them a little early."

The Minutemen are going to need early success. Princeton likes to go ahead quickly, using an early-and-often goal scoring philosophy. Their scoring average is deceiving, because, as a matter of principle, coach Bill Tierney refuses to run the score up over 19 goals in blow-out wins.

Earlier this season, Cornell removed its goaltender in favor of a fourth attackman in the latter stages of the game, knowing that the Tigers would sooner play keep-away than notch a twentieth goal.

"They could have easily scored 25 on those teams," Cannella said. Those teams include Harvard, Cornell, Rutgers, Dartmouth and Penn State. None of them scored double figures on the Tigers, and none of them made the tournament.

"If we can keep them under [their scoring] average and contain them, we'll have done what we wanted to do and succeeded in the game," Cannella said.

One opponent that Princeton did not dominate was Brown, who did make the tournament. The Bears held a 2-1 lead at the half, but were not able to hold off the Princeton attack for much longer. The Tigers upped the ante to 6-2 in the third, and held on in the fourth for the 8-5 win.

Brown plays a similar style to UMass', controlling the ball, allowing few shots and keeping the score low. UMass needs the solid second half that Brown did not get to seal an upset.

"We will prepare our guys to [play well in the second half], and they will be up to that challenge," Cannella said.

"The [defensive] middies will be very important against Princeton," he said. "They were outstanding against Hofstra, they were capable of producing a lot of goals from the midfield.

"There are some guys in the [Princeton] midfield who we'll have to contain. I'm sure we'll do a good job."

Shutting down the Princeton

Turn to LAX, page 11

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

UMass lacrosse hopes its tenacious defense can help it in an upset bid over Princeton this weekend

Minutewoman ace Henderson propels softball to series

By Corey Peter Goodman
and Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

SOFTBALL
UMass vs. Boston College

After beginning the season on a sour note, dropping 15 of their first 22 decisions, the Massachusetts softball team has enjoyed a complete turnaround. Reeling off their last 11 games, the Minutewomen have not yielded a run in 67 consecutive innings. But this weekend will bring a true test to UMass when they host the NCAA Regionals at Totman Field for the right to advance to the College World Series in Oklahoma City.

In the double elimination tournament, UMass is a No. 2 seed in a bracket which features nationally-ranked Colorado State (No. 10), Boston College and Brown. UMass will open up with interstate rival and No. 3 seed BC Friday at 1 p.m. The two other schools will square up against each other in the nightcap.

"We can't look past Boston College," coach Elaine Sortino said. "They are very deep and they have a fine pitcher, and we have to be ready to play."

If the Minutewomen get past the first-round, they will most likely have the Western Athletic Conference Champion Colorado State Rams waiting for them.

"They are an excellent, straight-up softball team," Sortino said. "They have Nikki Johnson, who is their No. 1 pitcher, and they have been riding her all year long."

Thankfully UMass has its own firing power in sophomore pitcher Danielle Henderson. She is the Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year and was named A-10 Tournament MVP for the second straight season after throwing the first no-hitter in the tournament's history. Henderson holds every UMass single-game strikeout record, and is only the fourth such pitcher to fan 400 batters in her career. She is the first UMass hurler to strike out 200 hitters in a season, as she approaches the 300 mark this weekend. Henderson heads into the Regionals on a torrid pace, throwing 51.1 consecutive scoreless innings, a school record.

For Henderson, softball has not just been a ticket to college, but a life-long passion.

Henderson picked up her first softball in third grade in the quiet town of Commack, N.Y. At first it was just a child's game to her, as she jumped around from position to position, just to keep up with her friends. But when she took the mound her sophomore year at Commack High School, she was there to stay.

In high school Henderson was rough around the edges, but at 6-foot-1, her overpowering

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 11

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The Minutewomen are looking for a bid into the College World Series when they host Boston College this weekend.

Women's water polo takes ninth in nationals

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's water polo team just finished up its season in Ann Arbor, Mich. This past weekend, the Minutewomen competed with the best of the best, finishing up ninth overall at the United States Water Polo Collegiate Championships.

Their final record for the season is 26-7 overall, a significant improvement over last year's 16-8. UMass coach Bob Newcomb said he was pleased with the final results of the tournament, and talked about the past two seasons.

"I'm not sure if there is a way to compare the two seasons," Newcomb said. "The two programs had different goals, and each team had its own successes."

There was certainly no lack of success from this year's squad. This season saw the Minutewomen go to Nationals for the first time ever and set many new school records.

The Minutewomen began the National tournament Friday night with two matches against California teams, one of which they had already played twice this season.

Against second-seeded California, the Minutewomen tried out a newer, slower offense, trying to squelch the Bears, a relatively fast team. In the first quarter, UMass scored one goal, falling behind to California's three. The second quarter was the same. California climbed way ahead during the third, scoring four unanswered goals, but the Minutewomen came back to outscore California 4-3 during the final minutes of the game for a 13-6 loss.

"California is an extremely talented team with a lot of experience," Newcomb said. "No one gave us a chance to hang in the game, but we managed to stay with them."

Andrea Vazquez scored three goals during the match, setting the pace for the rest of the tournament, in which she would score five more goals. In addition, Vazquez, along with teammate Katie Grogan, was named honorable mention All-Tournament.

"[California] would have been one of those teams that if we had won, it would have been a major upset," Newcomb said.

Later that night, the Minutewomen took on No. 6 seed USC, a team which UMass split games with earlier in the season. The Minutewomen lost to USC 5-11 and beat the Trojans 6-5 in double overtime.

UMass came out strong with a goal by Vicky Bamond with 4:12 left in the first quarter. The Minutewomen, with the help of Marcie Hupp and Maria Velazquez outscored USC 4-3 during the first quarter, but USC quickly tied the game in the second. From then on, USC was just one step ahead, edging out the Minutewomen with a score of 9-7.

Grogan, Vazquez and Hupp tallied two goals apiece. UMass goalie Peggy Nieves had nine saves.

After losing the first two games, a ninth place finish was the best UMass could do. But that didn't deter the Minutewomen from giving it their all.

"No one decided to give up," Newcomb said. "They kept playing hard, aggressive and very well."

Next up for UMass was a match against No. 13 Michigan. The Minutewomen totally dominated the Wolverines, starting off strong in the first quarter with three goals, tallying five in the second, four in the third and one in the final.

The win against Michigan set UMass up to meet rival No. 8 Maryland in the championship game. Previously, at Easterns just a few weeks ago, Maryland beat

Turn to POLO, page 11

Baseball travels to A-10's, face Virginia Tech in 1st round

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow evening, the Massachusetts baseball team will defend its Atlantic 10 Championship, which it has held for the past two seasons. The championship will be held in Boyertown, Penn., at Bear Stadium. UMass' game is scheduled to begin at 7:35 p.m.

Its first round opponent, Virginia Tech., is not only a conference rival, but the team that UMass upset in the A-10 finals last year. The Minutemen won two out the three games in this year's regular season series.

The tournament consists of four teams: UMass, Xavier, Fordham and Va. Tech. Xavier and Fordham are the other first round pair. The A-10 tournament system has the two winners of the first round advance to the winners' bracket, while the two losers descend to the losers' bracket. The round robin is double elimination, and if all goes well, UMass will have only three games to play to capture the title. The maximum number of games that one team can play and still win is four.

Led by Aaron Braunstein, who was named National Player of the Week, the Minutemen will attempt to capture the tournament and lock an automatic berth in the 1997 NCAA Baseball Tournament.

Braunstein has taken his game to a higher level over the past week, hatting .586 with three home runs, four doubles, a triple and a team leading 16 RBI. He also led the team with 14 round-trippers.

On top of the offensive effort Braunstein gave coach Mike Stone all year, his defense was among the team's best. Behind Brian Samela, whose fielding percentage was flawless, Braunstein made only one error over the entire season. It was for that reason that he was moved

Turn to BASEBALL, page 11

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The baseball team kick off their defense of their Atlantic 10 championship against Virginia Tech tomorrow night.

A misty-eyed look at the year gone by Chris Stamm, Casey Kane and Luke Meredith walk into a bar. Who gets the writer? A look at a year of misty-eyed memories by the Collegian's best:

Natty Light

Kathleen Ralls — Haigis Hoopla. A tournament where mouthwash-flavored Gatorade is served to quench a basketball player and a team called the Hilltop Hoochies can enter. I want to tell you about how my team, With Cheese, got gypped out of a win by careless score keeping.

We — Robyn, Deb and I — were basically out there for the car and the T-shirts. Our triumvirate was a fierce, tie- dyed bunch fully equipped with the best running shoes basketball should never be played with.

But to the actual game, everything was running like clockwork. Deb and I attempted a predictable and very illegal pick and roll scam a hundred times, Robyn was posting up a little too deep on the 3-point line and basically our shooting accuracy was at about nine percent. For some reason our Bulls triangle offense just wasn't working that day.

So the ref held the score at 6-3, us. Our opponent claimed that two of them had scored two points and the ref agreed that he had probably just made a mistake and made it 6-4. From that point on, we were dripping with rage, playing ferocious defense. To reach in or to not reach in was not an option. There wasn't a limit on fouls so who could care? Diving, sliding, wrestling till the whistle? Of course. So when the full 30 minutes was up and all six of us had all but collapsed to the gridded puzzle, the score was tied, but we ended up losing in sudden death.

In retrospect, we had nothing to be ashamed about. We had our fun and we had provided amusement for our friends to laugh at us for at least a couple years.

Busch Lite

Jeremy Adams — Not much gets me misty. I don't know what to say, except that UMass sports and Collegian Sports are my UMass. I'm leaving UMass, not unwillingly as a graduate, but willingly as a transfer in search of new experiences and something new. It's the hardest thing I've ever done, and not because of the basketball team, the pleasant and accommodating Pioneer Valley or the rocking (although excessively substance-dependant) social scene.

The sports I've followed at UMass, from volleyball to women's gym to women's basketball to men's lacrosse, and the recent NCAA sanctioning has taught me one thing: keep it on the d.l. It's the little things: the conversations with players and coaches off the record; interviewing ecstatic gymnasts getting the exposure they know they deserve; watching a lacrosse game, a struggle, a needed win over Notre Dame from the hill at Garber Field; the people I've met, the places I've gone. I'll miss my UMass.

Collegian kids, you're the best. LM — I'll be thinking of you when I'm reaping the PD benefits of public persona. JK — let the good times roll, you're up there with the best in that department. CS — once again thanks for the chance(s), you'll be a successful EIC.

Corey Goodman — Well, where should I begin? The days I spent in the dark campus center basement won't soon be forgotten. I have to first thank Stamm and Casey for giving a short MVC kid (not talking about Luke) a chance at the big time. And also thanks to the rest of the guys (you know who you are) for making me feel at home, and for brainwashing me into thinking I had some skills.

What was my most misty-eyed memory? Well, how can I forget those Thursday afternoon Beverly Hills discussions with Casey. We always agreed that Tracy was a real bitch. By the way, when am I gonna get that column? Thanks for applauding my Coke bottle thing. Then there was me, Jorma and someone else showing love for Huey Lewis by singing every single track off of Sports. Oh yeah, thanks Jorma for teaching me the finer aspects of writing in between our interesting discussions about women. You know where my heart lies. Really, thanks for everything. Stamm, thanks for laughing at all my cruel jokes and inflating my ego. Even though you're from Andover, I still respect your MVC blood. I remember Place getting drunk and striking out with every girl at Boulders. Remember the girl in the red with the big... eyes. JR, good luck wherever you're going, and just remember even though she's stupid, she's hot. Jackie, you're the best. I know I never got to see anyone get severely injured with you at those frigid softball games, but we had fun anyway. A girl named

Turn to MISTY, page 11

1-800-859-6543

QUICKIES

Illustrations by Ken Perkins, Wake Forest U., N.C.

HANDS UP OR WE'LL SQUIRT

Yale U.

Twenty-five Yalies clad in black grabbed Super Soakers, donned pantyhose masks and ambushed a high school Model United Nations session at a lecture hall. Posing as Irish Republican Army terrorists, the students occupied the room for 10 minutes — turning off lights, broomsticking the doors shut, throwing balls of paper and blowing cigarette smoke in the air. Before the cops showed up, the students blasted the British for "800 years of occupation in Ireland." All but one of the IRA poseurs got away. That student was arrested for disturbing the peace and fined $25. Talk about night of the living ed.

BUS STOP GIG

U. of Georgia

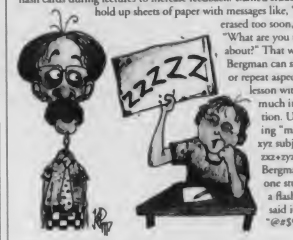
Riding the campus bus was never much fun until U. of Georgia senior Brent Arrington took the wheel. It's always open—mike night on Arrington's "Karaoke Bus," where passengers can come to the front and strut their stuff. Arrington keeps a wide selection of tapes on hand — everything from "La Bamba" to the "Oscar Mayer Wiener Song" — but the Karaoke Bus isn't limited to musical acts, he says. "If you've got a joke or story, a dramatic monologue or just some issues you've got to work out, please come and share with us." But if you want to do stand-up, you still have to hold on to the safety handles.

WRITING MISSION: POSSIBLE

Carleton College, Minn.

After-hours emergencies pop up constantly on college campuses: flat tires, barroom brawls, falling out of dorm lofts and … writer's block? At Carleton, writing assignments are life-and-death priorities, which is why the school has decided to keep a tutor on call who carries around a beeper for those writing emergencies. That's right — just dial a tutor with your split infinitives or run-on sentences, and they'll phone to your rescue. Wonder if they make in-class house calls?

IT'S IN THE BAG



Kansas State U.

For Minh Tran, one of life's most pressing questions is "Paper or plastic?" The chemical engineering sophomore and Dillons Superstore employee is trying to take bagging groceries to new heights. Since winning the state bagging competition against a Price Chopper clerk, he's off to Houston to compete for the national title. To win, he must fully pack two paper and three plastic bags in as little as 30 seconds, taking note of weight, technique, appearance, distribution and speed. Now that's fast food.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

U. of California, Berkeley

Remember when you used flash cards to learn math? Well, professor George Bergman is urging his multivariable calculus class to use flash cards during lectures to increase feedback. Baffled students can hold up sheets of paper with messages like, "You erased too soon," or "What are you talking about?" That way, Bergman can slow down or repeat aspects of the lesson without much interruption. Upon writing "maximize xyz subject to $xz+xyz+xy=12$," Bergman saw one student raise a flash card that said it all — "@#$%&*!"

SPIN CYCLE

Humboldt State U., Calif.

Students at the Humboldt Campus Center for Appropriate Technology are putting the pedal to the Maytag to get their clothes Downy fresh. In an effort to make students healthy and environmentally conscious, 40-year old inventor Bart Orlando attached an exercise bike to a washing machine. He threw in a few pulleys, chains and sprockets and — voilà — clean laundry and a workout rolled into one. Maybe someday tags will read, "Wash by foot only."

BEEDIES BABIES

Hampton U., Va.

The administration at Hampton wants the beedies trend to go up in smoke and has banned the the Indian ebony-leaf cigarettes. Although the cigarettes do not contain hallucinogens, they will fall under the campus' existing drug policy because beedies look and smell like marijuana. A rose by any other name might be an illegal weed.

MIND YOUR "E"S AND "Q"S

U. of New Mexico

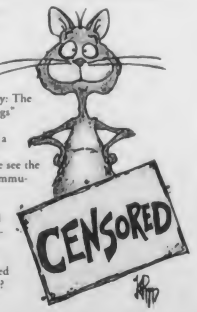
The U. of New Mexico's Human Resources Department got reprimanded in the school's student newspaper, The Daily Lobo. A Lobo staffer lambasted the department after spotting a misspelled word in a want ad. The ad, placed in the Chronicle of Higher Education, was for a UNM "Director of Financial Aide." The student was infuriated when an administrator told her, "It can be spelled either way and neither is wrong." Au contraire, mon frère, says the student journalist, citing Webster's New World Dictionary. An "aide" is an assistant; "aid" is assistance. Sounds like UNM's Human Resources could use both.

NO MORE GAMES

Texas, Florida

Quarters, Thumper, Asshole and drinking cheap to your heart's content may be things of the past in two Southern states. Texas Representative Tony Goolsby filed House Bill 73, which would make it a misdemeanor if anyone "arranges, conducts or participates in a [drinking] game." And Florida Senator Fred Dudley is making his second attempt in four years to dry out happy hours in Florida by sponsoring a bill banning happy hour specials at restaurants and bars. When asked if she would support such legislation, one student's response was simply, "I never."

FASHION VICTIMS



Kent State U., Ohio

Students in the Women's Movement Network at Kent State got catwalk-y over the spring fashion tryouts. They responded with signs, fliers and protests about the show's "unhealthy and discriminating" model requirements: Women had to fit sizes four through 10 and stand between 5-foot-9 and 6-foot-1. Visiting professor Morris Arrari, who is also a designer in Paris, didn't understand the hullabaloo. "Only in America do I see this nonsense. Designers look for an ideal that fits what they're designing for. What are we supposed to do, design clothes for fat people?" Nope, just real people.

THAT DARN CAT

U. of Texas, Austin

Things are out of control on the comics page of The Daily Texan. Ever since the paper ran senior Tim Beynart's comic, "Nutty: The Kitten With Testicles for Legs" (it's exactly what it sounds like), the paper has received a flood of letters to the editor from outraged readers. Some see the humor as a front for the Communist Party; others find it downright disgusting. In protest, one student decided to leave it to beaver and submitted her own comic strip, "Beaver: The Walking Vagina." What ever happened to Garfield and Marmaduke?

ROLL TAPE

U. of Kansas, Lawrence

When a Lawrence resident won tickets to a Kansas vs. U. of Missouri basketball game from a local radio station, he probably thought he'd just breeze in and out of the station with the free tickets. Easier said than done. The man had to pick up the tickets from a Kansas fraternity, where the radio show was being broadcast to promote the big game. Brothers at the house didn't take kindly to the man's confession that he was a Missouri fan, so they duct taped him to a wall. And we thought that only happened to pledges.

U.NEWS

Bad Words? Whatever!

IF YOU RESPOND "WITH ATTITUDE" when people berate you for doing "La Macarena," steer clear of Lake Superior State U., Mich., because you've been banished. Lake State included "with attitude" and "La Macarena" among oft-repeated phrases like "phone tag" and "as if" in this year's List of Words Banished from the Queen's English for Misuse, Overuse and General Uselessness.

The list of the most annoying words takes nominations from students and teachers at colleges and high schools from across the country. The public relations office furnishes the list to the media on New Year's Day and posts it on the school's Web site (www.lssu.edu).

Thirty additions made the list this year, including "you go, girl," "aromatherapy," "downtime" and "get a life," which had escaped the List's wrath until now. The Clueless-inspired "whatever" led the pack, but political buzz phrases like "building a bridge" irked respondents, too.

So how did the smallest public university in Michigan come to guard the queen's English?

According to Tom Pink, director of Lake State public relations, the idea struck the former director in 1976. "Bill Rabe was great at coming up with wacky stuff to get the school some attention. When someone started making fun of the queen's honor list, he got the idea for a 'dishonored' list."

Ironically, the claim to fame goes largely unnoticed by the students. "I've been here three years and I didn't even know we had the List until this year," says junior Tammy Goss. "Actually, I've never seen it before today."

Goss says one more catchphrase should have made it: touch base. "You can only have your base touched so many times before it gets annoying."

By Maggie Berry, U. of California, Davis/Illustration by Dwayne Wright, East Carolina U.

Funny Money

DOUG CLARKE HAS NOTHING AGAINST DEAD PRESidents, but he'd rather not carry them in his wallet. "Our money is so unattractive," says the Virginia Commonwealth U. senior. "My professor always says we're going into the 21st century with 19th century money in our pockets."

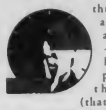
Clarke's professor, Philip Meggs of the communication art and design department, feels so strongly about his statement that last October he challenged his students to redesign the boring buck.

"We need money that reflects the creative potential of our times," Meggs says.

More than 300 students submitted entries, and the top five were chosen by student vote. In January, the winners presented their designs to the U.S. treasurer in Washington, D.C.

Designs ranged from wacky, colorful collages of modern images like subways to bills that resembled comic strips. Others chose to stick to more traditional notes with American icons. Senior Sandra Gayle Wade used old standby George Washington but added a twist — Martha. "There have always been powerful women behind our presidents, but they never get recognition," Wade says.

Senior Erickson Diga's dollar focused on making love, not war. He added the symbol of peace, a white dove. "Green is now associated with greed and crime. I hope we're moving toward that kind of [peaceful] society."



Treasury officials were impressed, but the bills were no sale. Officials say changing the currency is harder than robbing a bank. It's usually done only to enhance security, not looks. It also requires Congressional approval.

But that's not stopping Meggs and his cool-cash crusaders. The next stop on their currency campaign is 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. Meggs says, "We're going to have to get the president involved."

By Maggie Welter, James Madison U., Va. /Illustrations courtesy of professor Philip Meggs, Virginia Commonwealth U. From top to bottom created by: Erickson Diga, Michael Courtney, Barbara Spies.

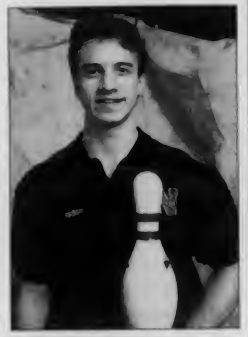
Kingpin

BOY, THAT GUY HAS SOME BALLS. AT LEAST that's the general consensus among the pins at Sun Valley Lanes in west Lincoln, Neb., since Jeremy Sonnenfeld waltzed through in February.

Game after game after game, the U. of Nebraska, Lincoln, sophomore threw strike after strike after strike — making him the first person in the world (that's right ... in the world) to bowl a perfect 900-point, three-game series at a sanctioned tournament.

"I just couldn't do anything wrong," Sonnenfeld says of his super bowl experience.

A dedicated pinhead since age 12, Sonnenfeld says until this competition, the Junior Husker Tournament, 826 was his highest series tally.



The source of the streak? Sonnenfeld claims it was a ring that brought him good luck. His girlfriend bought him the ring in Las Vegas last summer, and he won $30,000 gambling while he was wearing it.

One week after the ring helped him nab 900, Sonnenfeld thought it was time to return the favor. During the American Bowling Congress celebration in his honor — where he was awarded a diamond-studded gold ring — Sonnenfeld proposed to his lady luck.

"I thought it was kind of appropriate that if I was getting a ring, she should, too," he says.

Just one question: Will they walk down the aisle or the alley?

By Lynda Twardowski, Michigan State U. / Photo by Matt Bruggeman, U. of Nebraska, Lincoln

Bowled over.

The Buzz

• Just when you thought being a student was the most expensive thing in America, the nation's prisoners have you beat. An analysis of federal and state budgets by the Justice Policy Institute showed that taxpayers cough up $22,000 to $25,000 per year to incarcerate an offender. That's about the same as annual tuition costs for the most expensive colleges in the country. The study also reports that spending on prisons in America exceeds spending on higher education. From 1987 to 1995, spending on prisons increased by 30 percent, whereas higher education spending dropped by 18 percent.

• Students will take the money and run from a good cause for a good price. According to a poll conducted by Cornell U. professor Robert Frank, students would accept job offers from companies they perceived as socially irresponsible if they were well-compensated for it. For example, it would take an average of $37,000 in additional salary to lure students away from the Sierra Club to work for the National Rifle Association. The poll of Cornell seniors also concluded that males were more likely to take the payoff than females.

• A new bill filed in the U.S. House of Representatives in February may pull the wool off the eyes of the public when it comes to campus crime. The Accuracy in Campus Crime Reporting Act of 1997 (H.R. 715) would open campus police logs, deny confidentiality for students accused of a crime and open administrative discipline procedures.

$_—_/_—_—_·_—_

WE CAN NOW MAKE $65,000 OF YOUR STUDENT LOANS DISAPPEAR.

It's not magic, it's the Army's Educational Loan Repayment Program. If not in default, federally insured college loans up to $65,000 can completely disappear after three years of active Army service. The amount and duration of repayment varies for the Army Reserve.

Your college experience may allow you to enter the Army at a higher rank and pay grade. And you may also qualify for sophisticated skill training.

For more information, call 1-800-USA-ARMY, Ext. 440, visit our website at www.goarmy.com or mail in the coupon today.

YES, I'd like more information on the ARMY EDUCATIONAL LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM

❑ ACTIVE 12LRPT017LP ❑ RESERVE 1BLRPT017LS ❑ BOTH A2LRPT017LR

SEND TO: Army Opportunities, P.O. Box 3219
Warminster, PA 18974

Name_____

Address_____

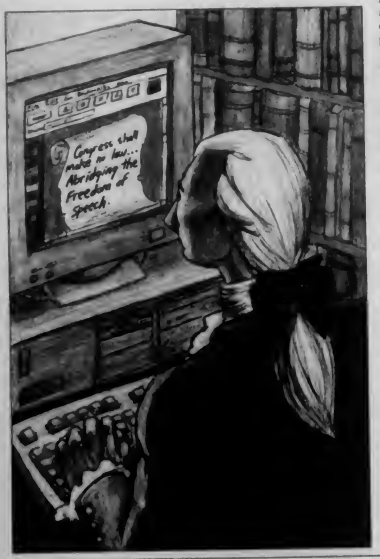
City_____ State_____ Zip_____

Phone_____ Birthday____/____/____

Circle last year of college completed 1 2 3 4

Social Security number*_____

*This information is voluntary, and will be used for recruiting purposes only.



"Censorship is the bastard child of technology." Robert Corn-Revere*

BY JAMES HIBBERD
Assistant Editor
Illustration by John Lepinski, Brigham Young U.

FOR LEGISLATORS, THE INTERNET IS A NIGHTMARE. The communications network cannot be constrained to a jurisdiction, it isn't controlled at a central location and it gives any individual with a computer the power to reach millions.

But last spring, when the government attempted to ban "indecent" material on the Web with the Bill Clinton-backed Communications Decency Act (CDA), students and faculty at colleges across the nation began a movement to fight Internet censorship.

Some of these Internet battles may seem insignificant, such as a student fighting to keep his Web page. Others, like the ongoing rally against the CDA, are commanding the attention of the Supreme Court. But all are being closely watched by free-speech advocates, religious groups, Internet users and educators. These observers suspect that the cases being fought by students and academics may write the operating rules for the greatest communications invention since the printing press.

The price of free speech

Chris Landers never thought of himself as a First Amendment activist, but the California State U., Northridge, senior sued his school after administrators yanked his Web site off the university server. According to Landers, administrators objected to his site's endorsement of a Democratic candidate for state Senate after the candidate's Republican opponent complained. "It wasn't like I was Larry Flynt," Landers says.

In court, the university argued that Landers' site represented state funds being used for political purposes.

"It seemed absurd to limit students in what they put on their Web pages or write in their e-mail," Landers says. "It seemed contradictory to the whole concept of a university. If college is about anything, it's supposed to be about ideas."

A Los Angeles Superior Court judge agreed, saying that when the government creates a public forum, it cannot restrict the contents of the speech.

Although the vast majority of Web users, like Landers, have benign motivations, the Internet free-speech issue is complicated by individuals who use the Web as an outlet for their darker impulses. Individuals like Jake A. Baker.

In early 1995, a U. of Michigan student, Baker (real name Abraham Jacob Alkhabaz) was arrested for sending a story through the Internet about raping and torturing a fellow classmate. But a court dismissed the prosecution's case, saying the posting did not constitute a threat, as the story didn't advance "some goal through use of intimidation."

The court may have ruled, but students are still divided over the outcome of Baker's case. Likewise in the case of U. of Kansas grad student Benjamin C. Phelps.

The grandson of a Topeka pastor, Phelps created a Web site with the address www.godhatesfags.com.

"It had a bunch of anti-gay propaganda, about every slur you can imagine, select Bible verses taken out of context and links to pictures of his group picketing funerals of people who died of AIDS," says Mike Silverman, a recent Kansas grad who wrote a letter of protest to one of Phelps' Internet service providers.

Despite his objection to Phelps' site, Silverman stresses he doesn't agree with government censorship. Silverman appreciates that his protest is protected by the First Amendment. Just like Phelps' page.

Gray areas

So far, the majority of Internet content court rulings have sided with the party invoking the First Amendment. But not all. U. of Oklahoma assistant professor of journalism Bill Loving sued OU to prevent the school from blocking about 100 sexually explicit newsgroups from its Internet server. But a federal judge ruled against the professor.

Loving says some of the blocked newsgroups contained political discussions and that the university was instituting prior restraint on a public forum.

Despite the setback, Loving plans to appeal the decision. Why is Loving, who's currently awaiting a university decision on whether he'll receive tenure, determined to pursue the case?

"It's very simple: The university violated the First Amendment. I teach the First Amendment," Loving says. "If I don't stand up for the First Amendment in the face of this sort of action, then I'm a big hypocrite and I don't deserve to teach."

Bennett Haselton, a junior at Vanderbilt U., Tenn., would certainly agree. Most CDA antagonists say software that blocks out controversial Web sites is preferable to government censorship, but not Haselton. His organization, Peacefire, protests restrictive software (http://www.peacefire.org/).

Haselton argues that programs like CYBERsitter block out educational sites about women's issues, religion and safe sex, as well as the sites of free-speech advocates.

"They block material that would never be banned in this country," Haselton says.

> "It seemed absurd to limit students in what they put on their Web pages or write in their e-mail."
> CHRIS LANDERS, SENIOR, CALIFORNIA STATE U., NORTHRIDGE

Supreme Court justice?

Still, the most concentrated effort against Internet censorship is the ongoing attack on the CDA. Briefs filed by organizations like the Student Press Law Center and the American Association of University Professors (A.A.U.P.) are urging the Supreme Court to throw out the law.

One of the briefs was signed by Boston U. med student Tri Dang Do, who created a Web page about sexually transmitted diseases (http://med-www.bu.edu/people/sycamore/std/). Targeted toward high school students, the page uses nonclinical language (the words "up the ass" instead of "anal intercourse," for instance) and includes graphic medical photos.

"This information is necessary," he says. "Too many people have benefited from it to pull it."

Twenty-five years ago, the Court noted that a college campus is a "marketplace of ideas." In the coming months, it may be up to students and faculty to prove this is still the case.

James believes everyone has the right to free speech unless they're dazed him.

 Robert Corn-Revere is a First Amendment lawyer*

CDA Timeline

February 1996
Bill Clinton signs the Communications Decency Act (CDA) into law as part of the sweeping Telecommunications Bill. The act makes it a felony for anyone to knowingly provide "patently offensive" material to minors. Free-speech advocates declare the day "Black Thursday," and hundreds of Web pages are reversed to white type on a black background.

June 1996
A special panel of three federal judges in Philadelphia unanimously rules the CDA unconstitutional.

July 1996
The Department of Justice appeals the ruling. In a separate case, a three-judge panel in New York also rules against the CDA.

December 1996
The U.S. Supreme Court agrees to hear the CDA appeal.

January 1997
The Justice Department and family values groups file briefs supporting the CDA.

February 1997
The Citizens Internet Empowerment Coalition, the American Association of University Professors, the Student Press Law Center and many other individuals and organizations file briefs against the CDA.

March 1997
The Court hears oral arguments.

Summer 1997
A decision in the case is expected.

LENDING A HAND

Student volunteers give it up for a good cause

BY MELISSA GREGO
Assistant Editor
Photos courtesy of P.L.A.Y. and Habitat for Humanity International

LAST SUMMER, WHEN YOU ROLLED OFF THE COUCH just before your mom yelled for you to take out the garbage, you didn't exactly volunteer to do the chore. But surely you did something for someone, like candy stripe or scoop soup at the shelter. No? Then you — the community service phobe — were the oddball, the sloth among servers of the summer of '96.

In 1996, more collegians than ever flooded the community service sector. The 1996 freshman survey conducted by the Higher Education Research Institute at UCLA reports that about 72 percent of freshmen performed volunteer work in the previous year — the highest proportion since the study began in the '60s. And organizations like the Peace Corps and Habitat for Humanity posted record involvement rates.

"Participation is on the upswing," says Sonja Lewis, the director of campus chapters and youth programs for Habitat International. "Each year we've done our Collegiate Challenge program, we've grown by about 1,000 participants. Students are motivated and want to be a part of what's going on."

Generation Next

Are today's 20-somethings really morphing from a sloppy, mooching, video game-obsessed culture to a bunch of mini Mother Teresas?

Peace Corps director Mark Gearan says the GenX slacker label is faulty to begin with. He'd rather call it "Generation Next."

"[This] generation is looking to prepare our country for the future and for ways they can make a difference," Gearan says.

Gearan isn't alone in his perception. New programs pop up yearly to make role models out of college students. Nike Corp.'s P.L.A.Y. Corps (Participate in the Lives of America's Youth) debuted last year.

Program coordinator Eric Gabrielson says starting P.L.A.Y. was an obvious choice. "College students are excellent role models for kids. A lot of [students] want to do it but don't know how."

P.L.A.Y. offers one-time $500 scholarships to students as an incentive to coach kids' sports teams. Last year, 71 students participated; all plan to return for a second season.

Megan Evans, a U. of Pennsylvania sophomore, became a P.L.A.Y. coach to pass on what she learned from sports. "I had a coach who invested time in me and made sure I understood that I should play because it was fun, and I love it."

It sounds like Evans got her wish as she chatters away about her basketball team hours before it plays its rivals in the double-elimination championship. "We won the last game against them in the last second. It was so cool. Seeing the emotion in the girls sparks something in me — remembering how I felt and seeing how important the game is in their lives."

Simple, short-term volunteer experience can be just as rewarding, says junior Kim Mowery, who took a year off from Brown U. to serve as the national director of Sierra Student Coalition, the student arm of the Sierra Club. "Whether it's mentoring kids or planting trees, people can directly do and see that they're making a difference. Volunteer work gives people instant gratification."

The payoff

The only thing that was instant about Princeton U. junior Christoph Lee's decision to spend last summer volunteering was his realization that he'd probably land himself in debt. "It sounds really cheesy, but I could have made a couple thousand dollars working over the summer, but it didn't appeal to me. I wanted to help others."

Although Lee was able to get work-study compensation for his work at Grace Hill Neighborhood Services in St. Louis, he took a loss financially. But he says what he learned was worth it. After completing his stint, he decided to put off applying to medical school and work for a nonprofit organization instead. It was a bold step, but a life-saving experience at Grace Hill transformed him.

"One family came into the clinic three times because the son had a respiratory condition. They didn't speak English, but I was able to communicate between them and the doctor in Spanish," Lee says. "That was the one moment I became really passionate. We got the kid to the doctor. By then, the family knew me by name, and the single thank-you and smile from the kid made my summer."

Big volunteer contributions aren't always made one-on-one. Oregon State U. senior John Glass raised more than $4,000 for PUSH (People Understanding the Severely Handicapped) in order to qualify for PUSH's Journey of Hope this summer.

He hasn't met any of the beneficiaries yet, but he will. Passing off the cash was only half the muscle Glass put into the Journey. The 60 qualifiers will meet in San Francisco in June before they bicycle 75 miles daily for 63 days to get to Washington, D.C., and will visit hospitals and community centers along the way.

Deciding to devote his summer was cake. "It doesn't take much to show a child a little attention for one day. That's not back-breaking."

War stories

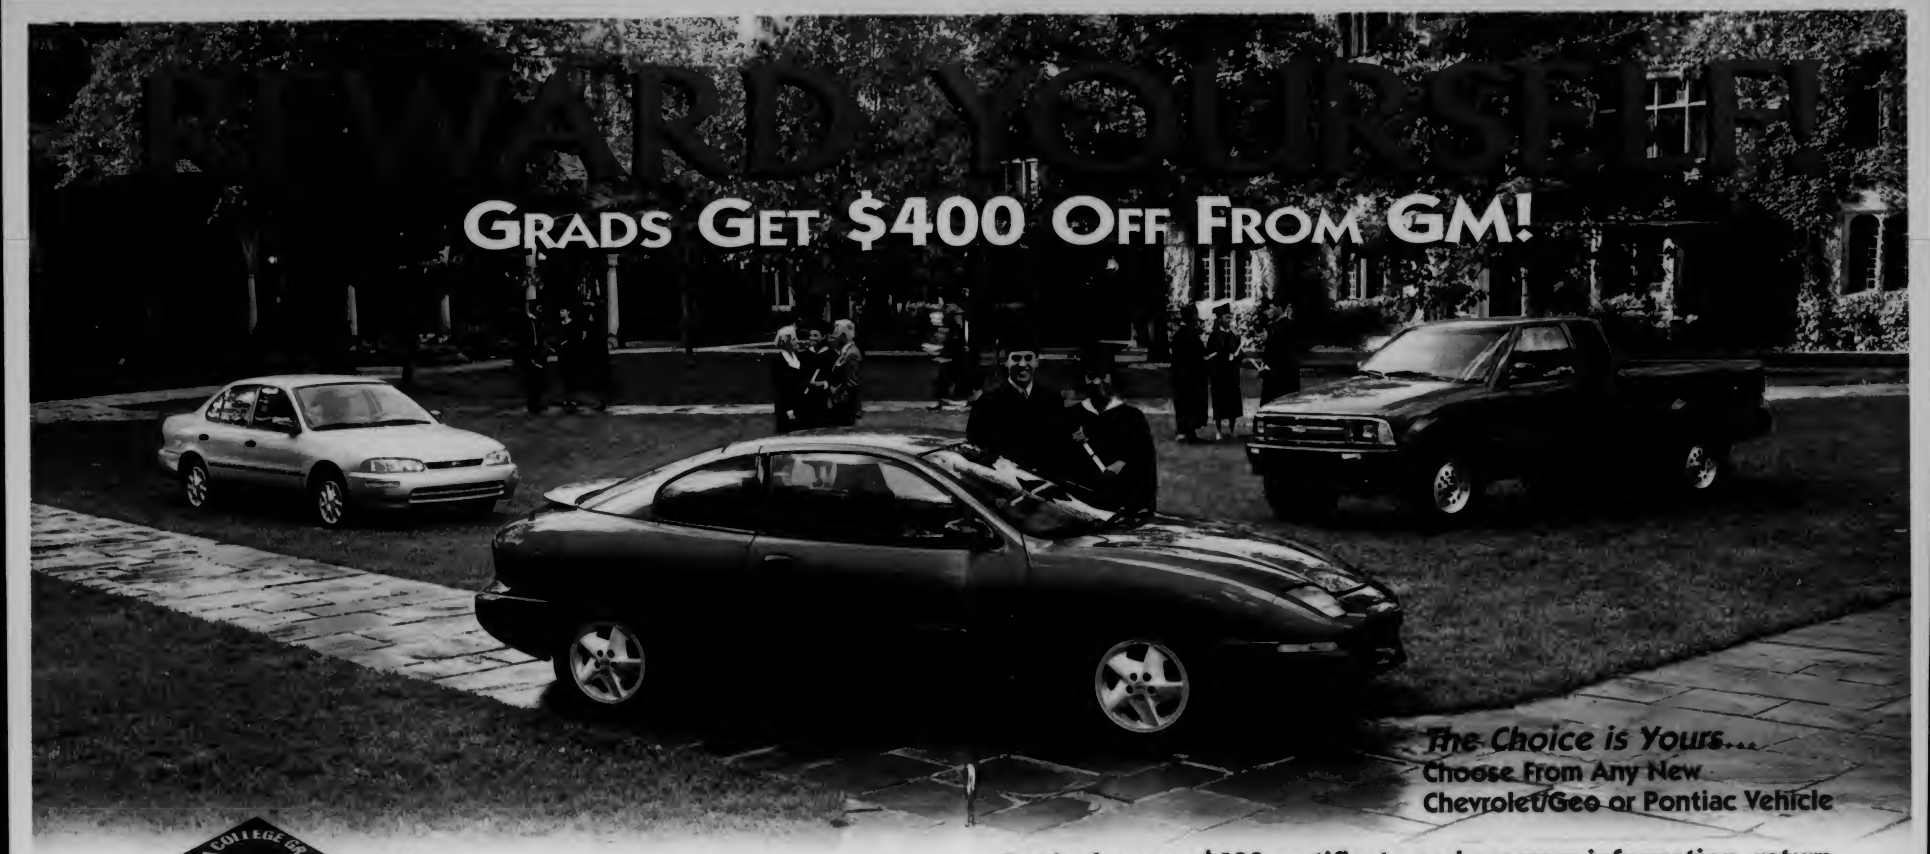
Volunteers insist that the most intense rewards spring from threatening situations. LaSalle U., Pa., sophomore and P.L.A.Y. soccer coach Michael Waldron's challenge began when he found out he'd be coaching in a high-crime section of the city.

"We coached in the middle of a war zone. I'm not going to lie to you. A lot of these kids were minus a role model," Waldron says. "I was real nervous — real nervous. I had no idea what I was getting into."

Waldron taught the kids more than soccer. "We would sit down and have 'life sessions.' We'd talk about school and staying out of trouble. [We told] them if they get their popularity through sports, people won't mess with them."

Although Lee raves about his experience, he, too, got off to a bumpy start. "I went through some really rough times at the beginning because of the commute — an hour and a half each way by bus. Then I almost got mugged. After I hitched a ride home with a friend and got into a bad car accident, my parents sent me a plane ticket home. But out of pure anger and determination to make something of my summer, I stayed. I'm definitely happy I stayed."

Melissa Grego will volunteer to do anything, as long as someone else agrees to pay off her credit card.



P.L.A.Y. ball!

The house that volunteers built.

Get on the ball

Volunteering may make you feel like a million bucks, but you definitely won't be earning that much. So if you don't want to resort to the receiving end of the soup line, check out these resources. They can translate into affordable meals and cheap digs while you're changing the world.

- The Contact Directory to Nonprofits on the Web: http://www.contact.org/dir.htm
- Americorps: (800) 942-2677 or http://www.cns.gov
- Expedition Research: http://www.expeditionresearch.org
- Grace Hill: (314) 539-9526
- Habitat for Humanity International: If no campus chapter or local affiliate exists, call (800) 422-4828
- Operation Crossroads: (212) 870-2106
- Peace Corps: (800) 424-8580 or http://www.peacecorps.gov
- P.L.A.Y.: (800) 929-PLAY
- Sierra Student Coalition: If no campus chapter exists, call (401) 861-6012 or e-mail ssc-info@ssc.org

Plus...

- No Downpayment When You Purchase
- Special Easy Financing For Grads

Grads, for your $400 certificate and program information, return the postage-paid reply card enclosed in this publication, or call:

1•800•964•GRAD

visit our web site: www.gmgrad.com

CHEVROLET. Geo. PONTIAC. GMAC FINANCIAL SERVICES

See your participating Chevrolet/Geo or Pontiac dealer for details. ©1996 GM Corp. All rights reserved.

Rock

BY CARRIE BELL

Rating System

★★★★★ No final

★★★★ Take home

★★★ Multiple guess exam

★★ Essay test

★ All of the above

Pocket Band

The Lightweights

No one told The Lightweights how pros handle fame. Instead of cool finesse, the boys bicker over the phone and exude no bad-boy bravado. Saxophonist Tom Weber, 17, is almost too nervous to chat.

The innocence is as refreshing as their music — a blend of funky bass lines, horns, rock sensibilities and a mad rapper. "We wanted to couple our interests in rap and ska," says drummer Skully. "We started as a five-piece band, but added horns for flavor."

Interview finesse aside, the gang has the business mastered. They financed their demo, A Bit of Life. "We hit up local stores to carry the tape, and they're available at shows," says trumpeter Matt Scheiner.

The band (with bassist Joe Baptista, rapper Josh Kotenik, trombonist David Dominique and guitarist Mikal Britt) also knows how important a good live act is. "We have to prove we aren't punk-ass kids," Britt says. "Crowds quickly realize we're serious about music. Then we go crazy on stage."

The craziness is catching, with everything from campus gigs to a "ska mitzvah" scheduled. "We're hot little muffins in demand," Skully says, adding that Scheiner has three groupies.

"Yeah, but they're all about 10," Britt scoffs.

For a demo, send $4 to: The Lightweights, 817 Linen Ave., Baldwin, NY 11510.

Ani DiFranco

Living In Clip

Righteous Babe

★★★★★

ANI DIFRANCO, HIGH priestess of punk-folk, continually updates old-guard feminism with intimate vignettes disguised as songs. She plays "music for people, not posterity." So the only surprising thing about this live two-CD set is that it comes so late in her career.

Two hours of recordings map her musical manna from the early days of "Anticipate" to the most current entries off Dilate. Living In Clip strips down the genius of DiFranco to its barest state, capturing versions and monologues. Her winsome blend of urban grit doesn't suffer from overproduction or overcontemplation, often the downfall of studio projects.

Like all concert LPs, annoying audience shrieks, flubs and instrument hum are included. But all is forgiven upon hearing a magnificent crescendo in an orchestral "Amazing Grace" or the powerfully eerie echo vibrating in "Both Hands."

RADIO, RADIO

1. Pavement, Brighten the Corners, Matador

2. Built to Spill, Perfect from Now On, Warner Bros.

3. Helmet, Aftertaste, Interscope

4. Aphex Twin, Richard D. James, WARP/Sire

5. Wally Pleasant, Wally World, Miranda

6. Mighty Mighty Bosstones, Let's Face It, Mercury

7. The Lunachicks, Pretty Ugly, Go-Kart

8. Cibo Matto, Super Relax, Warner Bros.

9. Various Artists, Violent World: Tribute to the Misfits, Caroline

10. David Bowie, Earthling, Virgin

Chart based solely on college radio play. Contributing radio stations: KPSR, California State U., Fresno; WNYU, New York U.; KWVA, U. of Oregon; KTRU, Rice U., Texas; KUOM, U. of Minnesota; KCMU, U. of Washington; WXJM, James Madison U., Va.; WWVU, West Virginia U.; KCSB, U. of California, Santa Barbara; KTEK, New Mexico Tech; KRUU, U. of Iowa; KJHK, U. of Kansas; KRNU, U. of Nebraska, Lincoln; WHRB, Harvard U.; WCBN, U. of Michigan; KALX, U. of California, Berkeley; WRUV, U. of Vermont; KCR, San Diego State U.; Calif.; KBVR, Oregon State U.

Get the groove on U.'s music page: http://www.umagazine.com/rocks

The Chemical Brothers

Dig Your Own Hole

Astralwerks

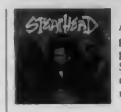
★★★★½

White Town

Women In Technology

EMI

★★



With everyone jumping on the techno bandwagon, it's hard to decipher the superb from the schlock. The Chemical Brothers and White Town travel different paths to salvation in electronica.

Dig Your Own Hole holds the unfortunate title of one of 1997's most anticipated CDs. Fortunately England's dynamic duo doesn't let fans of studio wizardry down. The record is an hour-long fusillade of rave whistles, remix madness, hip hop samples and rock guitar squalor.

Vocals by Beth Orton and Oasis' Noel Gallagher break up the noise before monotony sets in. Lovers of the Beastie Boys' wordless excursions will find enough psychedelic breakbeats to sink their teeth into.

A month ago, a sexually confused single called "Your Woman" stormed up alt-radio playlists. You didn't really get it, but you could dance to it. Now White Town wants to charm disco biscuits with its full-length reincarnation of '80s synth pleasure á la Bronski Beat, Erasure and Depeche Mode. Jyoti Mishra even croons in a unisex tone similar to Yaz's Alison Moyet.

Amidst the knob-turning and looped keyboards lies some actual guitar. Yet experiments with Middle-Eastern ambience and schmaltzy ballads can't top the aural fixation the single induces.

Spearhead

Chocolate Supa Highway

Capitol

★★★★

KRS-ONE

I Got Next

Jive

★★★

Rap is in transition. Artists are trading in gats, girls and Gucci for peace, politics and relevance. For Spearhead and KRS-ONE, new albums are an evolution, not a departure.

Hero of Hiphoprisy Michael Franti and Spearhead cruise down the Chocolate Supa Highway armed with skillful wordplay, funky bass and a conscience. Ras I Zulu's reggae chants, Trina Simmons' silky vocals and layered production fuse soul and technology without losing the one-love groove theory. San Francisco's rhythm collective took time to hone their craft since the '94 debut, and it shows. Crossover confidence and talent climax on duets with Stephen Marley and Joan Osborne.

Blastmaster KRS-ONE also uses nostalgic tricks to hit retro paydirt, although I Got Next is more in the emcee and gangsta vein. His freestyle assault is as vicious as ever, but the melody-based rhymes melt into boogie down productions. Next's rants are peppered up with guest appearances by Redman, Joe, DJ Muggs, Keva and Angie Martinez.

Our Picks

Indigo Girls
Shaming of the Sun
Epic

Amy Ray and Emily Saliers deliver yet another guitar-frenzied, country-folk product embedded in sexual ambiguity. Despite an abundance of fast places, the duo doesn't forsake any of the lyrical introspection or pristine harmonies. One step "Closer To Fine."

Adriana Evans
Adriana Evans
PMP/Loud/RCA

The string and horn sections surrounding Evans' feathery vocals make it easy to mistake her for an airy-sounding crooner of her parents' generation, like Roberta Flack or Diana Ross. But she's a bona fide '90s soul singer with electronic drums to prove it. The lilting, upbeat tunes take you back to happier times.

Various Artists
Kama Sutra Soundtrack
TVT

Prepare to be hypnotized by the passion of the sitar and sarangi and the powerful playing of India's most respected musicians. The tracks exude desire and emotion rivaling Peter Gabriel's Passion and provide a perfect setting for Mira Nair's controversial film.

The Hang Ups
So We Go
Restless

This Minneapolis quartet dishes out some of the fiercest überpop this side of the Atlantic Ocean. The 12 tracks on their second effort will have you bobbing your head and humming the infectious melodies for days.

Various Artists
Love Jones Soundtrack
Columbia

Such erotic urban reverie is contained here that you'll be left with the same desirable effect the movie title suggests. Slow jams by Maxwell, Xscape, Dionne Farris and Groove Theory flow into jazz fusion care of Cassandra Wilson, Duke Ellington and John Coltrane, putting everyone in the mood for love.

Kinnie Starr
Tidy
Violet Inch

Read a new pro-grrrl hero to throw adoration at since Ms. Love cleaned up her act for Hollywood? Try Canadian TV-hater and performance artist Kinnie Starr. The mixing is raw, the attitude tough and the final output refreshing.

The assistant editors think these CDs will give you a reason to get up in the morning.

Reel

BY JAMES HIBBERD

SITTING IN THE LOST WORLD, MY soul is nowhere to be found * What Commandments did I break on Father's Day? * Have I been playing God on my boogie nights? * Perhaps * But it's not my fault, I cannot help that I'm addicted to love * So I sit on my nightwatch, waiting for the fifth element: you

The Lost World

Universal

This movie is big — real big! Big stars! Big director! Big dinos! Big action sequences! Big box office grosses! Big advertising campaign! Big fast-food tieins! Big stuffed dino dolls at toy stores! Big! Big! Big! There's nothing about this movie that's small! (Except for maybe the plot and character development, but who really cares about that?)

Addicted to Love

Warner Bros.

Something to Talk About, Till There Was You, Pretty Woman, One Fine Day, When a Man Loves a Woman, Addicted to Love ... are you seeing a trend yet? For the love of God, isn't there one studio exec with enough neurons firing to think of an original title?! Anyway, Meg Ryan and Matthew Broderick play two spurned lovers who team up to spy on their former mates, who are moving in together. Hmm, how about calling it ... Tainted Love! Darn, this is tough.

The Fifth Element

Columbia

The plot of this $90 million science-fiction fantasy is being kept secret until its Cannes Film Festival debut. But the preview, which ran during the Super Bowl, did reveal impressive sets and costumes. We also know that Bruce Willis stars as a cab driver, while Gary Oldman plays his nemesis (a bad tipper?).

Playing God

Buena Vista

After performing an operation while high on amphetamines, a famed L.A. surgeon (David Duchovny) is stripped of his medical license. Desperate for work, he takes a job treating gunshot wounds and drug overdoses for a criminal ganglord (Timothy Hutton). Mulder look out!

Boogie Nights

New Line

Call it Marky Mark and the Humpy Bunch. Mark Wahlberg, Julianne Moore and Burt Reynolds star in this dark comedy about an extended family of porn filmmakers in the '70s. Sex, drugs, bell bottoms, disco — this one has it all!

Warriors of Virtue

MGM

Young Ryan Jeffers is transported to the Land of Tao where he becomes Yee, a Warrior of Virtue. Together with his comrade Roo Warriors, Yun, Lai and Tsun, they battle the evil warlord Komodo for control of the Land of Tao's Lifesprings. Once the acid wears off, will Ryan be transported to the Land of Rehab?

Nightwatch

Dimension

Trainspotting's Ewan McGregor stars as a law student moonlighting as a hospital night watchman. Instead of hunting down some juicy malpractice suits, he finds himself the lead suspect in a series of grisly murders. Nick Nolte and Patricia Arquette co-star in this thriller, and the word on the street is "creepy."

Commandments

Gramercy

When Manhattan yuppie Seth Warner (Aidan Quinn) loses his wife, job and home, he decides to get even with God by breaking each of the Ten Commandments (right, as if a Manhattan yuppie wouldn't have already blasted through at least eight of 'em). Starting with the lesser infractions and working his way up the scale of sin, Warner is consoled by his late wife's sister, played by Courteney Cox. Apparently the Commandment, "Thou shalt not cast Friends actors in a feature film," was also broken.

Twin Town

Gramercy

Finally, a film about a workman's comp claim gone bad. A wealthy roofing contractor in Swansea, South Wales, refuses to compensate one of his workers who took a tumble off a ladder. But the injured handyman and his wayward sons, The Twins, devise a wickedly comic way of getting even. Another black comedy from Andrew MacDonald and Danny Boyle, the duo behind Shallow Grave and Trainspotting.

Romy & Michele's High School Reunion

Touchstone

Mira Sorvino and Lisa Kudrow are two underachievers who get a case of makeover madness when they're invited to their 10-year high school reunion. Janeane Garofalo plays a meanie, and Kudrow is in familiar territory, having starred in Ladies Room, the play on which it is based.

Brassed Off

Miramax

That thing the Grimethorpe Brass Band doesn't do is let the closing of the local coal pit bring 'em down. "Brassed off" is Yorkshire for "pissed off" — and that they are. Ewan McGregor, Tara Fitzgerald (Sirens) and Pete Postelthwaite (Romeo and Juliet) are bandmates who inspire a community to hang in there by blowing their own horns.

Father's Day

Warner Bros.

Robin Williams and Billy Crystal team up for this remake of the French comedy Les Compères. It's the story of a woman (Nastassja Kinski) who convinces two ex-boyfriends to search for her runaway son by telling each that he's the boy's father.

Masterminds

Triumph

The "lone hero against a hostage-taking criminal mastermind and his gang" formula is dying hard. And Masterminds is yet another entry. But this one has a twist: The lone hero is a 14-year-old kid. The youngster faces off against Patrick Stewart, who's taken hostage the entire student body of his school. Even cooler than an assembly, huh?

You'll find everything but the Raisinets on U.'s movie page: http://www.umagazine.com

Screen Saver

Nowhere

Sex, T.V., aliens, drugs, S&M, murder, religion, Los Angeles, suicide, pop culture, more sex and Gibby Haynes litter the psychedelic landscape of Nowhere, the third film in Gregg Araki's "Teen Apocalypse" trilogy. "I like my movies to have a real impact on you — an impact that you don't soon forget," says Araki, who wrote, directed and edited the film.

The press notes aptly describe Nowhere as a "Beverly Hills 90210 episode on acid." It's a surreal soap opera chronicling a day in the life of thrill-seeking L.A. teen-agers punctuated with gobs of cameos by pop culture touchstones like Shannon Doherty, John Ritter and Charlotte Rae.

"I like to use the cameos — not in a cheesy way, but to underscore the surreal qualities of the movie," says the U. of Southern California grad. "It's like a dream, when you have familiar faces from your subconscious pop out."

Araki, whose previous films include The Doom Generation and The Living End, says groups like Nine Inch Nails and Portishead have been a greater influence than filmmakers such as Spielberg and Scorsese. Perhaps punk and new-wave nihilism are the reason for the omnipresent feeling of doom in his films?

"I definitely have a feeling of impending ... something."

The Reel Deal

Austin Powers

A lascivious secret agent in a groovy velvet suit, Austin Powers has it all: chicks to shag, money to blow and a swinging pad. But according to Mike Myers, his character's political incorrectness is part of his charm.

"I'm not into mean humor, I'm not into racist or sexist stuff that isn't ironic," he says. "Austin Powers is kinda like [Saturday Night Live's] Czech Brothers — you can't really be mad at them because they're so innocent in their inappropriateness."

Austin Powers is a '60s fashion designer/British secret agent cryogenically frozen to chase his nemesis, Dr. Evil (also Myers), into the '90s. Myers says the film was inspired by movies like Casino Royale and Peter Sellers' Pink Panther films.

"I was fascinated by that whole world of the jet-setter playboy, I thought I would love to wear those clothes and be in that world."

Between playing the film's title role and working with co-stars Elizabeth Hurley, Mimi Rogers, Tom Arnold and Carrie Fisher, Myers says making the film was the most fun he's ever had. So will Powers return for another adventure? "Oh my God, I would love that."

U.LIFE

Night Moves

WOULD-BE ATTACKERS and abusers beware! Students across the country are doing a little march, making a little noise and taking back the night.

Take Back the Night is a fitting description for the event, which aims to raise awareness about increasing incidents of violence against women. The U.S. Department of Justice reports that more than 1,400 women die and another 170,000 are hospitalized as a result of violent crime.

Each year, thousands of activists sound whistles, ring bells and shout slogans as a show of support for victims. The event sends a clear message: "Women won't be held captive by fear."

According to the National Organization for Women, Take Back the Night marches have been held in the spring in more than 300 universities and communities every year since it started in the '70s.

Rebecca Peatow, a senior at the U. of Oregon, has helped organize events at her school for two years.

"It's really empowering, especially since you're marching with a large group of women. It's fun to participate and see people getting involved."

A sister movement to Take Back the Night, the Clothesline Project, provides a strong visual reminder of violence in the same vein as the AIDS quilt. The traveling project, started in 1990, allows victims of violent crimes to decorate T-shirts with messages and drawings of courage, anger and loss. They are color-coded to match the crime committed; for example, orange symbolizes rape. The shirts, which numbered nearly 40,000 last year, are strung up for display on campuses and then exhibited in Washington, D.C.

"It was a good visual way to express what happened to me and to let others know that it can happen to anyone," says Rhonda Anderson, a sophomore at the U. of Idaho who made a shirt for last year's clothesline. "It helped to release some of the emotions that I had inside."

Lauren Onkeles, a senior at the U. of Wisconsin, Madison, says the project brings crimes to a human level. "Art therapy seems to work a lot better than talk therapy. It brings out things that wouldn't normally come out."

As support increases for both events, Take Back the Night and the Clothesline Project continue to air society's dirty laundry and hang violence against women out to dry.

By Christopher Clancy, U. of Idaho/ Photo by Lisa Barroso, Virginia Tech

Fight for the night.

Bootleg Connection

WHEN U2 DECIDED to catch up with technology by going more electronic on their new album, Pop, technology caught up with the Irish rockers — and the band discovered that it moves in mysterious ways.

Months before the scheduled release of Pop, clips from two unfinished tracks off the record found their way onto a Hungarian fan's home page. U2's label, Island Records UK, tried to stop the spread of the stolen tracks. But within days, the clips were exchanged by thousands of U2 fans across the globe, and "Discotheque" and "Wake Up Dead Man" were on the streets.

Although the illegal copying of music has long been a problem for record companies, the availability of free, CD-quality music duplicated illegally on the Internet is a totally new can of cyber-worms.

"[The Internet] gave me a sneak preview of my favorite band's new work," says Michael McAllister, a U. of Arizona freshman who listened to U2 on the Web. "Since the [song] snippets were only 30 seconds in length, it served as a great advertising tool for the company."

McAllister isn't the only one who previews music on the Internet before shelling out the cash for an album. "I try to get my hands on at least one sample of the group before I buy an album," says Kevin Shade, a freshman at Indiana U. "CDs are too expensive these days to justify buying before trying."

Slow transmission speeds are the only thing hindering free trade of illegally copied CDs across the Internet. With the current hardware, it can take over an hour to download an entire song in CD-quality stereo.

"Even [the fastest] modems don't have as good quality as my good old CD player," says Billy Jacobs, a junior at the State U. of New York, Buffalo.

But the ability to download entire music collections in the time it takes to play one song — without the artists or labels seeing a penny — is just a matter of time. Recordable CDs are now available, and drastic improvements are being made in modem speed and digital storage technology.

And the record industry is nervous.

The Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA) uses its pirating division to hunt down illegal music on the Internet and in stores.

"We have a staff of full-time investigators — people who do nothing but search the Net for illegal material," says Frank Creighton, RIAA's vice president and associate director of anti-piracy.

But the RIAA will never get all the pirates to walk the plank, Jacobs says. "It's virtually impossible to stop the spread of copied music. If people don't want to spend money on an album, they can find others who have it and copy it."

By Brian A. Gnell, U. of Michigan/Illustration by Mikey Gibo, Northern Illinois U.

SAY CHEESE!

The 5th Annual U. Photo contest!

FROM FLYING FOOTBALL PLAYERS TO STUDENTS FLYING ACROSS the Grand Canyon, thousands of fantastic photo contest entries flew into our office this year. And now ... drumroll, please ... we present this year's four $1,000 Grand Prize winners. And if you can't get enough student photos, you can find more of them on our Web page (http://www.umagazine.com).

$1,000 GRAND PRIZE WINNER: ALL AROUND SPORTS: Alicia Chang, Virginia Tech
"Who turned off the gravity?"

$1,000 GRAND PRIZE WINNER: FUNNIEST SIGHTS: Aaron Gavosie, U. of New Mexico
"Fending off killer trees."

$1,000 GRAND PRIZE WINNER: CAMPUS LIFE: Elizabeth Brown, U. of Notre Dame
"The Irish Guard marching to the stadium."

$1,000 GRAND PRIZE WINNER: TRIPPIN': Paul Aziz, U. of Colorado, Boulder
"Excited to be alive!"

U Magazine
The Student Voice of College America

PUBLISHER & EDITORIAL DIRECTOR
1991-1996
GAYLE MORAN SWEETLAND
PUBLISHER & EDITOR
FRANCES HUFFMAN
ASSOCIATE EDITOR
COLLEEN RUSH BUCKNELL U. '95
ASSISTANT EDITORS
CARRIE BELL HUMBOLDT STATE U. '96
MELISSA GRIGGS U. OF MICHIGAN '96
AMY HELMES XAVIER U. '96
JAMES HIBBARD U. OF TEXAS, AUSTIN '96
ART DIRECTOR
DAVE DRUSE
ADVISORY COUNCIL
DR. DAVID E. ADAMS INDIANA U.
W.B. CASEY U. OF IOWA
DR. JAN T. CHILDRESS TEXAS TECH U.
MONA CRAVENS U. OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
MARK GOODMAN STUDENT PRESS LAW CENTER
DR. LES HYDER EASTERN ILLINOIS U.
KATHY LAWRENCE U. OF TEXAS, AUSTIN
RICHARD C. LITTLE SOUTHERN METHODIST U.
LESLEY MARTELLO NICHOLLS STATE U.
DR. FRANK RAGUSKY OREGON STATE U.
DR. J. DAVID REED EASTERN ILLINOIS U.
TOM ROLNICKI ASSOCIATED COLLEGIATE PRESS
RICHARD SCHLETTE PAST PRESIDENT, CMA
CHUCK STONE U. OF NORTH CAROLINA
LAURA WEISSER NORTHWEST MISSOURI ST. U.
PEER COUNCIL
KELLY BOLDAMUFFLE COLORADO STATE U.
HAZELINE P. BOWEN INDIANA STATE U.
LAWRENCE P. GANTI BABSON COLLEGE
BRIAN HUFFMANN MARSHALL U.
DOUG KOUMA U. OF NEBRASKA, LINCOLN
HEATHER LUCE OHIO STATE U.
ANGELA MULL ARIZONA STATE U.
DOUG SMITH GEORGETOWN U.
GENAE STEVENSON UTAH STATE U.
GREG WALKER AUBURN U.
ADVERTISING SALES OFFICES
Main Office
DIRECTOR OF SALES & MKTG. ALEXIS COUGHLIN
1800 CENTURY PARK EAST, SUITE 820,
LOS ANGELES, CA 90067
TEL. (310) 551-1341
FAX (310) 551-1659 OR 552-0836
New York
U. MAGAZINE, 170 E. 61ST ST., SUITE 400
NEW YORK, NY 10021
TEL. (212) 980-2800 FAX (212) 980-2811
PERRY KIRKWIN, EASTERN ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
LENORE SUTTLE, AD SERVICES COORDINATOR
Midwest & Detroit
JOE GUENTHER, PETER GUENTHER,
TEL. (312) 335-9001 FAX (312) 335-8578
Dallas
PHIL GANZ, NANCY WELLS
TEL. (214) 991-4994 FAX (214) 991-4995
San Francisco/Pacific Northwest
PATRICK DOYLE
TEL. (415) 777-4383 FAX (415) 777-4385
Entertainment Ad Sales
PATTIRAH GOTTLIEB
TEL. (310) 836-7808 FAX (310) 841-4607
American Collegiate Network, Inc.
PRESIDENT MARIA SPIRTOS
VICE PRESIDENT PAULA PERINE
OPERATIONS DIRECTOR KEVALEEN RYAN
CIRCULATION MANAGER TRACY MATTHEWS-HOLBERT
MARKETING COORDINATOR MARIETTE MERCADO
ASSISTANT CONTROLLER LOVELLA HAYDON
RECEPTIONIST LORRAINE BURAS
INTERN KASEY SEYMOUR
WEB SITE: HTTP://WWW.UMAGAZINE.COM
E-MAIL, EDITOR: EDITOR@UMAGAZINE.COM
ASST. EDITORS: EDIT@UMAGAZINE.COM
ADVERTISING: ADSALES@UMAGAZINE.COM
CONTESTS: CONTEST@UMAGAZINE.COM
CIRCULATION: CIRC@UMAGAZINE.COM

U/M is published nine times a year and printed in the U.S.A. on recyclable paper. Subscriptions are $18. Copyright© 1997. U. Magazine and U: The National College Magazine are registered trademarks of American Collegiate Network, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

PLEASE RECYCLE U. ABC

Reader Survey

We want to know what makes you tick. Fill out the survey and fax it to (310) 551-1659, or mail it to: U. Magazine Reader Survey, 1800 Century Park East, Suite 820, Los Angeles, CA 90067-1511.

Where do you plan to live after graduation?
- ☐ with parents
- ☐ with roommates
- ☐ alone

How much do you spend on food at the grocery store per week?
- ☐ 0-$25
- ☐ $25-$50
- ☐ $50-$75
- ☐ $75+

How much of that is spent on snack foods?
- ☐ 10%
- ☐ 25%
- ☐ 35%
- ☐ 50%+

What's your favorite snack food?
- ☐ potato chips
- ☐ pretzels
- ☐ popcorn
- ☐ candy bars
- ☐ tortilla chips
- ☐ other_____

How will you spend your summer vacation?
- ☐ working
- ☐ volunteering
- ☐ traveling
- ☐ summer school
- ☐ other_____

When do you prefer to see a new movie?
- ☐ opening weekend
- ☐ within the first two weeks of opening
- ☐ after the first two weeks of opening

What type(s) of movie(s) do you enjoy? (Check all that apply)
- ☐ action
- ☐ murder mystery
- ☐ thriller/suspense
- ☐ other_____
- ☐ sequels
- ☐ drama
- ☐ romance

Upon graduation do you plan to
- ☐ buy a car
- ☐ lease a car
- ☐ get a car from parents
- ☐ other_____

If you plan to purchase or lease a car which will it be?
- ☐ American
- ☐ Japanese
- ☐ European

Do you plan to attend grad school?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

If so, do you plan to work while attending grad school?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

Do you own a computer?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

If so, what kind? Check all that apply.
- ☐ Mac
- ☐ IBM compatible
- ☐ desktop
- ☐ laptop

If so, do you use Windows '95?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

Do you have a CD-ROM?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

Do you have a modem?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

Do you plan to purchase a laptop?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

Do you use birth control?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

If so, which method(s) do you use? Check all that apply.
- ☐ condom
- ☐ the pill
- ☐ IUD
- ☐ implant
- ☐ none
- ☐ other_____

Do you worry about your skin?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

Do you use regular skin care products?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

If so, which products do you use?
- ☐ cream
- ☐ soap
- ☐ toner
- ☐ moisturizer
- ☐ other_____

Do you have a savings plan?
- ☐ yes
- ☐ no

If so, what method(s) do you use? Check all that apply.
- ☐ mutual funds
- ☐ bank savings account
- ☐ stocks
- ☐ CDs
- ☐ bonds
- ☐ other_____

wrap

DÉJÀ VIEW

BY AMY HELMES
ASSISTANT EDITOR
ILLUSTRATION BY CHRIS SEIBOLD, U. OF TENNESSEE, KNOXVILLE

LOOK OUT — THE CREATIVE REGURGITATION MORE commonly known as the sequel is coming to a theater near you. This summer, the dinosaurs will seem even more lifelike, Batman will sport a Clooney cut and Sandra Bullock will have to prevent another speeding vehicle from careening off course. In the meantime, here are a few other sequel suggestions that have yet to be picked up for production.

Babe II: The Bacon Years — Babe's butt-kissing cuteness begins to grate on the other farm animals' nerves. No longer a spry young piglet, the hog can't keep the sheep in line. This leads to his tragic demise and some damn fine pork chops.

Pulpit Fiction — Samuel L. Jackson reprises his role as Jules, whose love for spouting off Bible verses leads him to the seminary. Quentin Tarantino casts himself as the Pope, and John Travolta plays an angel named Michael who's kind of rough around the edges.

Jerry Maguire: (Jerry's Kids) — Jerry ditches his "I care" philosophy when he realizes he can prostitute his adorable child co-star, Jonathan Lipnicki, to casting directors everywhere and keep most of the profit for himself. Everything's going fine until the cherub demands, "Show me the candy."

Stainblotting — Renton and his gang have cleaned up their act — literally. They're off drugs and in the laundry business after they discover a little club soda will remove excrement stains nicely.

The English Corpse — While the English patient was charred to a crisp from the plane explosion, Katharine's perfect corpse remains unscathed and as beautiful as ever after lying in a cave for a week or two. Her body becomes an exhibit in a traveling circus and is touted as "The woman who never decomposes."

Seventeen — After finding a string of teenage girls murdered, Brad Pitt and Morgan Freeman look for clues by poring through back issues of a popular teen fashion magazine.

Mankato — The Cohen brothers return to a frozen-over town in Minnesota, where some quirky little fellas are embroiled in a quirky little murder plot. Does hilarity ensue, thanks to the actors' quirky Scandinavian-tinged accents? You betcha.

The Man in the Mirror Has Ten Faces — Barbra Streisand directs this biopic about the King of Pop's many excursions under the knife. Michael and Babs collaborate on a heartfelt song for the soundtrack.

Double Take

With student elections upon us, here are some college candidates who deserve a second look:

Best name for student body president: Jim Hendrix, Clemson U., S.C.

Best political party name: U. of Nebraska's KEG party

Best party platform: Kansas State U.'s Rafferty-Hock presidential ticket vowed to take all the eat pieces out of Lucky Charms and promised never to bring Tony Danza to campus as a guest lecturer.

The Rollerskate Party at the U. of Texas, Austin, called for longer recess, no more homework and massive pizza parties to be paid for using student government stipends.

Best write-in candidate: The Madagascar Revolutionary Council at Penn State U. encouraged students to write in THE COCK (a large replica of a penis and the MRC's "illustrious leader") for the Undergraduate Student Government ballot.

Leaf People*, Brad Norman, Western Michigan U.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Orientation Issue — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Summer, 1997

One Time for the Mind

The Black Affairs page is dedicated to voicing issues and opinions relevant to UMass' ALANA community through informative news stories, editorials, and poetry (see Black Affairs, page 5).

Need something to do?

Check out some of the things there are to do in the Five College area. From movies to the Fine Arts Center, there is plenty to do for everyone (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Bruiserball: Year Two

Led by coach James "Bruiser" Flint, the Massachusetts basketball team has high hopes for the 1997–1998 season. For the scoop (see Sports, page 12).

Check out the Collegian online at: www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Financial aid sees six–year increase, UMass–federal policies the cause

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Financial aid for students at the University of Massachusetts has nearly tripled over the past six years.

Burt Batty, director of financial aid services, said that as a result of a six–year effort by the University to increase aid offered to students, the total amount of aid available has grown from $40 million in 1990–91 to $110 million in 1996–97.

"We have increased aid of all kinds in significant amounts and are reaching a much larger population of students," Batty said.

The funding for increased aid has come from a variety of sources, including the federal government, but the most significant funding increases have come from the University itself. In the past six years, the dollars for need–based financial aid coming out of the University's operating budget has tripled from $3.2 million to $10.2 million.

"It is a combination of changes on the federal level and efforts here on campus, but it all boils down to the same thing," Batty said. "The University is responding to the needs of students, and will continue to respond. We are making the cost of an education more affordable to students of all backgrounds."

The number of students receiving need–based financial aid has doubled in the past six years from 6,500 students to 11,000. The dollar amount of need–based aid has also more than doubled over the same time period, jumping from $30 million to $71 million.

With this huge increase, UMass is now able to meet an average of 88 percent of the demonstrated needs of in–state students and 80 percent of the needs of out–of–state students.

The number of students receiving non–need–based aid, such as loans, academic merit scholarships and athletic scholarships, has also doubled, growing from 1,400 in 1990– 91 to 2,500 in 1996–97. These scholarships now total nearly $36 million, over three times as much as the $11 million available in non–need–based aid in 1990–91.

Much of this expansion in non–need–based aid stems from the University's increase in non–athletic merit–based scholarships, which are designed "to improve the quality and diversity of the incoming class." These scholarships include The Talented Minority Scholarship, The Chancellor's Talent Award and The Academic Honors Award, as well as two new programs, The Commonwealth Scholarship and The University Scholars Program.

The Commonwealth Scholarship, which began last year, is given to Massachusetts residents who are at the top of their high school class and pays for tuition, fees, room and board. The University Scholars Program, which will begin this coming year, is offered to Massachusetts residents who are valedictorians or salutorians of their high school and consists of $8,000 in aid each year.

Batty also pointed to recent administrative streamlining techniques which allow students to submit their aid applications electronically and to access their financial aid records through a voice–response system as other ways financial aids services has improved the services it offers to UMass students.

LAUREN KOSKY/ COLLEGIAN

Arts and Science
Marcus and Lederle buildings framed by a metal sculpture.

SGA: your student leaders; Wong and Tirrell take office

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

At a University which contains over 16,500 undergraduates, the Student Government Association (SGA) has the responsibility of representing the student population and allocating approximately $1.5 million to student groups through the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF).

The SGA has about 250 officers and representatives and is broken up into the Undergraduate Student Senate, the President and Executive Cabinet and the Student Judiciary. Each residential area, Southwest, Central, Sylvan, Orchard Hill, Northeast, Commuter and Greek, all have area governments as well.

This past spring, H. Lia Wong was elected as SGA President by the student body, and Brian Tirrell was elected to the position of Student Trustee to the Board of Trustees. He will take office in July and will be responsible for taking issues of concern to University of Massachusetts–Amherst students to the administration in Boston.

"Student government responsibility is to represent students to the administration, town legislature and state government. We approve a $1.5 million student activities trust fund given to student groups... we essentially develop issues to improve the quality of student life on campus," Tirrell said.

The Senate consists of over 70 members who represent their constituents in each residential area as senators. Students become senators by running in the fall elections. Most residence halls are represented by one senator and at– large seats are also available.

Also, Asian, Latin American, African, and Native American (ALANA) students can also be appointed to the senate as a member of the ALANA caucus.

While the senate has worked over the past year towards issues concerning student safety and representation in administrative affairs, the most significant work is through the allocation of the SATF.

The student judiciary, while under–utilized this past year, is normally responsible for settling disputes within the SGA and related agencies. The judiciary consists of seven justices, an associate justice and a chief justice.

All student organizations and the SGA are bound by the SGA Constitution and all by–laws apply to judicial rulings.

Incoming students can reach the SGA at 545–0341, or visit the SGA Office at 420 Student Union Building during the summer.

SCERA research gives students' voice

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Maintaining a strong voice for all students on campus by creating campaigns focused on access and quality is the role of the Students Center For Education and Research Advocacy (SCERA).

"The work SCERA has done in the past is mainly working on issues of access and quality," said Jason Vecchio, student coordinator for SCERA. "In the past we've worked on financial aid, lowering tuition and fees, parking fees, and voter registration and turn out.

"Our focus has always been to utilize grass roots support around student issues and we've been very successful."

Located in the same office, SCERA takes direction from the Student Government Association (SGA) and focuses on issues that they deem important to tackle.

"We typically take on three or so campaigns a semester, taking direction from the SGA; through the governing board, they assign us projects," Vecchio said.

Membership in SCERA fluctuates according to what campaigns are being worked on and how many students feel strongly about the issue.

"Membership varies... the average is anywhere from five to 50 depending on what the campaign is," said Marc Kenen, SCERA director.

Anyone interested in getting involved in issues of students concerns and self empowerment should contact the SCERA Office at 424 Student Union or call (413) 545-0341.

RSOs provide opportunities to explore diverse interest

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

Whatever your interests, there is most likely a Registered Student Organization (RSO) on the University of Massachusetts campus that will get your attention.

UMass RSOs cover a broad range of categories. On campus are academic groups, student businesses, fraternities and sororities, religious organizations, ethnic and cultural groups, student media and service opportunities, among others.

Phee Paradise, the customer service manager at the Student Activities Office said that RSOs offer plenty of opportunities to students.

"[RSOs] give students a chance to gain experience in leadership positions. It's fun and gives them a chance to meet students with similar interests," Paradise said.

But the members of the organizations aren't the only beneficiaries.

"[RSOs] do a lot of programming. It gives non–members opportunities to attend different events," Paradise said.

If a student cannot find an organization to fit his or her tastes, there is always the option of registering a new one.

Paradise said that between 12 and 15 new RSOs are formed each year. Among the most recent additions are Habitat for Humanity, the Biracial/Multiracial Student Organization and Boundaries: outlet of expression, an organization that works with visual and performing arts.

While students can start organizations without becoming an RSO, those registered receive a number of benefits as a result of their status. Those benefits include: access to campus facilities; a mailbox in the Student Activities Office in the Student Union; the right to apply for University office space and petition SGA for funds; access to advisors who will assist in developing a group and University accounts through which all business must be conducted.

RSOs receive allocated funds by the Student Government

Turn to RSO, page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

All Summer long... (hopefully)

HIGH: 95
LOW: 75

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Hillel plans move–in open house, group unites Jewish community

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

Incoming students looking to become involved in the Jewish community should check out the Hillel House this fall.

Hillel, located at 388 North Pleasant St., offers a wide array of social, cultural and religious programs for Jewish students from diverse backgrounds and upbringings.

This fall, on freshman move–in day, Hillel House will be having an open house where students can visit, introduce themselves and ask questions.

Hillel, named after an ancient rabbi, is a national organization for Jewish college students which devotes itself to exploring modern Judaism and the Jewish community. It is also a resource to students who wish to travel and study abroad in Israel.

"I discovered a lot about myself, my strengths, my weaknesses, and evolved at Hillel," said senior American Israeli Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) Campus Liaison Jay Bragg.

"Hillel helped make me more Jewish, I learned more about my own religion," freshman Darren Green said. "I made tons of friends also."

This past year was the first time Hillel organized a group, specifically for freshman, called Hillel 2000. The group introduced Jewish students to one another, and helped get them involved in a campus activity and the Jewish community.

The group had weekly meetings, planed a Chanukah party, and had

Turn to HILLEL, page 2

DVP brings renowned speakers to UMass campus

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

The Distinguished Visitors Pro–gram, one of the most highly acclaimed student run organizations at the University of Massachusetts, is responsible for bringing in a number of interesting and notable guests to the campus community.

Financed and operated by the undergraduate students at UMass, the DVP has been responsible for the appearance of acclaimed poets, writers, speakers, and intellectuals.

Barry Williams, the author of Growing up Brady: I Was a Teenage Greg, was the most recent distinguished visitor who entertained a packed Campus Center Auditorium containing roughly 500 students. His multi–media presentation on being a vital part of the Brady clan was not only impressive, but atypical.

"It was definitely a departure from what we usually do. We didn't expect the turnout of students either, we would have put out more chairs if we knew that so many people would be sitting and standing along the walls," commented Lisa Levy, student Treasurer of the DVP about the Williams appearance.

Following the lecture, Williams remained in the Campus Center to sign autographs and answer questions from students hungry for answers to some of the most intricate Brady questions.

"The reception was kind of crazy," Levy said. "There were droves and droves of people coming out of the elevator. The line was out the door," Levy said.

In addition to the Williams appearance, such reputables as Henry Rollins, Dr. Ruth Westheimer and Kwame Ture (Stokely Carmichael) have been invited to address the campus this past semester.

"The W.E.B. Du Bois Afro–American studies department was searching for funding for that program for Kwame Ture. It was DVP that put in the initial amount of money," said Jose Tolson, advisor to the DVP.

"Eventually, the Black Student Union joined, along with, funding from the Black Week organization on campus and the graduate school," Tolson said. "If it hadn't been for DVP, we probably wouldn't have been able to bring Ture to UMass," Tolson said.

"I'd say it was just as well attended as the Barry Williams lecture," Levy said.

Other notable artists of the DVP roster include Chuck D, Angela Davis, bell hooks, Allen Ginsberg, John Updike and many others.

Besides presenting an impressive realm of visitors, the DVP, according to its members, offers a world of opportuni-

Turn to DVP, page 2

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Laura Stock
Copy Editor: Chris Stamm
Photo Technician: Thang Vo
Production Supervisor: Josh Sylvester
Production Staff: Leon Latino, Mark McGrath

Hillel

continued from page 1

outings to Northampton.

"This is a really good group to have... it is nice to have a group of friends that I can also have a good time with," freshman Aaron Philmus said.

Beth Seewald, the Jewish Campus Service Core Fellow who created the group, said that the experience may prepare some of the students to participate on the Hillel Council in the next few years.

The Hillel Student Council deals with political, social and religious issues and is active in organizing events at the house and around campus.

The council assists Hillel in sponsoring major events such as the Elie Wiesel–Maya Angelou dialogue two years ago and this year's lecture by Dr. Ruth Westheimer.

Hillel was active in helping to create the administrative Office of Jewish Affairs which deals directly with issues of concern for Jewish students. Hillel also sends large groups every year to the AIPAC in Washington D.C.

Last but not least, the second floor of Hillel serves as a Jewish Living Community and an off–campus option where students can live after their freshman year.

"The JLC offers Jewish students an alternative living situation where they can experience Jewish culture and heritage together," said last year's Resident Assistant Guy Chayoun.

RSO

continued from page 1

Association (SGA) based on an a number of factors including the number of members involved with the group, the ability of that group to work with other organizations and student businesses, past usage of allotted funds, and their willingness to raise money on their own, something the SGA expects them to do.

To form an RSO, a group must have 10 undergraduate members; a constitution stating the group's mission; structure and operating procedures; and a democratic process that entitles any member to a vote on critical issues.

Paradise said that students interested in finding out about particular organizations should visit the Student Activities Office, although she doesn't recommend doing so until a few weeks into the semester, when the office will have contact persons for each group established.

"It's never too late to join a group. [Students] should do it when they're ready. The groups are always looking for new members," Paradise said.

Hello freshmen!

Welcome to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Soon enough you'll be caught up in the daily rigors of college life. In between hitting the snooze button, rushing to and from classes and studying (or partying) all night, you may wonder, "What the hell is going on?"

A very simple, and maybe even enjoyable, way to keep informed is to read the News section of your Massachusetts Daily Collegian. It is our duty to inform you about breaking college, local, national and international news.

I sincerely believe that in our post–modern, politically correct, politically corrupt society, it is the responsibility of the press to keep this democracy honest.

We assure your right to know the truth — so take advantage of it!

If you desire to inform and educate your fellow University students, please come down to the Collegian. We are located in the basement of the Campus Center and I am always looking for enthusiastic writers of all levels! You can contact me when the fall semester begins at the Collegian at 545–1762. Or if you're anxious, you can reach me at home (508) 845–1605 or at the Boston Globe at (617) 929–2860.

I look forward to hearing from you!

Jonathan Liberty
Jonathan Liberty
News Editor

DVP

continued from page 1

ties more than observed by the public.

"It gives you good experience with public relations. It lets you know more about the campus and what's going on in the community. You not only learn how to write press releases and how to use a computer, but also you get to meet world–famous people and get to hear their ideas on pressing issues," Levy said.

According to Tolson, the DVP portrays an aspect of our culture that functions beyond your typical music and theater themes.

"My feeling is that DVP is like a non–invested party when we bring in a speaker — a lot of the artists that come to UMass are not advocating a particular thing. This isn't to say that it's not a good thing, but I guess I always worry that with so many topics and speakers there tends to be a loss of variety," Tolson said.

Tolson also made reference to the many opportunities awaiting any prospective member to the DVP club.

"There's an opportunity to meet the person and get to know the speaker on a more personal basis. I enjoyed talking to Kurt Vonnegut when he came to UMass," Tolson said.

In addition, the multi–media Dr. Ruth Westheimer appeared before a sold–out crowd in the Fine Arts Center auditorium to converse about the hazards of promiscuous sex. DVP, as planned, scheduled Mrs. Westheimer right before Spring Break of 1997.

"DVP is notorious for bringing light topics, but topics that a lot of people want to know about. We planned for Dr. Ruth right before spring break because of the topic of sex and sexually transmitted diseases. We're looking to bring speakers that have influence and that have done things on a long term basis," Tolson said.

According to Levy, Dr. Ruth was her favorite speaker to date.

"Dr. Ruth Westheimer was my favorite as far as recognizability. She was sweet and full of energy," Levy said.

Presently, there are approximately 12–15 members of DVP, but a new members meeting is scheduled for early next fall. Currently, there are no speakers scheduled to address the UMass community for the fall of 1997.

"The main purpose of DVP and the thing I have gotten the most pleasure from is working with this group of students and the diversity of the speakers who have something to say to the campus as a whole," Tolson said.

For more information, perspective members are encouraged to contact the DVP office, located in room 404 in the Student Union, or call 545–0046.

CAMPUS GEAR
THE BEST SELECTION FOR UMASS APPAREL
Champion Sweatshirts as Low as $20
✔ T-Shirts ✔ Jerseys
✔ Jackets ✔ Hats
✔ Sweatshirts ✔ Shorts
Champion Ts – As low as $8
GO UMass
413-549-0944
255 Triangle Street • Amherst
Between Dairy Mart & Northampton Co-Op Bank

PIZZA SUBS GYROS
the Sub
33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5160
Welcome Class of 2001!!
Pizza's, Subs, Calzones, and more...
Hours: 11am – 2 am
549-5160

IT'S BACK!
1/2 PRICE APPETIZERS
4-8 p.m.
7 Days A Week
Choose from Our Special Menu
No other offers apply • Eat-In Only
Also Available
Chef Specials - 6 to choose
Kai Chi
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall • Rte. 9
Hadley • 586-2774

Mill Valley ESTATES
Now... The lifestyle you've been waiting for...
Luxury two and three bedroom apartments in Amherst
Amenities Include:
Central Location • Beautiful Golfcourse • Mountain Views • Private Entries
Select Apartments located on the PVTA Bus Stop
On site day care center • Play Areas • Laundry Room • Victory Gardens
Tennis & Basketball Courts
We Offer:
Heat & Hot Water included in your rent • Wall to wall carpet • Washer/Dryer Hookups
Air Conditioning • Fully Appliianced Kitchens w/ Disposals • Intercom Entry System Profesional On Site Management • 24 hour maintenance
Equal Housing Opportunity
Directions: Just off Rt.9 take West St. (Rt.9 116s) to East Hadley Rd. Take first left onto Riverglade.
420 Riverglade Drive , Amherst • 413-253-7377

WELCOME CLASS OF 2001!
Don't wait in the LONG, HOT lines at the Annex...
Come to the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop & College Store for
• The shortest lines and longest hours
• A friendly, pleasant shopping environment
Jeffery Amherst Bookshop
20 South Pleasant Street Amherst Massachusetts 01002 256-3561
Expires 9/30/97
Use this coupon and save $5 on book purchase of $50 or more
Jeffery Amherst Bookshop
Use this coupon and save $5 on book purchase of $50 or more
FIVE DOLLARS

Scott downsizes faculty, stifles Academic Affairs budget

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Discontent has mounted across the University of Massachusetts campus over the large number of faculty cuts and the decline in the percentage of the University budget going towards Academic Affairs in recent years.

"I am very concerned," said Bruce Laurie, chair of the history department. "Especially because of the trend in downsizing what I consider to be the core of the University."

According to Faculty Senate and administration documents, UMass has lost 238 faculty members over the past six years. At the same time, the percentage of the budget going towards Academic Affairs has been dropping approximately one percentage point a year, going from 65 percent of the overall University budget in 1989 to 57.81 percent in 1997.

"In 1991, there were 1304 tenured faculty members," said Ernest May, chair of the department of music and dance. "Today there are 1066. That is a very large loss in faculty while the number of students has decreased only slightly."

These faculty losses have occurred in all departments on campus — not just the College of Humanities and Fine Arts — because as faculty have retired, their positions have not been filled. The funding for those positions, as well as that for additional budgetary items in Academic Affairs, has been moved to other areas of the University budget, including financial aid, information technology, the Campaign UMass capital campaign and classroom renovation.

"The pattern is one of a steady and cumulatively quite serious decline in the share of the budget going to Academic Affairs," said James Boyce, chair of the economics department. "It is a really significant erosion."

The faculty downsizing, as well as the directing of funds away from Academic Affairs, are part of Chancellor David K. Scott's five year Strategic Action Plan to restructure the University.

In order to fund larger amounts of financial aid, building repairs and technology initiatives, Scott initiated an early retirement plan. The plan calls for the retirement of over 400 faculty and staff members between 1996 and 1998. Scott plans to fill only 50 percent of those positions, which, combined with earlier cuts, will result in a total loss of 1,000 faculty and staff members in the 10 years from 1990 to 2000.

Scott feels that these cuts are necessary so that the University will have the money to repair its many failing buildings.

"I wish we did not have to reduce numbers of faculty and staff," Scott said. "The fact is they do not work in an environment that they deserve. We had to restructure the budget between salaries and support."

Faculty downsized too far?

Not everyone agrees with Scott's decision. Many faculty members, such as Laurie, feel that Scott has cut the faculty too much and that Academic Affairs must be given a larger share of the University budget if UMass is to fulfill its academic mission.

"There is no reason to downsize for the amount the plan calls for," Laurie said. "It is Draconian."

Boyce likened the Chancellor's plan to a "neutron bomb approach to downsizing" in which there are no faculty left to fill the buildings.

"The centrality of teaching has not been a major factor in allocating funds," Boyce said. "It is very important to avoid any worsening of this situation. This really puts the quality of undergraduate education at risk."

The faculty argue that hirings are necessary to reduce class size and student to faculty ratios, to increase the number and variety of classes offered on campus and to bring new teaching techniques and vitality to campus.

"Everybody in the Academic Affairs side of the house agrees that we can not continue to downsize the faculty," said CHFA Dean Lee Edwards. "Our first priority must be to rebuild the faculty."

Interim Provost Patricia Crosson said that her $10 million request for Academic Affairs in the 1998 budget "most fundamentally argues the need for new faculty on the campus."

"We have gotten out of balance. We need new faculty to do all of the things we want to do," Crosson said. "They would bring new energy, new life to the curriculum, to research and outreach activities."

May said that it is unrealistic to pursue goals such as admittance into the Association of American Universities (AAU) and the creation of an Honors College while faculty downsizing continues.

"All these lofty ambitions are occurring at a time when faculty cuts have occurred and the percentage of the total University budget that goes into Academic Affairs is shrinking 1 percentage point each year," May said. "My largest concern is this: for most of the time I have been at UMass, there was enthusiasm for building a really great faculty. There is no enthusiasm any more."

Scott: the cuts will pay off in the long run

Chancellor Scott responds to these criticisms by saying that he is aware of what effects his downsizing policy will have on the campus and that he has no choice but to reallocate the funds.

"I can only think about advancing the entire enterprise," Scott said. "Certainly it puts more stress on the faculty and students. We will have to find ways of providing quality education for the same number of students with less faculty."

Scott said he believes that new technology may ease the burden of the remaining faculty.

"Investing a lot in technology may help," Scott said. "In the long run, it can be a positive environment for the future."

"We will be better in 2001 than if we had not taken these actions," Scott said.

Adorable Bouquet Florists
120 N. Main Street
Belchertown
Daily Deliveries to UMass
Local and Worldwide deliveries
Fresh Flowers, Dorm Plants, etc.
9-6 M-F 323-8291 9-2 Sat
(Closed Sundays)

Welcome Class of 2001!
Any car troubles? Come right down the street to the best auto body around!
STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385
• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+/- 0.5mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's YOUR car and YOUR choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration #RS1212

A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
Get into town!
College Clothing • Pens • Paper • Printer Ribbons
Cartridges • Resumé Paper • Calculators
Greeting Cards • Magazines • Notebooks
It's time to get some stuff!
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst."
45 South Pleasant St. • Phone 253-3840
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 5 am to 9 pm, Sundays 5 am to 5 pm

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
FOR THE FINEST FILMS DO COME TO NORTHAMTON BEST MOVIE THEATER
Academy of Music
274 Main St., Northampton, 584-8435
(Director Duane Robinson, who in part credits his film-buyer, George Manacuz, for the Academy's celluloid successes, notes that over the last year the theater screened films that garnered a stunning 41 Academy Award nominations.) "It's really a special place," Robinson says. "This month, we'll be 106 years old, precisely the same age to within a day or two as another venue with a legendary history: Carnegie Hall."
• A Real Theathre- Balconies. Operea Boxes, Gold Gilt, Tiffany Glass
• A SINGLE SILVER SCREEN (Unheard of these days)
• Call for listings 24 hrs. day
ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1997 1996
ACADEMY MUSIC CinemaHouse 584-8435 NORTHAMPTON, MASS

ATKINS FARMS Country Market
Farming Since 1887
CORNER OF RTE. 116 & BAR RD.
SOUTH AMHERST, MA 01002
TEL. # (413) 253-9528
or (800) 594-9537
Home Grown Apples, Peaches, Pears & Blueberries
A New England Apple Orchard Country Food Market
WHERE YOU'LL DISCOVER HOW GOOD FRESHNESS CAN TASTE!
Nestled in an old country orchard against the scenic Holyoke Mountain Range in the historic Pioneer Valley where the Atkins Family has been growing apples for over 100 years.
You will enjoy a unique shopping experience where old times service is an everyday treat. As you stroll through the store you may well be tempted to sample a crisp, juicy apple, some zesty cheese of delicious fudge. Or you may have lunch in the deli, or a delicious snack chosen from Atkins scratch-pastries, breads and pies.
Special Student Care Packages for when you need a "Pick-Me-Up" or to celebrate a special occasion!
Happy Birthday Gift Basket
Birthday Cakes
Nacho Pak
All Natural Snack Pak
Get Well Pak
Floral Bouquet
and our most popular:
Snack Pak: with fruits, cheese, crackers, trail mix, Atkins Cookies, cider donuts, chocolate bar, and more
JUST CALL (so have your favorite call)
253-9528 or 800-594-9537
We'll Take Care of the Rest and Deliver to Your Door or Resort
Call Mon-Fri, 8-5
Farm Fresh Produce
Sweet Apple Cider
Maple Syrup
Homemade Fudge & other Candies
Cheese
Deli & Lunches
Full Service Country Florist
Coffee & Ice Cream Bar
Fruit & Specialty Baskets
Bakery-Country Baking from Scratch
Gifts & Specialty Foods
Specialty Coffee
Prepared and semi-prepared Take Out Foods
Fruit & Specialty Baskets
Meat Market featuring Atkins Angus Beef, Bell & Evans Chicken, & the most tasty pork

Getting a new computer for school is as easy as ABC!
a Join the UMass/Five College Federal Credit Union.
• Any UMass/Amherst student is eligible.
• It takes about ten minutes.
• You only need about $5.00 to open an account.
• Enjoy benefits like an ATM card, no fee checking, and great loan rates.
b Go to the University store and pick out your computer.
• Choose from a great selection like Apple, IBM, Toshiba, NEC
• Academic discounts up to 20% off
• Most brands in stock
c Fill out a computer loan application at the credit union.
• 9.9% APR fixed rate
• Borrow up to $5,000
• Take as long as 4 years to pay
• Quick approval
Now is a great time to buy a computer for school. The University store has great buys, and the UMass/Five College Credit Union has a great financing package. But you have to be a credit union member. So just come to our 6 University Drive office in the Victory shopping plaza across the street from Rafters. It only takes a $5.00 deposit and about ten minutes to join. And don't forget to pick up a computer loan application.
Students of UMass/Amherst campus and employees, faculty, staff, and their immediate families, of UMass, Amherst College, Smith College, Hampshire College, and Mount Holyoke College are eligible to be UMass/Five College Federal Credit Union members.
UMass Five College Federal Credit Union
AMHERST • WORCESTER • DARTMOUTH
6 University Drive • Amherst MA 01002
413-549-7400
Equal Housing Lender
NCUA
Annual Percentage Rate (APR) is fixed for the term of the loan. 48 months @9.9% is $25.32 per $1,000. Other terms are available. Rate may change without notice. Loans are subject to credit application and approval. A copy of the invoice is required at time of application. Loan approval is subject to the terms and conditions of UMSCFCU.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor in Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor
Ryan McDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Luis Luna Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seenia Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bi-sexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Co-Editor
Position Vacant Women's Issues Editor

Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Presties Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially under- Jent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A letter from the editor

Welcome to the Opinion/Editorial page of The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — the place where it all happens!

I hope, with your help, this semester will find the page to be the site of campus controversies, witticisms and debates more than ever.

We have several returning columnists — for instance the much-loved Luke Meredith and award-winning Mark McGrath, both featured in the present issue. And we're lucky to have a slew of newer writers who have wowed with their words during the spring... stay tuned for great things from them, as well as our bold policy editorials, actually funny cartoons and a nationally-syndicated favorite (whose name is...)

However, don't just read what's here — make what's here. Contribute your thoughts and comments, your humorous insights and your unique perspectives.

When you get here to stay in the fall, watch the Opinion/Editorial page for features like our science & technology column, focus editorials on international hot spots, point/counterpoints and special series on topics like race and labor history. We will be recruiting writers for all of these, and more, in notices on the page. Stay tuned.

One of the priorities for the Opinion/Editorial page is printing letters to the editor from the campus and beyond. Really, the page isn't doing its job if it doesn't provide a place for everyone on campus to communicate about issues that are important to us all. Besides, we love to hear your responses — it lets us know you care. Letters should be 400 words or less and can be edited for length, style and clarity. The letters section is the place for anything that makes a specific response to the content of one of our stories or editorials.

Come on down and be a part of one of the most vital pages in the paper! We're in the Campus Center basement, in the back. You can also call 545-1361 and talk to me, or write email to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Yours,

Daniel Bodah

Making the numbers add up

"So, what will you be doing for the next four years of your life?"

"I'm going to college!"

"I know that, stupid. You're at orientation, of course you're going to college. Just answer my question. What are you going to be doing for the next four years?"

"I'm getting my education."

"Education, what does that mean? Or do you even know? Of course you don't know. You're stepping on this campus as a student for the first time. You couldn't know."

Well, here you are, the Class of 2001 (damn, I'm getting old). You've probably been officially and unofficially welcomed to the University of Massachusetts a few hundred times by now, but allow me to be the next and certainly not the last to do likewise.

Welcome.

While you're up here for orientation, you're probably finding out for the first time just how much you don't know (and don't want to know) about what's going to happen to you in a couple of months and for the next four years.

If there's anything you do know, it's that classes will make up a crucial part of whatever your college experience will be. Anything else, you have to find out for yourself.

Educational experience is fine, and the primary reason you're coming here, but most students will tell you that they've learned and grown more through their friends, activities and experiences than in any textbook or lecture hall. Whether it means learning to live away from home or on a limited budget, or how to put together a newspaper, college has lessons to offer on any number of levels.

On this campus and on campuses around the country, hundreds of thousands of students are pursuing a college education, many because they want to enrich their minds and more because they've been told they need one to have any chance of succeeding in this world. But how many will be able to say they made the most of their four years? How many will graduate knowing that the time and money they've invested will have reaped worthwhile gains?

How can a student enrolling in a University of this size get the most out of the college experience?

By now, you've probably been herded up for a tour of the campus or a speech by some mid-level administrator, and therefore know how it feels to be treated like livestock. In fact, some will argue that livestock get more personal attention on this campus than the students.

The University has tried to make you feel welcome as an individual, but we all know that such a lofty goal is impossible, considering the poor funding of public education in this state. There is only so much the UMass administration can do for each student with such limited resources.

Part of learning about this University involves coming to grips with the fact that in many ways, you will be treated like a number. If you want to make college a personalized experience, you must personalize it yourself.

> "By now, you've probably been herded up for a tour of the campus and therefore know how it feels to be treated like livestock."
>
> Mark McGrath

Take my experience with The Massachusetts Daily Collegian as an example. In writing this column and over 60 others, I've fulfilled a lifelong dream of having my writing published and read by 17,000 peers. In working for the different departments here, I've gained a number of skills and broad experience that have already paid off. But that has come at a cost.

Having invested a large part of my time in writing, editing, interviewing and the actual production of this paper, other parts of my college experience have undoubtedly suffered. Perhaps that shows up in weaker academic course work or weekends dedicated entirely to catching up on work and sleep. That is a choice I have made, a risk I took on when I first came to UMass.

Similarly, you will, upon returning to this campus in September, be faced with a choice. What type of student will you be? If you feel comfortable in limiting your experience to academic course work, you are entitled to do that. If your primary objective is to taste every type of beer known to man, I encourage you to start with Sam Adams. If you want to grow in other directions, there are hundreds of student organizations that can help you do that.

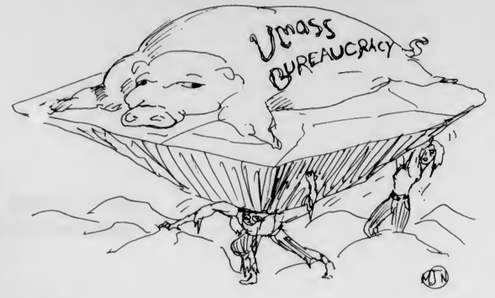
To you, these organizations may appear to be mere names on a list, but to those who participate in them, they are much more than that. They are communities of students, growing, sharing and experiencing together. They are the keys to personalizing the college experience.

When I first came to the University, I was lucky enough to have a resident assistant who helped me make some decisions about what I wanted from my college experience. He encouraged me to follow my heart and not let the confusion of being a newcomer to the world of UMass get in my way. I have never looked back. Evoking his spirit and the spirit of his crucial advice, I offer you some of my own.

While the immense size of this University tends to make students feel like numbers, it also allows for a seemingly unlimited range of student opportunities. They are here for your taking.

Just understand that every choice you make will lead you down a different road, and down every road lie many more choices. The earlier you begin to make those choices, the farther down those roads you will be able to progress.

While you're sitting in the crammed and sweltering orientation dorms, or when you're back where you came from, waiting for the whole college thing to kick into gear, you may want to put a little thought into what you want from UMass.



There are wonderful opportunities, but as is characteristic of a large university (and life in general), the opportunities won't walk up to you and sit in your lap. You have to choose to make them yours. The rest will take care of itself.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necssarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Something you need to know

Daniel Bodah

As you're walking around campus and getting the official descriptions of what's up at the University of Massachusetts, an important story is probably not being told by your tour guides.

It's a story that goes back to 1992. It exploded anew during the spring 1997 semester, and has yet to be resolved entirely. This fall will find the issue still a hot topic of discussion — the full tale needs to be told here.

We begin in the autumn of 1992. A number of incidents on campus spurred the ALANA (Asian, Latin American, African and Native American) community to action, starting with the suspicious circumstances surrounding the elimination of the Upward Bound program, which provided educational opportunities for underprivileged students.

Around the same time news of the Upward Bound scandal broke, an African–American resident assistant was physically assaulted by a white visitor in Washington Residence Hall in the Southwest Residential Area. A related series of vandalism incidents also singled this RA's hall out with racist graffiti, flooding and smeared human feces. African–American students were outraged with the lax response of the University administration and police.

Meanwhile, about 11 ALANA students sat–in at Memorial Hall for a week in protest of the Columbus Day holiday. They issued statements denouncing the holiday as a celebration of genocide and challenging the University to make good on its commitments to a non–racist environment by replacing the holiday with teach–ins and offering scholarships for women of color.

Simultaneously, African–American student frustrations with the administrative response to the Washington tower incidents, and other racial attacks which followed, led to the short–term occupation of part of Washington. The occupiers insisted that the University take much stronger action on racial issues.

Spurred by these protests, a series of agreements was made between the University and the ALANA community. The agreements were mediated by Marty Walsh, regional director of the Justice Department's Community Relations Service, and for this reason were legally binding on the University. The agreements included, among other items, increases in minority students, faculty and staff as well as the reinstatement of the Upward Bound program.

And all seemed to be moving toward Wellsville.

Well, wouldn't you know it, Marty Walsh has become a presence at UMass again during the spring of 1997.

This time there were also multiple causes for campus unrest. For instance, the Graduate Employee Organization, a UAW–affiliated union which represents UMass teaching assistants, had no acceptable contract since June 1996. GEO negotiations with the administration stalled around several points, most notably the lack of flexible, affordable child care for numerous single–parent employees.

An administrative proposal to increase parking fees on campus, for students, faculty and staff also sparked widespread protest. The fees, already quite high, were in some cases slated to double in a single year.

To top it all off, the administration had failed to adhere to the ALANA Agreements of 1992 — the promised levels of minority enrollment hadn't been achieved, and students were getting sick of being told by committee after committee that they were "working on it."

This past March 3, students held a rally at the Student Union which rapidly turned into a peaceful mass occupation of the Controller's Office in the Goodell Building. The students presented a list of approximately 40 demands and subdemands, called the Living Document. The Living Document called for the ALANA Agreements of 1992 be fulfilled, the establishment of new programs in minority studies and the establishment of an accessible, subsidized child care center on a sliding fee scale, among numerous other items.

A team of 15 student negotiators began intensive discussions with University representatives. Chancellor Scott, however, was vacationing in Mexico at the time and did not deign to send so much as a message to the 200 students occupying the building.

The occupation lasted for six days. At its peak, the rally of support outside Goodell drew up to 1,200 Five College students.

On May 8, the student negotiating team and the administrative representatives agreed on a list of basic demands. The student occupiers left Goodell, clearly establishing a schedule of negotiations on other points of the Living Document, especially the child care demands.

Following the occupation, talks between the student negotiators and administrators bogged down, apparently due to a lack of respect and good faith on the part of the University.

This is the short version — and a story to be continued when school starts again in the fall. Take it upon yourself as a UMass student to become informed and to support your fellow students in the struggle for opportunity and equality.

Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

Words from a wise guy

Luke Meredith

Hey there, kids. My name is Luke Meredith, and I work for The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, which is what you're reading right now. Besides being the Sports Editor, I'm also a weekly Ed/Op columnist. (Every Thursday, every Thursday. I'm all about gratuitous plugs, baby.) You may hear people call me the "Pimp Daddy," a nickname that has strange origins and even stranger applications, or "Dookie," which is just plain vulgar. But you can call me what you want to. Just never call me late for the keg, honey.

I'm writing because I want to say "hi," and welcome you to the University of Massachusetts.

Hi. Welcome to the University of Massachusetts. (Pretty good, huh?)

Let me tell you about my orientation. Rewind the tape to July, 1994 (Yes, I'm that old). My orientation was one of the last ones in July, because it was transfer orientation. I had just spent my freshman year at UMass–Lowell, the school that I'm with again that day. I got to go to bed stoned. I didn't have any worries, because I could just tell I'd love UMass.

The point of that story?

There is no point. (You'll see a lot of that in my work). I just wanted to break the ice a little bit. Orientation is just a big bunch of "you know what," so don't worry about it.

My advice is to get fired up for all the great things the school has to offer you from an academic side. The social life will take care of itself. You may meet the people you will hang out with for four (or five, or six) years, or you may never even remember who the hell these kids are. (I think Joe is probably trying to get into Norther Essex Community College by now).

And another thing before I go. Let me clarify a few things. If you want to smoke a lot of pot (I mean a lot) and drink some beers, move to Central Residence Area. If you want to smoke a little pot, and drink a lot of beers, move to Southwest. If you want to study a lot and play Dungeons and Dragons, move to Orchard Hill. If you like math, move to Northeast.

And if you're just weird, move to Sylvan.

Okay, that may be a little harsh. Fact is, you'll find cool people anywhere. (Except Orchard Hill. Nobody cool lives there.)

A few tidbits of advice. Don't listen to that loud–mouth kid who used to come up here all the time and get hammered with his frat–boy brother who thinks he knows everything, because he doesn't. (Trust me, I'm the one who knows everything).

Know the following things before you start your college career here at UMass.

The best pizza you'll ever find is at Antonio's.

Your fake I.D. will not work uptown, if you're a freshman. (Wait 'till you're a sophomore, you'll be fine).

Leave the "Peabody High Football" jacket at home. High school jackets are a sure sign that you're a freshman. (By the way, don't be mad at me, Peabody kids. I don't mind Peabody. Joe existed, I swear.)

Basketball tickets are free. (They charge you by some random fee in your tuition.)

The Whitmore Administration Building, (all caps, because it's all mighty), is where your fate will be decided. If you want to enjoy your stay, avoid Whitmore as much as possible. (I've been withdrawn from school twice, once because of a phone bill. True story.)

Since you'll run out of money in October, (sorry, but it's true), Busch Light 30–packs. I'll say it again. Busch Light 30–packs.

For the rest of the summer, I suggest this: burn the varsity jacket, dump your high school sweetheart and get ready to, as U2's Bono once said, "dream it all up again."

We'll be waiting for you, with a Busch Light in one hand and a map of the campus in the other.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Orientation, Summer 1997

Note from the editor

Humphrey brown III

For those of you who don't know me, and I gather that pretty much means all of you since you're just getting here, my name is Humphrey brown III. I am the Black Affairs and Senior Diversity Editor, here at The Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

Established in 1975, the Black Affairs Page (a.k.a. The Page) has been dedicated to bringing the word to the black community here at the University of Massachusetts. The issues that we deal with, here at the Page, are issues that directly affect people of color. When I say people of color, I mean all members of the African Diaspora. This includes Haitians, Cape Verdians, Puerto Ricans, Colombians, all Latinos and Latinas, and Africans. We are all people of African descent. If you didn't read that before, you have no excuse not to know now. You are here to learn.

Not only do we cover news at the Page, but we also do book reviews, movie reviews, sports, entertainment and editorial/opinion pieces. We also run poems and a host of special interest spots, like One Time for the Mind, and Sister Choice Speaks.

I've been the editor of the Black Affairs Page for the past three semesters. When I first got to UMass and I looked at an issue of The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, similar to the one you hold in your hands now, one of the first things I noticed was that I did not see many (if any) black names or faces in it.

At this point, I will allow you to look through the rest of the paper and give me a count of the black names and faces you see. Go 'head. Take a quick look. I'll still be here.

Other than this page, how many did you see? Not, many at all, huh? This is the same thing I noticed when I got here and is the primary reason why I'm at the Collegian today. When I saw that this paper was severely misrepresented, I knew I had to get involved. On a campus that is as large as UMass, there is no reason that the voice of the black community should not be represented.

During the fall '97 and spring '98 semesters, Black Affairs, as well as the rest of the Diversity Desks (Multicultural Affairs, Developing Nations, Jewish Affairs, Gay, Lesbian Bi–sexual and Transgender Issues and Women's Issues) are looking to do some major recruiting. Even though we've made some strides as far as diversifying the paper, we still have a long way to go. Not only are we looking for writers for the diversity pages, but we're looking for students of color to get involved in the other areas of the paper. We need representation in Arts, News, Ed/Op and Sports. All of these departments are lacking in ALANA (Asian, Latino, African and Native American) representation.

A lot of you are going to find that it's very easy to get left behind and in the dark about important issues on this campus if you don't get involved. The Collegian is the source for what's going on at UMass. When you don't know what's going on, anything can happen to you.

Let's not play games. Don't think that college is just a haven for good times, parties and feel–good people. All of that has it's place, but there are also a lot of poli–tricks and power games that get played. It's always a battle with the administration over something. But, let me not get it twisted for you. UMass is a good school and you made a good choice when you choose to come here. UMass will be what you make it.

It is my hope that all of the new ALANA students take it upon themselves to get involved with not only the Black Affairs Page and the Collegian, but with all the various Registered Student Organizations on this campus. This is the time to get things going and start making moves. High school is over. Let's get busy.

Humphrey brown III is a Collegian columnist.

Along the Color Line: Public vs. Private

The central issue which defines American politics today, as well as the future of politics of the 21st century, is the conflict between the "public" vs. the "private." Should we utilize government as a means to address our major social and economic problems? Or should we emphasize market–based initiatives, the private sector, to solve issues like unemployment and poverty? Nearly every significant policy debate since the election of Ronald Reagan in 1980 has come down to this question: Should government or corporations be most powerful in determining the future of our country?

Dr. Manning Marable

The list of examples illustrating the public sector vs. private sector is virtually endless. In health care, for instance, Clinton's 1994 proposal for managed health care tried to combine limited government mandates with private–ly–run, health provider corporations. Instead of pushing vigorously for the single–player, comprehensive health-care system we need, Clinton tried to please private sector interests, and failed.

In public education, a debate is currently waging over the issues of vouchers, and whether parents should be subsidized to send their children to private schools. In public colleges, cutbacks in state and local funding has forced higher tuition and fees, reducing the access of many racial minorities and working people to higher education.

In the areas of public housing and homelessness, the state and city governments are aggressively cutting back funds. The Federal government's public housing initiatives have been some what better during Clinton's administration than under Reagan and Bush. Yet increasingly, politicians argue that government needs to get out of the business of building and managing public housing, and that the private market should determine the quality and availability of housing.

Regarding issues of personal safety, "privatization" has meant the growth of the private security guard industry. Today in the U.S., there are 1.5 million full–time and part– time security guards, compared to only 550,000 police officers. Corporations, private country clubs, and exclusive planned communities are guarded by private security personnel. Increasingly, matters of law enforcement are moving away from the public sector, where at least civilian review boards and similar agencies provide a check against police misconduct.

In the areas of culture, some of the fiercest battles between public vs. private interests have been waged: efforts to destroy the National Endowment for the Humanities, the National Endowment for the Arts, and public television; the reductions in funding for public museums, parks and recreational facilities, and cultural education programs for children and adults.

We can see this destructive process by focusing on public libraries. Severe reductions in staff and funding have crippled public library services in virtually every major American city. Increasingly, large corporate bookstore chains have taken the place of public libraries — except that consumers can only have legitimate access if they have the money to purchase books in the market economy. Both knowledge and beauty are always for sale. The value of everything is what price it bears in the marketplace.

Of course, the most devastating struggles between the public vs. private sectors have been about jobs. The Reagan Republicans and "Contract With America" ultra–rightists declare that government has no moral responsibility to create jobs for the unemployed, to provide vocational training and social services for the indigent. The poor must learn to fend for ourselves.

The trends toward commercialization and privatization now impact the smallest matters of daily life. For example, the Federal Express branch office in my Manhattan neighborhood refuses to accept cash as payment — only credit cards. Many commercial establishments now prefer payment by credit cards or bank debit cards. Millions of poor people are already denied credit at banks, and increasingly, in the future will be refused access to a whole range of goods and services.

Progressive politics must put the welfare of people ahead of the corporations and personal profit. That's why the struggle to maintain and to expand public institutions and public spaces is central to the achievement of a more democratic society.

Dr. Manning Marable is professor of history and the director of the Institute for Research in African–American Studies, Columbia University, New York City. "Along the Color Line" appears in over 300 publications throughout the U.S. and internationally.

One Time for the Mind: Black girls to women

Allana E. Todman

Graduating from high school and gaining acceptance into a University is a major step that many of you should be proud of.

To be a black woman in society today, there are many challenges at large that effect our community at home, in our culture, as well as when we are embarking into our professional careers within the main stream.

As a college student, it is now your time to claim your education. You are not here to receive one. To receive is to take what has been given to you, but to claim is to take what is rightfully yours. With our ancestors cultivating America's land, to receive an education is by no means a gift for us, but an opportunity that should have been available a long time ago.

Often times as young females in high school, there are many instances of intra–group hostility that can occur because of the ignorance that we allow to manifest in ourselves. Conflicts that occur may deal with females due to the lack of black males that are available, as well as within ourselves emotionally and internally.

Due to the voids that we feel we must fulfill in our lives, at times we may become passive and confused in our transcendence of growing from "girls" into womanhood.

As you enter academia, don't allow these feelings to confuse you. Entering into a new experience, it is important that you spend your time examining the foundation of why you want to be in school.

Black women in the economic arena are the lowest paid, but the most employed within the black community. Due to our mothers, taking on the position of being "bread winners," the percentage that we see our black mothers and fathers divorcing is at a large scale.

Since slavery years, the black male never had a chance to prove his masculinity or his patriarchal role that white society considered ideal.

In looking at how we have historically advanced, the situation with how black men and black women relate to each other still proves how hard this primitive effect has hindered our growth. This is why as black people in general, we must educate and gain knowledge about the consistent patterns of oppression that plague us.

As black woman, it is almost innate within us that we take whatever type of relationship we may have with a man as something sacred and important despite the level of commitment.

At a time when we as black women see college as a way out of our oppression, as a people, by gaining our education, we begin to realize that if we gain education we will stop the consistent effect of having dysfunctional families. Meeting black eligible men who are in higher education as ourselves, is something many black woman long for.

The excitement of meeting men, who are also in college, is positive energy to have, but do not become side tracked. Many black men entering college are just as confused and insecure in their views about their lives and career goals as you may find yourself.

With this understanding, you can find many other ways to find your individuality — by becoming involved with other sistas who have positive energy and drive to succeed.

This is where you must push yourself to knock on and unlock the door to your own future. Much of your time and learning in this institution will not only be spent in the class rooms, but also through the internalization that you will have based on the environments you place yourself around.

There's nothing like a bumpin' party with fly dudes in their phat gear, and females with their hair either locked twisted, braided, weaved, straightened, or texturized, in their cute outfits. But you can only go so far with this type of environment which will eventually catch up with you.

At this large University, you do not have to walk around campus dumb–founded as to how to spend your time. You are paying enough tuition to find resources that will be beneficial to you as a black person as well as a black woman.

There are many conferences and social gatherings designed for you to interact with other black people who are about doing something for bettering themselves.

There are also many upper classmen, who will be available to openly share their views and concerns about being here at this University, and also what their personal experiences have been like. By interacting and learning from other people's experiences, you can educate yourself through the challenges that the person has expressed to you.

To transcend from a "girl" to a "woman" is to acknowledge and validate yourself by your own standards. It's not allowing yourself, from within, to respect the fear and to say "I will," or "I won't."

With this in mind, enter into the arena of higher education with an open mind, and a will to challenge yourself on the mental level. Look at the people around you and think about not only what you can gain from this University, but what you can contribute.

Then you will receive the most out of your education.

Allana E. Todman is a Collegian columnist.

Black Affairs is Dead

writers to represent this is your time. contact This is your voice Take control.

Representing yourself at UMass

Chris Taylor Conner

Do you know why you're here?

For all you potential philosophy majors out there, this is not some existentially based question. It's quite simple actually — why are you here at the University of Massachusetts?

Are you the studying type? If you are, that's a start. Taking a vital and active role in your classes is more than a suggested ideal — it's a requirement. It is especially imperative for young, black minds not to remain silent over the course of a semester.

What are some of the pitfalls of being the Everystudent, one of those kids who sits in the back, drool lolling from the corner of the mouth? You've heard the answer from your parents a million times: We are black scholars, must be two steps ahead sometimes to get a fair shake.

This means asking and answering the questions in lectures; making that call to a prof or teaching assistant for extra help; and staying up that extra hour to get that assignment done. Nobody likes the drill, but try to keep in mind that the tenacious attention given to self–discipline in college can give you an edge when your four years come to a close.

In other words, suck it up on JV to prep for Varsity success.

Are you the partying sort? Come on, we're friends now — you can 'fess up. It's all right to have a life outside of the books. In fact, it's healthy. But it's no secret that our University has a reputation for forcibly ejecting at the end of the first semester those who have over–indulged in the hedonistic lifestyle in favor of academic growth.

The basic fact of the matter is that coupled with the University's notoriously thin financial aid packages (Note to late–applying knuckleheads — money is tighter than you think, so get those forms in yesterday), party excess will ensure that some of the black faces you see at orientation will not be returning for the spring semester. Guaranteed.

I know that all of you are smart enough to figure out what I'm about to say, but I'm going to preach it to you anyway: balance is key. No one in their right mind — your nervous parents included — would expect you to be an Urkel for your entire collegiate career. You would literally keel over and die of stress.

The college student wants to party. The college student likes to party. The college student needs to party. But above all, before any jam commences, the college student needs to have that novel read cover–to–cover and that eight–page paper typed, stapled and ready for praise. Then, by all means, go out and return to your dorm later — preferably not alone — any time thereafter.

Maybe you're an athlete. Perhaps a social activist. Possibly a writer who'd like to come down and contribute to the Collegian, "New England's Largest College Daily," located in 113 Campus Center Basement. Whatever your cup of tea might be, there is something for you to do on this campus. And more importantly, never lose sight that there is always something for you to say at UMass.

Don't listen to the fools you're bound to run into who'll tell you time and time again that your voice is invalid. For that matter, don't listen to the fools who are apt to tell you that yours is the only opinion that carries any weight. You're not here to be anyone's puppet, nor are you here to shut out all beliefs that happen not to jibe with your own.

This brings us back to the question at hand. You could pose it to yourself in a few different ways.

Why are you here?

Why are you here?

Why are you here?

The simple answer is, if you got this far in the first place, four years should be enough time to find your answer — and have a gratifying, self–revealing experience while at it.

Chris Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

A cry to be heard

Omar Gayle

Since the time of heathens being converted to Christians: Slavery and Colonial rule left a wound to be healed. As we continue to cry we should always remember that it is not a cry to be silenced but yet to be heard; to be dealt with. The struggle and strive that is racism seem to divide the Human Race and unlike the laughter which echoes "Niggers go home"... America the home of the brave land of the free?, establish superiority over Africans, proclaimed whips on black backs to be the unobstructed entry into heaven's gate. Since the moment Bibles and the promise of converting Heathens to Christians penetrated the west coast of Africa, the land of Africa became and is, the vein from which white men feed their sons and daughters... While African farms dry up rendering its people victims to starvation... Nigger go home? The sun shone a bright gold on vast savannas, hills of green and brown, while black shadows dance to sounds of pain; whips and chains. "Niggers go home!" they cry but was not taking into account that they stole our home. In America our thick lips, mahogany skin, wooled hair and strong backs, fail to register in the minds of the powerful to be the impetus of America's wealth... And we sit contemplating the meaning of words such as Race, Prejudice. Racism, Bigots, Agents and Victims.

However the prayers of Black shone backs, sun–healed skin, went unanswered for pain still lingered. The [master's?] whip did not even register, for my mind was still afire from the hellish circumstances that are now unfold before the eyes of the world. Yet these hands once anchored in dirt seeks blood to wash the fight even. I called out for Allah and when Allah failed to make his presence known, I then seek the aid of Lobengula and his warriors. Lobengula failed to make his presence known and so left to fight for myself, with two swords. And with the might of every ancestor I became unlike a nigger but was reminded to a lion, baked black from the burning sun. The torpedo of my sweat which gave strength to every [illegible] and provided me with the will to fight for my salvation. Through the struggle for my life and my people impractical; the fact of survival would continue.

Forgive me hands for [illegible] the colour of those who [illegible] it; for my payment [illegible] possessed strength [illegible] to the mercy of my [illegible] proceed [illegible] that was only [illegible] which called [illegible] what dirt and [illegible] one... My and [illegible] unfamiliar [illegible] Creation, I [illegible] unseasonable [illegible] end of [illegible]

AFTERWORD

Listen to the [illegible] as it makes its way to [illegible] back and with every [illegible] return to source a temporary pain. I [illegible] my rake and for [illegible] hundred years I have been sup[illegible]ed by this whip. [illegible] as I speak, oh yes it [illegible] hear that. It [illegible] and provided me with [illegible] fight for my salvation. [illegible] struggle for my life and [illegible] impractical; the fact of survival [illegible] would continue.

Forgive me hands for [illegible] the colour of those who [illegible] it; for my payment [illegible] possessed strength [illegible] to the mercy of my [illegible] proceed [illegible] that was only [illegible] which called [illegible] what dirt and [illegible] one... My and [illegible] unfamiliar [illegible] Creation, I [illegible] unseasonable [illegible] end of [illegible]

AFTERWORD

Listen to the [illegible] as it makes its way to [illegible] back and with every [illegible] return to source a temporary pain. I [illegible] my rake and for [illegible] hundred years I have been sup[illegible]ed by this whip. [illegible] as I speak, oh yes it [illegible] hear that. It [illegible] and provided me with [illegible] fight for my salvation. [illegible] struggle for my life and [illegible] impractical; the fact of survival [illegible] would continue.

Forgive me hands for [illegible] the colour of those who [illegible] it; for my payment [illegible] possessed strength [illegible] to the mercy of my [illegible] proceed [illegible] that was only [illegible] which called [illegible] what dirt and [illegible] one... My and [illegible] unfamiliar [illegible] Creation, I [illegible] unseasonable [illegible] end of [illegible]

AFTERWORD

Listen to the [illegible] as it makes its way to [illegible] back and with every [illegible]

Omar Gayle is a Collegian columnist.

Frustrated Slave

Satisfied with INTEGRATION
We forgot LIBERATION
And the Freedom Train
Just passed us by
While
We Smiled.
And thanked them for letting us use their Toilets.
And ain't a damn thang changed
'Cause we still play the Game
But
None of the pieces we own.
And we run the Race
But can't jump the hurdles
'Cause our Nike's are filled with Lead(–ership needed please)
They've got us on LOCK
Rebirth of a SLAVE.
But we don't HATE
Our Masters.
We love them
And thank them for our Minimum Wage
Most say it better
Some say it's worse
But the needs or our people
Come Last
Never First.
And ain't a damn thang changed.
The broken shackles
Of the SLAVE have been Re–attached,
Latched on to the mentals of Brothas and Sistas
Waiting to Exhale and find that Purple Haze
Where all is dazed
And we have no sense of our rightful place
As Royalty.
Loyalty
Pledged only to the blunt
And the new "massa"
We call "officer"
Pause, Pause, Pause
Think, Think, Think
Blink and we'll be right back where we Started when they brought us here.
If we haven't already
Regressed TOO Much.
Such is the case
Of this born to be hated
Race,
But some of US ain't havin' it
Some of US see otherwise
Some of US refuse to listen
To Propaganda and Lies
And the chains that bind us
Will be the same chains we Break
Ain't a damn thang changed?
Just wait. . .
Wait.
By Humphrey brown III

Arts & Living

Orientation, Summer 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

FAC offers wide variety of performances

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Here you are, at Summer Orientation, wondering exactly: What's there to do around this place anyway?

A lot of people will point you uptown, to the local watering holes. Some people will direct you to Frat Row and others will send you to the Mullins Center. And there are always those who rave about the Fine Arts Center at the University of Massachusetts.

Where else can you experience a live performance for less than the cost of a movie ticket? Where else can you learn and absorb the cultures of Estonia, Australia, India, Japan, Israel, Africa, China and Hawaii?

The Fine Arts Center hosts a variety of programming all through the school year. Past events have included STOMP, Grease and the Alvin Ailey Dance Company. This year, the Fine Arts Center will open its season with the Broadway hit, How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying on Sept. 28. Other shows planned for the '97–98 season include the Estonian Philharmonic Chamber Choir and Tallinn Chamber Orchestra on Oct. 15. Maria Benitez Teatro Flamenco presents a taste of Spain on Oct. 26. The Garth Fagan Dance Company will take the stage on Nov. 13 and five-time Grammy-award winner, Take 6, will bring their a capella tunes to the Concert Hall on Dec. 6

The New WORLD Theater gives artists and writers of color a forum to present their works. The Return of Elijah, the African, marks the opening of the New WORLD Theater season on Sept. 19. Monica Palacios will present Greetings From A Queer Señorita on Sept. 26.

The Asian Dance and Music Program will start its season of with Trilok Gurtu on Sept. 13. Also, check out the Indonesian Arts Project on Sept. 24 and 25.

The Off-Center series presents Adam Rudolph's Moving Pictures on Oct. 9.

Whatever your interests are, the Fine Arts Center has the perfect thing for you.

All tickets for Fine Arts Center events are $5 for Five College students. For more information, call 545-2511.

COURTESY STEVE LABOZETTA

Garth Fagan Dance will be one of the groups to take the stage at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall this fall.

Hey, having a good time at orientation yet? Have you figured out what you're going to do once you're here at UMass? If you're interested in writing for The Collegian, the Arts & Living page is always looking for writers, no experience needed. We need people to cover music, art, theater, books, film and more. If you are interested in getting involved with the Arts & Living page, stop down in the Campus Center basement and talk to me or call me at 545–1361. Don't worry, we don't bite.

Seema Gangatirkar

Seema Gangatirkar
Arts & Living Editor

In Valley, good films come cheap

By Laura Stack
Collegian Staff

So now it's time for a trite, shameless plug for all the movie houses in the area in the name of informing all of you incoming students.

Welcome to the University of Massachusetts, where the movies are cheaper than your average cup at the ragin' kegga. Where your student I.D. is good for more than the redemption of savory beef strudel and chicken pucks at the dining commons. That's right — one of the best thing about being a student is you can get movie tickets dirt cheap.

Except for the occasional on-campus freebie or the incessant replays of A Farewell to Arms on Housing Services Cable Network (HSCN), the best flick for your buck can be had at either the AMC–owned Hampshire Six Theaters (at the Hampshire Mall) or the Mountain Farms Four Theaters (at the Mountain Farms Mall — a.k.a. the "dead mall"). Both theaters offer $2.50 "twilite" showing, as well as the $3.50 student discounted tickets for the matinee and evening showings.

The mall theaters are a haven for the more "mainstream" movies. You know, the popular ones. Be forewarned though, these two theaters tend to generate quite a crowd on weekends — hence, you must go early to avoid long lines. Not too early, though. They don't let you purchase your tickets until two hours before the show. For those of you sans automobiles, the Hampshire Mall (walking distance from Mountain Farms) is on the PVTA bus route.

Downtown Amherst has its own movie theater — a single– screen "vintage" (a nice way of saying "old") 600-seat venue that, despite its dilapidated exterior, is a fairly decent place to catch a movie. The Amherst Cinema tends to feature not–so–brand–new movies that are in limbo between big theaters and the video store. It is also on the bus route, as well as an easy walk from campus.

If arty movies are what you crave, then downtown Northampton has a fairly sizable selection to suit your tastes. The Pleasant Street Theater (on Pleasant Street) has two cozy little rooms for viewing off–beat, independent type films. Pleasant Street also has a steady stream of foreign films as well as the occasional animated feature.

Keep travelling up Main Street and you'll find the Academy of Music — another location for art house films. The Academy usually hosts two movies per week, and with its red curtains and balcony seating, it's a unique place to view a film.

Pleasant Street and the Academy are the most pricey of the lot, averaging around $5 per ticket. The two theaters only offer student discounts occasionally.

So that's the scoop on all the hottest places to catch a movie in the Valley. As for popcorn ratings, you'll have to judge for yourself. Happy viewing.

COURTESY KIMBERLY WRIGHT

You can check out Robert Wagner in Austin Powers, playing in one of the many theaters in the area.

Do we know how to spoil you?

We're a worker-owned collective • We're a Union shop • We donate 10% of our profits • We only use recycled & tree-free papers • We have the services you need • We do great work • We offer the best prices • We offer a 3.5¢ rate • We're open 7 days, 5 days 'til midnight • We play cool music • We have dogs!

Collective Copies

21 S. Pleasant St. (rear) • 413-549-1625

(Across from the Commons, past the sub shop)

Write for Arts and LIVING

Location: http://www.umass.edu/uhs/mentalhealth/

uhs University Health Services
University of Massachusetts, Amherst

MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

Welcome to UHS Mental Health Services' Web site!

Our website offers information on:

- Anger
- Anxiety
- Depression
- Drugs
- Eating Disorders
- Panic
- Relationship Violence
- Substance Abuse
- and more ...

We invite you to visit our self-help and general resources page at http://www.umass.edu/uhs/mentalhealth

Document: Done

CHECK OUT OUR NEW LOCATION!

MYSTERY RECORDS

12 N. Pleasant

Amherst

TRAIN RECORDS

MORE OF EVERYTHING!

24-HOUR TOWING

7 DAYS A WEEK!

PLUS...

- Tune-ups
- Brake Service
- Mufflers
- Shocks
- Wheel Balancing
- Alignment
- Auto Electric
- Alternators
- Tires
- Air Conditioning
- Auto Inspections
- Emissions Testing & Adjusting

College Street Motors

253-3200

260 College St., Amherst

CDs BOUGHT AND SOLD!

LISTEN BEFORE YOU BUY!

COME ON!

DO IT!

TURN IT UP!

5 Pleasant St. Northampton MA • (413) 582-1885

89½ Main St. Keene NH • (603) 358-6833

http://javanet.com/~turnitup

Always in Bloom

WELCOME CLASS OF 2001!

I hope to see you in the best flower shop around for a great deal on a wide variety of flowers.

220 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-5545

Alfredo's Photographic Gallery

Welcome Class of 2001

Decorate Those Dorm Walls w/ Posters

Sports Photos
Photographic Art

right in downtown Amherst

395 Pleasant St.
Amherst, Ma. 01002
(413) 253-1707

Location: http://www.umass.edu/uhs/

Welcome to the

uhs University Health Services
University of Massachusetts, Amherst

General Directory | How to be Seen at UHS | Getting to UHS | Directories of Patient Services | Health Plan Coverage | Choosing Your Primary Care Provider | Mental & Emotional Health | Tips & Time Savers

General Directory | Primary Care Provider | How to be Seen | Getting to UHS | Health Plan Coverage | Tips & Timesavers | Mental & Emotional Health

We invite you to visit our website at http://www.umass.edu/uhs

D.P. Dough

DELIVERS CALZONES

The Pizza Alternative

256-1616

* Cheese
* Vegetable
* Pepperoni
* Sausage
* Spinach
* Broccoli
* Ham
* Chicken
* Steak & Cheese
* Meatball
* Eggplant
* Pepper & Onion
* Mushroom
* Cheesburg
* Pesto
* And More

40 Varieties

What are Calzones? Pizza Turnovers

Free Delivery

OCMP

The Off Campus Meal Plan

Make The most of Your College Experience..... Eat OCMP

classé café

Rafters Sports Bar & Restaurant

Cutty's

Walker's Grill

安城中國飯店 Amherst Chinese Food

Amherst Delivers Deli

The Black Sheep Deli & Bakery

Subway

Amber Waves

Pasta E Basta

TOC Bar & Grill

Bueno Y Sano

Newman Center Cafeteria

Delano's

d'angelo sandwich shops

Antonio's È Sempre Buona

Friendly's

Prudry's

Supplemental Plans Available for those on campus

More Restaurants to Come By Fall of "97"

FOR MORE INFO. 1-888-211-6267

University Store

The Textbook Annex Carries Required Class Books

We are the complete source for Officially Licensed UMass Clothing and Gifts

School • Office • Art Supplies
Cards • Gifts • Dorm Accessories
Books • Magazines
Computer Supplies • Accessories • Software
Health & Beauty Care

Conveniently located on the concourse level of the Campus Center - adjacent to the parking garage

UNIVERSITY STORE CAMPUS CENTER | MINI STORE STUDENT UNION | TEXTBOOK ANNEX PHYSICAL PLANT BLDG

UNIVERSITY STORE COUPON

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

FREE

17" Window Decal

Redeem at the

UNIVERSITY STORE

Campus Center • 545-2619

SUMMER HOURS M-F 8:30-4

COUPON VALID UNTIL AUG 31, 1997

UNIVERSITY STORE COUPON

softball

continued from page 12

forced to make a tough choice between the two; she had grown up idolizing the Hofstra softball team, but UMass finally won her heart.

"I had always loved going to games at Hofstra, and I had always just assumed I would go there," Henderson said. "Until I came to UMass on a recruiting trip and I decided I really liked the team and I loved the coaches. They seemed like they would really help me."

Henderson has done a lot of growing since she made her first appearance at UMass. In just two short years of work, she has emerged as one of the top pitchers in the country.

Part of her success can be attributed to working with junior catcher Kelly Buckley. Buckley was a first year catcher during Henderson's freshman year.

"I think she's great," Henderson said. "She's improved a lot between this year and last year, and even from the beginning of this season to now."

Henderson attracted national attention with her performance last season and the many records she shattered. But fame is not why she's here.

"I don't do it to break records and get recognition," Henderson said. "I just do it to win."

Henderson is a very competitive player, and has no fear for any batter or any team. Whether it's against a weak school or a nationally-ranked school, Henderson is always ready to play and always looking to do nothing but send batters back to the dugout.

"I was ready to play against anyone [in the Regionals], Henderson said. "I was willing to take on UCLA, or anyone they wanted to fly out here."

Her approach when she takes the mound in a game can be seen in the tattoo on her right ankle. There lies the raging Tasmanian Devil, getting prepared to take a swing at a blistering fastball. If it's one of Henderson's 65 m.p.h. pitches you can be assured he'll miss.

Henderson takes this fearless approach to life as well, as she is willing to dedicate herself to the game of softball for the rest of her life. After she receives her degree in Sports Management, she hopes to pursue a career as a coach, on any level.

"Softball is everything to me," she said. "It's all I do."

JORMA KANSANEN \ COLLEGIAN

She shoots, she scores!

Led by Stephanie Walsh, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team had its best season since 1988.

Interested in broadcasting UMass sports on the radio?

Join the sports staff at WMUA 91.1 FM — the student radio station. We broadcast all UMass football, men's and women's basketball, men's lacrosse, hockey and baseball games. Stop by WMUA (105 Campus Center Basement) to find out when the first informational meeting is this fall. For more info, give WMUA Co-sports Directors Mike Corey and Jon Place a call at 545-2876.

lax

continued from page 12

seed in the tournament, it was no secret that there were times that they had to step it up.

All of the New England wins were must wins, because the New England Championship was a good fall-back in case they found themselves on the bubble. There were, however, some upsets and surprises that caught some higher-ranked teams off guard.

On March 29, a No. 15-ranked UMass toppled perennially strong Army, ranked No. 13. The Minutemen marched into Michie Stadium in West Point, N.Y. and systematically disarmed the Cadets' attack. The 12-10 win was a good indication that Minutemen were going places this season.

A week after the win at Army, the Minutemen took No. 3 Duke to double overtime, and lost, 9-8,then dropped No. 9 Notre Dame.

The Minutemen ended another season as the best in New England and one of the best in the nation.

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Swing battah, battah

Pete Gautreau (No.14) and the Massachusetts baseball team picked up it's fourth straight A-10 regular season title in 1997.

Sandy's BARBER SHOP
The Haircut That Talks!
Located right behind CVS
Amherst Center
253-3666

WIR SPRECHEN VOLKSWAGEN
The Valley's largest VW inventory! Whether it's a tune-up or a full blown restoration project; from engine valves and bearings to door handles or gas caps, we have the parts for just about any model VW ever made! Plus a full inventory for Japanese and Korean cars and trucks.
WE SPEAK VOLKSWAGEN!
PELHAM AUTO PARTS
ROUTE 9
AMHERST/ BELCHERTOWN LINE
256-0457
It All Starts With Parts...
BECK/ARNLEY WORLDPARTS

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
Club 256-6446
90 Gateway Road
"Off Rt. 9 2mile East of town Center"
On PVTA Bus Route to Rolling Green, Pool
• Aerobics • Aqua-Aerobics • Steps • Nautilus
• Racquetball • Free Weights • Jacuzzi
• Sauna • Bike
• Indoor Tennis & Basketball
• Rowers • Treadmills
Exercise!! Are you Ready to Play Hard?

Health Reach International Education • Support • Service
International Students, do you have questions about...
Life at UMass ?
Staying healthy ?
University Health Services ?
Health Reach International
can help you find answers.
Call 577 - 5181.
Email tgallant@uhs.umass.edu
Look for our programs & office hours around campus
Health Reach International is a free service of the Health Education Division at UMassUniversity Health Services

• Free People
• Girly NYC
• Betsey Johnson
• Bulldog
• Dollhouse
• NC Love
• Alice & Trixie
• PA Company
• Lola
• Donskin
• Soda Blu
• XOXO
• Co-operative
• CK Lingerie
• Airwalk
• Tripp NYC
• Girl Star
• And Lots More!
Young Hip Clothes
25 CENTRAL
150 Main Street • Northampton, Mass.
Located Downstairs at Thornes • 413-586-8017

ART SUPPLIES
DESIGN SUPPLY STUDIO
ON TOWN COMMON • 65 SO. PLEASANT ST • AMHERST, MA 01002 • 413-253-5592
OILS • ACRYLICS • WATERCOLORS • MARKERS • PENS • INKS • TEMPERAS
CANVAS • BRUSHES • MEDIUMS • PASTELS • CHARCOAL • LEADS • PENCILS
GLUES • CLAYS • TAPES • JOURNALS • PADS • PAPERS • MATS • SCISSORS
KNIVES • PORTFOLIOS • T-SQUARES • TRIANGLES • TEMPLATES • SETS
SCALES • BOARDS • FRAMES • POSTERS • TABLES • STOOLS • POTTERY
DISCOUNT CARD WITH THIS COUPON
GOOD FOR 10% OFF ALL PURCHASES FOR ONE FULL YEAR FREE
EXPIRES 10/1/97

kinko's
Open 24 Hours
We'll help you work on getting work.
Don't turn working on your resumé into a job. At Kinko's, we have services from typesetting to computer workstations that can make putting your resumé together a lot easier. We can print it on specialty paper and give it a look that would impress anyone. Visit our Web site at http/www.kinkos.com or call 1-800-2-KINKO'S
$5.00 off a resumé package
Bring this coupon into the Kinko's of Northampton and receive $5.00 off a regularly-priced Kinko's resumé package.
34 Bridge Street, Northampton
585-5000
kinko's The new way to office.
OPEN 24 HOURS, 7 DAYS A WEEK
.03¢ self serve copies
Bring this coupon into the Kinko's of Northampton and all self serve copies will be only .03¢ per image.
More than 850 locations worldwide. For the location nearest you call 1-800-2-KINKOS.

PREREQUISITE: ADRENALINE
Drive. Intensity. Those aren't words you're likely to see in many course requirements. Then again Army ROTC is unlike any other elective. It's hands-on excitement. ROTC will challenge you mentally and physically through intense leadership training. Training that builds character, self-confidence and decision-making skills. Again, words other courses seldom use. But they're the credits you need to succeed in life. ROTC is open to freshmen and sophomores without obligation and requires about five hours per week. Register this term for Army ROTC.
ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE
For details, visit the Army ROTC Building or call 545-2321/2322
building #79

University Store
THE TEXTBOOK ANNEX CARRIES REQUIRED CLASS BOOKS
WELCOME - CLASS OF 2001
We are the complete source for Officially Licensed UMass Clothing and Gifts
School • Office • Art Supplies
Cards • Gifts • Dorm Accessories
Books • Magazines
Computer Supplies • Accessories • Software
Health & Beauty Care
SUMMER HOURS
UNIVERSITY STORE M-F 8:30AM - 4:30PM
STUDENT UNION STORE M-F 7:30AM - 5PM SAT-SUN 10AM-2PM
Conveniently located on the concourse level of the Campus Center - adjacent to the parking garage
UNIVERSITY STORE COUPON
10% off Save! 10% off
ON ALL UMASS IMPRINTED CLOTHING & GIFTWARE
SUBTOTAL $ DISCOUNT $
FINAL TOTAL $
Coupon can not be used in conjunction with other coupons
VALID UNTIL AUG 31, 1997
UNIVERSITY STORE COUPON

You are eligible for the best deal in town for financial services!
Formerly the Student Credit Union, the UMass Five College Federal Credit Union allows any UMass student to join an receive benefits like:
UMass
Southwest
Football Stadium
Bus Stop
Bus Stop
Amity Street
Rafter's
University Drive
UMass Five College Federal Credit Union
Laundry Club
Scott's Liquors
Victory Supermarket
Across the street from Rafter's in the Victory Market Shopping Plaza
• No Fee checking • Free ATM cards • Computer loans Avalable
• Just a short stroll from the bus stop
UMass Five College Federal Credit Union
AMHERST • WORCESTER • DARTMOUTH
Convenient Hours
Walk-up
Monday, Thursday, Friday
7:30 am - 9:30 am
3:30 pm - 6:00 pm
Lobby
Mon - Thur 9:30 am - 3:30 pm
Friday 9:30 am - 5:00 pm
Saturday 9:00 am - Noon

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Laura Forester • Photos by Thang Vo

What advise would you give to freshmen coming to UMass next year?

"Don't commit yourself to a major until you're absolutely sure."

Dan Ash
junior, business
Sandwich

"Don't go insane — just because your parents aren't around doesn't give you an invitation to goof off and drink every night."

Andrea Montalbano
sophomore, English
Long Island, N.Y.

"Enjoy life. Take part in everything. Get to know every aspect of UMass."

Sean Lawrence
senior, psychology
Bronx, N.Y.

"Don't worry about getting lost. It's huge but you get used to it. Get to the other colleges."

Holly Lincoln
junior, English
Milford, Conn.

"Perseverance. No matter what the weather, go to class."

David Farrell
sophomore, history
Pittsfield

"Don't change who you are for other people. Stay true to yourself."

Maryann Cho
sophomore, pre-communication
Chicago, Ill.

"There's a time to party and there's a time to study. Know which is when."

Nick Pennola
sophomore, political science
Queens, N.Y.

LAUREN KOSKY/ COLLEGIAN

Yummy in the tummy

Sue Cecchin, a freshman art major, and Kerrie Roderick, a freshman exercise science major, savor a moment at Franklin Dinning Hall.

SHOOTERS WANTED

Photographers with shooting and developing ability needed! Paid positions available. Computer experience is helpful.

Contact Vo Thang Vo at 545-1701

BICYCLE WORLD

Strongest Handbuilt Wheels in the Valley!
$25 labor includes the first three truing's.

Ride Year Round or DIE!

SUSPENSION SALE
'96 Judy XC $250
'96 Judy SL $399
Free Install w/ purchase of any '97 shock with this ad only.
Rock Shox, Marzocchi Manitou & Girvin

20% of any SPD shoe and pedal purchase.

BICYCLES BY:
Klein
Kona
Trek
Merlin
Dean
Mongoose
VooDoo
Bianchi
Independent Fabrications
Rediine
Starting at $249.95

'96 Blowout Bike Sale!

Mongoose:
IBOC ZERO G SX $800 was $1,000
IBOC ZERO G $625 was $769.95

Trek:
930 $429.95 was $529.95
930sx $549.95 was 689.95
7000 $519.95 was $629.95
8000 $719.95 was $829.95
8000sx $839.95 was 999.95
Y-11 $1,199.95 was &1,600

No B.S. Bikes!

Amherst
253-7722
63 S. Pleasant St. (behind Bonducci's)

Northampton
585-9100

Greenfield
774-3701

10%-15% Off all '96 KONA bicycles

Sale Prices Limited to Quantity and Stock

FRESHMEN get involved!

ACADEMIC Alive With Dance
Anthropology Caucus
Arnold air Society (ROTC)
Asian American Studies Coalition
Chamber Choir Club
Communications Club Managers Student Chapter Communication Disorders
Future Hoteliers
Institute of Industrial Engineers
National Society of Black Engineers
Poetry Society
Pre-Vet & Animal Science Club
Resource Economics Association
Society of Hispanic Professional Engineers
Society of Women Engineers
Student Nurses Association
Undergraduate Business Club
Wildlife Society
Women in Sports Management

AGENCIES
Center for Student Businesses
Commuter Services & Housing
Student Legal Services Office
Office of ALANA Affairs
Student Center for Education, Research & Advocacy
Student Union Art Gallery
Student Union Craft Center

CAMPUS WIDE PROGRAMS
Distinguished Visitors Program
University Productions & Concerts

CULTURAL CENTERS
Anacoana
Josephine White Eagle
Latin American
Malcolm X
Martin Luther King Jr.
Sylvan
United Asia

ETHNIC/CULTURAL African Student association
AFRIK-AM
AHORA
Asian American Student Association
Biracial/Multiracial Students Association
Black Student Union
Boricuas Unidos
Cambodian Student Association
Cape Verdean Student Alliance
Casa Dominicana
Chinese Student Club
Haitian American Students Association
Hillel
Irish American Students Association
Japan America Club
Korean Student Association
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance
Native American Student Association
Pakistan Student Association
South Asian Club
Vietnamese Student Association

GOVERNMENTAL
Campus Center/Student Union Commission
Central Area Government
Commuter Area Government
Interfraternity Council
Northeast Area Government
Orchard Hill Area Government
Panhellenic Council
Southwest Area Government
Stockbridge Senate
Student Government Association
Sylvan Area Government

GREEK ORGANIZATIONS
Alpha Chi Rho
Alpha Delta Phi
Alpha Epsilon Phi
Alpha Phi Alpha
Beta Kappa Psi
Chi Omega
Delta Zeta
Gamma Phi Sigma
Iota Gamma Upsilon
Iota Phi Theta
Kappa Alpha Psi
Lambda Chi Alpha
Sigma Sigma Sigma
Zeta Phi Beta

HONOR SOCIETIES
ALANA Honor Society
Alpha Lambda Delta
Alpha Zeta
Beta Alpha Psi
Eta Sigma Delta
Golden Key Honor Society
Mortar Board
Phi Sigma Pi
Pi Sigma Alpha Scabbard & Blade

MEDIA
Black Mass Communication Project
Collegian
Concepto Latino
In focus
Index (Yearbook)
Spectrum
Union Video
Center/TV 19
WMUA Radio Station

PERFORMING ARTS
Arts Collective Dance Team
Juggling Club
New World Theatre
Soul TV
Student Valley Productions
UMass Theatre Guild

POLITICAL
Allied Students Against Prejudice
Amnesty International
Animal Rights Coalition
Cannabis Reform Coalition
Friends of RAIL
MASSPIRG
Radical Student Union
Rainforest Action
Republican Club
Students Advocating Financial Assistance

RECREATION
Aviary Society
Game Hobbyists' League/Grenadier Society
Hang Gliding Club
Japanese Animation & Manga Society
Kodokan Club
Motorsports Club
Outing Club
Paintball Club
Shotokan Club
Ski Club
Snowboarding Club
Sport Parachute Club
Zoo Disc Frisbee Team

RELIGIOUS Alliance Christian Fellowship
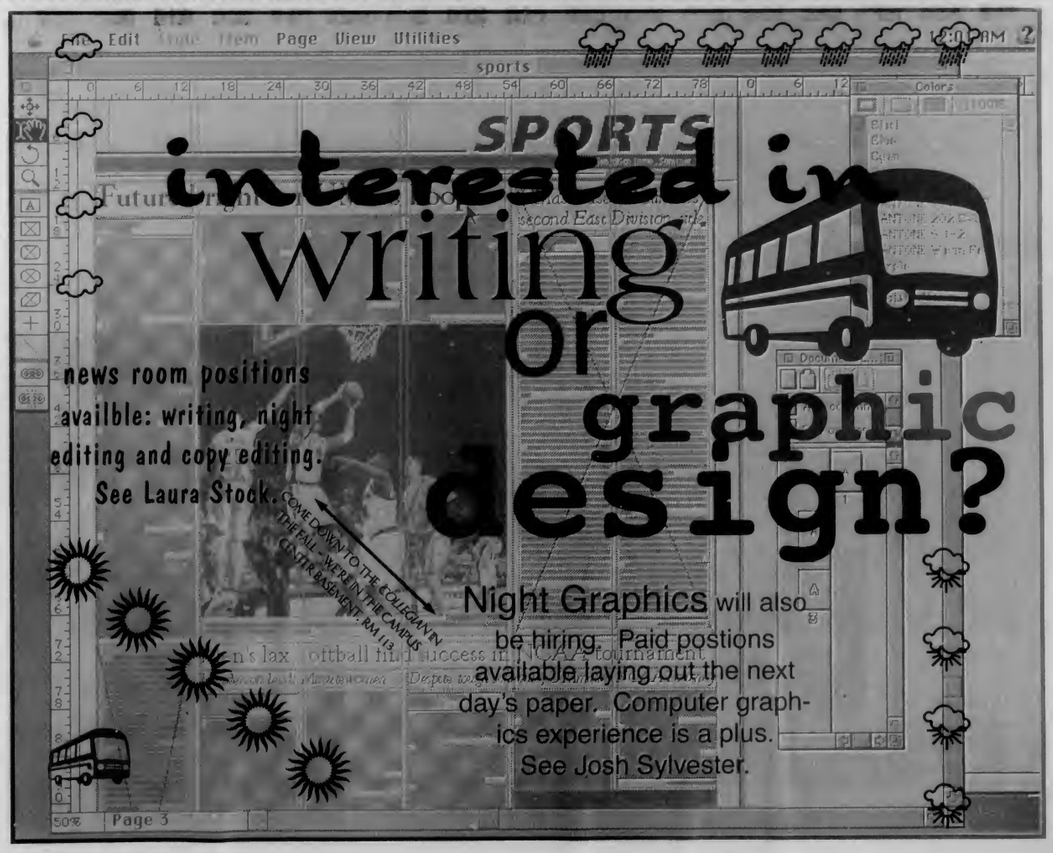
Baha'i Club
Born Again Students In Christ
Campus Crusade for Christ
Chabad Students
Hillel
Hindu Students Organization
Intervarsity Christian Fellowship
Muslim Students Association
Newman Club
Pagan Students Organization
Upside Down

SERVICE
Alpha Phi Omega
Bottwood Project
Circle K Club
First Aid Services
Habitat for Humanity
Kappa Kappa Psi/Tau Beta Sigma
Non-Academic Computing
SHARE

SOCIAL
Ballroom Dance Club
National Exchange Club
Objectivist Club
Science Fiction Club
SCUM



SPORTS
Bicycle Racing Club
Club Volleyball
Crew Club
Equestrian Team
Fencing Club
Rugby Club
Sailing Team
Women's Ice Hockey

STUDENT DUSINESSES
Bicycle Co-op
Campus Design & Copy
Earthfoods
Greenough Snack Bar
People's Market
SOM Food Services
Sweets And More

Class of 2001
support Registered Student Organizations

FOR MORE INFORMATION CONTACT:
Campus Activities, University of Massachusetts, 416 Student Union Box 37310, Amherst, MA 01007-7310
(413) 545-3600

Photo: Lauren Kosky/ Collegian

SPORTS

Orientation Issue, Summer 97'

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Future bright for UMass hoops

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Over the past six seasons, the Massachusetts basketball team has been one of the most successful programs in America, with a Sweet Sixteen appearance in 1992, an Elite Eight showing in 1995 and finally the Final Four season in 1996. But after last season, when the Minutemen barely reached the NCAA tournament and were sent home with a 65-58 first round loss to Louisville, there was concern that the program had slipped a bit.

But with a nucleus of young players in both the front and backcourt, solid leadership from senior forward Tyrone Weeks and junior guard Charlton Clarke and the NCAA investigation of former National Player of the Year Marcus Camby finally over, UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint is optimistic that the second year of "Bruiserball" will prove to be one Minuteman fans will remember.

"We're still going to be young," Flint said. "We just have to come in and work hard... but everybody has a year under their belts... and they know how hard they have to work."

Leading the Minuteman charge will be junior center Lari Ketner. The 6-foot-10 Philadelphia native sparkled in 1997, after sitting out his freshman year due to Prop 48, the rule concerning NCAA's academic eligibility standards. Ketner averaged 10 points, five rebounds and ranked second in the Atlantic 10 with 2.21 rebounds per game. Ketner showed an ability to dominate at times, most evidently against Maryland on Feb. 15, putting up 19 points, 12 rebounds and five blocks against a Terrapin squad that was ranked No. 10 in the country.

"I hope [he can be a special player for us]," Flint said. "He needs to be more consistent, which is something he has to do on his own."

UMass was bolstered with the announcement in April that Tyrone Weeks chose to play out his final year of eligibility, giving the Minutemen much needed leadership in the paint. Weeks, who sat out his freshman year due to Prop 48, was given the option to re-claim his lost year of eligibility when the Prop 48 rules were revised. Weeks ranked second on the team last year with 12.6 points a game, and led the Minutemen with nine rebounds a game. Weeks started off last season on fire, but a series of injuries slowed him down, before he returned to form by the NCAA tournament. Weeks led UMass with 16 points in the loss to Louisville.

The loss of Carmelo Travieso and Edgar Padilla leaves Clarke as the only returning guard with significant experience. Clarke, a 6-foot-3 junior from the Bronx, N.Y., shined in coach Flint's vaunted three-guard offense, which he first instituted against Boston College in the Commonwealth Classic. Clarke scored a game-high 23 points in UMass's 90-78 win, and UMass went on to win 10 of it's next 11 games.

There are only two seniors on the 1997-1998 Minutemen, Weeks and center Inus Norville, who have been named co- captains. The bulk of the team consists of underclassmen, with sophomores Mike Babul, Chris Kirkland, Winston Smith, Ajmal Basit and Monty Mack, who sat out last season because of Prop 48.

Flint is hoping for big things from Mack, who will likely start with Clarke in the backcourt.

UMass came out of the recruiting wars with three new players for the 1997-1998 season. Jonathan DePina, a 5- foot-10 guard from South Boston High School, played with Mack for Southie's back to back state title teams, in 1995 and 1996.

Wheeling, West Virginia guard Rafael Cruz follows Padilla and Travieso in the line of UMass guards born in Puerto Rico. Cruz led his team to second-place finish in the West Virginia state tournament, averaging 15.4 points and seven assists a game. The final signee, 6-foot-8 forward Ronell Blizzard, reportedly chose UMass over Cincinnati and Arizona.

STEPHANIE W.P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

With the return of Tyrone Weeks, Lari Ketner and Charlton Clarke, the UMass basketball team looks to win it's sixth A-10 title in seven years this season.

UMass baseball clinches second East Division title

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

Playing in the shadow of last year's team, which came two games away from the College World Series, the Massachusetts baseball team had some big shoes to fill. With an 18 game winning streak and a No. 19 national ranking, this year's team more than leapt out of it's shadow.

Going into the post-season, UMass' regular season record of 33-10 ties last year's mark. It was a season that saw many records break and a season that taught its pitchers the lesson of consistency.

Earl E. Lorden Field saw many balls sail over its fences. The Minutemen doubled last year's total of homeruns, putting up a total of 74 during the regular season. UMass' pitchers only allowed 45.

The starting pitchers posted a record of 20-4. Jason Bennett, the No. 1 starter in the rotation, not only surpassed his career high wins with nine, but became the all-time winningest pitcher in Minutemen history with 25.

Bill Cooke was a consistent No. 2 starter during the entire season, going 6-2 with a 4.22 ERA. Scott Barnsby's no- hitter against Northeastern, during the Baseball Beanpot Tournament at Fenway Park, highlighted the entire season. His 5-1 record was second on the team in winning percentage along with allowing the lowest batting average on the staff (.230).

The rest of the pitching staff was led by Travis Veracka and Jeff Puleri. Veracka led all relievers with a 4-2 record. His 4.08 was also the teams lowest ERA. Puleri came up big during the middle of the season, when Barnsby suffered through some rough outings. He went 4-1 with a 5.02 ERA, which was second on the team for relievers.

The season started in Florida, where UMass won six out of nine games. They continued to play mediocre baseball until the series against Dayton. After dropping two out the three games against the Flyers, the Minutemen turned it up. UMass went on an 18 game winning streak, which at the time was the nations longest, sweeping every Atlantic 10 opponent in its path. After the streak ended, the Minutemen finished the season 5-4, but still maintained the No. 1 seed in the A-10.

The offensive charge was led by sophomore tri-captain Doug Clark. His .434 batting average was first on the team as an everyday starter. He also led the team in hits and RBI.

Bryan Mazzaferro's average of .449 led the team, but he sat out most of the season with a broken foot. He started out the year batting .515, which ranked him second in the nation in hitting at the time of his injury.

Adam Correa turned out to be one of UMass' most valuable players, both offensively and defensively. His .385 batting average was third on the team, while his rocket of an arm tossed out over 40 runners. He also had the teams second best on-base percentage at .522.

Brad Gorrie broke three records this season. He became UMass' all-time leader in stolen bases (96) and runs scored (176), and broke his own single season record of stolen bases with 41.

Aaron Braunstein earned National Player of the week honors during the final week of the regular season. During that time he hit .560 with three home runs and 18 RBI.

Dave Giglio was also a pleasant surprise this year. His .387 average was second on the team for regular starters. Giglio and Matt Wolcott platooned the first base duties, committing only nine errors during the regular season.

Overall, the team batted a combined .360, .31 points over last years mark. The Minutemen were the No.1 seed going into the Atlantic 10 Tournament held in Boyertown, Pa. In the first round, UMass faced Virginia Tech, the team that they defeated to win the

Turn to LAX, page 9

My name is Luke Meredith, and I'm the Sports Editor of The Massachusetts Daily Collegian. If you are interested in writing for the Sports desk, come down the Collegian offices, in the Campus Center, room 113, and ask for Luke. You can also call me at 545-1749. It is best to come down early in the semester, because there are still openings for beats, but we welcome new writers at any time.

The purpose of the sports page is to cover UMass sports, but we do so much more. Besides covering UMass athletics, we also have columns, which span the world of sports. Columns are for staff members, but there are opportunities for anyone to become a columnist.

Writing sports can be a lot of fun. You can gain valuable experience, get to travel to cover events, and be a part of the UMass sports scene. I have been writing sports for a year and a half, and have enjoyed every minute of it. It can be very rewarding, and the relationships you can establish with coaches, players and other writers will last throughout your college career and beyond.

If you have any questions, feel free to stop by the Collegian at any time and chat with either myself or one of the associate editors.

If you like what you see, hopefully I'll see you down here writing in the fall. Have a great summer, and look out for the "Back to School" issue on the first day of classes.

— Luke Meredith

Line of the Day

"In football, all you do is practice. In baseball, they let you play."

– Jackie Robinson

Men's lax, softball find success in NCAA tournament

Henderson leads Minutewomen

By Corey Peter Goodman and Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

After beginning its season on a sour note, dropping 15 of its first 22 decisions, the Massachusetts softball team enjoyed a complete turnaround in its performance. Starting with a 5-0 win over the Dayton Flyers on March 29, they put together an 11-game run, in which they won 10 and had one tie. UMass wrapped up its regular season play with a record of 28-20-1 overall, including a 12-3 record against Atlantic 10 opponents to make them the A-10 regular season champs. The Minutewomen then toppled Temple twice and St. Joseph's once in the A-10 tournament to win their third straight A-10 championship.

On May 8 UMass swept Metro-Atlantic champion Canisius in the NCAA Play-ins and earned an automatic berth into the NCAA Tournament. As the spring semester came to a close, the Minutewomen were preparing to host the NCAA Regionals, competing against Boston College, Colorado State and Brown University for a trip to the College World Series.

The UMass softball team owes much of its success to sophomore pitcher Danielle Henderson. Henderson was the A-10 Pitcher of the Year and was named A-10 Tournament MVP for the second straight season after throwing the first no-hitter in the tournament's history. She holds every UMass single-game strikeout record, and is only the fourth such pitcher to fan 400 batters in her career. She is the first UMass hurler to strikeout 200 hitters in a season, as she approached the 300 mark going into the Regionals.

For Henderson, softball has not just been a ticket to college, but a life-long passion.

Henderson picked up her first softball in third grade in the quiet town of Commack, N.Y. At first it was just a child's game to her, as she jumped around from position to position, just to keep up with her friends. But when she took the mound her sophomore year at Commack High School, she was there to stay.

In high school Henderson was rough around the edges, but at 6-foot-1, her overpowering strength gave her an unlimited amount of potential that soon caught the attention of college coaches. She was heavily recruited by UMass and Hofstra University. Henderson was

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 8

JORMA KANGAHUHTA \ COLLEGIAN

UMass first baseman Kim Gutridge (No. 14) and the Minutewomen played host to the NCAA Regionals at the end of May.

Despite tough schedule, UMmakes NCAA Tourney

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

This past spring, the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team showed why it is one of the strongest programs in Div. I, and one of the most popular teams at UMass.

The Minutemen played one of the four toughest schedules in the country, with games against seven of the other 11 NCAA tournament participants. Only Duke, Brown and Virginia matched that total.

Despite the rocky path they walked, the Minutemen accomplished a 9-5 record, and earned a place in the tournament's elite eight. Their 13th appearance in the post- season places them eighth in all-time tournament appearances.

A few top teams came through Amherst to play UMass. Boston College, New Hampshire, No. 6 Loyola, and No. 9 Notre Dame all met the Minutemen on historic Richard F. Garber Field, and No. 3 Syracuse rounded the home schedule at Warren P. McGuirk Stadium.

Heading into summer break, the No. 8 Minutemen were preparing for a meeting with No. 1 Princeton in the NCAA quarterfinals. UMass beat Hofstra in the previous round 6-4, avenging a double-overtime loss to the Flying Dutchmen earlier this season. UMass junior goaltender John Kanelakis shut them out for all of the first half and most of the third quarter, but the Dutchmen made a strong bid at a comeback in the fourth, capitalizing on a couple of Minuteman transition errors.

"Hofstra is a good team," Massachusetts coach Greg Cannella said. "You can't hold down Tony Alexander, Paul Judge, and [Brian] Langtry. Down 6-0, they could have rolled over and just given up but they didn't, and they came back. That's probably due to the leadership they have and their coaching staff, and the seniors in their program."

Hofstra saluted the Minutemen's efforts and team strength.

"We played with a lot of character towards the end," Hofstra senior defenseman Richard Langtry said. "We fought back as hard as we could, but you can't let a team like UMass get out to 6-0 lead and expect to win no matter who you are."

The season up until the tournament was fraught with quality opponents, many of them gunning for the upstart Minutemen, knowing they were one of the marquee teams this year.

Against New England opponents, UMass posted a perfect 6-0 record, earning the school's 15th New England Championship. The Minutemen beat Fairfield 22-3 and No. 17 Hartford 7-4 on the road to start the season. Wins over unranked Boston College (12-5), and New Hampshire (17-7) at home came in late March and early April. To rap up the title, the Minutemen beat contenders Harvard and Brown late in the season. No. 18 Harvard fell 12-6 in Cambridge, and No. 11 Brown fell 9-4 on the last day of the regular season in Providence, R.I.

"This team has been through so much, the ups and downs, you knew it was going to go our way," Glass said after the Brown win. "Today it did, it was a total team effort."

Total team efforts came in the clutch situations for the Minutemen. Although they picked up the No. 8

Turn to LAX, page 8

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Keri Sussi (No.5) and the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team advanced to the elite eight for only the third time in school history this season.